The radio said six truckloads of Central Congolese troops crossed the Lulua River near Kapanga, birthplace of Katanga president Moise Tshombe, but were met by Katangese soldiers. The broadcast gave no other details.

Taylor Meets With Head Vietnamese

SAIGON, Viet Nam—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor met Thursday with top South Vietnamese officials on his mission to determine what the United States can do to help contain the growing menace of communism in South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia.

The Communists, meantime, angrily protested Taylor's visit to Saigon. Communist China called it a "serious provocation." Communist North Viet Nam said it was "intolerable."

Nguyen Thanh le, chief of the North Vietnamese delegation to the 14-nation conference on Laos in Geneva, said Taylor's visit "appears to be the prelude to a full-scale U. S. military intervention" in South Viet Nam.

En-Lai Urgers Red-Albanian 'Truce'

MOSCOW—Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai on Thursday urged a reconciliation between Russia and Albania, the tiny communist nation which has come under the fire of Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Chou's speech before the Soviet Communist party's 22nd congress followed by 48 hours Khrushchev's denunciation of Albania for adhering to Stalinist methods.

Chou alone among speakers at the Communist congress listed Albania as one of the Communist bloc "people's democracies." He advised Russia and Albania to get together and work out their differences in friendly fashion and criticized the public quarrel as not true to Marxism, it was learned.

Sinfonians To Hold Show In Greensboro

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the music fraternity, is sponsoring a show at WC this weekend to be presented by four Carolina musical groups.

The Sto Fox Orchestra, the Sinfonians Band, the Lee Ferrell Combo and the Singing Sinfonians will perform together in Elliot Hall at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The idea of giving shows at WC was conceived by the late Mike Barham, vice president of Phi Mu last summer. The fraternity will present the show in memoriam. (Barham was one of the two Cobb residents who died mysteriously two weeks ago.)

The Sto Fox Orchestra will be the nucleus of the show. Sto's group is four years old and veteran of many performances.

The Sinfonians, a full 18-piece band, is a group formed last spring with members from various combos around campus. They play dance band music and jazz.

The Lee Ferrell Combo specializes in Rock and Roll. They recently played at GM.

The Singing Sinfonians will present folk songs, barbershop quartets, sea chanties and lullabies. They say that most of their songs "can't be classified."

CHILE RETURNS TO NORMAL

SANTIALO, Chile (UPI)—Normalcy returned to southern Chile Thursday following a hours-long series of earth tremors Wednesday, reminiscent of the great quakes of May, 1960.

Only one of Wednesday's tremors was of major proportions. Only one casualty was reported. A baby was killed by a wall falling on its crib. Property and crop damage was relatively light.

Duke Student Trial Held In Chapel Hill

The reverse "sit-in" case of a Duke University divinity student will be heard this Tuesday in the Chapel Hill Recorder's Court.

Edward Opton, 21, requested service at the Negro counter in the Chapel Hill Bus Station last June 21 and was charged with trespassing by the grill's owner, Leo Eliadis, when he refused to leave.

Opton's attorney, Negro lawyer Floyd McKissick of Durham, tried to crush the warrant when the case was called this week. He said that Opton was not charged with a crime by the language of the warrant.

"It is no longer a violation of law to go into any bus station restaurant and ask for service," said the lawyer.

He protested a move by the prosecutor in the case, Attorney Emery B. Denny Jr. to amend the warrant, charging this would put Opton in double jeopardy.

The court granted at a hearing that the warrant be crushed and a new one be drawn, including in it more specific charges of trespass. A one-week postponement of the hearing was granted to enable McKissick to prepare a defense for the new charges.

Duke 'Censorship' Fight Flares Again

The controversy over the Duke administration's deletion of a sentence from a recent issue of the Duke Chronicle was discussed at a meeting of the Commission of Academic Freedom last week.

Dean Herbert J. Herring, vice president of the student life division, defended his position at an open meeting of the commission before a crowd of about 60 students.

Herring's controversial action involved a quotation from Henry Miller's book "Tropic of Cancer" reviewed by the Chronicle.

The quotation was used to support Fisher's contention that the author was preoccupied with obscenity.

Christian Printers

The Christian Printing Company, printers for the Chronicle, refused to print the objectionable part of the quotation without authorization from the vice president of the division of student life. Herring refused to authorize the quotation.

The Men's Student Government Association issued a resolution protesting the action and asked Herring to appear before the Commission of Academic Freedom.

Herring defended his actions as "neither unilateral nor censorship" as charged and as a "delegated responsibility" by virtue of his post. He suggested that his action was multilateral since he consulted with seven other people and was familiar with the opinion of both the Chronicle editor and the reviewer.

"Not Censorship"

Since the sentence deleted was a quotation and not the words of the reviewer, Herring contended his action was not censorship. He said he had no choice but to refuse authorization of the quotation due to "administrative patterns set up by the board of trustees.

A commission member argued that the delegated authority eventually traced back to the community for which the publication was intended and that the dean's action was, in contrast to student opinion, censorship.

Herring replied, "in a democracy, no one group has final say and there is always the possibility of appeal."

Police Contact SBI In Deaths

Police Chief W. D. Blake yesterday said he would check with State Bureau of Investigation Headquarters in Raleigh today to see if their report concerning the recent deaths in Cobb dormitory has been completed.

Chief Blake is interested in whether or not the report will coincide with information already gathered by Chapel Hill police. When asked whether or not he thought the case would ever be solved he said it was doubtful and any solution would have to be based on circumstantial evidence.

No further information concerning the dry cleaning in Cobb dormitory has been uncovered.

Berlin & 2 Germanies

Premier Khrushchev's offer to withdraw his deadline for a peace treaty with East Germany in the event of U. S. offers to negotiate seemed to signal the first possible break in the stalemate that has drawn relations dangerously taut between the U.S. and Russia.

The "offer" is nothing new. Khrushchev has made similar offers before, always juxtaposed to a corresponding rattling of Soviet nuclear power—in this case the announcement that the Soviets plan to explode a 50-megaton nuclear bomb.

The Premier's insistence on the establishment of West Berlin as a demilitarized "free" city is certainly not a change of pace. The Soviets made the proposal in 1959. It is as ridiculous then as it is now.

The U.S. has based its West Berlin stand on several points—one of the most vital being the requirement that the city remain politically and economically a part of West Germany. Removal of Western troops would virtually eliminate this possibility.

The Soviet rejection of a 1959 Western proposal that asked for slowly diminishing both Russian and U.S. military forces in Europe as a possible step toward a unified Berlin is a good indication that the Soviets have no intention of demilitarizing on any basis that would not give Russia an advantage. Her counter-plan in 1959 was the removal of Soviet troops from East Germany, Poland and Hungary in return for a withdrawal of NATO forces in Europe. A rather poor trade.

At the same time, a realistic settlement in the city appears impossible so long as troops remain in either East or West Berlin. While Berlin remains a pawn of Russia and the West, the best that can be hoped for is an uneasy settlement—little better than we have now.

Political analysts believe that the U.S. is ready to spell out concrete steps toward some settlement. Whether policy is outlined in the next few weeks or later remains to be seen. But it must come.

When it does, there are limited areas of negotiation open to the opposing elements. Within the U.S. framework, there are definite commitments.

Among these are pledges that West Berlin will remain, fundamentally, a part of West Germany with free access open across East German territory and Western forces in the city. These will be protected even at the cost of war.

The crux of the problem lies fundamentally with the problem of unifying all of Germany, not just Berlin. The Soviets desire that the split will become permanent. The U.S. naturally hopes that unification can be effected.

If Germany were unified, the old German territory in Poland would almost necessarily become a goal for both East and West Germany. Even now in West Germany, the goal of regaining territory across the Oder-Neisse line from East Germany is spoken of as a political objective, according to reports.

Russia will protect Poland in the event of any attempt to unify East and West Germany by blocking that attempt. The Soviets might also fear that a unified Germany would be militarily unified with the West. In addition, West Germany is solidly in the middle of the NATO alliance, which the U.S. wants to maintain. Russia cannot countenance any unification under these terms.

With these factors present, there is no room for real negotiation which will unify East and West Germany, the first step toward a practical solution in Berlin.

In short, there is no real, direct solution possible at present in Berlin. There must first be settlement of the whole of Germany, with implications in all of Western Europe.

Poor Planning

Anew height in poor planning was reached here Wednesday night when Carolina honored herself by paying tribute to poet Randall Jarrell.

First of all, the tribute was staged in Hill Hall. And Hill had nowhere near the seating capacity to accommodate the large crowd which showed up. As a result, many persons turned around and left, disgusted. Others contented themselves with sitting in the aisles or standing sardine-like at the rear of the hall.

Secondly, no provision whatever seemed to have been made to assure that what was said on the stage reached everyone in the audience. Consequently, the distinguished remarks which cascaded from the rostrum drifted only piecemeal to those at the rear of the hall, despite much conscientious craning of necks and cupping of ears.

Underscoring the apparent inexcusability of such poor planning was the sight, upon leaving Hill, of Memorial Hall standing spacious, wired for sound, and unused.

We don't know whose fault it is that such basic audience considerations as being able to sit and to hear were overlooked. But we do know that because of those oversights, the evening was ruined for many in the audience.

Yet the poor planning of Wednesday night might not have been so notable had not the same kind of bungling been apparent when President Kennedy was here last week. Then, many of the thousands in Kenan's stands were unable to hear the President's words because of the faulty placement of public address speakers.

The planners of future public functions here at Carolina would do well to pay attention to audience considerations.

Dwight Wheless Reports SG Activities

(This is the first of a series of monthly Student Government reports which will be submitted to the faculty and students of the University of North Carolina during the academic year 1961-62. It is hoped that these reports will provide that medium by which Student Government activities may be known to all those for whom Student Government exists.)

Student Government is now operating at near full-force under the direction of President William Harriss, Vice-President Hank Patterson, and numerous committee chairmen appointed by the President. Many new projects have been started, and many others have been continued which we feel will be of interest to the administration and students alike.

FIRST, COMMITTEE chairmen selected for the coming year by President Harriss are:

Budget Committee, Pete Thompson; Elections Board, David Buxton; Library Committee, Bill Grover; Communications Committee, Harve Harris; Student Credit Commission, Ed Manning; Campus Affairs Board, Tony Harrington; National Student Association, Bill Straughn; Honor System Commission, Jey Deifell; Consolidated University Student Council, Bill Shipp, President, and Wade Hargrove, Chairman; Publications Board, Rick Overstreet; University Entertainment Committee, Doug Burkhardt; Academic Affairs Committee, Bill Whichard; International Students' Board, Fred Anderson; Carolina Forum, Bob Powell; Last Lecture Committee, Walter Dellinger; Secretariat, Mary Townsend, Student Body Secretary; Student Audit Board, Tim Burnett; and State Affairs Committee, Co-Chairmen: Larry McDevitt and Tom White.

THE PRESIDENT'S Cabinet has met several times so that the progress of each committee could be discussed and reviewed and in order that future projects could be outlined and assigned. This Cabinet meets weekly (Monday, 4:00 P.M.) and is composed of the "Big 4"—Pat Browder, Kathy Fulenwider, Johnny Clinard, Tony Harrington, Al Cronenberg, and Dwight Wheless.

The Academic Affairs Committee, ably led by Bill Whichard, is hard at work on many new and continued projects. Some of these projects are: (1) contacting Wellesley about a pre-school independent study program; (2) contacting Dean Godfrey about the possibility of securing student membership on several faculty committees; (3) offering services to the larger Negro high schools in the state for College Day programs and any matters regarding admission to the University; (4) continued efforts toward the establishment of a General College Humanities course; (5) continuation of the course evaluation porgram; (6) continued efforts on a study abroad program; (7) revision of incentive course brochure written two years ago; and (8) a survey of freshmen and sophomores regarding what courses THEY THINK should be required for freshmen.

THE NATIONAL Student Association Committee is also very active. Recently the NSA sent six delegates and an alternate to the national USNSA convention in Madison, Wisconsin, at which national and international problems were discussed and ideas were exchanged. On the local level plans are being made for the Second North Carolina Human Relations Seminar to be held on December 9 here at UNC. This Seminar is being co-sponsored by the YM-YWCA Human Relations Committee and tentative plans show Robert Kennedy as the keynote speaker. The NSA Committee also announces Yoshio Teshima as UNC's Foreign Student Leadership Project student.

FROM THE Publications Board comes Chancellor Aycock's announcement that "The Undergraduate Handbook" will be a new official publication of the University. This publication will be composed of part of the "Record" and information covered in the Men's and Women's Handbooks. Concerning other new publications the board has taken a stand favoring appropriations for continuance of the "Parlance," a publication begun last spring. Jerry Stern announces the first issue of the "Quarterly" is expected by the end of November.

A very important committee affecting each administrator, faculty member, and student of the Consolidated University is now at the peak of its activities: State Affairs Committee, co-chaired by Tom White and Larry McDevitt. These co-chairmen have met several times with Chancellor Aycock in order to best organize and direct the committee's activities. Letters to each newspaper editor, radio station, television station, school superintendent and principal in N. C. have been prepared and now await mailing. In a month (November 7) the public will judge the success of this committee.

COMPOSED of seventeen members the Campus Affairs Board has several problems under study: (1) evening study rooms, (2) student union planning, (3) cut policy, (4) fraternity parking problem, (5) Umstead Act research, (6) date tickets, and (7) street repair. Chairman Tony Harrington announces that open meetings will be held, so that students may present problems for consideration. This Board seems to have another very busy year underway.

A problem has arisen with the overcrowded conditions of Wilson Library. Working to alleviate this and other library problems is the Library Committee under the chairmanship of Bill Grover. Bill announces that areas of discussion with Dr. Orne include possibility of a new student I.D. card and also temporary stack passes.

NOW FOR A LOOK at the legislative activities of Student Government. The legislative chambers in New East have seen much action this year partly due to the able leadership of Hank Patterson, Speaker of the Legislature and Vice-President of the Student Body. Attached to this report is a list of the bills and resolutions introduced from April through June; since June a total of nine bills and resolutions have been introduced into legislature. A present resolution asks that the Academic Affairs Committee study the Faculty-Advisor system and problems arising from that system and submit its findings to several administrators and the legislature itself. Over 240 presidential appointments have already been considered by the legislature with even more pending. These appointments echo hard work and long hours of the President of the Student Body, William G. Harriss.

In the next Student Government Report, activities of other committees and organizations will be reviewed, so that an accurate knowlege of Student Government functions will be possible. I have been brief; I hope, not belittling.

Respectfully submitted,
Dwight Wheless, Presidential Assistant.

FROM THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

1-Man Peace Corps Made Friends For U.S.

Approximately 60,000 foreign students attend universities in this country every year, and according to a recent article in "The Wall Street Journal," "more than half will go home mad at the United States." Mostly these potentially influential friends for America return disillusioned and disenchanted with us because few people show personal interest in them.

Last March William F. Dawson, twenty-two-year-old engineering junior at the University of Kansas, discovered that of the 260 students from sixty different nations attending school there, few had any American friends, most had never set foot in an American home, none had ever seen for themselves how American free enterprise works, and many would have to drop out of school if they couldn't find summer jobs to take care of next year's tuition.

Deciding that something had to be done to change this situation, Dawson arranged for a number of the foreign students to meet with campus leaders so they could air their gripes. As a result of this meeting, a People-to-People Council was set up on campus to help foreign students become better integrated into American life and to help them in every way possible—a sort of stay-at-home Peace Corps operation.

During the remaining months of the school year big changes took place. The People-to-People Council was given official recognition and office space in the Student Union. Committees were set up to arrange forums and social gatherings, home hospitality and tours to farms and businesses, job replacement and a brother-sister program to help orient new students arriving in the fall.

With the co-operation of the university and the local press, foreign students previously ignored suddenly found themselves the center of attention. Townspeople began inviting them to their homes for dinner. Farmers had them out for weekends. Students were getting together over coffee to discuss world problems and exchange information concerning their respective cultures. Everything was going along fine until school was about to close and fifty-six students showed up at the council's office seeking summer jobs.

Finding fifty-six jobs in a city the size of Lawrence, Kansas (pop. 32,858), presented an impossible task, but Dawson and Rick Barnes, chairman of the Job Placement Committee, went to work. They called upon a prominent businessman in nearby Kansas City and told him their problem. He promptly wrote thirty-seven leading firms there, urging that they try to provide jobs for these students. Only one came through, hiring two students.

When Dawson and Barnes learned what had happened in Kansas City, they should have been discouraged. But, instead of giving up, they hopped into a sports car and barnstormed the state of Kansas, calling on businessmen, newspaper editors, radio stations, chambers of commerce and anyone else who would listen to their story. When they returned to the university they had lined up the remaining fifty-four jobs.

If there had been more Bill Dawsons around when Kwame Nkrumah, the president of Ghana, was a university student in Pennsylvania a number of years ago, perhaps he would not be the leading pro-leftist in Africa today.

Next year the students at the University of Kansas are planning a bigger and better program to make real friends of students from abroad. Our whole nation would benefit if the example set at K.U. were followed and People-to-People Councils were established on campuses all over America?

ATTITUDES by Clotfelter

His Background Hangs Donner

(This is the second of a two-part survey of the furor caused by Frank Donner's attack on the House Un-American Activities Committee, titled THE UN-AMERICANS.)

Committee Chairman Walter's condemnation of THE UN-AMERICANS, as well as almost all other opposition to the book, stems from Frank Donner's personal background.

Walter claims that Donner was "a member of a Communist cell comprised of lawyers employed by the National Labor Relations Board in Washington."

The major points against Donner apparently are:

—that he invoked the first and fifth amendments when he was questioned about membership in the Communist Party (Walter disregards the Supreme Cnurt 1956 statement: "We must condemn the practice of imputing a sinister meaning to the exercise of a person's constitutional rights under the Fifth Amendment.")

—that he is general counsel for a labor union Walter claims is Communist-controlled.

—that he was a member of the board of directors of the "Red" National Lawyers Guild.

—that he has spoken before the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, which Walter likewise claims is Red controlled.

(As we said in Tuesday's "ATTITUDES" column, we feel Donner's book should be judged on its own merits, not on the degree of "pinkness" of its author.)

Walter, by now warm to his subject, finishes in a stream of abuse for Donner.

"I call your attention to a volume which most perfectly embraces and epitomizes the Communist line and technique . . .

"But in this battle . . . the faithless, the evil, the false, the betrayers of our people and of all mankind—the Frank J. Donners, and those in complicity—will, in the end, I am sure, perish in the face of truth and decency."

Throughout Rep. Walter's harangue there is his central, all-permeating, all-important point — the thought which he must convince his colleagues of, to continue his own power: "The success of the House Committee on Un-American Activities . . . can be measured in direct ratio to the intensity of the Communist effort to destroy it."

So, not only is all attempt to abolish the Committee Communist-instigated, but as Rep. Walter would have the nation believe, the more persons who call for abolition, the more books and newspapers which attack HUAC, the more individual groups which are disturbed by this modern Star Chamber . . . the more opposition in all spheres of life which HUAC encounters, the more effective and necessary it is. Opposition is given as the reason for perpetuation, a bit of logic which momentarily stuns us.

But apparently the logic is acceptable to Rep. Walter's fellow solons, because the louder the cry to abolish HUAC, the bigger the House vote to retain it, thus giving the Committee and its noble chairman more support in their attempts to label all opposition—from Frank Donner to Bishop Pike — as dirty Commies.

THE SPORTS Tabbloyd

North Carolina has a harder task this week than many might expect. The Tar Heels look like strong favorites over South Carolina for the Columbia game if last week's scores are compared. In losing by 42-0 to LSU, the Gamecocks dropped their third game of the season, as against one win over Wake Forest. Former UNC assistant coach Marvin Bass, now at USC, has a fine first team but is weak in the reserve column. LSU, with its three fine teams, just wore the Gamecocks out.

We'll continue our policy of not predicting the outcome of Carolina games, and let the Tar Heels make the decision themselves.

On other fronts, here's the way we think they will go—

Michigan will bounce back from its defeat by Michigan State to whip Purdue, 21-6.

Michigan State will challenge Mississippi for the top spot in the country by handing Notre Dame its first defeat, 20-10.

Minnesota's Golden Gophers will hold their high ranking by soundly whipping Illinois, 27-7.

Mississippi, despite these threats, will hold the top spot by whacking down Tulane, 34-0.

Ohio State, another member of the nation's elite, will hand Northwestern an unwanted 25-8 setback.

Pittsburgh will travel across country to upset a surprised team of UCLA Bruins, 19-14.

The Rice Owls fly away with a 31-12 win over Southern Methodist.

In other games, the scores will be Texas AM 18, Texas Tech 14; Yale 13, Cornell 7, and Washington 21, Stanford 13.

Last week, we guessed correctly on 11 of 17 records, and suffered our worst week of the season. Our total to date, excluding one tie, for a percentage mark of .732.

Dekes, SAE Clinch Playoff Berths

By John Montague

DKE, Phi Delt and SAE combined productive offenses with unyielding defenses Wednesday, and, as a result, moved themselves into play-off contention. DKE and SAE actually gained play-off berths, while the Phi Delts sewed up at least a tie for a tournament position.

Loy Thompson and Surry Roberts tallied for two touchdowns apiece in leading the DKE's to a 45-0 win over Theta Chi. Gaston Cajerton, Bill Brown and Dave Wysong also hit the TD trail for the winners. Wysong added two extra points, Roberts one. The win assured DKE of a play-off spot and at least a tie for first in League I. Theta Chi, by losing, dropped from the tournament scene completely.

Meanwhile, SAE belted the Pi Lambs, 46-0, to finish the regular season with a 3-1 mark. Should Kappa Psi upset DKE in the last game of the schedule, SAE's would share first place with DKE.

Two touchdowns by Scotty Trotter led the SAE attack, which also included TD scores by John Brabson, Saunders Midyette, Paul Harrell, Jim Pittman and Mike Dodd. Keith Stoneman and Pittman had one PAT each, while Harrell contributed a safety.

Ed Pleasants turned in the top individual offensive output of the season, scoring four touchdowns to lead the Phi Delt rout of Beta, 44-0. Tom Cummings and Charlie Battle got the other two TD's, with Semi Mintz and Jim Hartung getting point-afters. The Phi Delt defense chalked up three safeties, with credits going to Steve Harris, Cummings and Battle.

By winning, the Phi Delts finished the season with a 2-1 record in League IV. Their play-off status depends on the outcome of the Chi Psi-PiKA overtime game, to be played Monday. The two teams fought to a 7-7 tie on Wednesday. Pete Bondi scored the Chi Psi TD, John Kirkland picking up the PAT. Bill Bevis notched the PiKA 6-pointer and Bill Craig got the extra point.

Should PiKA (1-1) defeat Chi Psi (2-0), then there would be a three-way tie for first between the Phi Delts, Chi Psi and PiKA. However, if the Chi Psi's win it, then PiKA is eliminated and the other two teams go to the tournament.

The situation in League VI is similar. Phi Kap Sig downed SPE, 14-0, Wednesday, with Bob Walker scoring both TD's and Wendell Brande and Dave Raney adding the PAT's. The victory gave Phi Kap Sig a 2-1 mark and a shot at a play-off position.

Phi Kap Sig meets KA (3-0) next week. A Phi Kap Sig victory would leave both teams with 43-1 records. ZBT has already finished its season at 3-1 and thus a three-way tangle would result. However, if the KA's win, then Phi Kap Sig is out and KA and ZBT are in.

Chi Phi and DU battled for second place and a play-off spot in League II, and the Chi Phi's came out on top, 13-0. Alton Russell and Pete Wilday were the touchdown scorers, Russell also getting the extra point.

ATO had already wrapped up first in League II, going unbeaten in a four-game schedule.

In a scramble for first place between two unbeatens in League III, Kappa Sig whipped Delta Sig, 25-6. Blake Young paced the winners with two TD's and Jim Mooring and Ed Robinson added a TD apiece to the Kappa Sig cause. Fred Fearing notched the PAT. Jerry Barnett's touchdown was responsible for the six Delta Sig points.

Delta Sig still has hope, since its 2-1 record was good enough for second place and a tourney spot.

In other Blue Division action, AK Psi dropped the Phi Gams, 18-2, and Pi Kappa Phi downed TEP, 19-7. These were "last place battles" in Leagues III and II respectively.

Jimmy Johnson's two TD's led the AK Psi offense, with Larry Ward getting the other touchdown. The Phi Gams' two points came on a safety credited to Gene Record.

Pi Kappa Phi was spurred by Jimmy Klutz's two 6-pointers, and Jimmy Miller added the other TD. J. Crowell made the point-after. TEP scoring came on a TD by M. Slutsky and a PAT by Shelley Fogel.

In the only White game of the afternoon, the Delta Sig Rogues blasted TEP, 25-0. Lee Basinger, Bill Grover, Larry Foust and Vance Roberts all joined in the Rogues' touchdown parade, and Alan Clay contributed an extra point.

6 Nations Ask Appeal To Russia

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Six countries lying squarely in the Soviet fallout path asked the United Nations Friday to address a "solemn appeal" to Russia to cancel its scheduled 50-megaton nuclear test, the greatest explosion of the atomic age.

Per C. Haekkerup of Denmark, speaking also for Canada, Iceland, Japan, Norway and Sweden, introduced in the General Assembly's Main Political Committee a resolution expressing concern about Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's announced intention to explode the equivalent of 50,000 million tons of TNT by Oct. 31.

Warnings Raised In Caribbean

New political storm warnings were raised Friday in the Caribbean where Guatemala charged Fidel Sastro's Cuba is preparing an invasion mastermined by Moscow and Peiping.

In South America, revolutionary clouds dissipated somewhat but the governments of Ecuador and Bolivia remained alert for new disorders.

The Dominican Republic had its first trouble-free day in a week but several hundred youths took over a small section of downtown Ciudad Trujillo and proclaimed it "free territory."

Students From 12 Schools To Run Torch Marathon Across The State

Students from 12 schools, including the three branches of the Consolidated University, will run a "Torch of Education Marathon" across the state of North Carolina Nov. 1-3.

The purpose of the marathon, according to UNC sophomore Larry McDevitt, co-chairman of the State Affairs committee, is to draw public attention to the Nov. 7 bond issue.

The 65-hour race, stretching from Wilmington to the Great Smoky Mountains, will cover 312 miles in eastern North Carolina and 415 miles in the west.

Runners, each carrying the torch one mile, will leave from Murphy in Cherokee County and from Wilmington, meeting at the Capitol building in Raleigh on Nov. 3.

Two sound trucks, urging support of the bond issue, will accompany the runners during the march. The marathon has the okay of the State Highway Patrol and will be assisted by the radios of the Civil Air Patrol.

Over 200 students from each school except Carolina have volunteered for the marathon. UNC will be in charge of the torch from Winston-Salem, High Point, Greensboro, Burlington to Chapel Hill and Durham—a distance of 90 miles.

"If this bond issue is passed, it will be a great step forward for education in North Carolina," said McDevitt. "We hope this marathon will arouse public opinion and get them to the polls on November 7."

Girls from Woman's College will carry the torch through the city of Greensboro. Complete radio and television coverage have been obtained for the entire state.

McDevitt said that the entire basketball team from Western Carolina College has volunteered. "Fraternities, dorms and other campus groups in all the schools have pledged their aid in this marathon," he added.

Heading the UNC marathon are Charles Brown and Senior Mike McClister.

"Student participation in this marathon will be indicative of their support of the bond issue," said Brown. He said all such student action would contribute to the bond publicity.

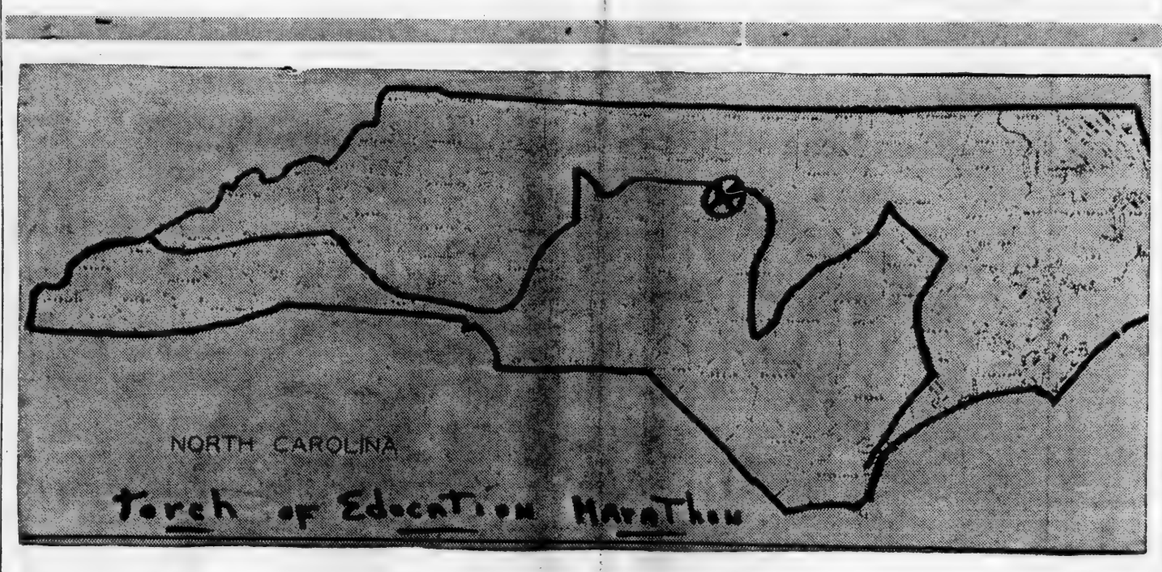
He said, "Judging from the size and interest of other participating schools we are anticipating a larger amount of interest here at Carolina. The fact that UNC will receive more benefit from the bond passage than any other school should be reason enough to prod students to participate in this event."

McDevitt urged all individual students or groups from dorms, fraternities or other organizations sign up at the information office in Graham Memorial. "We have already had very much interest shown in the marathon," he said.

Mileage Paid For

Students who use their own cars in going to the marathon will be paid for gas mileage, McDevitt said.

Besides the Consolidated University, schools participating will be Appalachian State Teachers, East Carolina, Elizabeth City State Teachers, Fayetteville State Teachers, N.C. Agriculture and Technical, N.C. College, Pembroke State, Western Carolina and Winston-Salem State Teachers.



Torch Marathon will follow this trail in its bid for bond issue support.

Bond Won't Increase Taxes, Gill Reports

The $61.6 million bond issue which goes up for approval before the state on Nov. 7 will not increase taxes, according to State Treasurer Edwin Gill. The opinion was incorporated into a pamphlet issued by the state on Thursday. The pamphlet asks for the approval of the bond issue.

Gill was quoted as saying that the state is in excellent financial condition and that bonds issued by the state carry AAA rating, the highest possible rating for securities of this type.

According to Gill the 1961 state General Assembly appropriated money to take care of debt service requirements on the bonds. This will constitute one per cent of the annual general fund appropriation.

Gill said that North Carolina would be able to market the bonds to good advantage because of its long record of fiscal integrity.

Governor Terry Sanford told reporters at his press conference on Thursday that unless there were another depression there would be no need to alter the tax structure for the next generation.

VIENNA, Autsaria (UPI)—Indonesian President Su karno arrived Friday to enter a hospital here for medical treatment. Informed sources said he would undergo gall bladder surgery.

700 Students Urge Support In Bond Vote

Seven hundred students responded to the University Party's letter-writing campaign urging voters to support the bond issue in the Nov. 7 statewide election.

A UP bond booth was set up in Y-Court Tuesday-Friday to supply students with stationery and stamps.

The issue is a proposed $61,665,000 bond, approximately one-third of which is earmarked for improvements of the state's educational institutions.

UNC students were asked by sorority girls who operated the booth to write letters home, soliciting support for the bond.

Dick Lewisohn, UP publicity chairman, pleased with response, said the letters covered every corner of the state.

Sororities involved were AD Pi, Kappa, Chi O and Tri Delt.

Sanford Appoints Ed Lanier Of UNC As Personnel Head

Edwin S. Lanier, UNC's student aid director, was appointed state personnel director by Gov. Terry Sanford Thursday.

Lanier will succeed John McDevitt in the $12,000-a-year post. The personnel director is responsible for policy regulations of employment and job requirement standards. This position insures the quality of state employees and is responsible for consistent employment practices.

Lanier says that he hopes to finish his responsibilities as Student Aid Director in the next several weeks. Mrs. Branch, Chancellor Aycock's administrative assistant, said, "We sure hate to lose him, but we're tickled to death he goit the job." She said that he was a very capable director of student aid with definite assets for his new job.

Lanier has served three terms as mayor of Chapel Hill and was elected to the State Senate in 1957 and 1959. Gov. Sanford said that Lanier was a senator "who did his homework."

Lanier, 60, attended UNC where he later became director of student aid. He taught school at Mills Home High School before he moved to Chapel Hill.

ACCEUPTS INVITATION

BRASILIA (UPI) — President Joao Goulart has accepted an invitation to visit Poland sometime early next year, it was announced Friday. The exact date of the visit has not yet been set. Lincoln Gordon, the new U.S. Ambassador here, invited Goulart to visit the United States when he presented his credentials to the Brazilian chief executive Thursday.

Vote Procedure Outlined

New University Party Convention procedures will be in effect next week to "discourage ballot box stuffing and to prevent one person from committing a delegation to one particular candidate."

Chairman Bill Criswell said, "This is intended to serve as fair warning."

He also announced that seating charts, segregating the fraternities, sororities and Men's and Women's dorms during the convention, have been mailed to the various delegation heads.

Following the nominations from the floor and the nomination speeches, the delegations will caucus. Voting, to be conducted by roll call, will be on a so-many-for, so-many-against basis.

The convention, meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Memorial Hall, will nominate candidates for the top five positions in the freshman, sophomore and junior class, plus dorms during the convention, have a UP treasurer.

Tapestries Exhibited

A total of 28 tapestries created by modern day French designers are being exhibited at the Ackland Art center through Oct. 31.

The exhibition, entitled "Contemporary French Tapestries," is being circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Travelling Exhibition Service.

The current exhibition at Ackland is the second of its sort.

The artists of the tapestries are members of the Association of Tapestry Painters-Designers. To become a member of this group, an artist must show high artistic ability and an understanding of weaving methods and material. The artisans of the tapestries are Maurice Andre, Louis-Marie Jullien, Jean Lurcat, Mathieu Mategot, Marc Pttit, Jean Picart Le Doux, Etienne Poirier, Mario Prassinos, Marc Saint-Saens and Michael Tourliere.

Kappa Delta, Beta Theta Pi Winners In Co-Rec Carnival

By John Montague

A group of girls from Kappa Delta teamed up successfully with the boys from Beta Theta Chi Thursday night, the result being the championship of the Fifteenth Annual Co-Rec Carnival. Actually, the girls were the "number five" unit from KD, as many of the women's organizations had to split up in order to provide enough teams to pair with all the men's groups.

The winning KD 5-Beta team took a first in archery and second in both the carnival games and volleyball. Ann Ogden and John Bagby were the victorious archers, while Jack Blackwell and Lynne Clark teamed in volleyball and Jack Presson and Linda Colvard were partners in the carnival games. The total point aggregation for the winners was 17.

Pi Phi 3-DKE 2 came in second with 14.5 points, nudging out AD Pi 1-Delta Sig 1, which had 14. The former team scored firsts in box hockey and tether ball, Reggie Fountain and Katherine Alsop respectively doing the honors in these events. AD Pi 1-Delta Sig 1 captured first in volleyball due to the fine play of Linda Burbridge and John Corbett.

Fourth place went to the Alpha Gam 5-NROTC combo, with 13 points. Other teams in the top ten were: Alpha Gam 2-Old West and AD Pi 4-Stacy, both with 11, KD 3-Old East with 10, Chi Omega 3-SAE with 9, and Alpha Gam 1-SAH and Kap Kap Gam 1-Parker, each with 8 points.

The relays this year were won by the KD 3-Old East team. The winning combination was composed of Connie Davis, Martha Cole Glenn, Joan Tunstall, Patsy McKeithin, Bill Bryant, Ted Peterson, Jim Renger and Bob Cathey.

Catherine Bolton and John Heath joined forces to take the badminton trophy for Alderman 2-Lewis. Tops in table tennis was the team of Susan Mott and Julian Pleasants, from Nurses Dorm-Avery.

Sophia Pike and Chuck Ferguson were champions in the carnival games. They represented the Chi Omega 2-AFROTC team.

The carnival took up all of the main floor in Woollen Gym and also spread out into the Tin Can. After the competition was over, trophies and plaques were presented to the individual winners and to the winning teams. The entire program took three hours.

Although neither the number of teams nor the number of spectators reached last year's record proportions, Intramural Director Tom Johnson still considered it an extremely successful night.

Sparks Cause Fire

Twenty-five bales of straw were destroyed yesterday afternoon by a fire caused by sparks from an acetylene torch which was being used by workmen on Highway 64 near Glen Lennox.

The straw was used to cover the newly planted grass along the road. There was no other property damage reported.

Deafening Silence

A thundering silence is issuing from the local theaters on the still unsolved question of integration.

As the situation now stands, the Carolina Theater admits Negroes who present UNC student I.D. cards. The Varsity has no announced policy. Some Negroes have been admitted, others have not.

Neither theater has committed itself on the question of total integration. Neither, in fact, seems ready to take any sort of action, preferring instead to hide behind a thick wall of silence in the hope that token integration will be enough to allow them to continue with a policy that amounts to little better than total segregation.

The practice of allowing admittance only to UNC Negroes is nothing more than a stalling tactic. The Negro enrollment here is less than 80 students. This means that the Carolina has made the grand gesture of admitting that 80 Negroes are human beings, and as such are entitled to the wonderful privilege of attending movies.

The Varsity policy—if it can be called a policy—is even worse. The theatre management has refused to commit itself.

Last week, a Negro was admitted to the Varsity—not because the management has decided to make a concession to human dignity, but because the Negro was mistaken for a foreigner.

After receiving a ticket, and taking a seat, the student was ferreted out by an usher with a flashlight. When he said that he was indeed not a foreigner, but an American, he was asked to leave.

What kind of tortured and abused logic allows for the principle that the American Negro has less right to a theatre seat than a foreign Negro?

This is but one of several incidents that have taken place since the theaters were allowed to pull back into their shell of silence after almost three months of picketing.

The argument that integration must take place slowly has some validity. But when it is used as an excuse to cloak blatant bigotry, it loses any semblance of reasonableness it might otherwise have.

There is no denying that the problem of integration is a ticklish one, and great harm could be done by too rapid attempts to integrate. At the same time, the Negroes in the Chapel Hill area have shown a monumental degree of patience in their dealings with the two local theaters. They willingly called off picketing operations when the management promised to integrate — slowly, quietly, and with a minimum of fanfare.

But it becomes more and more obvious that the promise was an empty one, prompted only by falling ticket sales. It now appears that the "slow, quiet approach" was nothing more than a slow, quiet, attempt to get the pressure off.

We suggest that someone rapidly, loudly, put it back on again.

No Tax Increase

While we welcome the views of individual readersc o nthe $61.5 million state bond election set for Nov. 7, two questionh raised in Observer Forum letters this week call for comment.

One of the writers, a University of North Carolina student, declared she would cast her vote against the bond issue, largely because of the (the Consolidated University) $13.2 fate that "a good portion of our million will go for additional dormitory construction (at Chapel Hill) to house the rising enrollment." She believes non-serious students should be weeded out first.

It is true that the three branches of the Consolidated University will get $13.2 million of the $34.8 million earmarked for state educational institutions. But it is a misconception that these funds will go for dormitories at Chapel Hill.

The University of North Carolina has constructed and is constructing dormitories primarily with federal housing loans. These are self-liquidating by reason of fees charged students.

The $4.5 million to be received by State College at Raleigh includes $1 million for an 800-man dormitory which is badly needed. The college will also get $833,000 for a forestry building and $800,000 for purchase of 800 acres o fland to be used for future growth.

Woman's College at Greensboro will receive $2.8 million, of which $860,000 will be used for dormitory additions.

All of these needsc have been carefully screened by college and state officials. The issuance of the bonds is recommended to the people of North Carolina by a vast majority of thse serving in the General Assembly. Furthermore, the bonds can be approved and issued without increasing state taxes.

This answers the second question raised by a reader in Marion.

State Treasurer Edwin Gill reports that we are in excellent financial condition in North Carolina. The bonds of our state are rated AAA—the highest rate obtainable for securities of this kind.

The anticipated debt service requirements of the proposed bond issue will constitute only 1 per cent of the state's annual General Fund appropriations. This was provided for by the General Assembly of 1961.

Future requirements, in Gill's opinion, can be easily met out of funds derived from the state's present tax structure.

In short, the use of revenue from sale of these bonds has not been carelessly or frivolously planned, nor will it increase the taxes of the individual North Carolinian.

'ONE NEEDS FEELING TO APPRECIATE SHOW WITH HEART'

In Defense Of Wilder And Playmakers

To The Editor:

I woke up this morning with a bit of a hangover but with a pleasant taste in my mouth, because last night I spent two of my most delightful hours, ever, within the four walls of a theatre.

So it was through slightly bleary eyes that I gazed at the printed pages of our daily rag that greets me faithfully every morning, and I must say that after reading the top article on page two, I became somewhat saddened.

The reason for my sadness was a "review" by a Mr. Ludwig, a theatre critic who seemed to be about as asthetically receptive as a professional executioner.

HERR LUDWIG began his self appointed demolition by criticizing one of the most appreciated playwrights in the American theatre on one of his most heralded works. The play under fire was Thornton Wilder's unique comedy, "The Matchmakers." This play, it seems to me, was written to give an audience an entertaining, enjoyable evening, simply that, and watching last night's audience, it was obvious that he had handled this job to perfection.

Fortunately, for us, Mr. Wilder includes several priceless bits of home-spun philosophy which, coming from his character, represent groups of people I have known, would like to know or am glad I don't know. What else does it say? What is its "message?" What is Renoir's message in his "Afternoon of the Boating Party," or George Gershwin's message in his "Rhapsody in Blue?" Mr. Wilder is content to offer comments on life and love and these were heartily received.

THE ARTICLE MENTIONED directorial barriers presented by the play, and there are barriers. If there weren't there would be no reason for a director.

However, in saying that Foster Fitzsimons' "staging techniques are as cliched as the lines . . ." he is simply saying that the direction fits the play. This is the chief aim of a director. Therefore, if the play should happen not to seem "cliched", and I can assure you it did not to those present last night, then it follows that the direction was excellent.

Ludwig speaks of DANNY PROCTOR'S interpretation of Barnaby Tucker in the glowing terms that it well deserves. I can only add my own congratulations to Danny and say that he, as well as being a beautiful comedian in his own right, was a member of a very important team.

The other member was LARRY McMULLEN. Larry's awkwardness made him look so much like the proverbial bull in the china shop that I feared if he moved one more time he would either wreck Mrs. Mulloy's Hat Shop, demolish the Harmonia Gardens Restaurant or pop out of his too-tight suit. This was exactly what Cornelius Hackle was to me when I first read the play and he is even more so now.

JOHN CROCKETT came to life as the jaundiced Vandergelder, the lecherous old miser, being lead around by the nose, and not knowing it, by the indomitable Dolly Levi, played by LOUISE LAMONT. About Louise, all that needs be said is that she did her consistently professional job.

LARRY RANDOLF as Malachi Stack was a "tippling Jack-of-all-trades" and a "cynical cracker barrel philosopher" and he acted both of them marvelously. My only complaint to Larry is that it was hard to hear his soliloquy over the laughter.

As for VI GALVIN in the role of Mrs. Irene Mulloy, god bless her. Wneh she said, "the world is full of such wonderful things," I had to look at her through the tear that was in the corner of my eye.

"God show" to GWEN SIDES in her first role and to GAIL PLACE for her Carolina debut.

I once saw ALLEN JOSEPH outside of Howard Johnson's Restaurant with a lollypop and a balloon, but on the stage he was the creaky old barber, and at times I thought he would cut Vandergelder's throat, although I'm glad he didn't.

TOMMY REZZUTO'S settings will travel all over the state and to Augusta Georgia this week. Hats off to you Tommy. You couldn't get much more "imagination" into the truck.

There were flaws. The first act tends to get off to a slow start. Barnaby and Cornelius lose several laughs by rushing their lines and Mrs. Galvin does relax a bit too much at times.

Mr. Ludwig saw a final dress rehearsal, in front of virtually no audience. Its a pity that in his grim little sphere, surrounded by empty seats, he couldn't see the beauty that was on the stage in front of him, or hear the laughter of opening night. Apparently he thinks that unkind words, tempered with alliteration, are all that are needed to write a review. He seems not to know that to appreciate a show with heart one needs feeling.

I have seen "The Matchmaker" three times and shall see it again before it leaves the campus. I invite Mr. Ludwig to come join me—if he doesn't enjoy the show he might like to watch me laugh.

As a post script to you Mr. Ludwig, we might add, we also tried out for "The Matchmaker," and didn't get a part.

"You Mean ME Get In There And Do Something?"

Outlook Not Bright

US-Polish Relations Have Grown Worse

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Relations between the United States and Poland have grown progressively worse in recent months, with no indication improvement is around the corner.

Less than half a year ago, Polish diplomats here were able to state privately, but with obvious conviction:

"Relations between Poland and the United States could not be better, if you take the world situation into account."

Today, they could be worse, considering the world picture. But there is not too much leeway in that direction.

Last week, the Polish government postponed indefinitely the ground breaking ceremony for an American-financed children's hospital in Cracow. The Foreign Ministry gave no reason. It simply informed the U. S. charge d'affaires that the ceremony, expected to take place Oct. 15, was "not timely."

In the view of diplomatic sources here, the rebuff was clearly the result of creeping deteriorating of relations during the summer.

THE POLISH decision caused these relations to deteriorate even further.

American officials here received the news with stony silence. Their only reaction was to explain with grim emphasis that the United States was contributing about $3 million, half of it in dollars and half in zlotys from the counterpart fund resulting from sales of U. S. agricultural commodities to Poland.

It was understood, however, that the postponement would not interfere with the building of the hospital. The ground has, in fact, already been broken, and the building is progressing on schedule.

The postponement was a visible demonstration of the new turn in U.S.-Poland relations. But far more important, in the view of diplomats here, is the absence of another event: the signing of a new U. S.-Polish commodity agreement.

Such agreements were concluded every year between 1957 and 1960. Another one was expected to be signed this year—but it never came through.

Under the four annual agreements between 1957 and 1960, Poland received $365 million in farm surplus and credits. The commodities were paid for in zlotys, thus creating the so-called counterpart fund.

The 1960 agreement covered deliveries and credits totaling $130 million.

Officials here said all commodities to be delivered under the 1960 agreement have now been shipped. They said the Poles earlier this year voiced a desire for a new agreement and "some discussions" took place. But actual negotiations were never started.

American officials refuse to cite reasons why, but the reasons are obvious.

Poland has staunchly supported the position of the Soviet Union and Red East Germany in the present Berlin crisis. This disqualified Poland as a recipient of U. S. economic aid.

Last Tuesday Polish Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki came to Washington from the United Nations in New York and called on Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Did he discuss U. S. aid to Poland? reporters asked.

"I don't remember," Rapacki said.

Death Mystery

No death or mystery has so stirred the interest of the people of North Carolina in recent years as that involving the two roommates found dead of poisoning in a dormitory at Chapel Hill. And if any such mystery is to be solved in this scientific age, it should be this one which occurred in the midst of pathologists and men learned in related fields.

In recent years experts in our universities have pressed hard for scientific improvement in determining the cause of deaths under unusual circumstances. They have urged a system of medical examiners supplanting the sometimes inadequate coroner's system. Now in this case certainly the best knowledge is available and should be put to use.

Liberals Can't See Forest

With regard to the present controversy over the HUAC; don't you think that our beloved would-be liberals are guilty of a serious failure to see the forest for all the trees?

To resolve what is rapidly becoming a very confused and emotion-ridden situation, let's begin at the beginning. The most ardent anti-HUAC man on campus will concede me my first point: that any society, be it nation, tribe, or city-state, must have some machinery to insure its internal political security. Mark that word political.

The second point, too, will be readily given me by any man who uses his head instead of his stomach to think with, along with the third; That such machinery, once it is working, must have an investigative branch, regardless what the form of government it is protecting happens to be. Now, that investigation can take one of two forms; that of our system, which garantees the individual certain rights against legal prosecution (Mark, also that word legal.), or that of an out-and-out dictatorship, which guarantees the individual cerwhatsoever.

There can be no shades of grey on this third point. Either the individual is considered, or he is not. If he is, you have an HUAC; if he is not, you have a Star Chamber, a Spanish Inquisition, or an NKVD.

The HUAC has been blamed for the ruination of many a good name and career. The method, according to opponents of the HUAC, is to put a man on the stand and dredge up something that everyone, including the individual himself, has forgotten long ago.

When the individual invokes his given rights, those guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment, the roof falls in. His name is shattered, his career ruined—all because of something he did long ago. No one, least of all me, will allow that this is not a real tragedy, when it happens. No one, least of all me, likes to see a good man's good name smeared. But is abolishing the HUAC the answer?

MANY PEOPLE believe that an individual should be protected from any and all perils of life by his government. These people populate both the right-and the left-wing groups in our country as well as elswhere. These people seem to think that a political system, set up to insure the individual reasonable freedom in the conduct of his affairs, should also guarantee him that he will not suffer the risks inherent in the conduct of those affairs.

This is far beyond the capabilities of any government professing the principles that ours does. A government that allows the individual the freedom mentioned above can only make thte assurances that go along with that freedom.

That is to say, our form of government can only assure the individual that he will not be unjustly treated in a legal and political sense; any injustice that he encounters in the normal course of interactions with other people of necessity cannot be covered by any document like the Constitution of the United States.

WHEN A WITNESS takes the fifth before a House or Senate investigating committee, he takes the risk (socially) that he will be adversely affected. The amendment that he invokes guarantees that for the acceptance of this risk, he will not be prosecuted (or persecuted) in any way merely because he took the Fifth Amendment bofore a committee.

If he does not take the Fifth, he runs the risk of being brought to account for his actions on evidence that he himself supplied. This choice of which risk to take is his and his alone. No one stands over him with a weapon; no one weilds a whip.

SO, WE come to the conclusion that the HUAC is being blamed for something which it cannot help. The HUAC is concerned with one thing and one thing only; locate subversive elements right-or-left wing gather evidence against them; present this evidence to the prosecuting agencies for proper handling. No wiretaps are used; no torture is employed; no witnesses are bribed or coerced, except those as may coerce themselves.

Those who may choose to present their case before the committee are given every consideration of our legal system. Having appeared before the committee does not guarantee a trip to the chamber, as well it could. If there is the risk of humiliation or social or occupational ostracism involved, that risk is the individual's alone, and any consequences are to be suffered by the individual alone.

Admittedly, this does not solve the problem just stated, but, it does put us on a sound basis for the continuance of the HUAC, the Senate Crime Sub-committee, and any other investigation body legally and properly assembled by our government for a like purpose. The HUAC must be continued; otherwise, what are we going to do?

Failure Hits 533 At UNC

Finances Force 53 To Drop Out

A total of 553 UNC students were dismissed or withdrew because of academic failure last year, according to figures released Friday by Ken Batchelor, assistant director for finance for the State Board of Higher Education.

Another 30 left Carolina because of low grades. Financial considerations were involved in the loss of 53 UNC students.

Considering the totals for the three schools which make up the Consolidated University, 1,138 dropped out because of academic failure.

Low Grades

State College lost 97 students and WC lost 61 because of low grades.

Seventeen Carolina students, 10 at State and 28 at WC dropped out because they found the work too difficult.

The three schools lost 133 students because of illness. A total of 2,268 students graduated from the Consolidated University.

At State College there were 476 students who withdrew because of academic failure. Woman's College had 129 failures.

Rainmaker Sets Free Production

A free-for-all production of the Petite Dramatique's "The Rainmaker" opens here next weekend. No admission will be charged and free refreshments will be served after the opening night performance October 27. The play will continue through October 29.

Director Kermit Ewing provides the following outline of the plot:

The Curry family, located in an isolated area in the southwest in the 1940's, struggles with two problems: 1) severe drought and 2) getting Lizzy Curry married.

Lizzy, of marrying age, but with no prospects in sight, has been combination sister, daughter, housekeeper and mother for her father and two brothers. The family undertakes to relieve her of these duties by getting her married but she isn't sure this is what she wants.

Suddenly, Starbuck, the dashing Rainmaker, appears and proposes to bring rain to the thirsty country. He brings confusion and havoc.

UNC Delegates Hear Shriver:

Post Card Furor 'Blown Up'

By Bill Hobbs

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 — Peace Corps Director R. Sargeant Shriver Jr., yesterday said incidents such as the recent postcard from Nigeria were blown out of proportion by "those who fear the image of a really free people which the Peace Corps presents."

Five UNC delegates at the Peace Corps conference heard Shriver say he was "greatly encouraged by Nigerian officials' support during the furor caused by Peace Corps volunteer Margery Michelmore's postcard describing Nigerian conditions.

"We're trying to wrap up an idea and an ideal in a person and send it overseas," said Shriver. "There have been mistakes and there may be more; but I have been greatly encouraged by the requests from other countries and the quality of the people now working for us."

UNC Representatives

Representing UNC in Washington were Bill Harriss, president of the student body; Miss Anne Queen YMCA director; Professor James Blackman chairman of Chancellor W. B. Aycock's Peace Corps subcommittee; Bill Hobbs managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel and Jim Wagner chairman of the campus Peace Corps committee.

The conference in the Washington Sheraton-Park Hotel was the last of 14 regional conferences held recently. It was attended by over 300 civil, agricultural, labor, education and business leaders from Washington, D. C., Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

Delegates heard the Peace Corps explained by a three-man symposium for three hours Saturday morning.

The symposium traced Peace Corps functions in the selection of volunteers, training project development and administration.

Following the symposium was Shriver's luncheon address. The conference then divided into four discussion groups to meet and question "specialists in program recruitment selection and training fields."

Young Democrats To Meet

The four major canddiates for North Carolina state Young Democrats Club offices will speak at UNC's YDC meeting Tuesday at 8 in 203 Manning, said President LaFontaine Odom yesterday.

Dub Graham of Charlotte and Ray Lackey of Hendersonville are the candidates for state president; Al House of Roanoke Rapids and Charley Hodson of Chapel Hill for national committeemen.

There will also be a vote on the resolution to admit Red China to the UN and approve of Thurgood Marshall for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Odom said, "This meeting is the most important meeting we have before the State Convention Nov. 7 in Durham. We will get an opportunity to observe and evaluate the candidates before the convention.

'Abolition' Film Slated For Monday

"Operation Abolition," the House Un-Amaricen Activities Committee's controversial film version of the 1960 San Francisco student "riots," will be shown Monday night at 8:30 in Carroll Hall.

Fulton Lewis III, son of the prominent conservative radio commentator, Fulton Lewis Jr., will debate Mike Harrington, Socialist newspaper editor, following the film.

Lewis is narrator in the 45-minute film. Harrington is editor of NEW AMERICA, the American Socialist Party newspaper.

The debate and film are being sponsored by the Carolina Forum of student government and the campus Young Republicans Club.

Neither of the campus organizations endorse the views expressed by the film or the debaters, said Forum chairman Bob Powell and YRC president Earl Baker.

"Since the film has not been shown on campus previously, much of the controversy surrounding 'Operation Abolition' is going on above the knowledge of many UNC students," said Baker. "The film is being brought here to give students the opportunity to decide for themselves on the merits of the film's content."

"Operation Abolition" concerns college student demonstrations which occurred in San Francisco in May, 1960 protesting HUAC hearings there.

The House Committee claims the demonstrations were led by Communists. Student demonstrators deny this.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and San Francisco city officials say "Operation Abolition" is a true representation of the "riots."

The National Council of Churches and several leading newspapers — including the Washington POST, the New York TIMES, and two San Francisco papers—have claimed the film distorts the facts and is prejudicial to the students.

"Operation Abolition" was made from film clips subpoenaed from San Francisco TV stations, and spliced together by HUAC. Lewis was narrator and technical director for the film.

The film is sold for $100 a copy and has been shown to college, civic club and government organizations around the country.

Lewis and Harrington have debated the film on numerous college campuses. Lewis, a former HUAC research analyst, has spoken on 220 college campuses since January.

Mikoyan Accuses Molotov Of '57 Revolution Effort

Remarks Indicate Purge

MOSCOW (UPI) — First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan accused former Premier and Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov of trying to seize power in Russia in 1957,

He also attacked Albania in terms so strong observers said it amounted to expulsion of Albania from the Communist camp.

Mikoyan made his accusations in a speech Friday to the current 22nd Soviet Communist Party Congress. The speech was published Saturday in the official government newspaper Izvestia.

Mikoyan said Molotov pretended to accept the peaceful co-existence policy laid down by Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev at the 20th Congress in 1956 but actually was organizing a "palace revolution" behind the scenes with other members of the "anti-party group."

And in effect the moustached deputy premier said that if Molotov had succeeded in seizing power Khrushchev and some of the other leaders of present-day Soviet Russia might have been physically liquidated.

Virulent Attacks

Soviet affairs experts in London said Saturday the virulent attacks on Molotov and the other members of the group—former Premier Georgi Malenkov and Lazar Kaganovich—indicated a trial and possibly even a purge was in the making.

While Khrushchev was carrying out the decisions of the 20th Congress, Mikoyan said, "Molotov stuck poles in the wheel spokes, hindered the work of the Central Committee, tried to attract adherents for the members of the Presidium of the Central Committee, all of which he did indeed secretly."

Death Time Trimmed To Half Hour Period

Police Chief W. D. Blake yesterday said the SBI report on articles belonging to the two Carolina students who died of cyanide will not be completed until Wednesday.

Meanwhile police have narrowed down to a halfhour period the time in which the students took or were given the poison. Detectives Howard Pendergraft and John Nesbitt said they talked to a student who saw Barham entering the bathroom in apparently normal condition at 10:30 p.m., Oct. 5. This was a half-hour before he was found in unconscious convulsions in the bathroom.

The student, who said he knew Barham casually, told police that he passed Barham in the hall about 10:30 p.m. and that they exchanged greetings. He said Barham was entering the shower room, clad only in a towel and that he seemed completely normal.

Prior to that, Barham was last seen at 9:35 p.m. when another student entered his room to get some dry cleaning. It was just after 11 p.m. that night when three other students saw Barham in the shower gagging and in unconscious convulsions on the tile floor. At that time he was clad in pajamas.

They called his roommate Johnson, and helped carry Barham back to the room where Johnson dismissed them, assuring them he would take care of Barham and call a doctor if necessary. It was about 10:30 a.m. the next day when janitor Robert Holt, asked to see why the boys failed to show up for breakfast work in Lenoir Hall, entered the room and found them dead.

Chief Blake has requested that all students who picked up dry cleaning from Barham on Thursday night, Oct. 5, to bring it by the police station. Police are believed to be checking for traces of cyanide on the clothing.

The chief said the investigation was proceeding satisfactorily but slowly as detectives follow up new leads and re-check evidence already uncovered. The officers are working on the theory that one or both died from powdered cyanide spread on peanut butter crackers they may have eaten as they played a game of rook sometime late in the evening. Cards for the game and a score card from previous games were found in the room.

101 Enter Contest For Queen

The Yack beauty contest, with 101 entrants, will be held Monday night at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Late permission until 12 has been granted all girls.

Sharon Cates, last year's queen, will crown the new queen. WCHL announcer Jim Heavner will be master of ceremonies.

Admission is free. A combo will provide background music.

Dan Brock, guitarist, will perform at intermission.

The entrants are from 12 dormitories, six sororities, 19 fraternities and three honorary societies. They will wear long formals.

Girls will be judged on the basis of beauty, poise, and stage presence.

Semi-Finalists

From 101 entrants, 40 to 45 semi-finalists will be chosen and out of this group will come 13 finalists, which will be the queen and her court of 12.

There will be a rehearsal for the entrants Sunday night at 6:30 in Memorial Hall. At that time they will receive instructions from Miss Cates.

Four thousand copies have been printed, many of which will be distributed to administrative offices and departments on campus. The Y business staff urges students to buy their directories early.

School-Spirited Vandals?

UNC Plastered With USC

WRITING ON THE WALL—The letters "USC," standing for University of South Carolina, UNC's football opponent this weekend, were written on Lenoir Hall and other campus buildings late Friday night. This branding was done on the front of Manning Hall.

School-spirited Gamecocks or Carolina Gentlemen plastered USC in black and red paint in about a dozen places on the campus sometime Friday night.

The Gamecocks lost to the University of North yesterday by a score of 17 to 0. The game was played in Columbia.

Perhaps most conspicuous was a large black USC on the screen doors at Lenoir Hall which greeted students cheerfully going to breakfast.

Chapel Hill merchants also reported a number of circular paper stickers reading "Take the Tar Heels" were found stuck to store windows and along the streets.

"USC" and "Gamecocks," most of the words administered by a paint sprayer, were found on Manning Hall steps, the Tin Can, the Bell Tower, the Old Well walk and on several roads around campus.

Campus Police Chief Arthur Beaumont said that paint damage was not too much but that some of the marble objects may have to be sand-blasted.

"I think that some of the painting may have been done by our own boys who wanted to raise school spirit," said Beaumont. "We have run across a lot of paint in several of the dormitory inspections."

UN: Hope For Peace

Today marks the beginning of United Nations Week all over the world. The United States, as a nation which cherishes its ideals most highly, will observe the week with both hope and fear for the survival of this institution, which both as an idea and an organization, is based in Western ideas.

Conceived from man's highest aspirations, and established out of the choas that was WW II, the UN is founded on the ideals of representative government and parliamentary tradition. Its firmest convictions stem from a belief in the worth and dignity of the individual, as pointed out by our UN Ambassador, Adlai Stevenson.

Today, the United Nations is the focal point of the conflicting ideologies of East and West. Blasted and torn by internal disagreements, it still remains the greatest hope of this country for peace. Russia, although it uses the UN only as a tool for its own ends, still sees in the institution a body that cannot be ignored.

The death of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold on Sept. 18 left the way open for the Soviet Union to present its plan for a troika, a plan quickly recognized as a move toward garroting UN intervention in the Soviet quest for expansion.

This has shaken the foundations of the UN, as have the continuing cries in Germany, in Africa, India, Algeria and throughout much of the rest of the world.

It is significant that President Kennedy yesterday summoned Ambassador Stevenson to the U. S. to confer with him today, along with several members of the American UN mission. The hope is that world opinion can be brought to bear on Russia to prevent the explosion of a 50-megaton nuclear bomb.

That this should occur on the very day that begins UN week is coincidental, yet it emphasizes the role that the UN plays in shaping events that bear heavily on the safety and peace of the world.

Our relations with Russia are more strained than at any time since the beginning of the cold war. The hopes of the free world rest heavily on the UN: hopes that the organization can find peaceful solutions as they have in the past. The Korean War ended under the auspices of the UN, the Berlin blockade was called off there and the Suez crisis was ended. Progress has been made in the Congo, although that area is still a trouble spot.

There is reason for anxiety that the UN will not survive. But there is all the more reason to support it.

As Ambassador Stevenson put it, "To weaken it, to turn away from it, to leave it to its destructive antics would be the equivalent of declaring bankrupt men's best hopes for peace. This we must not do. We must not "despair of the republic" —the republic of all mankind who live in fear and long for peace and in the United Nations have at least set their foot a first step on the way to a world society under law."

Goettingen Scholar Looks At Europe

STAUFEN SCHWARZWALD—For the student not really aware of the golden opportunities awaiting his wanderlust during the summer months in Europe, I've decided to relate some of my experiences this summer and try to give a picture of the life of the European students during their vacations.

I arrived in Bremen, Germany on August 11, after a thirteen-day trip aboard a coal freighter (cost: $150). On September 4, I was scheduled to enter the Goethe-Institut language school here in southwestern Germany, in preparttion for my year as one of the University of North Carolina's exchange students at Universitat Goettingen. So I had twenty-four free days and not really so much money. The logical means, then, of transportation was hitchhiking; the logical means of lodging was youth hosetls.

In Hamburg I paid $2.25 for a year-long membership in the international youth hostel asociation, then 40c to spend my first night in the magnificent, hotel-like hostel overlooking the Hamburg harbor. I set a town in middle, western Norway as my goal. Though it was about 1,000 miles away I was eager to spend some time with a former exchange student to Chapel Hill who lives there.

LIKE ALL THE European students, I traveled light. My small overnight bag and booksack were actually slightly too much—one should get along with only one small bag. For clothes, you carry at the most one entire change. But I met a couple of English girls hitchhiking around Norway who wore the same blue jeans and sweater during their entire trip; they carried only their food and personal items—and, of course, always cameras—with them. As the weather in Europe is generally cooler than that of the States, one plans warmth in choosing that one set of clothes.

I made a sign with bright color crayons before each leg of the journey—"Copenhagen," "Oslo," etc. With a smile and a waving hand, the sign-holding hitchhiker finds a good spot on the highway (or waits his turn if there are other students ahead of him. It is also a great idea to carry the flag of your mother country, conspicuously mounted on the bag or sign. Through these methods I had excellent luck during my 2500 miles of hitchhiking during August and early September.

LIFE IN THE YOUTH and student hostels is as cosmopolitan as the United Nations and as exciting as Carolina beating State this year. One hears no less than six languages being spoken around him all the time. In the always-alive student hostel in Copenhagen I found myself staying up until 3 a.m. without realizing it, so interesting were the conversations which sprang up . . . First with some French girls, about hitchhiking; then a Genevan boy, about American-European differences; then with a German, about bicycling; then an hour of folk music by an American boy who pulled out his guitar. In Copenhagen, also, one has the unique advantage of a very fine student club, where dances or social evenings are held once or twice a week. There one is able to dance with a Danish girl one dance and with a Japanese girl the next. Indeed I thought I was attending an international students' congress instead of a dance, so diverse was the crowd!

STICKING TO THE necessarily low-budget life of most of the students, the hostels usually provide a continental breakfast (bread, butter, marmelade, malt coffee, sometimes even cereal) for 15-20c. In many hostels supper is also available for 25-50c; in a few one has cooking facilities at hand and can prepare his own. When the hostels aren't providing, the poor student searches side-streets or highways for the cheapest restaurants and has one meal there. The other meals come from the bread, cheese, sandwich meat, marmelade, etc. that you always carry along. Occasionally most of us broke down and spent a buck to get a good meal in a good restaurant, especially if it had been recommended as something special by other students.

As if seeing the many faces of Europe and meeting so many students were not enough to warrant our hitchhiking trip, I found the sightseeing attractions in the old and famous cities extremely interesting and not half so expensive as in the U. S. For 35c I rode across the Oslo harbor, spent forty-five minutes viewing Thor Heyerdahl's Kon-Tiki raft-across-the-Pacific in a museum, and ferried back to town. The tour of Oslo's beautiful, choc-ful-of-art city hall is free. Entrance into the various magnificent cathedrals, found especially here in south Germany, is always free.

ONE OF THE MOST wonderful parts of the trip is the chance to talk with "real natives" of the country you're in. While hitchhiking, I met all types of Germans and Scandinavians, from truck drivers to teachers. They were interested in finding out something about the U.S. and an American just as I was interested in finding out about them. Somehow our conversations were always cordial and hopeful as we surveyed our differences and likenesses. The spirit of friendship seemed to spout into the atmosphere each time I stepped into a different car.
soethin gmC Asnero ndPOe stc hr

Even when I had no language in common with the driver there was always a feeling of communication and mutual interest between us.

Occasionally one encounters magnanimous hospitality from these Europeans. One Swede bought me food, drove me many miles out of his way in order that I could catch a ferry to Denmark, and then insisted on carrying my bag to the ferry door!

A German took me with him to visit several wine festivals in the Rhine Valley, bought me wine and food, finally drove me 25 miles past his destination so that I could reach mine that evening! Still another German—a middle-aged lumberjack —took me into his home on my first night here in Staufen, as I could not find a room elsewhere.

When his wife found out that I was rather hungry she immediately prepared a delicious, steaming, four-egg omelet while my host brought the typical two bottles of fine German beer to the wooden table in their modest living room!

SO FOR THE European student who has some free time during the summer ,the rule is "Pick up and go!" Not much money, not much baggage, but a lot of optimism and interest in others make up the substance of European student's travels. Distances are not so great as in these United States, and students here seem to have much less fear of the unknown, of the new and unfamiliar countries, of the many new people to meet, than American students. So, to my comrades with an innate wanderlust, I urge you to pick up and go sometime soon, for you will find no more exciting, interesting, or educational experiences than those which come with such a journey as awaits you in Europe.

The Wilds Of Toronto

Selection of the students who will participate in this year's Toronto Exchange Program has recently been completed.

Later this year, these 24 or 25 students will trek into the unknown regions of Toronto (which is just across the New York state line) to gain great insight into the strange customs of the students at Toronto University (which has a significant number of Americans in its enrollment) and bring back this valuable information to Carolina.

The students will spend all of three days immersed in this "foriegn culture" (Ontraio is not a French-speaking province) and will gleam much about Canada (much of the time is taken up by social activities).

While we are in complete sympathy with the idea of broadening international horizons, we are not convinced that this is the way to do it.

We are also not convinced that the Canadians, who spend upwards of $800 on the exchange, are getting their money's worth from us, nor that the money we spend, about $300, could not be better used.

Congrats To YRC

Congratulations are due the Carolina forum and the Young Republicans club for bringing the film "Operation Abolition" to the campus tomorrow in Carroll Hall.

The organizations contribute to the awarness of the campus by doing so. The film is the subject of much controversy, on this campus as well as throughout the entire country. The debate between former HUAC staff member and Socialist Mike Harrington following the film, promises to be informative an dentertaining—if the course of the debate follows the same lines that it has on previous occasions when the two have locked verbal horns.

We hope every student who can will turn out to see Harrington clobber Lewis.

ATTITUDES by Clotfelter

Circus Is Coming To Chapel Hill Monday Night

The circus comes to town Monday night.

The clowns and acrobats will be featured as usual.

But this time there will be a rival barker who doesn't like fake sideshows.

Mike Harrington, one of the most articulate opponents of the House Un-American Activities Committee, will speak against "Operation Abolition," the Committee's version of the 1960 San Franciso student "riots," when it is shown Monday.

Harrington will debate Fulton Lewis III, former HUAC staff member and the narrator for the film. The two have debated on many other college campuses in the year since "Operation Abolition" was released.

The debate Monday will probably range from the issue of "Is it proper for the Committee to have released a film of this nature?" to the issue of HUAC's existence itself. The issue in which we are interested concerns the technical accuracy of "Operation Abolition."

FOLLOWING ARE the major errors of half-truths, according to film opponents:

—The film says that the hearing room in San Francisco seated 400 persons and that only 100 passes were issued to friends of the Committee. By this reasoning 300 students could be admitted to the room and there would be no reason for the chants of "Open the doors" by students outside. But the narrator fails to mention that each pass admitted up to 5 or 6 people. The San Francisco NEWS-CALL-BULLETIN reported that only 20 to 30 of the general public were admitted to the hearing room on the day of the "riot."

—Vernon Brown is said to be among "the notorious 'Louisville Seven,' charged. . .with sedition, destruction or property, conspiring to destroy property to achieve a political end, and contempt of court." The film neglects to mention that the charges against Brown were thrown out of court, and the laws under which he was charged were consequently declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

—Harry Bridges, west coast labor leader and unfriendly witness before the Committee, was said to arrive "minutes before the rioting broke out." In the next edition of the film, the narrator says, Bridges arrived "moments after the rioting broke out." Both are untrue. As J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, wrote, "Order had been restored when Harry Bridges arrived."

THE FILM IS accused of making numerous lesser errors, which also add to the total distortion:

—In the film is a shot of Archie Brown in the court hall clapping and waving his hands, followed by a shot of the students outside the courthouse doing likewise. Both are authentic, but . . . the picture of Brown was filmed Thursday, that of the students Friday and at the latter time the Committee was recessed.

—The narrator claims that the Communist Party had sent its trained agitators into the San Francisco area months before the scheduled hearings in an attempt to turn sentiment against HUAC. But the hearings were not even announced until 18 days before the hearing, making it difficult for the dirty Reds to know several months in advance.

"Operation Abolition" uses the language of the propagandist in excessive amount. HUAC favorites are "hard-core," "conspiracy," "undermine," "dirty work," "classic Communist tactics," "agitators," "agents," and "dupes." Words such as these are used to make the viewer judge without evidence.

THERE IS ONE major distortion, according to HUAC critics, which dwarfs the errors already pointed out:

—"One student provokes the spark that touches off the violence when he leaps over a barricade, grabs a police officer's night stick, and begins beating the officer over the head."

This is what the narrator tells us. But the film contains nothing about any student jumping over any barricade and hitting any policeman over the head. And in fact, that student—Robert Meisenbach—was tried in May and found not guilty of any of the charges. The five witnesses who testified for Meisenbach and the three prosecution witnesses all agreed on two things: Meisenbach did not leap over the barricade, and the riot had already begun when the incident occured. The jury, on one informal ballot, decided that the student was guilty of none of the charges.

When asked what the House Committee will do about the portion of the film claiming Meisenbach's action started the "riot," Fulton Lewis is answered "I don't think this item is an important part of the film . . . There will be no change in the film's treatment of the incident."

—But the primary question is: How did the trouble begin? Paul Jacobs in THE REPORTER said. "Photographs taken at the time show the steudents seated on the floor and in the corridors when the hoses were turned on them." Jacobs agrees with the sheriff of San Francisco County, who said "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students." The National Students Association's official booklet on "Operation Abolition," claims, "The police . . . turned fire hoses on the waiting crowd without any general or effective warning or order to disperse."

"Operation Abolition" should be viewed with these reported errors in mind, always remembering that the film represents a committee of the United States Congress and therefore, should be made to conform to the highest standards of truth.

On 16th Anniversary

UN Faces Days Of Great Crisis

Sixteen years ago this Tuesday a group of men met in San Francisco to establish the United Nations on a permanent basis. Born out of the conflict of East and West, the UN is a continuing symbol of the cold war and the complexities of international politics.

The political architects of the UN built its constitutional theme on three assumption. First, the belief that the great powers of the world were capable of dealing with any threat to peace or security. Second, they could achieve this swiftly and without war. Third, no great power would be the cause of these threats to peace. The failure of the UN to be what many thought it would has arisen from the failure of these assumptions to influence the more powerful nations to make sacrifices for the sake of international harmony.

Today the UN faces its greatest days of crisis. The question of admission of Red China, the problem of the Secretariat, the fact of legal blocks to effective action, and the ever-increasing tension between the United States and Russia may be too much for this steadily weakening body to take.

The reduction of the Security Council to the state of almost formality has been a crushing blow. We have long known that the fate of world security has slipped away from the UN, and that world leaders see it now as an excellent instrument for propaganda.

It is apparent that the life of the UN shall continue only so long as the most powerful leaders wish it to, that only the most unexpected of political miracles can prevent that beautiful, modern structure in Manhattan from becoming a symbol of man's inability to control himself.

Ground Is Broken For Swain Addition

New construction on television, radio and motion pictures teaching-research facilities is now underway.

Prof. Earl Wynn, chairman of the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures, broke the ground in formal ceremonies at Swain Hall recently.

The Swain Hall addition will cost $425,000.

The radio, TV and motion pictures teaching and research function in the University is a component of the Communications Center.

The activity is allied with the educational television station, WUNC-TV and with the radio station, WUNC, which broadcasts by means of frequency modulation.

Swain Hall, once the dining hall of the University student body, was later converted to use for the communications activity, and with the rapid expansion since World War II, and the growth of numbers of students going into television and related studies, expansion was necessitated.

The building will be completed in 1962.

Bell In Belfry Has Violent History

By Chuck Mooney

UNC students have burned the belfry down, stolen the clapper, slid down the bell rope to avoid angry professors and tied a University President's pet mule to the bell rope.

The first Carolina bell was in a belfry located approximately where the Old Well is today. Student pranksters regularly stole its wooden clapper. They rang it at all hours of the day or night and finally burned it down.

They were having an innocent "fireball fight" using balls of tightly-wound kerosene-soaked cloth. One of the balls accidentally (or maybe on purpose) landed on the roof of the belfry, burning it to the ground before help could arrive.

That belfry wasn't rebuilt. An 8-inch dinner bell, made by a Rowan county blacksmith, was used until the belfry on top of South building was added. This bell and its wooden handle are now in the library vault.

Students just couldn't resist the long rope on the South building bell. They rejoiced in interrupting sleep or classes by ringing it.

They escaped the wrath of patrolling professors by either climbing out on the roof and down, or by sliding down the bell rope when the professor was halfway up the stairs.

Just before the Civil War, daring student practical jokers coaxed "Old Cuddie," University President Swain's white mule up into the South building belfry in the middle of the night and tied him to the bell rope. "Old Cuddie" reared and jumped, scared to death of the bell, until President Swain could get him down.

No bell rang in Chapel Hill during the Reconstruction. Mrs. Cornelia Phillips Spencer ended the silence when she rang the University bell in March 1875 to reopen Carolina.

Soon after, University officials foiled student tricksters by putting the bell rope in a metal tube that ran down to the first floor of South. Only the janitors rang the bell after that.

The class of 1909 and University President Frank Graham awarded an honorary LLDD degree to one of the most famous janitor bell-ringers, "Horny-Handed" Henry Smith.

In an elaborate ceremony, a knightly court of all the other janitors watched President Graham make "Horny-Handed" Henry a "Learned Lolay Ding-Donger" for his long years of service.

The installation of an electric, automatic clock system and the Morehead-Patterson Bell Tower ended all possibilities of student bell-ringing.

NEW LEADER

Halfback Gib Carson, who against Maryland had the unique bad luck of fumbling twice on the way to touchdowns last Saturday and not getting credit for the scores, is North Carolina's new rushing leader, moving ahead of fullback Bob Elliott with 163 yards in 49 carries for a 3.3 average.

State Rep. To Address Law Group

State Rep. Nick Galifianakis of Durham will be the guest speaker Monday at a dinner meeting of Delta Theta Phi Law Fraternity, at 7 p.m. at Watts Grill. The program is first in the 1961-62 series.

Rep. Galifianakis, an attorney and part-time faculty member at the Duke University School of Law, will be introduced by James P. Erwin Jr., chairman of the fraternity's speakers' committee. Presiding will be Paul L. Whitfield, fraternity president.

The speaker is a graduate of the Duke Law School, class of 1953, and a former tribune (corresponding secretary) of the Duke senate of the national legal group.

CAUSE FOR ALCOHOLISM

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—Advertisements depicting women drinking is one of the prime causes for alcoholism among women, according to an official of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Herman Stanley, national corresponding secretary from Evanston, Ill., said Friday there should be a "congressional ban on such advertisements."

Senior Wins $500 Award At Ackland

Henry Absher, a senior accounting major in the School of Business Administration, is the recipient of an Ernst & Ernst Scholarship in Accounting.

The award of $500 is to be applied to Absher's tuition and fee charges for the current year. Absher, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Absher of North Wilkesboro, is among the top three accounting majors in the Business School. He plans to work for a public accounting firm in North Carolina upon graduation.

The Ernst & Ernst offices in Winston-Salem presented the scholarship. This is the second year Ernst & Ernst has made the award to an accounting student at the University here.

Special UN Program On WUNC-TV

A special program in commemoration of United Nations Day Tuesday will be presented by WUNC-TV, Channel 4 on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

THE FIRST PRIORITY will illustrate the serious problem of food shortage in many countries and food surplus in others and what is being done about it by various agencies.

As the program explains, "Surplus foods from overproducing lands can help a hungry people but cannot do the main job, which is the increasing of the capacity to produce. That can only be accomplished by the acquisition of skill in raising food."

The program points out the achievements of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization's Freedom from Hunger Campaign, a world-wide five-year plan that disseminates information about the hungry areas of the world and their need for science, not charity.

It also shows how the Food and Agriculture Organization is working in Ceylon and elsewhere to get more food from the sea; in Ethiopia to fight diseases that destroy cattle; in Asia to increase rice yields; and North Africa, the Middle East, Pakistan, and Northern India to combat locusts.

SG Gives Extra $1,924 To Yack

Student Legislature appropriated $1,924 Thursday night to pay for an additional 775 Yackety Yacks. The need for more yearbooks became apparent this fall with the increased Carolina student body enrollment.

The original bill had asked for $2,024, but was amended by the bill's sponsor, Inman Allen, who pointed out that the Athletic Assn. is now paying $1,100 for its space in the book.

Two other financial requests did not come before the body. One, a bill to appropriate $112.50 to buy football game tickets for visiting Toronto University students was withdrawn when it was learned that the Athletic Assn. was donating the tickets.

Other Request

The other request, to appropriate $300 to reimburse Orientation Committee for the costs of a dance held this fall for new Carolina students and WC freshmen, was held in committee.

In other action, the body passed with minor amendments the revised by-laws of the UNC Publications Board.

Arthur Hays was elected chairman of the Rules Committee, and George Rosental was elected chairman of the Judicial Committee.

Total Asked

A total of $550 is being asked in a bill introduced Thursday night to help campaign for the passage of the coming bond issue election. Carolina would receive $5,892,000 if the issue passes.

Itemized, the request looks this way: $230 for general expenses; $95 for postage and telephone costs; $200 for a special issue of The Daily Tar Heel; and $25 for mailing costs.

The following Legislative committee meetings were announced: Finance Committee, 7 p.m. Monday in Graham Memorial; Judicial Committee, 3 p.m. Monday in GM.

Farris Puts On Terrific Punting Exhibition As Tar Heels Clobber South Carolina, 17-0

Addison, Edge Help In Third UNC Win

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UPI)—Quarterback Ray Farris directed both of North Carolina's first two units Saturday and chipped in some terrific punting to lead the Tar Heels to a 17-0 victory over South Carolina in the annual "battle of the Carolinas."

Farris's 63 yard quick kick in the first period rolled out of bounds on the Gamecock four and set up the game's first touchdown as Tommy Pilcher's punt for the Gamecocks against a 20-mile wind carried only to the South Carolina 38.

Farris punted dead on the Gamecock one-foot line in the third period to keep South Carolina in a hole to the disappointment of a sparse crowd of 16,000. The teams locked in a second half defensive battle until Tar Heel end Bob Lacey intercepted a Dave Swell pass and raced 40 yards untouched with less than two minutes to play.

Alert Tar Heel defenders intercepted four Gamecock passes during the afternoon, the first, by Junior Edge at the North Carolina five, stymied the only Gamecock threat. The interception led to a score as Edge raced 43 yards to the 48 and North Carolina drove into position for Bob Elliott's 21-yard field goal.

After Pilcher's short punt for South Carolina following Farris's 63 yard quick kick, the Tar Heels moved 38 yards in nine plays with Farris completing three passes in three tries and running twice for 12 yards.

Second string halfback Jim Addison cracked seven yards off tackle for the touchdown.

Addison, a 180-pound junior from Durham, N. C., was the game's leading rusher with 59 yards in 18 carries.

The loss was South Carolina's third straight and fourth in five starts.

The gamecocks, routed 42-0 by Louisiana State last week, have scored only 30 points in five games. The win was North Carolina's third against a loss to Clemson with all the Tar Heel action within the Atlantic Coast Conference.

South Carolina appeared sluggish, both offensively and defensively, and except for one brief probe to the Tar Heel 18, halted by Edge's interception, was unable to move at all and netted only 45 yards rushing.

The Gamecocks gained 102 yards passing but Tar Heel interceptions off-set the aerial threat.

Maryland Steals Falcon Passes In 21-0 Victory

DENVER (UPI) — Maryland's once-beaten Terrapins intercepted six Air Force passes Saturday and used half of them as springboards to touchdowns to crush the Falcons, 21-0.

Maryland's defenses picked off two passes by quarterback Bob McNaughton to stop Air Force threats in the first period. Then the Terrapins — alternately using sophomore Dick Shiner and senior Dick Novak at quarterback—scored on pass plays to vault to a 14-0 lead at halftime.

The final touchdown—early in the fourth period—came on a three-yard smash by halfback Don Van Reenan after another interception by fullback Joe Hreze. The Maryland fullback took quarterback Allan McArtor's pass on the Air Force 31 and ran it to the three.

Although the Air Force threatened several times in the first half—the greatest being a drive to the Maryand 13—the Falcons were bottled up during the final two periods. Their only threat in the second half was broken up when center Bob Hacker intercepted another McArtor pass on the Maryland 17.

Halfback Ernie Arizzi took a screen pass from Novak 11 yards for Maryland's first score. Arizzi ran 27 yards in the longest play of the 72-yard drive, which started with halfback Tom Brown's interception of a McNaughton pass. Brown intercepted three passes Saturday.

Shiner flipped a pass to Brown on a 63-yard play for the second touchdown. It came four plays after halfback Jim Davidson had intercepted a McNaughton pass on the Maryland 26.

Maryland completely dominated the third period. But its two long drives were stopped by pass interceptions deep in Air Force territory.

Maryland, defeated only by North Carolina, never was in serious trouble.

Duke Freshmen 'Whip Carolina

Duke's Blue Imp soccer team rallied in the final 55 seconds of a double five-minute overtime to win 3-2 over North Carolina on Fetzer Field Friday afternoon.

Carolina scored in the first period when John Schlacter took a pass from center forward Jim Talbot and drilled a bullet-like shot past the visiting cager. Although both teams set up numerous offensive attacks, the defensive units were too compact and the first half ended with the Tar Babies clinging to their slim 1-0 lead.

The third period gained momentum when Carolina's front line moved the ball into Duke territory and scored on a pass from Talbot to Schlacter. Minutes later the Blue Devils roared right back when they registered their first score. The Imps tallied once more in the final frame and for the first time this season Carolina was forced into an overtime period.

With both coaches sticking with their starting teams, the first five-minute overtime was played with extreme caution. Duke continued to maintain a short pass and fancy dribbling strategy while Carolina started to pinpoint their passes and use the fast break.

Time was beginning to run out in the game but with about a minute to go the Blue Devils poured the pressure on Buddy Siegel in the nets. Duke suddenly hit paydirt and with only 55 seconds remaining Carolina's chances were beginning to fade.

According to head coach Lemery the game with Duke was the roughest competition his squad has encountered this season. On Monday afternoon the Tar Babies will play Warren Wilson, a junior college featuring some fancy ballhandlers, and will try to even their season mark at 2-2.

Terps Squeak By Carolina

Two North Carolina runners broke a course record at Maryland yesterday, but their teammates weren't close enough behind as the Terrapins squeaked out a 28-27 win over the Tar Heel cross-country team.

Rett Everett and Gerry Stuver tied for first in 17:45, but the three big guns for Maryland, John Garten, Mark Wells, and Krueger, finished 3-4-5. Another Terp placed sixth.

Virginia Tech Tops U. Of V. In 20-0 Upset

ROANOKE, Va. (UPI)—Virginia Tech halfback Terry Strock dashed 96 yards with the second half kickoff here Saturday to put the icing on a 20-0 victory over a demoralized University of Virginia team in the fourth annual Harvest Bowl.

Tech struck fast and hard less than three minutes after the opennig kickoff after the Cavaliers fumbled on their first play from scrimmage.

Tech halfback Buddy Weihe hit Virginia quarterback Stan Fischer hard on the Virginia 20, sending the ball five feet into the air with Weihe under it when it came down on the Virginia 25.

Three plays later, Gobbler quarterback Warren Price flipped eight yards to end Charlie Speck in the end zone for the first Tech touchdown. Aster Sizemore kicked the extra point.

A fumble near the end of the first period set up Tech's second touchdown. Virginia halfback Carl Kuhn dropped a punt on his own 36 and Tech tackle Bob Peack fell on it.

A penalty on the next play put the ball on Tech's 49. Price moved within scoring distance with a 30-yard pass play to halfback Buddy Perry. Two plays later, Price hit Perry on a 16-yard touchdown pass.

Virginia, numbed by its own mistakes, failed to capitalize on the 102 yards Tech lost in penalties.

Just as the first half ended, Gobbler halfback Jake Adams picked off a Virginia pass and Tech mounted a scoring threat. The drive was halted only when Virginia guard Bob Rowley intercepted a Price pass in the Cavaliers' end zone.

At the second half kickoff, Strock took the ball on his four, broke clean with a run that took him far to the right side, back to midfield and down the sidelines for the score. Sizemore's kick capped the scoring at 20-0.

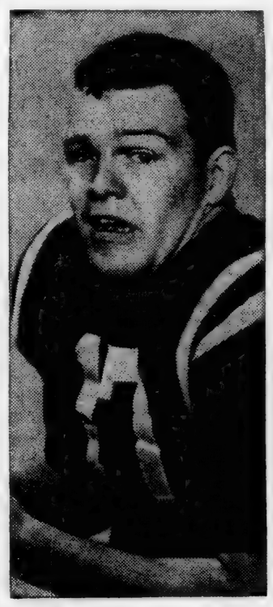
Parker Gets 2 Touchdowns In 17-7 Tiger Win At Duke



Walt Rappold, Duke Quarterback starring in a losing cause yesterday

By Vincent J. Hovenac

DURHAM (UPI) — Quarterback Jim Parker's passing and running and Lon Armstrong's kicking carried Clemson to a 17-7 victory over Duke before 30,000 rain-splattered homecoming fans.

Parker, a 6-1 sophomore who is the leading ground gainer in the Atlantic Coast Conference, fired bullet passes and slashed off the tackles, scoring one touchdown himself and engineering another on drives that covered 52 and 62 yards. Armstrong, a placekicking specialist, tallied his 24th and 25th points after touchdown and put Duke in a hole by adding a 25-yard field goal in the fourth period.

Duke, still unable to mount a consistent ground attack, got its only score on a 60-yard pass play in the third period, from quarterback Mark Leggett who outraced the Clemson secondary.

Leggett's score and Bill Reynolds' extra point tied it at 7-7 but Parker again took charge on a Clemson drive, scoring the second Clemson touchdown himself on a six-inch plunge. After that, the tough Tiger line kept the Blue Devils pinned down, and Armstrong's field goal forced Duke to use desperation aerial tactics in the rain late in the game.

Parker directed the Tigers 52 yards to the first touchdown in the second period, scored by halfback Bill McGuirt on a one-yard smash.

It was the second victory of the season for Clemson, victims of an upset last week by Wake Forest but Coach Howard's squad was primed and Parker supplied the spark.

A Clemson scoring opportunity just before halftime fizzled on the four-yard line when end Pete Widener intercepted a Parker pass in the end zone.

Duke's late passing attack also failed, collapsing on the Clemson 16 with reserve quarterback Gil Garner throwing futile passes into the end zone.

The Blue Devils managed to advance only to Clemson's 46 in the opening period and to the 34 in the second.

Carolina Booters Defeat State, 5-3

The North Carolina soccer team won its first conference game of the season this week by whipping N.C. State 5-3 Thursday in a relatively easy game. The win was the third of the season for the Tar Heels as against two losses.

The Carolina booters went ahead with five minutes gone on early goals by Bill Shettle and Pete Blake. In the second quarter they scored twice, with wing Herman Prakke kicking both of them in. Steve Painter scored the fifth UNC goal. Goalie Larry Steele had 20 saves for the Tar Heels.

The Carolina team plays at Davidson Tuesday afternoon.

Army Beats Idaho In 51-7 Runaway

WEST POINT, N. Y. (UPI) — Speedy Gene Marrow's 94-yard touchdown run in a losing cause featured a flock of far-out scoring Saturday as Army football forces flattened outmanned Idaho, 51-7.

Marrow's run on an Army kickoff was more than matched by the Cadets as Joe Blackgrove raced 67 and 40 yards for a pair of touchdowns. Center Marty Ryan trundled 65 yards with an interception, and Dick Eckert rolled out 36 yards to score.

Ray Paske, Al Rushatz and Chris Stanat banged over for the other Army scores with automatic Dick Heydt placekicking seven extra points.

EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT needs this book

to increase his ability to learn

An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the pressure which concerns today's college student upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.

Christian Science calms fear and gives to the student the full assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—his only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.

Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

Friday Meets 12 Executives On Publication

CU President William C. Friday was one of nine presidents of state universities meeting with 12 newspaper, magazine, and advertising executives at a dinner meeting in New York City yesterday to discuss "the public's understanding of major issues in higher education."

Charles H. Brower, president of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, Inc. presided. Other mass media representatives were Henry R. Luce, editor of Time magazine; Philip Graham, publisher of the Washington Post & Times Herald; Bruce Gould, editor of Ladies Home Journal; Robert Fuoss, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, Georg Hecht, publisher of Parent's Magazine; John Fischer, editor or Harper's; William I. Nichols, editor of This Week, the Sunday newspaper supplement; Turner Catledge, managing editor of the New York Times; Daniel D. Mich, editorial director of Look; and William Emerson, senior editor of News week.

President Friday has been serving as chairman of a committee for the Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities on matter relating to voluntary giving for higher education.

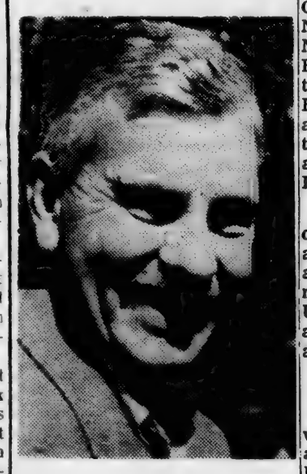
The meeting Monday night at the Twenty-One Club in New York was related to the public relations aspect of the effort of the Joint Office of Institutional Research, a coordinating agency of the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities.

Cowley Speaks On 'Artists, Morality'

Malcolm Cowley, noted literary critic, will speak at Hill Hall Thursday at 8 p.m., adding one more link to the literary chain of events being unofficially forged in this area.

The lecture, which is open to the public, is being sponsored by the Department of English. The title of Cowley's address is "Art, Artists, and Morality."

His appearance closely follows those of Robert Penn Warren and Randall Jarrell at Carolina and Lionel Trilling at State.



Malcolm Cowley

Cowley's lecture coincides with his first extensive visit to the campus and the Department of English to meet with students of the department. He will be here Oct. 25-27.

To Stimulate Interest

His visit is part of a program to increase and stimulate interest in writing and criticism, and he will meet with classes and members of the English Graduate Club.

A critic for the past 43 years, Cowley has occupied posts with the New York Herald Tribune, "The New Republic," and the "Literary Review of the New York Post," the predecessor of the "Saturday Review of Literature." He has also served as a literary consultant for publishers, and is currently a literary advisor to the Viking Press.

A member and former president of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, Cowley has served as a visiting lecturer at several of the nation's universities including the University of Michigan, in 1957, and Stanford University, in 1956 and 1959.

"Portable" Editor

Cowley has edited collections of works by well-known American authors, including "The Portable Hemingway," 1944; "The Portable Faulkner," 1946; "The Portable Hawthorne," 1948; "The Complete Whitman," 1948; and "The Stories of F. Scott Fitzgerald," 1950.

Currently, Cowley is writing a study of American literature in the twentieth century. He is the author of "Blue Juniata," 1929; "Exile's Return," 1934, revised, 1951; and "The Dry Season," 1941.

Di-Phi Argues Resolution To Abolish HUAC

A resolution to abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee will be debated by the Di-Phi Society tonight at 7:30 p.m. Visitors have been invited to participate in the debate.

"I hope that all interested students will take this opportunity to express their views on HUAC," said sophomore Norwood Pratt, who will introduce the resolution.

The resolution reads as follows:

WHEREAS: The House Un-American Activities Committee constitutes a threat to the democratic principles and processes under which the government of the United States functions, and

"Indefensible"

WHEREAS: the record of this committee demonstrates that it is not only legally and morally indefensible but also a source of unmerited harm for many individuals in our society,

THEREFORE, be it resolved by the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Society;

Article 1 the House Un-American Activities Committee be abolished.

Article 2: that a copy of this resolution be sent to all North Carolina members of the House of Representatives and to Representative Francis Walter of Pennsylvania.

Russia Blows Biggest Explosion In History

30-50 Megaton Bomb May Raise US Fallout Peril

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Russia Monday exploded a giant nuclear device of 30 to 50 megatons that unleashed the greatest explosive force ever produced by man in the history of his planet.

The U. S. Atomic Energy Commission announced two Soviet tests in Russia's Arctic range. The AEC said the first fallout-producing device, had a "very high" yield, "possibly, as large as 50 megatons" but more probably "on the order of 30 megatons."

The second was detonated under water south of the island under the Novaya Somlya range. It was in the low yield range, the AEC said.

The largest previously announced nuclear explosion was a 13-megaton blast set off by the United States on March 1, 1954. If the Soviets exploded a 50-megaton bomb, a device with the destructive force of 50 million tons of TNT, the weapon was 2,500 times stronger than the U. S. atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima in World War II.

It could produce one third as much radioactivity as all the nuclear weapons ever exploded by all the atomic powers since the birth of the nuclear age on July 16, 1945.

The Atomic Energy Commission, after studying its detection data for nearly 12 hours, was unable to pin down exactly the strength of the latest Soviet explosions — the 22nd and 23rd since Russia resumed tests Sept. 1.

Rusk Denounced Bomb

The Soviet blasts came as the United Nations political committee was considering a "solemn appeal" to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev not to fire his big bomb. The appeal resolution was offered by five nations in the path of fallout from the explosion.

It also followed by one day a denunciation of the Soviet super bomb by Secretary of State Dean Rusk. He called the Soviet bomb "senseless," and technically unnecessary. Other U. S. officials have branded it a "terror weapon."

Woodrow Wilson Nominations Now Available At UNC

Nominations for Woodrow Wilson fellowships for graduate study are now being accepted by regional committees of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

In order to be considered for a fellowship, a candidate must be nominated by a faculty member no later than October 31.

These fellowships are primarily for study in the humanities and social sciences by students who are considering a career in college teaching.

"Carolina has had an excellent record in the past," said Charles Henderson, Dean of Student Affairs. "Since 1952 there have been 54 Fellows with last year's group accounting for 11 of them," he said.

A Fellow receives $1500 plus dependency allowances for wife and children. His tuition and fees are paid directly to his graduate school by the Foundation.

Only those students who think college teaching is a real possibility for them should accept the awards. When a clear preference for a teaching career is demonstrated, candidates from the sciences are also considered.

To nominate a student a member of the academic profession should send the name, college, address, and proposed field of graduate study of the candidate to Dean I. B. Cauthen Jr, College of Arts and Sciences, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.

Council Sponsors UN Week With Series Of Activities

UNC's Collegiate Council on the UN (CCUN) is co-sponsoring various activities this week with the Chapel Hill Mayor's committee and the League of Women Voters to celebrate UN Week.

Mrs. Frances H. Howard, educational consultant with the International Co-operation Association and a Peace Corps Worker, will speak Wednesday night at 8 in Howell Hall on "Can the UN meet today's challenge?"

The CCUN has set up UN information booths in Y-court and downtown Chapel Hill to distribute pamphlets on the organization and functions of the UN. A display in Wilson Library, various downtown displays and spot radio announcements will also celebrate the week.

Over 12,000

Over 12,000 high school students in North Carolina and fringe areas in Virginia and Tennessee will hear an hour long program on the UN through the facilities of the Carolina educational TV station. In addition, the UN flag will be flown at UNC all week.

Besides sponsoring the UN week celebration, Carolina's CCUN program acquaints students in other ways with the various activities of the UN.

CCUN's mock general assembly will be held in February at State College where UNC will send three delegations. Carolina will again represent Russia, last year's prize winning delegation. The other two delegations will be chosen from Tunisia, Portugal, Great Britain, U.A.R. and Argentina.

New York Seminar

The annual CCUN Thanksgiving seminar to New York, leaving Nov. 15, will be studying the role of neutralist nations in the UN. Tartt Bell from the American Friends Service Committee will speak to the chosen Carolina students on the role of the Afro-Asian neutralist nations in the UN to familiarize students with the problems facing the UN before they leave for New York.

Various delegates from Yugoslavia, India, Russia and Cuba have been asked to speak to the UNC students while in New York.

Throughout the year lectures by professors, students and professional men will be open to the Carolina student body as well as discussions and programs on the activities of the UN.

Dr. Joel Carter, UNC music professor, will give the vocal recital. He will be accompanied by Charles Horton, who is on leave of absence from Campbell College where he has been head of the Music Department for the past five years.

Geraldine Matthews, a member of the music faculty at Campbell College, will give the piano recital. She is an alumna of Campbell College, where she now teaches hymnology and piano.

Dr. Carter is a graduate of San Jose State College, California. He holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Stanford University where he taught for several years before joining the UNC faculty in 1949.

Hill Joins Education School As Lecturer

Henry H. Hill, president emeritus of George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn., has joined the staff of the School of Education as part-time lecturer and consultant, it was announced yesterday by Chancellor William B. Aycock.

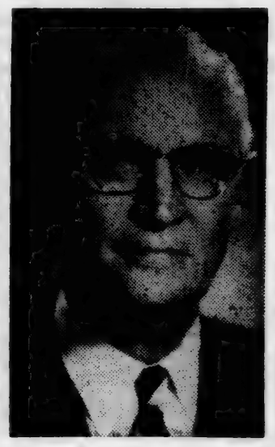
Dr. Hill will assist in the Education School's new two-year graduate program for the training of school administrators. There are currently 91 students enrolled for work leading to the advanced printendent's certificate.

A total of 26 North Carolina superintendents of schools are also taking special work in political science as part of the program leading to the advanced superintendent't certificate.

B.A., M.A., Ph.D.

A native North Carolinian, Dr. Hill has a distinguished record in public education. He attended the University of Virginia where he received a B.A. and a M.A. degree. He received the Ph.D. degree at Teachers College, Columbia. University. Dr. Hill has been awarded honorary degrees by Harvard University, Columbia University, the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Kentucky, Davidson College, and Union University, Jackson, Tenn.

Dr. Hill served as president of George Peabody College for Teachers from 1945 to September, 1961. Previously he had held posts as a public school teacher and superintendent of schools in Lexington, Ky., St. Louis, Mo., and Pittsburgh, Pa. He also served as professor of school administration and dean at the University of Kentucky.



Henry Hill

In addition to lecturing to classes on campus Dr. Hill will lecture in the graduate centers in Winston-Salem and Charlotte. Additional in-service education programs for superintendents and principals will be conducted with his assistance in various parts of the state.

SP Nomination Meeting Held In Howell Hall

The Student Party will meet tonight at 7:30 in Howell Hall to nominate candidates for Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior Class officers.

Student Party Chairman Jimmy Weeks has urged all students to attend the meeting and express their views. Only students who have attended one previous meeting and paid their dues will be allowed to vote on the nominations, but anyone will be allowed to speak.

Membership in the Student Party is on an individual basis and there is no block voting by residence representatives.

Party Chairman Weeks also encouraged all students interested in student government to try for the nominations. He stressed that candidates from all parts of the campus will receive equal consideration and will be judged on individual qualifications rather than place of residence.

The officers to be nominated include the President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Social Chairman for the Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior Classes. The persons seeking these nominations do not necessarily have to be members of the Party.

At this same meeting the Party will vote on a revision of its By-Laws which will permit anyone to vote on the nominations who has paid the $1.00 membership fee and attended two meetings including the nominating convention.

Campus Chest Begins Drive

Interviews for the sub-committees of Campus Chest will be held Tuesday through Thursday in the Y, according to co-chairman Charles Shelton.

Shelton said that Campus Chest is trying to get either Miss America or Miss North Carolina for the Campus Chest Carnival.

"This year's carnival will be much bigger than last year's. We will have at least three more rides including the Octopus and a Tilt-a-Whirl."

"The carnival will have more exhibits, more side-shows and more home cooking," Shelton said. "Last year the food sold out in the first hour."

Less Crowded

Gerrard Hall has always been the place of the Campus Chest Auction; however Shelton said that this year the committee hopes to hold the sale in a less crowded place.

The Auction specializes in selling bizarre items. Last year a trip to Paris was auctioned off to the highest bidder who found to his surprise that Paris was Paris, Georgia. Dates with girls, appearances on WUNC-TV, and dinners at the Rat were sample sales.

One of the most unusual articles sold was Chancellor House's harmonica. Some very high bids were raised when several women offered their services in cleaning up men's apartments. Shelton said, "This year the sale will be more spectacular and more entertaining."

Solicitations Low

"The Solicitations response last year was very disappointing," said Shelton. The average donation per student was 8c of last year's student body of 8,000. Shelton said that this was very low considering other universities in the nation. He cited several northern and western schools which averaged $2 per student.

"The Campus Chest is Carolina's only charity organization. Surely student's recognize the responsibility they carry in giving to charity. We feel that the art of giving is part of the art of living," said Shelton.

Includes Heart Fund

Shelton and co-chairman Jeannie MacDougal said that the charities being considered for this year's Campus Chest include: the Heart Fund, Goettingen Scholarship, World University, and the Mental Health Fund. Last year part of the $4,000 went to the World University which donated money for books for libraries in Africa.

The Forming Committee, Carnival Committee, Solicitations Committee, Auction Committee and Speciality Committee positions are to be filled from the applicants this week. The interviews will also pick out the co-chairmen of these committees.

Shelton said, "We are looking forward to the cooperation of class officers of graduate school groups as well as the student body general.

Bloc Voting

With the first big campus election coming up next month, UNC's two political parties are beginning to mend their fences. Both are counting their bloc votes ,analyzing the uncommitteed segments and generally taking stock of their political asets and liabilities.

As always, both parties are looking closely at the sororities, which usually commit themselves long before the election.

The sorority votes are important and grabbing them off in blocs is a recognized tradition.

Some of them, however, cannot always be counted by either party. Kappa Delta, for instance, this year voted itself politically independent, leaving its members free to join either or neither party.

Pledges and active are no longer encouraged to act as a body, but as independent individuals.

Kappa Delta is to be congratulated for its reversal of the standing tradition that sororities will give their bloc votes automatically to one party. The KD's in their complete exception to this tradition are joined by only one other sorority—Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The remainder of the seven sororities either require or "encourage" their members to join the University Party. However, it should be pointed out that SP and UP have both been the favored party in past years. We do not limit our criticisms entirely to the UP, as both parties have been guilty of encouraging bloc voting.

In some houses, members are subject to pure and simple economic coerion.

One sorority, which we have agreed not to single out by name, requires its members to join and to pay their membership dues to the University Party. Members are also told that failure to attend certain party functions will result in a fine. The threat is never realized, however, since the sorority's by-laws forbid it.

We were told by the house president that this rather devious procedure has never resulted in fines actually being levied.

We fail, however, to see the difference between threatening to fine, and actually carrying ou that threat. The coerion still exisits.

Other houses also use actual or implied pressures to force members to join and support a particular party, but the foregoing example is probably the most flagantly improper.

Never a particularly palatable practice, bloc committment is especially distastful when it denies or unduly influences individual choice.

If either party or its candidates presents the most attractive platform and qualifications, then bloc voting is not necessary to put that party into office.

Both parties would do well to rid themselves of this kind of support and put more time and effort into planning effective platforms, rather than ecouraging groups to use whatever means are available to put them into power.

Hollow Boast

The United States has learned the hard way that it's dangerous to doubt the credibilty of scientific boasts made by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Despite this, we take exception to Khrushchev's claim a few days ago that the Soviet Union now owns the fastest, largest fleet of nuclear submarines in the world.

The first American nuclear submarine, the Nautilus, was commissioned in 1954. Russia did not even claim to have built a nuclear sub until last year.

Soviet strategy is to flout Communist power in the eyes of the world, but there was no flouting of nuclear submarines until last week. The Rusians, who once a year attempt to awe the West with a demonstration of their latest military success, held a naval review several months ago. There were no nuclear submarines in sight.

We'll concede, as did the New York Times recently, that the Russians may have a dozen nuclear submarines in operation or advanced stages of construction. But this in no way challenges the superiority of the present U. S. fleet of 21 such submarines in commision and 40 more being built or planned.

Six of those in commission carry the Polaris. These already alternate on station off the Soviet Union, ready to blast off their lethal cargo if war begins. Another five can fire the Regulus, a winged missile, from the surface.

We believe we're ahead of the Russians in nuclear submarines, and we've got to stay ahead.

The Navy of tomorrow is the underwater Navy—mobile, fast, hard to detect, capable of staying for weeks and months below the seas, yet ready at any moment to hurl its nuclear missiles toward the enemy.

The Russians haven't yet found a counter-weapon for Polaris. Until they do, Polaris remains as perhaps the most potent war deterrent in the U. S. arsenal.

The Hallowe'en Spirit

Voice Of Office Seeker...

Alexander Heard, chairman of the Graduate School at the University of North Carolina, and incidentally a Democrat, has been named by President Kennedy to chair a commission to study how much it costs to run for President of the United States and where the money comes from.

With the cost of living index spiraling with each monthly report, it is understandable that a politician who holds the top elective office in the nation would like some pointers on how to return to office. Generous man that he is, Mr. Kennedy had made the nine-man group bipartisan, and it is not difficult to imagine Richard Nixon, Barry Goldwater and Nelson Rockefeller waiting with eager anticipation the findings, especially Rockefeller.

DEAN HEARD won the top position on the squad probably by virtue of the publication of his long exhaustive study on the financing of politics in America. The book, coming as it did in the spring of 1960, was eagerly read by campaign managers across the nation.

It is interesting to note that the study is being instituted by a president who was backed by one of the richest families in America. By law, individual campaign contributions are limited. But by careful attribution of the party gifts, Mr. Kennedy probably could have privately financed his own campaign entirely. In doing this however, he would have defeated a principle purpose in soliciting campaign contributions.

IN APPOINTING THE commission, Kennedy said that national campaign funds traditionally "have been supplied entirely by private contributions, with the candidates forced to depend in the main on large sums from a relatively small number of contributors."

The candidate was well aware that a citizen who gives a buck to the party of his choice is much more likely to vote for that party's candidate than one who doesn't invest money in it.

Loyal Democrats and political pundits already lining up the slates for the 1964 presidential race will do well to note the formation of the commission. President Kennedy may not be planning to run for re-election, but it certainly appears that even if he doesn't, he will know where the money could have come from most beneficially.

—Harve Harris

There is no readier way for a man to bring his own worth into question than by endeavoring to detract from the worth of other men.—John Tillotson.

Reader Comments On Kennedy's Visit

This October 12th celebration will stand out as a memorable event in the history of Chapel Hill and the University. The weather was fine though hot for those crowded in the Satdium eagerly waiting to see and hear the president.

Fortunately only a part of the UNC faculty were in the receiving line, otherwise their slow pace in getting seated would have delayed the proceedings painfully. The singing of "Integer Vitae" was beautiful and appropriate, but to those who were a bit impatient for the "kick off," "Onward Ye Peoples" by the combined choruses appeared superfluous and ill-timed, when two stanzas of the National Anthem had been sung. Hats off to the UNC band for enjoyable musical selections that added much to the occasion.

Then came the happy and brief introduction by President Friday, "Ladies and Gentlemen, the President of the United States." I am reminded of the time President Woodrow Wilson made his whistle-stop visit to Charlottee; the Mayor of the City having consumed all the allotted time introducing the President, whereupon Mr. Wilson waved a farewell to the crowd and departed for the next place without saying a word of his prepared speech. Also, I recall a humorous statement by ex-president Taft while here three days giving a series of lectures. Said he, "I can get along with my traducers better than my introducers."

THE AMPLIFYING apparatus was defective, so that only a few of the 38,000 could hear every word of Mr. Kennedy's speech, but they had the satisfaction of knowing it would be given in the papers next day. A fitting climax was the awarding of honorary degrees to the President and Governor, however one might wonder why this highly deserved honor to the Governor could not have waited till a later time.

A letter from Walter L. Steel of Rockingham, N. C., to W. W. Lenoir of Yadkin Valley, Caldwell County telling about President James K. Polk's visit to his alma mater at the time of Commencement in 1859 are these words: "There was gathered in Chapel Hill a large crowd of men and women. The expected visit of the President of the United States of course had its influence in attracting them; all passed off pleasantly—and many made for themselves a bright spot by shaking the hand of our Nation's Chief, yet there was very little toadyism, and all seemed eager to show RESPECT but not SLAVISHNESS."

4 Out Of 6 Good Avg.

Three students of the Greater University of North Carolina died on a recent weekend. They were driving from Greensboro to Raleigh in a pounding rain. No doubt the two couples were snuggled close together. Someone was probably laughing. The driver swung out to pass the car in front. It was a simple maneuver, but something went wrong. Within five minutes, four were dead. The two survivors, one from each car, were rushed to the hospital in Greensboro.

Four out of six is a good average. When the average is that high, the laws of probability are appeased—for a while.

THE WEEKEND is over. And in its wake of every weekend for the last ten years, nearly a score of people died violently on the highways of North Caralina. It's a wonderful cruelty joke, until the day it happens to someone you know, or to you. We hear it every day, we see it in the papers every weekend. Speed kills. Power kills. When a person is driving 80 miles an hour, he is sitting on a thin line between this world and the next. We laugh. It can't happen to me.

EVERY DAY people from one to 100 die on the bloody strips of asphalt cutting our state and our country. What for? For what cause have all these people given their lives? For fun? For the thrill of pasing on a hill? For a few saved seconds? Some die for these inspiring goals, but most don't. Most die, innocent of anything except being unlucky enough to be at a particular spot at a particular time. But death on the highways is so remote. Most of us pass the mangled wreckage with our heads turned the other way. We find it hard to hear the screams within the ambulance. The siren is too loud.

And so, the slaughter will go on. It would be wonderful if we could believe that the death of three students might open the eyes of three hundred drivers. But the fact remains, no one believes they are going to die.

DTH FORUM:

Gripes Common?— Rumors False?

In Mr. Robinson's article, "Ramblings'—'of the October 19th DTH, common gripes and false rumors were unveiled in a seemingly startling manner. The only trouble is that they were common and false.

If every merchant in Chapel Hill did business in a condemned building and at "discount" rates, a large department store would wipe out their business. As for the "model" Kemp Nye affords the merchants of Chapel Hill, I believe his little White Elephant speaks well enough.

Drug store price markup is not 100% (rumor & false) but 33 1-3 per cent as set up in the price lists issued by the NATIONAL Association of Retail Druggists. Have you ever tried to return a piece of "discount" jewelry or have a "discount" watch repaired and hear all the stanzas to the song "All Sales Final, Sucker?"

How many students attend the University with the idea of running a "discount" business? Rugs, brass furnishings, polite personnel, guarantees, civilization . . . all cost something.

Maybe someday Mr. Robinson will be able to venture into the discount business, but I will bet the guarantee from a one-hundred dollar watch that when he gets stuck by a discount he will squeal the loudest.

Readers Object To Headline

To the Editor:

I am strenuously objecting to the headline in Wednesday's paper—"White House BEGS Khrushchev Hold Bomb." The White House did not BEG Mr. Khrushchev to do anything; they requested him not to explode the bomb. There is a distinction.

With security of this country at stake, and possibly the whole world, there is no need to beg but only inform him of the possible consequences of this action. We hear that the fallout of his explosion will affect the Russian people perhaps even more disasterously than us.

We never have to apologize for safeguarding the security of this country, even if it means measures such as the U-2 flights. We must make it clear to Khrushchev that if he continues his haphazard policy, then he had better be prepared for the inevitable consequences of war.

Somers Gives More Info On F. Donner

Mr. Clotfielter:

For fear that your next "Attitudes" column will delete as much of the information contained in the source (in this case, obviously, The Congressional Record) as this one, I hasten to answer—from the same source—one of the questions you so subtly left unanswered.

You said, "Mr. Donner may be a Communist, a fellow traveler or neither . . ." Congressman Walter's speech, as printed in the same Congressional Record seemed to answer that question (Do you claim that he used the privilege of Congressional immunity in making the speech?). The speech included the following:

THE AUTHOR, Frank J. Donner, is discreetly described in the foreword by the publisher as a constitutional lawyer. Nothing more than that. And the reason for such descriptive brevity in this man's background will appear obvious. On February 16, 1959, the Committee on Un-American Activities issued a report titled "Communist Legal Subversion: The Role of the Communist Lawyer." At page 35 thereof, the following appears:

Frank J. Donner, New York

Frank Donner was identified by a number of witnesses before this committee as a member of a Communist cell comprised of lawyers employed by the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, D. C.

Herbert Fuchs, a former Communist who had helped to organize this cell in 1937 and actively participated in it until his transfer from Washington in 1942, testified on December 13, 1955, that Frank Donner was one of the NLRB lawyers who joined his conspiratorial Communist group.

On December 14, 1955, Mortimer Riemer, another former member of the Communist cell in the NLRB, confirmed Fuchs' testimony regarding Frank Donner. Donner was again identified by ex-Communist Harry Cooper on March 1, 1956.

Frank Donner, on June 28, 1956, appeared as a witness before the committee. Although admitting he was employed by the NLRB from 1940 until 1945 in the Litigation Section, he invoked the first and fifth amendments when he was questionbd concerning Communist Party membership and affiliations.

Mr. Donner was confronted with a U. S. Civil Service Commission questionnaire he had signed on June 2, 1943, while employed by the NLRB. On this official form, he had replied "No" to a question as to whether or not he held membership in a Communist organization. Conceding that the signature was his, Mr. Donner nevertheless invoked the fifth amendment when asked if he had been truthful in his statement to the U. S. Gov.

Clotfelter Replys

Mr. Somers,

If you had withheld your reply for another day you would have noticed that my next "ATTITUDES" column included Donner's background with the National Labor Relations Board, the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, the National Lawyers Guild, and his appearances before HUAC itself.

Nothing in Walter's speech proves that Donner is or was a member of the Communist Party. The speech simply reports that Donner was accused of Communist membership in the 1937-42 period, and that he worked with several supposed fronts—"fronts" according to Rep. Walter, whose views towards "fronts" might not be overly objective.

But you realize, I'm sure, that Donner's Communist affiliations, even if it should be "proved," would not in itself prove that his book was a pack of lies. (Or do you think there is an everpresent, transcending connection between "lies and deceit" and bad-guy Commies, one never being present without the other?)

Margery Is No Criminal

To the Editor:

Miss Michelmore wrote a postcard—an ordinary postcord, commenting on her impressions of a strange place. But her conventional American action has been condemned as criminal, sinful, and disgraceful.

What is actually being condemned is Miss Michelmore's right as a free citizen of the United States to

1. The freedom to report the truth
2. The freedom of expression
3. The fredom of thought.

But one objects, "not on a postcard for everyone to see!" I say that if there were no deplorable conditions to report, the Peace Corps would have no function. What Miss Michelmore had to say should be heard not only by her friends, but by the whole world, through placards, Radio, TV, movies, and every other means of publication. But most of all, it should be heard by the people of Nigeria themselves, for the first step to improvement in any area is self-recognition of a need.

To deny the freedom to expose the truth in any manner is to deny the principle upon which our very government was founded.

to the depths of the sea

Our job is providing communications of all kinds, wherever needed—whether in the northern snows to flash word of possible enemy missile attack, or in your home or college, or in serving the nation's business.

When we can't fill a need off the shelf, then we start fresh and create the answer to the problem. We've done that hundreds of times.

We began transatlantic radiotelephone service in 1927. Then we developed the world's first undersea telephone cables to speed calls between continents.

We handled the world's first telephone conversation via satellite. And we have started development of an important world-wide communications system employing satellites.

When industry and government needed a way of gathering huge amounts of coded information from distant points, we were ready with our vast telephone network and Data-Phone, which can transmit mountains of data at extremely high speeds.

And so it goes—Long Distance service, Direct Distance Dialing, the Transistor, the Solar Battery—a succession of firsts which goes back to the invention of the telephone itself.

Universal communications—the finest, most dependable anywhere—are what we deliver. Inside: for home, office, or plant. Outside: on land, under the sea, through the air.

Booters At Davidson

The Tar Heel soccer team, which won an easy 5-3 victory at State last week after losing a tight 2-0 contest to powerful West Chester, moves outside the conference again today and takes a trip to Davidson.

The Wildcats, who play in the Southern Conference, dropped a 2-1 decision in overtime here last year.

Coach Marvin Allen's booters, who are 3-2 now on the season, have scored 12 goals thus far and have yielded a like number of scores.

Allen has been experimenting at several positions, trying to find the right combination. At goalie, both senior Tom Griffith and junior Larry Steele have seen action. The blond Steele started against State and made 20 saves, but Griffith saw regular duty in earlier contests.

Steve Painter has been struggling with Kingman Brown for the right wing spot. Brown kicked a goal in each of the first two games, but Painter has said a few words with his foot too. Herman Prakke, with two goals against State, is among the top scorers for the Carolina evelen.

Bill Shettle, a menace to enemy goalies when he toes the line for a penalty kick, will be at left inside. Shifty and deceptive Pete Blake i sthe man of action at center forward, and Frank Lankford will probably get the green light at inside left.

The three halfback spots are held down by a veteran, Bill Snyder, and a couple of newcomers, George Beim and Charlie Battle. The solid fullback corps is led by Captain Dick Bordogna and big John Henrick. Ray Smith has also seen starting action at the defensive spot.

The man who remains the number one substitute is junior Bob Kepner, who can play either halfback or forward.

Mural Track Meet Opens At 4

Fetzer Field will be buzzing with activity this afternoon as the Intramural Track Meet gets started at 4 o'clock. The two-day meet will see competition in five running events and four field events.

Track is a point-system activity and teams have been entered by organizations in three separate divisions, dormitory, graduate, and fraternity. Competition in each division will be conducted separately.

This afternoon's schedule lists preliminaries for the dorm and frat divisions in the 60-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 440-yard relay and the 880-yard relay. Semi-finals in the two dashes will also be held one hour after the prelims.

The dormitory and graduate division finals in all four of the field events will also be held today. This includes the shot put, discus, high jump and broad jump.

A look at Thursday's schedule finds listed the finals for all divisions in all the running events, including the ½-mile run which will be held only on Thursday. The fraternity field events will also take place tomorrow Starting time once again will be 4 o'clock.

Entry totals for each event follow. In the fraternity division: 58 in the 60-yard dash; 54 in the 100-yard dash; 22 teams in the 440-yard relay; 22 teams in the 880-yard relay; 36 in the ½-mile run; 38 in the discus; 46 in the shot put; 39 in the high jump; and 54 in the broad jump.

In the dormitory division: 31 in the 60 29 in the 100; 11 teams in the 440; 11 teams in the 880; 29 in the ½-mile; 25 in the discus; 23 in the shot put; 21 in the high jump; and 6 in the broad jump.

This afternoon's starting times are: 4:00 for the 60-yard dash; 4:15 for the 100-yard dash; 4:30 for 440-yard relay; and 4:45 for the 880-yard relay. Semi-finals in the 60 and 100 yard dashes will be at 5:00 and 5:15 respectively. Field events will be held from 4:00 to 5:00.

Last year, when the meet was held in the spring, the winning teams were the Phi Delts, the Law School and Alexander.

Arrington, Leggett, Collins And Gabe Checked By Coaches For All-America

CHICAGO (UPI)—The nation's college football coaches have nominated 76 players in their first balloting to determine the American Football Coaches Association 1961 All-America team.

The voting by more than 2,000 members of the association was based on individual performances for the season's first three games.

A second vote will be taken after six games are played and the final selections will be made for the All-America team after the games of Nov. 25.

The personnel of the team will be announced for morning and evening newspapers of Nov. 30 and will be carried exclusively by United Press International. As last year, the Eastman Kodak Company is sponsoring the All-America team as well as the annual coach of the year awards for the major and minor college coaches. These also will be determined by the vote of the coaches themselves.

In the first polling for the All-America team, the coaches cast ballots only for the players on their own squads and opposing players whose performances have been judged by game movies or personal observation.

Some of the players named on the first ballot have since been injured, including Wilburn Hollis of Iowa.

Here are the All-America nominees after the first three games: Ends: John Burrell, Rice; Hugh Campbell, Washington State; Don Coffee, Memphis State; Gary Collins, Maryland; John Ellerson, Army; Tom Hutchinson, Kentucky; George Mans, Michigan; Bill Miller, Miami, Fla.; Don Purcell, Nebraska and Pat Richter, Wisconsin.

Tackles: Bob Asack, Columbia; Steve Barnett, Oregon; Ed Blaine, Missouri; John Brown, Syracuse; Bob Bell, Minnesota; Gary Cutsinger, Oklahoma State; Jim Dunaway, Mississippi; Fate Echols, Northwestern; Bill Neighbors, Alabama; Merlin Olson, Utah State; Bob Plummer, Texas Christian and Marshall Shirk, UCLA.

Guards: Nick Buoniconti, Notre Dame; Rufus Guthrie, Georgia Tech; Paul Honley, Missouri; John Hewitt, Navy; Mike Ingram, Ohio State; Joe Romig, Colorado; Jim Skaags, Washington; Larry Vignali, Pitt; Britt Williams, Southern California and Roy Winston, Louisiana State.

Quarterbacks: Bill Canty, Furman; Dick Tckert, Army; Roman Gabriel, North Carolina State; Chen Galleges, San Jose State; Guy Sonny Gibbs, Texas Christian; Randy Gold, California; Jerry Gross, Detroit; Wilburn Hollis, Iowa; Dan Laughlin, Dayton; Mel Melin, Washington State; Bill Nelson, Southern California; Gale Weidner, Colorado, and James Earl Wright, Memphis State.

Miami End Miller Setting Record

CORAL GABLES, FLA.—University of Miami's amazing All-America end Bill Miller is setting a record in passing receiving that they will be shooting at for a long time to come.

While the Hurricanes were beaten by Navy in an upset, Miller continued his brilliance as a pass receiver by catching five more aerials. He now has 17 for the present season.

This gave him a career record of 76 completions. Yardage wise, Miller has gained an amazing 1,087 yards and he still has a greater part of the 1961 campaign to go.

Miller moved over 1,000 in the Navy game two weeks ago and became the first player in University of Miami history ever to gain more than a thousand yards on pass receiving.

In Miami's games against Penn State and Navy, Miller gained 225 yards on 12 catches of the football. At the rate, he is going now there is a strong chance that he will go well over 1,500 yards for his career pass receiving before the 1961 season comes to a climax. There is a good chance that he will hit 100 career completions before the campaign ends.

W. German Police Use Gas Grenades

BERLIN (UPI) — West Berlin police hurled 36 tear gas grenades at East Berlin police Tuesday night in the second such exchange within 24 hours. They acted after the Reds threw 26 grenades at a loudspeaker truck broadcasting on the border.

A similar communist tear gas barrage at a loudspeaker truck Monday night brought immediate retaliation from the West Germans.

The incident came after a U.S. official at the only crossing point open to the Western Allies began turning back American motorists in civilian clothes even though their cars bore U.S. Army license plates.

Tuesday night, however, two Americans wearing civilian clothes crossed into East Berlin unopposed in a car bearing U.S. State Department plates.

There was no immediate explanation by senior American representatives, who have rejected all Communist East German demands that they be allowed to control Allied traffic between the two halves of the divided city.

The East German Interior Ministry said Monday night East Germany has the right to control civilian traffic and that civilians would have to show identity cards. British and American officials replied that no Allied traffic is subject to East German control.

The development came after the official East German newspaper Neues Deutschland accused the United States of staginb border provocations aimed at creating disorder and warning that a peace treaty with Russia would end such actions.

Still later, officials at the border point said the orders had been amended and no longer applied to newsmen on instructions of superior officers.

State Department officials said orders to troops patrolling the border were "normal." They said they had received no official reports on car haltings.

Privately, however, high Western sources said the travel restrictions on Americans had been imposed Tuesday. But they declined to speculate on whether or how long they might continue.

Howard Gives UN Week Talk On Challenges

Mrs. Frances H. Howard, currently a visiting lecturer in the UNC graduate school of social work, will speak at 8 tonight in Howell Hall on "Can the UN meet today's challenges?"

The lecture is in conjunction with international UN week, Oct. 22-27.

Since November 1960, Mrs. Howard has been with the International Cooperation Administration as an International Education Consultant and as a liaison with the Peace Corps.

Under the auspices of the American Association for the UN, Mrs. Howard led a People-to-People Mission to the Headquarters of the Specialized Agencies in Europe in 1957. She visited the UNESCO headquarters in Paris; the World Court at the Hague, Netherlands; WHO, ILO in Geneva, and the Food and Agricultural Organization in Rome.

West Berlin Visit

Mrs. Howard has traveled extensively in many countries. In 1958 she spent two weeks in Russia and East and West Berlin. She has toured critical areas in the Middle East, including Egypt, Jordan, Israel and Turkey.

An experienced speaker about world events, Mrs. Howard has produced more than 45 TV shows on United States foreign policy and has given more than 200 speeches.

Guerilla Wars, U. S. Security Seminar Topics

A combined operation of the U.S. Army and the Greek Raiding Forces invaded Political Science 91 yesterday afternoon in Caldwell Hall and captured the entire seminar.

Capt. Herbert Schandler of the National Security Problems Seminar aided by Capt. Tsaganis and Capt. Polizois of the Greek Raiding Forces led a seminar discussion on "The political, economic, social, and military problems of guerilla warfare."

Captain Schandler, a former political philosophy professor at West Point and a former faculty member of the Special Warfare School at Ft. Bragg, said, "The subversive problem today is basically political, economic and social. The military action is secondary."

"Subversive Movements"

"Today's seminar covers the whole area of subversive movements—their nature and causes and means of fighting them."

The students of this honors course will go to Ft. Bragg on 13 November to be briefed on the capabilities of the 7th Special Forces Group Airborne, whose mission is to direct, organize, equip and train native forces in guerilla warfare during wartime and to advise and train friendly governments in combating communist guerilla movements during peacetime.

Captains Tsaganis and Polizois are attending a Special Forces and Psychological Warfare course at Ft. Bragg. They have been here four months and like the U.S.

Capt. Tsaganis said that the training they are getting at Ft. Bragg will "help us very much when we return to Greece."

Controversy Builds Around UNC Author's Reading Text

Compiled From DTH Wire Reports

"Communism attracts many disappointed idealists who have become convinced that democracy has betrayed its values . . ."

This statement and others like it are included in a new collection of reading material for seventh and eighth grade students. The collection was edited by Thelma Gwinn Thurstone, UNC professor of education and a noted author of texts.

The series, "Reading for Understanding," is currently controversial among many parents and educators.

In Ventura County, Calif., some of the statements made in the reading matter have been branded "too controversial" for 12-and-13-year olds and withdrawn from use in the schools.

In the Chicago suburb of Glencoe, on the other hand, a reading consultant to the town's four elementary schools believes that throwing some controversy into reading matter causes pupils to pay better attention to what they are reading.

The learning method employed by the series uses 440 cards, each with 10 incomplete statements, which must be completed by students. These statements relate to the social sciences, natural and physical sciences, the arts, philosophy and mathematics.

An example: "It is unwise to underestimate the attraction that communism has for many disappointed idealists who have become convinced that Democracy:

"A—can admit no defects.
"B—is the hope of the oppressed.
"C—will work if given a chance.
"D—has betrayed its values."
"D—has betrayed its values."
"D is correct, since it is the only answer which preserves the sense of the statement.

Other statements in the material suggest that many present moral standards may be obselete: that democracy has failed to bring peace, brotherhood, clean politics or honest, capable officials; and that this nation has sometimes been the aggressor on the world scene.

Dr. Thurstone took the 4,400 statements in the book from various sources, rewriting some.

According to Dr. George Beauchamp, professor of education at Northwestern University, who supports the Thurstone publication, "It is propaganda, not education to show youngsters only one side of a question," said Beauchamp.

"I should like to see kindergarten-age youngsters exposed to some controversial ideas in school. "How else are we going to educate a democratic populace to go to the polls and resolve controversy intelligently."

A Georgia Peach sponsored by Sigma Nu snowed four judges Tuesday night to win the 1961-62 Yack Beauty Contest.

Mary Ann Henderson, a senior from Savannah, Ga., was crowned "Queen of the Yack" before a full house at Memorial Hall as the grand finale of a four-hour contest.

The 11 runnersup who will be her court are: Judy Allen, freshman, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha; Lynn Boyette, junior, Kenly, N. C., sponsored by Phi Gamma Delta; Linda Colvard, sophomore, State College Station, Miss., sponsored by Kappa Delta; Billie Gandy, senior, Concord, sponsored by Whitehead Dorm; Becky Hartman, sophomore, Raleigh, sponsored by Delta Delta Delta; Dolly Isom, freshman, Raleigh, sponsored by Nurses Dorm; Jeannie Kleitman, junior, Levittown, N. Y., sponsored by Kappa Kappa Gamma; Carolyn Mitchel, junior, Chapel Hill, sponsored by Nurses Dorm; Lin Sitton, sophomore, Hendersonville, sponsored by Nurses Dorm; Lynn Thompson, junior, Atlanta, Ga., sponsored by Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Gayle Ragland, sophomore, Jacksonville, Fla., sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi.

The contest featured Jim Heavner, assistant manager and program director of WHCL, as MC. The Jim Crisp Combo provided background music. Dan Brock, a guitarist - folk - singer, entertained during intermission.

The judges were Dr. Hill, chairman of the Religion department; Mr. Olsen, speech professor; Bob Rosenbacher, owner of The Hub, and Price Coursey, member of The Charlotte Publishing Co.

Parties Nominate 24 Fall Candidates

SP Picks Vinroot Jr. Prexy; Spearman UP Frosh Nominee

By Newt Smith

Richard Vinroot, George Rosental, and Peter Harkness will head the SP campaign for the officers of the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman Class presidents, respectively.

The Junior Class president nomination, Richard Vinroot, came after extended debate. There were recommendations that the SP not iominate those candidates who desire double endorsement. Student Body President Bill Harriss said, "If a student government is going to continue on campus, we must have two strong parties. Double endorsement defeats that purpose."

Officers nominated by the SP for Junior Class in addition to Vonroot were: Vice-president, Howard Holsenbeck; secretary, Beth Walker; treasurer, Leon Barber; social chairman, Mary Marshall.

The Sophomore officers nominated were: Jeff Dick, vice-president; Lin Sitton, secretary; Woddy Harrison, treasurer; and Lindsay Raiford, social chairman.

Freshman Class nominees are: Pat Dagenhart, vice-president; Frieda Collins, secretary; Harrison Merrill, treasurer; and Dolly Isom, social chairman.

By Chuck Mooney and Jim Neal

The University Party nominated their candidates for Freshman Class officers last night in Memorial Hall.

Bob Spearman of Chapel Hill was nominated for president; Sammy Thompson, Wilson, vice-president; Johnsye Massenburg, Raleigh, secretary; Dick Fleming, Durham, treasurer.

Joe Craver of Shelby was nominated to run for Junior Class president by acclamation.

No other officers were nominated. Up Chairman Bill Criswell announced that another nominating convention will be held next Monday night and requested that members watch the DTH for further announcements.

Harrington, Lewis Hold Vitriolic Duel

"The House Un-American Activities Committee helps the Communist Party more than it hurts it," Socialist editor Mike Harrington said in a debate with Fulton Lewis III Monday night.

"I don't know which would be more dismayed at the disappearance of the other."

Harrington, editor of NEW AMERICA, the Socialist Party newspaper, was debating former HUAC staff member Lewis on "Operation Abolition," HUAC's version of the 1960 San Francisco student "riots."

Lewis, in discussing the broader issue of HUAC's existence, said, "We must be sure that the cure we recommend (for the present present "threat" to civil liberties), not be more injurious to the body than the disease itself."

Overflow Crowd

An overflow crowd completely filled Carroll Hall where the debate was held. People jammed the aisles, stood at the back and sides of the hall, and sat in the windows throughout the 45-minute film and the two-and-a-half hour debate and question-answer period. Hundreds of persons were turned away for lack of room.

The film and debate were sponsored by the Carolina Forum of student government and the campus Young Republicans Club.

The film's technical accuracy was not a point of major consideration. Harrington pointed out several alleged time distortions and instances where the film did not conform with what the narrator (Lewis—also film technical director) was saying.

"This flick exemplifies the 'mercurochrome theory,'" said Harrington. "One drop of red mercurochrome in a clear glass of water makes the entire glass pink."

His attack did not center on details of the film, said the Socialist editor, because he didn't have "a handy-dandy anti-'Operation Abolition' kit"—in reference to the extensive files which Lewis had with him.

(A statement made late in the question-answer session by Fulton Lewis caused some controversy. The Cuban revolution, said Lewis had been engineered by "27 beatniks up in the mountains.")

"The obscene rituals of recantation and recrimination"—as Harrington described HUAC's investigatory processes—were the center of discussion.

"For the time being, in this period of national peril, united action is needed," said Lewis. "What kind of Communist activities which should be made illegal is a primary legislative goal of the House Committee."

Harrington countered, "This politics of paranoia—HUAC, McCarthyism, Birchism—cripples the Bigger Bomb Coming?

WASHINGTON—U. S. atomic experts believed Tuesday that the big one is still to come in Russia's nuclear weapon tests.

The "big one" is the 50-megaton monster which Nikita S. Khrushchev said last week would be exploded on Oct. 30 or Oct. 31. One authority speculated it may be detonated at an altitude of 100 miles or so to check the missile "kill range" of H-bombb bursts in space

'False Security' Claimed

NEW YORK—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky said Tuesday the Defense Department may have lulled the American people into "a false sense of security" when it claimed the United States now has the nuclear power to destroy an aggressor.

He was particularly critical of statements made last Saturday by Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatric at Hot Springs, Va. in a speech cleared by President Kennedy and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Reds Build New Line

HOF, Germany—The East German Communists are building a miniature Siegfried line along the 174-mile border facing Bavaria, official West German sources said Tuesday.

The new line to halt the flow of East German refugees includes underground bunkers and concrete slabs which are replacing barbed wire barricades—similar to the wall in Berlin.

Latin American Revolutions

New revolutionary turmoil wracked Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador and the Dominican Republic Tuesday. Another unsuccessful plot to assassinate Fidel Castro was reported in Cuba.

In Bolivia, police and carabineers killed at least six college boys and striking transport workers and injured 50 others Monday night in a half-dozen head-on clashes and subsequent street battles.

The government imposed a state of siege, decreed press censorship and closed down all educational institutions. Private cars were commandeered to break a transport strike.

Accuse U.S. On Border

BERLIN—The official East German newspaper Neues Deutschland accused the United States Tuesday of staging border provocations aimed at creating disorder and said a peace treaty with Russia would end such actions.

Despite Communist threats and border shootings, West Berlin police announced that 22 more East Berliners fled to freedom during the night, one a Communist border guard who broke his leg jumping from a second floor window into the French Sector.

Three Cadets Get Honor For AFROTC

Three senior AFROTC cadets at Carolina have been named Distinguished Military Students by Professor of Air Science Lt. Col. Gordon D. Kage.

The cadets receiving the honor are Cadet Lt. Col. William J. Ritchie, Cadet Captain Joe E. Davies, and Cadet 1st Lt. James C. Burrus.

These cadets, upon successfully graduating as Distinguished Military Students, will be given the opportunity to apply for an appointment in the Regular Air Force. Their fellow senior cadets will first have to serve in the Air Force Reserve before they can enter Regular Air Force active duty.

Upper One-Third

To become Distinguished Military Students, these cadets had to meet the following requirements: (1) Be in the upper one-third of their military class in AFROTC subjects. (2) Have an accumulative or academic standing among the upper one-third of all students in the institution pursuing the same academic major and scheduled to graduate the same school year. (3) Possess high moral character and definite aptitude for service in the Air Force. (4) Have distinguished himself by demonstrated leadership, particularly by participation in recognized extra-curricular activities.

While in attendance at the AFROTC Summer Training Unit he must be ranked in the upper one-third of all cadets at his Summer Training Unit.

They must maintain the standards given above through their senior year.

From Greensboro

Cadet Lt. Col. Ritchie is from Greensboro, North Carolina and is working toward an A.B. degree in Physical Education. He is Cadet Group Commander of the AFROTC Cadet Corps this year.

Cadet Captain Davies is from Alexandria, Virginia, and is working for a B.S. degree in Industrial Relations. He is on the UNC football team and actively participates in Monogram Club.

Cadet 1st Lt. Burrus from Engelhard, N. C., is working for a B.S. degree in Industrial Relations.

Kissinger To Talk At Duke

Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, special consultant to President Kennedy on weapons systems, will speak on "Problems of American Foreign Policy" at Duke University Thursday at 8:15 p.m.

Director of defense studies at Harvard, Kissinger is the author of several books including "Nuclear War and Foreign Policy" and "The Necessity for Choice—Problems in American Foreign Policy."

Kissinger will speak in Duke's Page Auditorium and discuss topics such as the nuclear crisis, arms control, disarmament and national security.

Remodeled Pine Room Open In November With New Kitchen, Snack Bar, Cafeteria

By Linda Cravotta

"Students will be unable to recognize the old Pine Room when its remodeling is completed, for it will exist in name only," said George Prillaman, Director of the Dining Halls for the University.

Scheduled originally to be opened by September 15, unforseen problems in construction have held up its completion date until November 15.

In 1942 when Lenoir Hall Cafeteria was built, the Pine Room was nothing but a dirt-filled basement. Later that year, an Officers' Mess Hall for Navy Preflight School Cadets was constructed. Eventually it was converted into a snack bar for students.

Most Beautiful

"In my opinion the new Pine Room will be the most beautiful cafeteria and snack bar at any college," said Prillaman, who has worked for three years on plans and ideas for the remodeling.

The features of the new Pine Room include a completely new kitchen with the latest type of cooking equipment, ranging from an electronic oven to an automatic pushbutton coffee maker.

In addition to a snack bar, a cafeteria will also be available.

A new system of ventilation is being installed which will remove stale air and replace it with fresh air.

Booths And Tables

There will be booths added in addition to new formica-covered tables and chairs. A 29-foot foam-rubber covered bench will stretch across one wall in the lobby. Tables with lamps and lounge chairs will also be placed in the lobby.

A specially designed mural 30 feet by 5 feet will decorate the far wall of the Pine Room.

New indirect lighting has been installed. The pine in the Pine Room has been completely refinished. The ceiling has been painted a brilliant white. The marble floors have been ground and polished.

Other features of the new cafeteria-snack bar will be the addition of infra-red lights above the food serving counters to keep food warm.

The new Pine Room will have a seating capacity of 340 people. Its hours will remain the same (7:00 a.m.-12:00 midnight) and its prices will remain the same.

"There has been pressure to increase prices but I feel that a student should be fed good food as cheaply as possible," said Prillaman, who is proud of the fact that one can eat three meals a day at Lenoir for $1.00. "This is helping the student pay for his college education and there are many who need this type of assistance."

REMODELING: Two workmen install a ventilation unit in the Pine Room, now in the process of being remodeled. The Pine Room is scheduled to reopen November 15 with improved kitchen facilities, a new snack bar and cafeteria.

Should We View UN Saving Panacea?

Dag Hammarskjold is gone; there is no slightest light on his sucessor; the problem of Red China is heavily hanging; the Berlin problem is moving from worse to worst and the Congo problem seems to have reached to a point to give an impression of an endless oscillation of strifes. Surrounded by those and many other difficulties the birth of the U.N. is celebrated by its member nations this week. At this time one must reflect about what is to be changed and what is to be done in the U.N. based on past experiences.

There is a great tendency among the nations, especially in America, to depend lazily on the U.N. to make a peace and to fix major international disputes. The U.N., however, is still too young and too immature to handle such a huge problem as the leading powers of the world have to give. There is a great fear that the U.N. itself would be crashed by the weight of their gigantic disputes.

IF MAJOR nations keep passing their crucial decisions to this organization as they have done they will endanger the existence of the U.N. itself. If I use a simple way of expression we have to go easy with it because we do not have another Dag Hammarskjod yet, who could manage the unsuitably large problems for the organization with his intellect alone.

We should not bring into the U.N. again such problem as a Suez crisis, which would not have been troubled the U.N. if the American government had not give to the allies around the Canal the unyielding facts that they had been misguided and unguided. Again, we should not bring into the U.N. such problem as a Congo crisis, which would never never have been if the Western countries had realized, before the Belgian withdrawal, that it was a Western responsibility to prevent the disturbance and to make a free independent Congo.. Then we had Dag Hammarskjold, but not now.

A GENERAL NOTION on the UN, that it is the only place in the world to settle the international disputes and to make a world peace, tends to make many nations irresponsibly bring into the UN the problems which may not have necessarily been submitted to the UN, if the countries and the people of the countries pay due effort and feel due responsibility to solve those problems before their submittances knowing that making a peace or settling an internatonal dispute is primarily the matter of each individual nation and the people of each nation. We should make the burden of the UN as light as possible in order that the UN would not be expended by the problems.

We ought not have over-confidence on the UN to fix international crisis or to make peace for us. Before we pass lazily through those problems to the UN we must do our best to make a world peace and to settle international disputes by ourselves.

We should cherish, nourish, treasure, and raise it by piece meals of problems of suitable size if we dream a rosy dream of a firm establishment of common laws among the nations through the United Nations in the future.

—Haruo Konishi

End Of Communism?

The word "Stalinism" has been appearing with renewed regularity in the political analysts' columns of late.

With Khrushchev apparently having some difficulty keeping himself tightly in control of the world Communist movement, he appears to have done another of his peculiar political backflips. After having denounced Stalin in true Communist adherence to the policy of making sure dead people stay buried, Khrushchev is now lamenting the fact that he no longer has the control over the world Communist movement that Stalin had.

A rather morbit joke that circulated some time ago, following some Chinese Communist refusals to accept the Khrushchev dictates at face value, capsuled the American sentiment by saying that optimists are learning Russian, pessimists are learning Chinese. The new twist is that the pessimists are now learning Albanian.

The claim to humor for either statement is tenuous, but there is no refuting the underlying fact: Khrushchev has been unable to keep other Communist countries under the Russian thumb.

The Albanian split is not the first, nor is it apt to be the last. Communist movements in other countries are split into two, three, and sometimes more, factions.

This is especially true in the Communist youth movement. The Zengakuren in Japan, for instance, is split into three incompatible factions, with the Marxist philosophical faction currently the most popular. Those who adhere to the "Moscow line" are in the minority.

Khrushchev is not unaware of what is going on in countries other than Albania, countries that appear on the surface to look to the Russian premier for leadership, but actually would rather practice their own brand of Communism. This is naturally a source of concern to Khrushchev and the old Stalinism is beginning to look better and better to him.

Whether this apparent swing toward disaffection with Khrushchev will have any lasting effect is difficult for anyone to predict. However, one thing is hardly open to question, and that is if the situation becomes too dangerous to Khrushchev and his aim of complete domination of the world Communist movement, then he will take whatever steps are necessary to protect his position.

There is also a chance that he will be unable to do anything, in which case the fearful image of a completely unified Communist will have been faded somewhat. Our hope, naturally, is that Khrushchev will be unable to draw the Iron Curtain tighter, and the end of unified world Communism already begun.

Curfew

Last night's showing of the film "Operation Abolition'' in Carroll Hall drew an unusually large and interested crowd. The Harrington-Lewis debate that followed the film was exactly what everyone expected it to be, a careful, point-by-point dissection and analysis of the film and its sponsor, the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

We don't think anyone changed his mind about either the film or the committee, but at least more people know what they're disagreeing on.

Of course, both Fulton Lewis and Mike Harrington might be wondering what prompted over half of the audience to walk out before the debate was finished.

We can assure them that it had nothing to do with lack of interest. It was simply because the coeds had to meet their 11 p.m. curfew. Blanket late permission was extended for the Yack beauty contest, but not for the debate.

That's because the Yack beauty contest is more important.

A Word For It

(Associated Press Log)

"A passel of double-domes at the G. & C. Merriam Co. joint in Springfield, Mass., have been confabbing and yakking for 27 years—which is not to infer that they have not been doing plenty work—and now they have finalized Webster's Third New International Dictionary, Unabridged, a new edition of that swell and esteemed word book."

So says an editorial in the New York Times, pointing out that if you like the English prose in that first paragraph, then Webster's is just your dictionary, since all of the words used are listed there "with no suggestion they are anything but standard."

The Times suggests that the Webster editors do not throw out the printing plates of the second edition since there is likely to be a continuing demand for it.

It would also make a platform for a new start, says the Times, and however costly or arduous, a new start is needed.

Mr. K & His Yo-Yo Diplomacy

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

PARIS — An American official here calls it "yo-yo diplomacy."

It is the combination by which Nikita Khrushchev first ships the world out to the end of a string with threats and then reels in again with sweet talk as suits his purpose.

This official believes it is time the world got off the string.

This dispatch is written at the end of the week of talks with high French and NATO officials in which they spoke frankly of problems ranging from Berlin to Laos but with the condition that any information used later would not be directly attributed to its source.

However, the views are authoritative.

The French government believes it is receiving adequate reports on Washington and United Nations discussions of the Berlin problem.

HOWEVER, IT is not entirely certain it knows President Kennedy's and Secretary of State Dean Rusk's exact thinking on Berlin or the German problem as a whole.

It opposes any move to extend talks on Berlin to the question of European security.

It opposes any concessions on Berlin which might lead to a "creeping neutrality" over Western Europe. The French believe this not only would lead to eventual withdrawal of American forces in Europe but also to collapse of the whole system of West European unity built up so carefully over the last 16 years.

The French are hopeful of a closer relationship with the Kennedy administration than exisited under the Eisenhower administration.

THEY BELIEVE that the Eisenhower administration, heavily sprinkled with successful business executives, frequently took too rigid a view toward world events without regard for the lessons of history.

Both French and NATO officials believe that the morale factor of the peoples involved in the present crisis is important.

They admit that United States public opinion for a strong stand against Soviet threats is far ahead of that of Europe.

But they say it is not because Khrushchev's nuclear threats have frightened the peoples of Europe. It is simply that after recurring crises, they simply don't believe them.

The main idea is to get off the Russian yo-yo, both by increased awareness among public opinion and by a steady buildup of Western strength regardless of Soviet attempts at confusion.

Reader Argues Choice Of U.S.

The October 17, 1961 edition of the Daily Tar Heel contained a pacifist diatribe by Haruo Konishi directed at American selfishness. Without going into the over expounded arguments between pacifist and patriot, I would like to comment on some of the obvious inaccuracies used in this particular article.

In the first place there are some points of agreement between myself and Konishi. I acknowledge that the strife between the "free" countries and the "communistic" countries threatens man's conquest of nature, his civilization, and possibly his health. Also, Americans would do well to reappraise the value of "keeping face" before the world. I too agree that President Kennedy's disarmament proposals should be accepted through the United Nations. And finally, I recognize the central problem as concerning the preservation of existing civilization.

LOGICAL REASONING, not emotional sentimentality or selfish desire, prevents me from accepting the following assumptions:

1. Freedom is simply a luxury.
2. Civilization must be preserved at the risk of freedom.
3. The choice is between destruction (because of our steadfastness) or preservation of the human legacy (through the sacrifice of our freedom and doctrines).

Konishi feels that our dogged insistance on freedom threatens the peace and hence threatens the world with the annihilation of civilization. On the other hand I believe freedom to be the sustaining force in any highly civilized state.

What is freedom? Has not the growth of individual freedom and responsibility paralleled the growth of a particular civilization? If as Emerson said, we should judge a civilization by the individuals it produces, is not freedom the prime requisite for a highly developed civilization? My point is this, that civilizations grow because FREE men develop their individuality and in turn assist their fellow men. A civilized state is one in which men are encouraged to think and mature freely. Seen in this light freedom is more than "petty selfish desire."

THE POLITICAL growth of civilization is a struggle to be free of overlords, the environmental growth of civilization is a struggle to be free of disease, disaster, and natural limitations, the spiritual growth of civilization is a struggle to be free of selfishness, and so on. Arnold Toynbee, the noted contemporary historian, has stated that the decline of democracy, personal freedom and liberty into a totalitarian state INEVITABLY MARKS THE BEGINNING OF THE DECLINE OF THE CIVILIZATION. When men surrender their political and individual freedom in favor of security, as Eric Fromm says, they are choosing the easy way out. When such a surrender is made the decline in the civilization will follow as surely as Rome fell.

Konishi intimates that that we must give up our freedom in order to preserve civilization or be destroyed. But if we do give up freedom our civilization will definitely decline into a period comparable to the Dark Ages. Modern Western Civilization can only be preserved through freedom, democracy, liberty, and equality (and these elements must be kept in good balance). We must resist foreign overlords as well as patriotic extremists at home who would both deny us the right to think.

HOWEVER, IT IS inevitable that sooner or later our modern civilization will decline. We must be sure that Western civilization developes even more and doesn't begin its decline until the "germ" of freedom has been deeply planted in upcoming nations and cultures. This is the only good guarantee that the future will see much of Freedom.

Yet, IF the choice WERE between freedom with war or surrender with peace today, perhaps it would be better to choose the quicker of the two methods for destroying contemporary civilization. Better to be flushed down in a nuclear holocoust with the hope of vigorous, free survivors than to see our civilization and ALL expressions of freedom wither by surrender. And if we should so surrender and decline, do you think a disarmament pledge would be safe in the hands of a President Nero of the American People's Republic?

But the choice does NOT have to be freedom and death versus submission and peace. We must tactfully set our goals for freedom, not simply the maintenance of freedom at home, but also in the foreign lands not yet subverted. Freedom is a terrifying thing, security is more appealing—we must be strong men in the face of terror and temptation.

ATTITUDES by Clotfelter

Maybe The Nation Isn't Worth Saving?

Bob Somers, in a recent letter to the editor, lists some of the Patriotic Legislation with which the House Un-American Activities Committee credits itself. The latter, which ardently defends the Committee, brags of what are to us some of HUAC's most objectionable features.

Somers named five legislative recommendations which had come from the House Committee. These concerned (1) "deportation of alien spies and saboteurs;" (2) outlawing any organization, "which is shown to be under the control of a foreign government" (Somers forgets to say who will "show" these groups to be foreign-controlled, since HUAC supposedly is not a judiciary body);

(3) More legislation on deportation of saboteurs; (4) restriction of tax-exempt privileges to Communist-controlled groups (again, who is going to prove them Communist?); and

(5) "Added legislation to place restrictions on . . . totalitarian propaganda . . ."

RECOMMENDATIONS (2) and (4) involve a judgment of "questionable" organizations, which HUAC as a legislative committee is unable to make.

The first and third recommendations concern legislation against persons who commit physical acts of subversion. This field takes the Committee far beyond its House mandate, which states:

"(HUAC) is authorized to make from time to time investigations of the extent, character and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States . . ."

THEREFORE, recommendation (5) is legitimate under the HUAC mandate. But is it necessary and advisable?

"Added legislation to place restrictions on the distribution of totalitarian propaganda, when that distribution involves any cost to the American taxpayers," says Mr. Somers. In plain language, he means either censorship, rigorous restriction or total stoppage of Communist mailings. What Mr. Somers is trying to tell us, or trying not to tell us, is that the dirty Reds shouldn't be allowed to mail their literature. Americans are too susceptible to propaganda . . . the Communists are so shrewd that they could twist the facts and confuse the average American . . . the nation would be delivered into the hands of the Soviet Union—delivered by your friendly mailman.

If the "home of the brave" is so weak and sick and gullible as to be converted to Communism by mail order catalog, maybe the nation is not worth saving . . . Or maybe Mr. Somers and his friends refuse to give the United States credit for enough sense to reject tired totalitarian philosophies, both at home and abroad.

democratic spirit at the moment of its greatest peril."

When a witness is called before the committee, said Harrington, HUAC tells the witness, in effect: "You say today is Monday. The DAILY WORKER says today is Monday. Explain that!"

The Committee's Congressional mandate, which Harrington called "poisoned," Lewis said he was "not particularly in love with." The mandate calls for investigation of "Un-American propaganda activities" and says nothing about legislation restricting overt actions of violence.

"Let us not say, as does HUAC," said Harrington, "that there should be freedom in the streets of Budapest and Moscow and then slander those who demonstrate in the streets of San Francisco."

Petite Dramatique 'Rainmaker' Gives Out Refreshments

First nighters at the Petite Dramatique "Rainmaker" production Friday will be given a treat.

Refreshments will be served in the main lounge of Graham Memorial immediately following the performance.

This is the first time Petite audiences have been served refreshments, says Mrs. D. M. Fambrough of the GM Information Desk, hostess for the event. "It's not to attract a large audience," she said, "because the Petite aldays has capacity crowds."

A performer also will be served two fried eggs in the performance and is required to eat them.

Anne Braden Speaks Here On Liberties

Anne Braden will speak on "Civil Liberties at the Crossroads" Thursday at 8 p.m. in 105 Gardner Hall.

The meeting is sponsored by the YM-YWCA Public Affairs Committee.

Her husband Carl, on the grounds of the First Amendment, refused to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1958. He was convicted of contempt of Congress and is serving a year's sentence.

"The possible curtailing of Civil Liberties holds far-reaching implications for all Americans," Sara Jo Allen and Tony Rogers, co-chairmen of the committee, said in urging people to attend.

'Paul Revere' Ride Of GOP Comes To Hill

Chapel Hill will be one of the target areas for a "Paul Revere" ride through North Carolina by a group of Republicans in an all-out effort by the GOP National Committee to win congressional seats.

The panel of Republicans will include: Reps. William C. Cramer of Florida; Samuel L. Divine and John M. Ashbrook, both of Ohio and James Edward Bromwell of Iowa.

North Carolina's only Republican in Congress, Charles R. Jonas of Lincolnton will meet stiff competition with Democrat Rep. Paul Kitchen for the new Eighth Congressional District seat in next year's election. The General Assembly shoved them together in redistricting the state as a result of the 1960 census.

'Seminars' To Open Program With Meeting

Mark Perry senior from Chapel Hill, will head the 1962 Seminars Abroad Committee which opens its program to the campus this week.

At a reunion of the members of the 1961 Seminar last Sunday, the past summer's program was reviewed and plans were made for the first meeting of interested prospects for the 1962 Seminar, October 26 at 5 p.m. at the Y.

Seminars Abroad is a Carolina project for students who are interested in learning as much as possible during a summer in Europe, through seminars, discussions and informal meetings with Europeans. 130 students have taken part during the past four summers and it is considered one of the best summer opportunities for students.

Members of the 1961 Seminar who are at UNC this year include: Lucy Copenhaver, Julia Dunning, Hal Hunter, Marcia McFarland, Fred Parker, Franchos Palmer and Mark Perry.

All interested students are invited to the Thursday meeting. Further information is available at the Y.

UNC Counts On Momentum Against Miami Friday Night

Injured Men Return To Hurricane Team

By Harry W. Lloyd
DTH Sports Editor

Both North Carolina and Miami will be calling on scientific help when the two teams meet in the Orange Bowl Friday night. The Tar Heels will be banking on the momentum that has carried them through the last two games. The Hurricanes, on the other hand, will have the law of averages to work in their favor.

The boys from the famous "Sun Fan U," after dropping consecutive games to Navy and Colorado, now have a 2-3 record for the season. However, the 'Canes have some momentum of their own in their series with UNC. They have won the last two years after losing the first three times the two teams met.

It will be the homecoming contest for Miami, who plays a total of seven games in the Orange Bowl this season. All of these are night games.

Miami didn't play last week, thereby giving some of its injured players a chance to recuperate. Sophomore quarterback George Mira, the passing sensation, will be back in the starting lineup Friday. Mira led the team to wins over Penn State and Kentucky after being injured, but did not take part in any workouts since the Navy game. Mira has been taking part in full scale drills this week.

Alternate halfback Ron Fritzsche, who has been injured most of the year, will also be ready for the Tar Heels. But others from the Hurricane are still on the sick list, including linebackers Bob Dentel and Ted Modzelewski and guard James O'Mahony.

Coach Andy Gustafson of the Big Wind believes that his strongest position will be fullback, where third-teamer James Bruno has come along fast and looks ready to play a lot of offensive ball. Bruno will be alternating with Captain Jim Vollenweider and Sam Fernanndez. With Mira back, the signal calling pen is also well stocked. John Bennett has gained experience in the past two games, and Bobby Weaver has recovered from two sprained ankles.

The Tar Heels, who won one of their "most important games," in the words of coach Jim Hickey, last week at South Carolina, now stand with Duke at the top spot in the ACC. Friday's game will be their first non-conference encounter.

Carolina leads the league by itself in two categories—total defense and rushing defense. The UNC tacklers have limited their four opponents to an average of 80.2 yards on the ground. Three of them, State, Maryland and South Carolina, had a total of only 114 yards. Clemson gained 208, and but for this figure, the Tar Heels would have yielded less than the ACC record of 75.9 yards per game set by the 1955 Maryland team.

Mural Mat Weigh-Ins Today, Thur.

Weigh-ins for the Intramural Wrestling Meet will be held today and tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the main locker room of Woollen Gym. Actual competition in eight weight classes will begin on Monday, October 30. Matches will be held in three divisons, fraternity, dormitory and graduate. Plaques will be awarded to all winners, plus team plaques to the victorious organization in each division.

Organizations are permitted to enter only one person in each weight class. The classes are: 123, 130, 137, 147, 157, 167, 177 and unlimited. An "A" medical rating is necessary, and no exceptions to this rule will be allowed.

There will be a single-elimination tournament in each weight class, and schedules will be mailed to the intramural managers. However, participants are responsible for checking pairings on the Intramural Bulletin Board in Woollen.

Matches will consist of three one-minute periods. There will be no riding time. In case of ties there will be two extra one-minute periods. All wrestlers must use tennis or basketball shoes and have fingernails properly clipped.

Varsity letter-winners are not eligible to participate. Numeral winners are also ineligible.

Prakke, Shettle Score As Booters Trip Davidson, 2-0; Free-For-All Mars Contest

The North Carolina soccer team, turning in its finest performance of the season, yesterday downed the Davidson Wildcats, 2-0, thus clearing the deck for its tough encounter with defending ACC champion Maryland Saturday afternoon on Fetzer Field.

The Tar Heels, moving their record to 4-2 displayed a devastating offense which kept the hosts in their own territory most of the time. Coach Marvin Allen's booters riddled the Davidson netminder with 35 shots but were denied a score until, when with 10 minutes gone in the third period, Herman Prakke drove one home from his inside-right position, to give Carolina all it needed. Bill Shettle added an insurance goal with 3 minutes left to complete the scoring.

The game was marred by several fist fights, which broke out early in the third period when the going got rough. So rough, in fact that 4 players were thrown out—a rarity in a soccer match.

Coach Allen, dissatisified with his attack in previous games, shifted his entire line around with Pete Blake and Prakke alternating at the inside and outside positions and Shettle taking over at the center forward spot.

Senior Tom Griffith turned in another fine performance in the Carolina net, although the defense, bolstered by Captain Dick Bordogna and Charley Battle, limited the wildcats to only 11 shots on goal.

Allen, pleased with the team's performance, admitted the Tar Heels looked sharp, but was warily eying the upcoming match on Saturday with Maryland—one of the finest collegiate teams in the country.

Wilson Tops Frosh Booters By 3-2

Warren Wilson College broke a tie with 15 seconds remaining in the game to defeat the Carolina freshman soccer team 3-2 here Monday.

The junior college in western North Carolina, which has starting players from China, Mexico, Egypt, and the Middle East, dominated the play with their tricky ball control and man-to-man defense for most of the first half. They failed to score in the first frame but caught fire in the second period when they singed the nets twice. The Tar Babies bounced right back in the closing minutes and scored on a pass from inside right Tom Wright to high-scoring left wing John Schlacter.

Carolina's second half spirit paid off shortly after the initial face off when right wing Marty Krumming slipped the ball past the Warren Wilson goalie from ten feet out.

With the score all tied up going into the last period, Warren Wilson's offensive attack began to crumble and Carolina's forward press, spearheaded by co-captain Ashley Spearment and center forward Jim Talbot, began to gain momentum. The visitors held off the Tar Babies, and with only 15 seconds remaining in the game, brought the ball downfield and eased it past Guddy Siegel in the nets.

Note to a Chick-a-biddy

Perhaps I shouldn't give away the secret us men have guarded for so long . . . Perhaps I shouldn't help you in your pursuit of you-know-who . . . But if you'll promise to read this in the privacy of your dormitory, and never tell a soul who let the cat out of the bag.—well . . .

The plain truth is that when it gets along toward the end of the month, even the best of us men begins to long for next month's allowance. Much as we'd love to —for your charms are as those of the Pied Piper combined with Brigitte what-you-may-call-her—we just can't afford to take you carousing.

So what? So the smart chick suggests a browse in the warm, friendly old Intimate . . . The quality of mercy and all that . . . It's really fun, and now and then the discovery that those endearing young charms included a brain has shocked a chap into asking questions that led—well, frankly, we were so embarrassed we never did ask just where they led.
Try it, eh?

Movie Pickets May Resume

By Jim Clotfelter

Theater picketing will resume here Jan. 3 unless the Carolina and Varsity fully integrate.

Approximately 100 people made this decision at a mass meeting of the Citizens Committee for "Open" Movies Tuesday night at the St. Joseph's AME Church in Carrboro.

A new 16-person executive committee including five from last year's committee, was elected by the meeting.

Mary Mason, last year's committee chairman, and the Rev. Charles Jones, a prominent leader in the picketing last winter, were both re-elected.

Miss Mason is a student at North Carolina College in Durham and is resident of Chapel Hill. The Rev. Jones is minister of the Community Church here.

The Carolina Theater desegregated for UNC Negro students in August, but remained segregated for student families and townspeople.

The Varsity is still completely segregated.

Manager Andy Guttierriez has said he will integrate when the Carolina does. He doesn't "consider the present Carolina policy 'integration'," according to the picketing executive committee.

Picketing started at the Carolina last January, two weeks before it began at other theaters throughout the South. By February the Varsity also was being picketed. The boycott—picketing stopped in late March, when the district manager of the arolina promised to work out an integration solution with no "pressure," nor time limit.

ID Cards

The Citizens Committee meeting voted down by a 2-1 majority a recommendation from last year's executive committee that the inte- to 100 "Negro community identificagrationist group negotiate for 50 tion cards" for admission to the theaters.

The substitute statement of policy, which passed by an almost unanimous vote, gave the executive committee the power to negotiate, but said decisions had to be taken before a mass meeting.

The new committee is composed of five UNC students, three N. C. College students, four townspeople, three UNC professors and one Duke professor. Seven of the 16 are Negro.

UNC To Carry Torch From W-S To Durham

University Runners Face 90-Mile Trek

Carolina will carry the "Torch of Education" from Winston-Salem to Durham, a distance of 90 miles. in the 700-mile marathon Oct. 31 to Nov. 3.

The race is designed to dramatize the needs of colleges in North Carolina for capital improvements included in the $61.5 million bond election Nov. 7.

Over 700 college students each carrying the torch one mile have been divided into two teams — one starting from near Murphy, the other from Wilmington—to meet after 70 hours in Raleigh on Nov. 3.

A cooperative act, the race has been approved by the student government council of the 12 participating state-supported institutions in the state.

Bill Harriss, president of the UNC student body, heads the 12-college council with UNC Sophomore Larry McDevitt, chairman of the marathon run.

100 Men Needed

"Since Carolina is responsible for 90 miles, it will be necessary for us to supply approximately 100 runners, including reserves," said McDevitt. Groups of six or more runners may go by car, at their own expense, to the appointed spot and carry the torch until it is transferred to another group.

McDevitt said that letters have been sent to dormitory and fraternity presidents concerning the marathon and "it is hoped that interested students will contact these people if they desire to run."

Students not sure of transportation are asked by McDevitt to sign up in GM regardless and rides will be arranged.

"The student body is urged by the Committee on State Affairs and Student Government to lend their wholehearted support to the Marathon," said McDevitt.

Time of arrival in Raleigh, by both east and west teams, is about 12 noon Friday, Nov. 3. A reception for the torch bearers and a demonstration has been planned at the Capitol.

Herman Weil Passes At 79

Herman Weil, pioneer Goldsboro merchant and civic leader and a great friend of the University of North Carolina, died at his home in Goldsboro Saturday. He was 79.

A 1901 graduate of the University, he had been a member of the board of trustees since 1949. For many years his family has sponsored the annual Weil Lectures, which brings noted lecturers to the Chapel Hill campus.

University Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House said of Mr. Weil, "He was a very loyal and kindly man, full of good humor and he took great enjoyment in people. He was a true friend of the University. Herman was also one of the most learned shell experts in the country and he gave a large part of his collection to the University."

Chancellor William Aycock and University President William Friday were out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Mr. Weil's business interests included the plywood box industry in the Goldsboro area, H. Weil and Brothers brick manufacturing plant, the Goldsboro Ice Company, a storage warehouse, and the Carolina Rice Company.

Literary Critic To Speak Tonight

Malcolm Cowley, considered one of the best known literary critic on the contemporary American scene, will give an address tonight at 8 in Hill Hall.

Cowley arrived here Tuesday and will return to his home in Connecticut Saturday. His visit is being sponsored by the Department of English, and Cowley will meet with students and classes of the department. His official escort is Jessie Rehder of the English Department.

"I have a very special feeling about this part of North Carolina," said Cowley on Wednesday morning. "I like the people."

Cowley said writers of today lack the sense of family which the writers of the 20's experienced so closely, re-expressing a point which Robert Penn Warren made when visiting here last week. "At that time" Cowley said, referring to the twenties the writers all knew one another and their center was New York. Now the writers are spread out away from New York."

Personal Criticism

"It is good for writers to move together, especially during the ages between 20 and 30 so that they can get that criticism which only one writer can give another," he said.

Commenting on writing generally, Cowley said that few critics know enough about writing because they do not write themselves. He mentioned that some critics write reviews criticizing an author's style when the critic himself lacks style.

The writer must be a critic according to Cowley. He said that the writer is writing a work which he puts his whole self into; he must be able to criticize himself and his work. "This requires intensity and if it is lacking, the critical facuity is in abeyance," he said.

Regarding the "verve" which the works of F. Scott Fitzgerald carry, Crowley said "I'm not sure that drinking was some force to get them (such authors) in the mood to say something which you would not ordinarily say." He cited Hart Crane as another one of the authors who needed a stimulus to get him in the mood for writing.

Two Functions

"The whole business of writing is double," said Cowley. "There might be one per cent inspiration and ninety per cent calculation, but in managing themselves—being their own creators—writers always have the function of getting that one per cent of inspiration to the critical faculty.

"Unconscious writing is good," he said, "But there is another side which is communication."

Cowley's address tonight in Hill Hall, is entitled "Art, Artists, and Morality." He said part of his talk will deal with censorship.

Within the next year, Cowley plans to publish a collection of essays on the authors of the 20's whom he knew. His autobiographical book, "Exile's Return," published in 1934 and revised in 1951, deals with that period and of the men and movements of the times. Included in the book are his meetings with Ezra Pound, Ernest Hemingway, James Joyce, John Dos Passos, E. E. Cummings and others.

Denied Human Rights

BONN (UPI)—West Germany today charged the Soviet Union and Hungary's Communist regime with denying the Hungarian people those rights the Communists themselves demand for young African and Asian nations.

In a statement marking the fifth anniversary of the Hungarian uprisingi the Bonn government said the Hungarian people "rose against thteir Soviet oppressor . . . and demanded respect of human rights."

Compulsory Meeting Tonight For Fall Election Candidates

A compulsory meeting of all fall election candidates is scheduled for 7 o'clock tonight in Howell Hall. Also obligated to attend the meeting are party chairmen or their representatives, according to Dave Buxton, chairman of the Elections Board.

In addition, Buxton said candidates planning to run as independents—and those who have not already received a Bi-Partisan Selections Board endorsement for the Men's or Women's Council—must present a petition signed by 25 qualified voters and themselves at the meeting. No petitions can be accepted after today, he said.

Candidates who fail to attend the meeting without the permission of the Chairman of the Elections Board will be declared ineligible. Reinstatement can be made, however, by contacting the chairman within 48 hours and paying a $5 fine.

Offices Include:

Offices to be filled in the Nov. 7 campus-wide elections include those of president, vice-president, secretary treasurer and social chairman of the freshmen sophomore and junior classes.

Also vacant are two seats each in Men's Judicial District I, II and III; and three seats in District IV. Two seats in Women's Judicial District I and four seats in District III also are open.

All students with a "C" average are eligible to run. Candidates for Men's and Women's Councils must be enrolled at UNC for the length of their terms in office.

Questions concerning campaign procedures should be directed to Buxton at the Sigma Nu House or the SG office in GM.

Duke Student Appeals Verdict

A Duke divinty student who refused to leave the Negro section of the Chapel Hill bus station grill has appealed a trespass conviction from Recorders Court here.

The attorney for defendant Edward Opton, 21, said the state's trespass statute was being unconstitutionally applied in the verdict of Judge William S. Stewart. Opton was fined court costs at the end of the two and one-half hour trial early Tuesday afternoon.

Asked To Leave

Testimony brought out in the case showed that Opton drove his car here and ordered a cup of coffee in the Negro section of the bus station grill. Leo Eliadis, lessee of the property, told the court he directed Opton to leave after one of his waitresses had served the coffee "because the white customers were getting angry."

Local police called to the scene arrested Opton after Eliadis, in their presence, again asked him to leave and he refused to do so, citing the interstate commerce status of the bus station property.

Judge Stewart ruled that the state statute on trespass was properly applied in the case. Opton's bond, signed by the Rev. Charles M. Jones of Chapel Hill, was increased from $50 to $100 on appeal.

Socialism

One of the interesting things about Monday night's HUAC debate between Fulton Lewis, III, and Mike Harrington, was the variety of reactions to Harrington's political affiliation. There is a tendency to view socialists, doctrinaire liberals and others of leftist bent as propagandists with an ulterior motive. Even Lewis, who should be above such devices, suggested that Harrington's motive in opposing HUAC was to divert attention from the Socialist movement.

To begin with, no one, not even Mike Harrington, with his obvious talent for prompting thoughts on other issues, is able to get peoples' minds off the "threat of creeping Socialism."

This fear, nurtured in part by the Conservative movement, is so widespread that everything from federal aid to education to public relief programs have been condemned on the grounds that they are "socialistic."

The moment this tag is affixed to a program, the program is immediately suspect. To us, it is an abuse of reason to throw an idea out the window merely because it is tagged "socialistic," and ours is a basically capitalistic system.

Federal aid to education, Social Security and other programs and reforms not based directly on the capitalist system, are not necessarily at odds with that system and often work to bolster it.

Welfare and federal aid programs are more than an attempt to fulfill this Nation's responsibility "to feed the hungry," "clothe the naked" and "educate the masses," they are long range investments in the capitalist system.

Emotional responses to words like "socialism" never succeed in doing anything except obscuring the issue. The fact that Mike Harrington is a Socialist has nothing to do with the truth of his statements, nor with the logic of his argument.

The American people tend to cast aside any new or unusual idea with a sweeping generality such as "that's un-American," or "that's socialism."

There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that says we must adhere to strict economic principles, nor is there any reason to believe that some Socialistic principles cannot exist in, and bolster, a basically capitalistic economy.

There is no denying that democracy and capitalism are highly compatible. However, it does not follow that democracy and socialism are incompatible.

While we do not advocate basic socialism, we do feel that approaching it with fear and suspicion does no service either to democracy or to capitalism.

Rough Year For UN

A headline over an editorial in a North Carolina newspaper said that this has been a bad year for the United Nations.

Has it?

It is true that there has been almost a year full of trouble in the Congo, and the United Nations has been right in the middle of the trouble. But it is just as true that the Congo has not flared into an East-West war, and if the UN hadn't been so active that there would have been such war.

It is true that Russia has pretty well thumbed her nose at the UN all year, and that the West and Russia are now engaged in a tug of war over a successor to the late Dag Hammarskjold. But it is just as true that the East and the West are still at peace, and there might not have been such peace if there had been no UN.

It is true that Russia is testing one nuclear bomb right after another. It is true that such testing isn't good for mankind anywhere, not even in Russia. But the bombs are still being exploded in tests, and not in actual warfare.

All this is to say that this has been a tough year for the UN, but it hasn't been a bad year. No year in which the world continues at peace for another 365 days can be a bad year in these days and times. No organization which has had such a major role in fact, in keeping the peace for 365 days can have a bad year.

There will be no bad year for the United Nations unless there should come a year when there is world war again, or when the UN is so torn that it is killed. There must be rough years for the UN, must be such roughness each and every year for if there were not such roughness there would be no need for the UN.

This is United Nations Week, so designated by Governors and Mayors and the other officials who designate such special weeks. If this special week has any benefit, it could come from the fact that the United Nations has not had a bad year, and that it will never have a bad year as long as it is living and functioning and as long as there is peace in the world, even a shaky sort of peace.

'Focus Of Ghastly Era—Discrimination'

A new time, horrible and unbelievable, has come in the history of the United States. The focus of this ghastly era is Discrimination. No, don't make a snide comment that this is an old story, for the objects of this vile practice are Americans.

Here and now, in the Twentieth Century, the most enlightened of times, Americans are being discriminated against in deference to foreigners. Children in deference to adults. An arbitrary ranking system has been set up to judge people, to see if they are fit to attend movies.

My God, the heart and mind of man cry out against the stupidity of his fellows, against the outrage being perpetrated, the defiling of the Dignity of man.

TWO RECENT instances in our locale bring to sharp clarity the hypocrisy that runs rampant in our land today. A woman, a student wife, wished to enter a local theater with her children. This is certainly a normal event. She was admitted, but her children weren't allowed to enter. Why? Would they spread subversive sentiments, or corrupt the morals of the Youth in the audience?

Or is it because these youngsters, not even school-age, were Negroes? Perhaps that fact shouldn't be mentioned, so that the proprietors may be saved from embarrassment. Well then, relax. Resume your march backwards. Disregard human Dignity, and all the progress made in twenty centuries of Christian life can be tossed to the proverbial winds.

The other instance of which I speak is that of the refusal of seating at a local theater to a gentleman because he was an American. Far-fetched? I'm afraid not. In these troubled times, almost any irrational move can be expected, although I personally was shocked to find that a man was refused service because he was a taxpaying, voting American citizen.

AT FIRST, it is true, he was allowed to enter the "hallowed halls of the cinema," only because he was thought to be a foreigner. One point heretofore left unmentioned is that this man is a Negro. Apparently, in the search of world peace and international diplomacy, the powers-that-be of the theater feel that a foreign Negro is more acceptable than an American.

These people, the ones who have the final say on these matters, are guilty of one of the most heinous crimes against mankind. No, it isn't mass murder, genocide, the construction of concentration camps, or the more publicized methods of degrading man. It is more subtle, an insidious campaign to humiliate, to make a group of humans feel inferior.

Once Jews were the objects of this malicious attack. The scene has shifted, the players have changed, but the plot is the same. Man has achieved a certain Dignity through his ability to constantly stride ahead through any troubles or temporary defeats. This attempt by one group to destroy the Dignity of another, merely goes to destroy the efforts of eons, the Dignity that should be inherent to mankind.

"We Have A Few Primitive Conditions Here, Too"

DTH FORUM

For years Conservatives have sought to alert the nation to the dangers and evils of Communism. Vociferous Liberals have challenged this effort at every turn.

THE LATEST attack involved semantics. According to Senator Fulbright, Conservatives in the armed forces had neglected to consult the dictionary when preparing speeches. Senator Fulbright charged that "anyone equating social legislation with Socialism and the latter with Communism was a right-wing radical." Obviously, these radicals had to be stopped. Liberal wheels began to turn; pressure was exerted. The result was that speeches made by members of the armed forces were to be approved by censors and offensive phrases were to be delted.

This "muzzling" of the military (long a conservative group) brought joy to the Liberal camp. "Never again," said the Liberals, "will we have to listen to such offensive remarks."

WHAT WERE the phrases that so aroused the Liberals' collective (how else?) wrath? Particularly appalling was any reference to the following:

"World domination by the Communist Conspiracy."

"The World-wide threat of international Communism"

"Soviet infiltration throughout the world"

"The unchanging goal of international Communism"

"Soviet determination to destroy our way of life."

Moreover, the use of the terms "Socialism" and "Communism" in the same speech is now prohibited.

BUT FOR a "right-wing radical" the "muzzling" would have gone unnoticed. I, for one, feel indebted to Senator Strom Thurmond — the "right-wing radical" who asked why such statements were not permitted. Senator Thurmond asked, "What are we doing here appropriating billions to spend in 101 foreign countries if not to fight world domination by the Communists?" Senator Thurmond also stated that "Civilian control of the military never meant that officers were to be political puppets of the man in the White House."

Semantics got us into this. The logic used by the Liberals would justify this approach: "To hold that social legislation is never socialistic, that Communism is not Socialism, Socialism not Communism, makes one a 'left-wing radical.'" Could this be?

Student Union—One Of Badly Needed Items

Amid loosely-thrown cliches, such as "Don't let North Carolina turn backward now," "stay in the forefront of progress," and "vote FOR North Carolina," the voters of the state will go to the polls Nov. 7 and approve most, if not all, of the ten items in the bond issue.

The item which directly effects every student on campus is, of course, the $31 million education portion of the issue. UNC's part of that item is $5.9 million, which includes funds for a new cafeteria-service building out in the woods to service the number of long-distance commuters in Craige and Ehringhaus . . . $2 million for "stage one" of the Health Center . . . money for building renovations and additions . . . and $1.6 million for UNC's long-awaited and very much needed student union-undergraduate library.

THE BOND issue has met very little organized opposition from the anti-spenders. Even the state Republican party and the Young Republicans on campus have compromised with Sin and approved the spending of money—although not too rashly, mind you. The GOPs approve of six of the ten items; included in the six is the educational item.

Possibly more surprising, the conservative campus University Party has announced support of the issue and has exerted some considerable effort in the issue's behalf. The Student Party—with President Bill Harriss as chairman of the statewide student group backing the issue, and ex-SPers Tom Lambeth and Joel Fleischman in Raleigh working for its passage—has been behind the issue for some time.

THE STUDENT union is one of the most badly needed items in the educational area. Graham Memorial has been recognized as inadequate for many years; in fact, ever since it was built, but there has never been enough effort exerted to get the money for a new union out of the legislators in Raleigh, or the state voters.

In 1960, however, things were different. The union was given top-priority. President Friday and Chancellor Aycock stressed the importance of the union-library. Both emphasized that they had favored such a move for years and had not been pushed into their position by play-happy students.

When the educational part of the bond issue is passed on Nov. 7, as it probably will be, Carolina will finally have a student center worthy of the citizens it has produced.

A new and larger student union with its attendant larger responsibilities for student government leaders and student journalists, as well, will be a vital part of the UNC of the future.

Rumblings In Europe This Morning

There are rumblings in Europe this morning. The most obvious ones come from the Soviet bloc, with the continued repression of the satellites, the occasional rifle fire in Berlin, and Khrushchev's sporadic tirades. But equally significant, and perhaps more so in the long run, are the faint stirrings in the west. The nations of western Europe, with free Germany the uncontested leader, are apparently merging into a power bloc of incredible potency. Thoughtful observers see this area as a sleeping colossus just beginning to awaken.

From Russia's viewpoint this could be worse, for Germany, the prime mover, is divided, and Moscow plans to keep it so. Patriotic Germans still have a burning thirst for unity—and nothing chills blood faster in the Kremlin. The sealing of East Germany and the increased isolation of West Berlin are calculated to obviate this danger. As long as free travel between East and West was possible, and especially while refugees poured out of the Russian zone, the Germans saw faint prospects of unification. Now that the escape routes have been walled in, these chances are virtually dead.

IN 1945 GERMANY, under government of the Allied Control Council, was divided into four occupation zones—French, British, American, and Russian—as was also Berlin. But as the months passed and Russia obstructed all reunification plans, the three western zones of Germany drew closer together. Finally on May 31, 1948, the United States, Britain, and France agreed to set up a corporate state of West Germany, merging their zones into one centralized unit. Stalin then seized upon a measure his opponents had been dreading: the attempted ouster of the free Berlin garrison.

The Berlin Blockade clamped down on June 19, 1948, halting all rail and truck shipments into the onetime capital. But almost at once the airlift began, a costly, determined venture, punctuated by terrible crashes. During the blockade, despite all that the transports could do, the average West Berliner lost fifteen pounds, but the people tightened their belts and took it. On May 12, 1949, Russia lifted the blockade, and that summer the West German Republic elected its first Bundestag, with Konrad Adenauer serving as chancellor.

MEANWHILE, WEST Germany's industrial and economic recovery proceeded with dizzying haste. East Germany did well by Red satellite standards, but the phenomenal resurgence of the West far eclipsed it, and the better conditions across the border strongly beckoned to Easterners. During the period of 1950-60 an average of 218,000 people a year fled the workers' paradise. The exodus reached its peak in 1953, when East Berlin riots broke out and Russian tanks moved in to crush them. It slacked off in the coming years and low tide came in 1959. Strangely, this followed the crisis of 1958-59, when Khrushchev, once again screeching that his patience was exhausted, gave the Allies a six-month ultimatum to leave Berlin, and then slowly backtracked.

But this year the refugee problem got way out of hand. By early August it exploded to a real stampede, with 2,000 fugitives per day swamping the Marienfelde reception center in West Berlin. On August 13 Premier Walter Ulbricht, the jackal of eastern Europe, closed the escape routes, which are now so heavily blocked off that it would take an armored attack to break through. However the future of Berlin shapes up, we can feel certain that Germany will be ever more sharply divided in the months ahead.

BUT—DOES WEST Germany need the East? The two powers certainly are not comparable in strength or performance. The German Federal Republic is more than twice as large as the East (94,634 sq. miles to 41,700); it has about three times as many people (52 million, not counting West Berlin, to 17 million); and the great bulk of German industry lies in the West. The East is so much weaker, so hopelessly far behind, that unity at this point would bring a sudden dip in the German industrial boom. Unity is ruled out; West Germany must do her job without it.

This job is simply to mold western Europe into a springy Goliath, powerful enough to make the Soviet shrink back in fear. Unable to reunite their divided country, the Germans will take the logical alternative and unite with Europe instead. Signs of this movement have been with us for several years. They first became sharply apparent on January 1, 1958, when the European Common Market was inaugurated by West Germany, France, Italy, Holland Belgium and Luxembourg. Britain, faced with economic disaster, is now trying valiantly to join up with Euromart. Other nations will follow, and by 1970 the Common Market will probably give rise to a powerful European combine, in which Germany, for a near-certainty, will swing the most weight.

LAST SUMMER an American journalist, Herbert W. Armstrong, visited the Common Market headquarters in Brussels, Belgium. A guide, pointing to the glass-and-concrete building, termed it "the new capital of Europe." Most onlookers seem to agree that political integration is indeed the next step. Militarism, spurred by the fear of Russia, presumably will follow. And out of this will come a new world power center, a European Combine capable of taking on either Russia or the United States, depending on which one seems the logical enemy. For the Combine's main force will be Germany; and Germany has always been venturesome.

STRONTIUM GENERATOR

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Atomic Energy Commission turned over to the Navy uesday a small generator fueled by radioactive strontium-90 which will power an antarctic snow starting early next year.

The generator produces 10 watts pf power and will operate untended for about two years. It will replace batteries which would have to be changed every few months.

UNREAL VOTE GETTER

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (UPI)—Paul Grant wasn't elected freshman class treasurer at Eau Claire State College because he got only 38 per cent of the vote.

And it was just as well, too. There is no Paul Grant at Eau Claire State. The political science department put the fictitious name on the ballot to test student voting habits.

FAVORED NOBEL CANDIDATE

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Literary circles said today that Yugoslav author Ivo Andric is the favorite for the 1961 Nobel prize for literature scheduled to be awarded Thursday.

Andric, 69, an ex-diplomat, is best known for his epic about Yugoslavia, "The Bridge Over the River Drina."

World News

Red's 24th Shot

WASHINGTON—Russia Wednesday set off the 24th announced shot in the nuclear test series it resumed Sept. 1.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the blast was near the Arctic island of Novaya Zemlya and "was in the intermediate to high yield range, probably less than a megaton, one million tons of TNT."

U. S. Plans Shot

WASHINGTON — President Kennedy announced Wednesday that the United States soon will stage the world's first nuclear explosion aimed at harnessing the atom's violence for peaceful purposes.

He invited all members of the United Nations, including Russia, to observe the experiment, scheduled for about 60 days hence.

GETS LINCOLN TELEGRAMS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy has received copies of four telegrams sent to President Abraham Lincoln 100 years ago to mak the opening of the first transcontinental telegraph line.

The messages, presented to Kennedy Tuesday by Western Union Telegraph Co., were dated Oct. 24, 1861. They assured Lincoln of the loyalty of Western states in preserving the Union, then torn by Civil War.

"The Twist" Arrives

LONDON (UPI)—The new American dance craze called "The Twist" which has caught on in Paris, has now arrived in London, according to Daily Express columnist William Hickey.

The columnist credited American entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., who was recently here for a theatrical act, with introducing the new dance to England.

Security Council

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Russia announced in the Security Council Wednesday that it will not prevent Mauritania from becoming a United Nations member.

Army On Alert

BERLIN—The U. S. Army placed its 6,500-man Berlin garrison on combat alert for nearly six hours Wednesday and moved tanks to the East-West border as the Communists continued harassing Allied civilian traffic entering East Berlin.

Major Gen. Albert H. Watson II, the American commandant, protested to Soviet commandant Col. A. V. Solovyev but apparently failed to get satisfaction in an 80-minute conference. Wednesday night he said he was informing Washington "on a most urgent basis" of the growing crisis.

Gromyko Appeals

MOSCOW—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko appealed strongly Wednesday for negotiations between President Kennedy and Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev to improve Soviet American relations and prevent "a world catastrophe," it was disclosed.

He attacked West German "militarists" and "revenge seekers" and said if they threatened the Soviet Union or any of its Allies West Germany would be turned into a cemetery.

'Tres Excellent'

Lenoir Impresses Gourmet

By Leon Rooke

A world-famous gourmet may eat hash and like it—if the hash is good enough!

George W. Prillaman, manager of the student dining hall at the University of North Carolina, found that out recently when Edmond Klein, an epicurean of international repute, was invited by Dr. Ransom Taylor, of the UNC Dept. of Germanic Languages, to dine in the vastly over-crowded, noisy, huge confines of Lenoir Hall.

Klein, from Bordeaux, France, is considered one of the world's leading authorities on French cuisine.

Prillaman's menu, however, didn't call for hash that day.

But the stuffed pepper, stewed cabbage, and mashed potatoes, which, for forty cents, comprise "The Student Special," amounted to the same thing. The noted gourmet liked it. More than that, he liked the price. After concluding his meal he looked around as if to ask for more.

Loud Stir

Not even the loud stir and voices of several hundred hungry college students, the constant scrape and clatter of chairs and dishes, could dispel the Frenchman's enthusiasm.

"Tres excellent!" he said, complimenting Prillaman. Prillaman beamed.

Klein is in the U. S. to visit with his daughter who is married to Dr. Lawrence Mann, of UNC's Dept. of City and Regional Planning. Officially, he's here to test food served aboard American air-liners. He means to compare it with the cuisine of the French Aviation industry to determine if the French are maintaining their alleged superiority, in the air, as well as on the ground.

Prillaman, when their lunch was done, took the distinguished culinary genius on a tour of the dining hall. Lenoir Hall is equipped to feed 15,000 daily. Klein remarked that the largest mass-producing cafeteria in Europe, located at an automobile factory, produces no more than 3,500 meals a day.

Note to a Chick-a-biddy

Perhaps I shouldn't give away the secret us men have guarded for so long . . . Perhaps I shouldn't help you in your pursuit of you-know-who . . . But if you'll promise to read this in the privacy of your dormitory, and never tell a soul who let the cat out of the bag,—well . . .

The plain truth is that when it gets along toward the end of the month, even the best of us men begins to long for next month's allowance. Much as we'd love to —for your charms are as those of the Pied Piper combined with Brigitte what-you-may-call-her—we just can't afford to take you carousing.

So what? So the smart chick suggests a browse in the warm, friendly old Intimate . . . The quality of mercy and all that . . . It's really fun, and now and then the discovery that those endearing young charms included a brain has shocked a chap into asking questions that led—well, frankly, we were so embarrassed we never did ask just where they led.

HARRY W. LLOYD

THE SPORTS Tabloyd

Football prognosticators have had some exasperating weekends recently. There haven't been any earth-shaking upsets made, just a lot of little ones that can eat up a good percentag in a hurry. But we don't worry about percentage, do we? Every football follower likes to speculate on the scores of various games. And writers are football followers too.

Last week we guessed correctly on the outcomes of 19 games, and missed 8—including three ACC games. But as all guessers, we look for that perfect week every time we predict. So here are our forecasts for this Saturday:

Duke 20, N. C. State 7. Both of these teams have been somewhat disappointing in late games. The Wolfpack won a 7-0 contest from Wake Forest—but before the season began, who would have guessed that the Deacons could hold State to a one touchdown win? Duke has two consecutive losses, and now sideliners are saying that the Blue Devils may have lost more than slowness when they gave up their big line. Still, the Devil forwards are better equipped than is the Wolfpack line, and we will give the nod to Duke for that reason.

Wake Forest 27, Virginia 19. With the conference's leading ground gainer, Allan White, and some of the best ends in the league, the Deacons are strong at some vital spots. But they lack balance enough to put together a consistent game for 60 minutes. Virginia, rebuilding, shows promise. Our guess goes to Wake.

Maryland 29, South Carolina 6. The Terrapins, a team with a lot of passing potential, has chosen not to use it in favor of a running game. The Gamecocks are a top notch pass defense club, if nothing else. If the weather is right, end Gary Collins may find a lot of footballs headed his way and a lot of Birds crawling over his back. We say that the Terps will take this one without too much trouble.

Outside the ACC—

Baylor 20, Texas A&M 13. The Big Bull (Ronnie) will elude the Cowpokes.

Alabama 49, Houson 6. After a smashing win over Tennessee, the Tide looks ready for all comers. They have a good opportunity to be one of the few undefeated teams in the country this season.

Penn State 13, California 7. The Nittany Lions have recovered.

Louisiana State 21, Florida 7. The Bad Bengals (at UNC next week) have just a little bit extra for the Gators.

Georgia 20, Kentucky 17. Dog and Cat at it again.

Georgia Tech 34, Tulane 7. The Yellow Jackets don't offer much relief ater a losing bout with Mississippi.

Syracuse 13, Holy Cros 7. Orangement having their troubles, but should be abel to snap back against the Crusaders.

Southern California 21, Illinois 13. The Trojans roll on.

Michigan State 34, Indiana 14. Good testt for top team.

Iowa 28, Purdue 13. Cornhuskers are a national power.

Michigan 20, Minnesota 7. Wolverines are a bit stronger, but this one is the matchup of the week in national circles.

Missouri 19, Nebraska 13. The Missouri boys show them how.

Notre Dame 26, Northwestern 7. The Irish need not be embarrassed.

Ohio State 31, Wisconsin 14. The Buckeyes won't settle for less.

Kansas 12, Oklahoma State 0. The Jayhawkers on the prowl again.

Navy 19, Pitt 14. The big battle of the East this week.

Texas 28, Rice 14. The Longhorns eat grain this week.

Texas Tech 10, SMU 0. Tech is too fast for the Mustangs.

Tennessee 28, Chattanooga 0. The Volunteers don't have to be asked whether they want this one.

Army 27, West Virginia 12. Mountaineers raise the white flag.

Virginia Military 14, William & Mary 7. Good week for Cadets.

Halfback Beck May Miss Game With Knee Injury

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Sports Editor

North Carolina's football team leaves this morning by plane bound for Miami Beach. Their vacation is not to be a rest from tough games, just from ACC games, with annual opponent Miami.

The Orange Bowl encounter, which begins Friday night at 8:15, is the first non-conference game for the Tar Heels, who stand tied for the first place spot with a 3-1 record.

The Hurricanes, who are independent of any conference, are 3-3 record so far this season. They have wins over Kentucky and Penn State, and loses to Pittsburgh, Navy, and olorado.

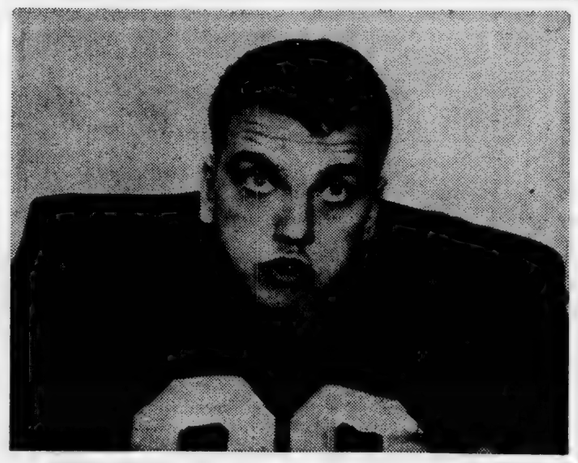
North Carolina, which is now being considered as a top threat for league honors, will be at full strength with the exception of halfback Lenny Beck. Beck, who injured his knee against Maryland, will probably be unable to play. Jim Shumate, who was out with an injury last week, should be back in shape.

Coach Jim Hickey had praise for one of his sophomore starters this week. The man receiving the laurels was tackle Vic Esposito, the only true sophomore on the first unit. Esposito stood out in his defensive work of rushing South Carolina passers, and will be counted on this week for heavy duty against the Hurricane throwers.

Monogram Initiates

The UNC Monogram Club will initiate all athletes who won letters last spring at their regular meeting tonight at 7:30 in the club room in Woollen Gym.

Vice-President Bob Bilbro has announced that all persons may receive their pass keys to the room at the meeting. He said that the meeting would be a short one, and urged all Monogram Club members to attend.



Carolina's Hard-Hitting Guard Jerry Cabe

Wrestlers To Begin Workouts For Season On November 1

The candidates for the 1961-62 wrestling team will meet in their new practice room in Woollen Gym on Wednesday, November 1. The meeting will commence at 4:00 promptly and will be followed immediately by the first official practice session. All Freshman who are interested in the sport have also been asked to come at that time wearing their P. E. gear. Returning wrestlers can draw their equipment at the beginning of the week. "Everything is supplied but guts," says Coach Barnes.

Although many strongmen from last year's team are returning there will be possibilities of new names to appear on this year's first team varsity. Many positions will be sought by several intent men. The team will need depth this year with a full twelve meet schedule and its heaviest schedule ever of five meets before Christmas vacation.

The season closes with the A.C.C. Tournament on the first and second of March.

A sign in the gym reads: "WRESTLE, the only sport adaptable to a fallout shelter" and goes on to remind athletes of the opening of practice on the first of November. Coach Barnes' yearly contribution to art continues to state the following prorequisites for the candidates: 1) an ability to adjure the use of tobacco and alcohol, 2) ability to run two miles without stopping and 3) attend practice faithfully.

Duke Is Next On Schedule For Once-Beaten Harriers

By Ed Dupree

Duke's unbeaten Blue Devils are next on the agenda for coach Dale Ronson's Tar Heel cross country team. The Tar Heels rolled up impressive victories over Clemson, Virginia, and N. C. State before bowing to Maryland last Saturday, 35-34.

South Carolina joins Carolina and Duke in a trianguler meet here next Wednesday which should decide the regular season winner in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Duke defeated Maryland earlier in the season and if the UNC runners could triumph over the Blue Dukes, the three teams would finish the season with one loss apiece. Neither of the remaining ACC members are a threat to the Terps, Blue Devils and Tar Heels.

Maryland's win over Carolina Saturday marked the second straight year the Heels had gone into a Maryland meet undefeated and came out with their first defeat. The Tar Heels rebounded in 1960 and emerged victorious in the ACC finals, which decides the conference champion.

With their hopes for an unbeaten season literally "washed away" Saturday, (The Carolina runners had to run in the rain and mud in their morning workout and the meet at College Park) Ranson's men can now set their sights on another ACC championship.

Although Duke is the main objective now, Ranson probably had the finals—and another shot at Maryland—in mind when he placed a meaningful notice on the team's dressing room bulletin board early this week.

The notice, a "coach to team" letter, was summed up by its opening sentence which read: "It is time we buckle down to get the job done."

Comeback Boy Joey Jay Wins NL Pitcher Of Year Award

NEW YORK (UPI)—Joey Jay, who made the best of it when he finally got the chance, was named the National League's pitcher of the year Wednesday by the United Press International's board of baseball experts.

The 26-year-old 21-game winner of the Cincinnati Reds—previously honored by the UPI board for making the major league comeback of the year—beat out Warren Spahn of the Milwaukee Braves, 19 votes to 16. The other member of the UPI's 36-man board cast his ballot for Johnny Podres of the Los Angeles Dodgers as pitcher of the year.

Jay, a 6-foot, 4-inch right-hander from Rock Fall, Conn., compiled a 21-10 record and a 3.27 earned run average in helping to pitch the Reds to their first pennant since 1940. He pitched in 54 games and 247 innings allowing 92 walks and striking out 157 batters. He had 14 complete games and four shutouts.

Jay climaxed his brilliant campaign by scoring the Reds' only victory over the New York Yankees in the World Series.

Jay signed to a $20,000 bonus contract by the Braves in 1953 but was never able to break into their starting rotation which has been dominated the last several years by Spahn, Lew Burdette and Bob Buhl. Jay did make an important contribution to the Braves' pennant victory in 1958 but in 1959 he dropped off to a 6-11 record and in 1960 he was only 9-8.

The inability to win consistently undoubtedly hampered Jay's pitching but that was no problem once he was acquired by the Reds in one of several winter deals that enabled General Manager Bill DeWitt to rehabilitate the sixth-place team of 1960.

"You're going to get plenty of chances with us," manager Fred Hutchinson told Jay. "Just keep pitching and you'll be all right."

3 Teams Move Nearer Finals In Mural Tag Championships

By John Montague

Monday was a big day for three teams in the intramural tag football scramble. The Alexander Playboys in the dorm division and Phi Kappa Sig and Chi Psi in the fraternity blue circuit all won important contests that afternoon, thus furthering the hopes of each in the race for the campus championship.

The Playboys were forced to play the second half of their quarter-final bout with Aycock over, because of a validated protest by Aycock. Alexander won it the first time, 14-13, and they won the replay by 13-6.

Bobby Cornwell's TD and Richard Rabb's extra point in the first half gave the Playboys a 7-0 advantage going into the replay. Monday's second-half match was a stand-off, Bobby Cox scoring a TD for Alexander and Benny Ward crossing the goal for Aycock.

The winning Playboys now advance to the semi-finals where they will encounter Grimes this afternoon at 4:45. In the other semi-final game, the Town Touts will meet the winner of today's quarter-final fight between the Joyner Jocks and the defending champion Manly Riverrats.

Phi Kappa Sig won itself a spot in the fraternity play-offs by handing KA its first loss of the season, 13-0. The win for the Phi Kappa Sig crew produced a three-way deadlock for first place in League VI between KA, ZBT and Phi Kappa Sig. The latter not only won the crucial game, but also won the drawing for second place and a sure tournament berth. KA and ZBT must meet each other tomorrow afternoon to battle it out for first place and the other play-off position.

John Gentry and John Tedesco scored touchdowns for Phi Kappa Sig and Wendell Brande added the extra point.

The overtime hassle between Chi Psi and PiKA saw the Chi Psi's winning it on yardage. The overtime was played Monday as a continuation of last week's 7-7 tie between the two teams. By winning, Chi Psi finished with a 3-0 record and first place in League IV. A PiKA victory would have meant a three-way tie for the top spot, involving Phi Delta, Chi Psi and PiKA. However, the loss meant elimination for PiKA as far as tournament places are concerned.

In other Blue Division games, Sigma Nu and DKE both completed unbeaten seasons, taking firsts in Leagues V and I respectively.

Phil King and Bob Wacker were TD-makers as Sigma Nu whitewashed Lambda Chi, 13-0. Tom Batchelor made the point-after.

Surry Roberts, John O'Bannon and Tommy Grudup notched T-D's, John Seago made a PAT, and Reggie Fountain and Lucius Burch registered safeties as DKE toppled Kappa Psi, 23-7.

THE TRUE AND HARROWING FACTS ABOUT RUSHING
It is well enough to sit in one's Morris chair and theorize about sorority rushing, but if one really wishes to know the facts, one must leave one's Morris chair and go out into the field. (My Morris chair, incidentally, was given to me by the Philip Morris Company, makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. They are great-hearted folk, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, as millions of you know who have enjoyed their excellent cigarettes. Only from bountiful souls could come such mildness, such flavor, such filters, such pleasure, as you will find in Marlboros! For those who prefer crushproof boxes, Marlboro is available in crushproof boxes. For those who prefer soft packs, Marlboro is available in soft packs. For those who prefer to buy their cigarettes in bulk, please contact Emmett R. Sigafoos, friendly manager of our factory in Richmond, Virginia.)
But I digress. I was saying that in order to know the true facts about sorority rushing, one must go into the field and investigate. Consequently, I went last week to the Indiana College of Spot Welding and Belles Lettres and interviewed several million coeds, among them a lovely lass named Gerund McKeever. (It is, incidentally, quite an interesting little story about how she came to be named Gerund. It seems that her father, Ralph T. McKeever, loved grammar better than anything in the world, and so he named all his children after parts of speech. In addition to Gerund, there were three girls named Preposition, Adverb, and Pronoun, and one boy named Dative Case. The girls seemed not to be unduly depressed by their names, but Dative Case, alas, grew steadily more morose and was finally found one night dangling from a participle. After this tragic event, the father abandoned his practice of grammatical nomenclature, and whatever children were subsequently born to him—eight in all—were named Everett.)

They pledged more girls than they had room for...
But I digress. I was interviewing a lovely coed named Gerund McKeever. "Gerund," I said, "were you rushed by a sorority?"
"Yes, mister," she said, "I was rushed by a sorority."
"Did they give you a high-pressure pitch?" I asked. "Did they use the hard sell?"
"No, mister," she replied. "It was all done with quiet dignity. They simply talked to me about the chapter and the girls for about three minutes and then I pledged."
"My goodness!" I said. "Three minutes is not very long for a sales talk!"
"It is when they are holding you under water, mister," said Gerund.
"Well, Gerund," I said, "how do you like the house?"
"I like the house fine, mister," she replied. "But I don't live there. Unfortunately, they pledged more girls than they have room for, so they are sleeping some of us in the bell tower."
"Isn't that rather noisy?" I said.
"Only on the quarter-hour," said Gerund.
"Well, Gerund," I said, "it has certainly been a pleasure talking to you," I said.
"Likewise, mister," she said, and with many a laugh and cheer we went our separate ways—she to the campanile, I to the Morris chair.

Plans Set For Second Annual Morehead Day

Preparations are now underway for the annual celebration of John Motley Morehead Day, established by the Student Government two years ago.

In honor of one of Carolina's most distinguished alumni, the student legislature passed a bill on March 3, 1960 proclaiming November 3rd of each year as John Motley Morehead Day. Although this special commemoration was first inaugurated last fall, it has attracted local, state, and national attention.

In cooperation with WUNC the committee is planning a special television program which will include such guests as Chancellor Aycock, Student Government President Bill Harriss, the Men's Glee Club, and Morehead scholars from various campus activities.

Publicity for Morehead Day will involve several phases of activity. With the assistance of Pete Ivey in the News Bureau, the drafting committee is compiling an information sheet to be distributed to local, state, and nation-wide newspapers. This publicity form is to include Morehead's donations to the University to date and a detailed sketch of "Uncle Mot's" life.

In addition to state and national publicity, committee chairman Robin Britt has stressed the importance of bringing John Motley Morehead Day to the attention of the entire Carolina campus.

In this connection a group has been organized to set up appropriate displays in the showcases of the Wilson Library and Y-Court, distribute Morehead Day posters, and fly a banner proclaiming this special celebration.

ASKS BATTLES END

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI)—The managing editor of Ave Maria, a national Roman Catholic weekly, called today for an end to the "stupid battle" between liberals and conservatives within the Church. Donald J. Thorman wrote in the current issue of the weekly published by the Holy Cross Fathers that there is always room for healthy differences of opinion within the church. But he decried "the irresponsible manner in which the controversy is being carried out."

Petite Play Scene:

Free 'Rainmaker' Starts Tonight

The Petite Dramatique "Rainmaker" production will be presented tonight, Saturday and Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

The play, written by N. Richard Nash, stars Betty Oliver as Lizzy, and George Gray III as Starbuck.

A romantic comedy, the play is about a Midwestern ranch family stricken by drought with the problem of marrying off their rather homely daughter, when Starbuck, a dashing con-man comes along. Starbuck, a rainmaker, cons the family out of $100 on a pretext of bringing rain. He later has an affair with Lizzy, their daughter.

Kermit Ewing, director, said, "Dress rehearsal went fairly well. The play should be in good form."

"The cast has developed their characters very well and are ready to give an outstanding performance for tonight's opening."

The "Rainmaker" features lots of action and emotional extremes. There are fight scenes, a love scene and humor with emotions ranging from tender fatherly love to emotional outbursts from each of the characters.

For the first-nighters there will be a reception in the main lounge at GM for the audience and cast.

The Petite Dramatique is sponsored through a committee from Graham Memorial. Its plays are exclusively student directed. Their next production will be "The Marriage Go-Round."

Humphrey's Sister Hits 'Troika' Plan

"Can the UN meet today's challenge?" was posed by Mrs. Frances Humphrey Howard in a speech Thursday night in Howell Hall.

The sister of Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Mrs. Howard taught a sociology course here last year and is currently consultant to the International Co operation Administration and the Peace Corps. She gave this account:

The Russian-sought troika to replace the secretary-general of the UN and provide three way administration of the UN has not been given up. This system would paralyze UN operation as the Russians would like to do, she noted.

She predicted admission of Red China to the UN despite the veto of the US whose position then would be "We couldn't prevent it." "A new creature coming into the UN" she termed Red China and said the U.S. hasn't seen anything yet.

Some U.S. groups seek to abolish the UN she observed and pose another serious threat to it.

The UN is the greatest place to mold a fluid public opinion, she said, noting it has the communication and know-how to assert itself. It can be what we are since we have lost the confidence to do this, she noted.

"The U.S. is big enough to wear long pants and appear poised and mature," she asserted in defining the role of the U.S. in the UN.

She sought a stop to the U.S. method of "dashing" about the world trying to find out what foreign aid the Russians are giving, and then administering U.S. aid in light of ths knowledge.

Agriculture

Evolving countries need a knowledge of modern agriculture methods as well as technical know-how. She advocated sending labor and agricultural attaches to agrarian-based countries in hopes they would identify with institutions of western countries and western conduct.

The U.S. knows so much about every little country but to use this knowledge is the problem, she noted. The world is over-populated with American advisors and lacks Americans who hear and teach.

"In South America we have only a few years to come up with a means of applying our knowledge or it will be too late for the U.S. to determine the government desired in this hemisphere."

ADDRESSES CONVENTION

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — E. W. Scripps II, president of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity, called on all news media Thursday to maintain freedom and responsibility as a means of guaranteeing liberty for Americans. Scripps, addressing the opening session of the organization's national convention, said, "A free and responsible press, and I include all forms of media, is the greatest guarantee the American people can have for the protection of their liberty."

Sophomore Candidate Would End Own Office If Elected; Calls Class Posts 'Pointless'

"If I am elected President of the sophomore class, I will attempt to abolish the office of sophomore class president," said Jeff Bayer last night in announcing his candidacy for the post.

Bayer, a member of last year's Freshman Cabinet, said UNC class officers under the present system were "powerless and therefore pointless." He will run on an independent ticket.

Attacking class offices as "just a good way of getting your picture in the Yack," Bayer said he would attempt to have a bill introduced in the student legislature abolishing class officers.

Bayer is a pre-medical student from Claremont, N. H.

"I feel there is a certain need for class officers, but they are ludicrous under the present system. Furthermore, I don't think any constructive revision of the system will be carried out without first dramatizing the point."

He would "dramatize the point" by trying to abolish class officers entirely. "This will be an effective means of putting on the pressure for a final revision of the system."

Final Revision

The final revision, he said, should include two provisions: "First, giving the officers some money to work with, and second, setting up some specific constitutional functions for the officers."

"I am not against class officers as such, but I think they have no meaning at present. I want to give them some meaning."

Bayer also said he would attempt to eliminate the class debt of "over $100" before taking action on his proposed abolition of the class officers.

Harriss Asks Volunteers In Campus Chest

Student Body President Bill Harriss commented on the Campus Chest yesterday:

"Volunteers are needed to fill out committees of the Campus Chest to their full working capacity. For a campus with 4 males to every female an interesting situation has arisen in which more men are needed for committee work.

"Work on the Campus Chest in the past has been exciting and it is one of the most worthwhile enterprises on our campus.

"While there is much fun and excitement involved, there are also the excellent services provided by the money earned. Support of the Goettingen Exchange Scholarship Program has been one of their many fine projects.

"People (especially men) who like exciting, worthwhile projects are encouraged to see Charles Shelton or Jeanne McDougal."

Infirmary

Sudents in the Infirmary yesterday were Mrs. Linda Little, Eun Kim, Dorene Acker, William Kellem, Anthony Miller, Charles Hassell, Claude Pryor, John Pleasants, John Harrison, Robert Brooks, David Williams, William Kohn, Howard Watkins, Patricia Moore, James Speight, Philip Dunn, and Henry Anderson.

Candidates

Candidates running for Honor Council seats in the fall election must meet with the Bi-partisan Selection Board between 1 and 6 p.m. today in GM's Grail Room.

George Campbell, chairman of the Board, said this was the only day meetings would be held. A list of appointments available with the Board will be posted on the Grail Room door all day for candidates to sign.

Candidates not seeking Bi-partisan Board endorsement must submit a petition signed by 25 qualified voters to Dave Buxton of the Elections Board by 6 p.m.

Campbell urged "all interested and qualified students" to meet with the Bi-partisan Board and run for Honor Council posts.

DIRECTORIES

Student Directories are now on sale at 75c apiece in the YMCA building and at GM information desk.

Party Slates Now Completed For Class Officers' Contest

Craver, Emery And Spearman Head UP Slate

Jimmy Weeks, SP

Bill Criswell, UP

Winding up a two-day convention, 765 UP delegates Wednesday night nominated Brooks Emery of New Orleans, La., for Sophomore class president. Joe Craver, Shelby, Junior class presidential candidate, and Bob Spearman, Chapel Hill, Freshman class presidential candidate, were nominated Tuesday night.

Other Junior class candidates nominated Wednesday night were: Gaston Caperton, Charleston, W. Va., vice-president; Betty McDonald, Salem, Va., secretary; Bob Reardon, Langdon, Ala., treasurer and Van Oatts, Dublin, Ga., social chairman.

Candidates for Sophomore class offices nominated Wednesday night were: Fuller Honeycutt, Raleigh, vice-president; Gay Williard, Yadkinville, N. C., secretary; Bill King, Greensboro, treasurer and Charlotte Winstead, Roxboro, N. C., social chairman.

Freshman Nominees

Freshman class candidates nominated Tuesday night were: Sammy Thompson, Wilson, vice-president; Johnsye Massenburg, Raleigh, secretary; Dick Flemming, Durham, treasurer and Jane Hanson, Jacksonville, Fla., social chairman.

Phil Smith, a sophomore from Winston-Salem, was selected as UP party treasurer Tuesday night.

The UP acepted by acclamation its 1961-62 party platform which includes extending the curfew hours for coeds from 1 a.m. to 2 a.m. on important weekends and investigating the Entertainment Committee.

Bill Criswell, UP chairman, said the UP feels the arrangements for the Four Aces were not handled right as evidenced by the large difference between the cost and the ticket sales.

The UP also intends to investigate the Student-Faculty report according to Criswell, which the party feels does not give the true student viewpoint.

The UP will continue to support the Nov. 7 bond issue. Criswell said the party's project to furnish stationary and stamps for students to write home urging relatives to vote for the bond issue was most successful.

The improvement of dormitory social life and school spirit will be another major UP objective this year. The UP would like to see several big campus-wide social affairs. It wants to liven up sports events with novelties like confettii and other gimicks to increase spectator support and participation.

Criswell stressed that "We feel this platform is realistic in that these are all projects which can be accomplished by class officers, not just broad, sweeping generalizations."

SP Nominees Stress Bonds For Platform

A committee headed by the Student Party's three class presidential candidates has drafted a fall elections platform.

"1. We actively support the proposed bond issue through participation in the torch marathon. The SP candidates shall not only solicit volunteers, but take part themselves.

"2. We believe that there has been a marked decline in participation in classwide entertainment. We believe that class officers should assume, without reservation, the responsibility for the initiation and success of entertainment for all.

"Individual Platforms"

"3. Inasmuch as we are seeking offices in three separate classes, we believe that specific issues should be directed toward the individual classes concerned by those candidates seeking office in each class. Therefore, we intend to propose platforms not only as a party, but class by class.

"4. And, we propose to issue periodic reports to our constituents concerning our efforts to accomplish our party and class platforms.

"5. These class platforms will deal with such specifics as more study rooms in dorms, a lowered price for date tickets, and class dances in the gym. However, realizing that we are not acquainted with every problem which now exists, we propose to maintain a table at such appropriate places as Lenoir Hall and Y-Court for suggestions during the forthcoming campaign."

Platform Within Scope

SP Chairman Jimmy Weeks noted that the party platform is within the scope of the class officers. He also pointed out that the platform was drafted after the nominations with full participation by the candidates who will be expected to carry it out. He stressed that the platform is realistic and has the backing of the candidates.

Chairman Weeks particularly praised the platform for its support of the current bond issue. He went on to say, "I am particularly proud that the Student Party has been so enthusiastic in its support of the torch marathon; more than 50 per cent of the people who have volunteered to run in the torch marathon are members of Makeup Girl Was O.K.

CHICAGO (UPI)—A union which prevented a woman from doing a television facial makeup on former Vice-President Nixon during last fall's presidential campaign has been found guilty of unfair labor practices by the National Labor Relations Board.

NLRB Examiner John P. Von Rohr ruled that Local 849 of the Makeup Artists and Hair Stylists Union used an illegal threat by advising Nixon he would be made up by "an incompetent person."

As a result of the alleged threat, Miss Gardner lost the job, Van Rohr said.

UNC Gentlemen Don't Prefer Blondes; Like Short Styles; Frown On Bleach

By CHUCK MOONEY

Gentlemen do NOT prefer blonds!

At least Carolina gentlemen don't. They like dark hair better.

In a recent DTH survey 59% of the men interviewed chose dark hair; 36.5% chose blond; and redheads rated 4.5%.

But light-haired or dark, 64% of Carolina's men want their girls to have short hair with simple styling. They say:

- "A gir lwith short hair can primp up easily after we park."
- "I like short hair because girls with long hair usually have dirty hair."
- "I think fancy, complicated hair styles show an inferiority complex."
- "A girl with a short, simple hair style is depending on her natural charm and not long hours of high-priced beauty parlor help."
- "Short, simple hair styles are refreshing and exciting."

The other side, 36%, says:

- "Long hair looks more feminine."
- "Long hair gives a girl more sex appeal."
- "Long, fancy hair styles show sophistication."
- "A fancy hair style shows pride and care of her appearance."

The men definitely don't want bleached hair styles. Almost 70% objected to them saying:

- "You can't do a bleached hair style up right."
- "I hate an artificial look. I like a simple, natural hair style."
- "Pretty girls don't need to bleach or tint their hair."

When girls change their hair styles, 83% of the males say that they notice it. When girls get a new Permanent without changing their hair styles, only 42% of the boys can tell. The other 58% say they can't tell the difference without a hair style change.

Each Carolina man was asked which of the above hair styles he liked best. Hair style number four was overwhelmingly chosen by 68.5%. They commented:

"It's more pert and cuter."

"I think it's sharp and classy."

"I think it's the least obnoxious of them."

"It looks much more civilized than the other three."

Hair style number three came in second with 21.5% approval. The men liked it because:

"It's sexy."

"It enhances the face."

"It has a lot of character."

"It's long and feminine."

Only 10% of the males voted for style number one and 10% for style number two. It seems that Carolina Gentlemen don't like bouffant or French roll hair styles.

As the poll was being conducted, it looked like some men were being influenced by their girl friends' or wives' hair styles.

IN LOCAL CHURCH

Donner & Braden At 'Freedom' Meet

Frank J. Donner and Anne Braden, outspoken foes of the House Un-American Activities Committee, will participate in the day-long "Freedom and the First Amendment" seminar today at the educational building of the Presbyterian Church.

Donner is author of "The Un-Americans," a documented attack on the House Committee, before which he had appeared as an unfriendly witness. Miss Braden's husband, Carl, took the first amendment before HUAC and is now serving a year's jail sentence for contempt of Congress.

The civil liberties conference is sponsored by the Southern Conference Educational Fund, which is active in the integration effort. Miss Braden is field secretary of SCEF.

Open Sessions

All sessions are open to the general public.

General program chairman is Edgar A. Love, Methodist bishop of the Baltimore area.

The first panel discussion will begin at 10 a.m. with "History of legislative investigations which inquire into thought, speech and association" as its topic. This panel will include:

Frank Donner; Benjamin E. Smith, former assistant district attorney, New Orleans, La.; the Rev. Theodore R. Gibson, Episcopal rector and president of the Miami Branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; David Wesley, former "Life" magazine staff member; and the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, executive director, Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Afternoon Session

"Weapons against fear" will be the topic of the 2 p.m. panel discussion, to include:

Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, former president, Amherst College and chairman, Experimental College, University of Wisconsin; Prof. LeMarquis DeJarmon, North Carolina College; Clifford J. Durr, former member, Federal Communications Commission; Mrs. Braden; and Dr. Waldo Beach, professor in the divinity school, Duke University.

The third panel, also in the afternoon, will discuss "Proposals for action." Discussion leaders are:

CORE Leader

The Rev. William B. Abbot, Norfolk, Va., Presbyterian minister; David Forbes, president of student council, Shaw University; Mrs. Sandra Hayden, integration leader at University of Texas; Henry Thomas, leader of Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee and Congress of Racial Equality field secretary; and Ella J. Baker, southern region YWCA.

Citizens Committee

The recent meeting of the Chapel Hill Citizens Committee for Open Movies leads us to wonder just what the group hopes to accomplish.

One of the most unusual proposals to be considered by the group is the one calling for the distribution of theatre admittance cards to local Negroes. About the best thing that can be said for this proposal is that the committee managed to vote it down.

The group, from its actions, seems to have lost sight of the basic goal they hope to accomplish: complete integration. What is the purpose of meaningless negotiationh, proposals, counter-proposals and waiting?

The issue is clear-cut. Negroes are being denied equality and human dignity. These principals are not open to negotiation, and will never be gained easily through rounds of meetings, officer elections and armor polishing by individuals who, too often, associate themselves with the integration movement and the citizens committee simply because they want to identify themselves with a "good cause."

Is the point at issue nothing more than admittance to theatres? If it is, then the committee's perspective is much narrower than it should be.

The point is that the theaters deny admittance to Negroes in tacit approval of racial bias. The theaters, since the whole movement started, have done nothing more than manipulate themselves out of a tight spot.

The Varsity is not integrated, and has not made any attempts toward doing so. The Carolina has made only a small concession.

Does the Citizens Committee feel that Monday night's meeting provided any answers? Was anything actually resolved?

The card proposal is evidence that at least some members of the committee fail to see the forest for the trees.

The object of a racial protest is not to distribute cards which a Negro must display to prove he is a human being.

The committee would do well to re-orient itself toward the basic issue of racial equality, keeping the theatre question within that perspective.

We are not suggesting that the committee expand its operations to other areas. We are suggesting that it realize that there are no shades of equality. Either it exists or it does not: to compromise it is impossible.

Football And Freud

Up until now, North Carolina's Andy Griffith holds the prize for analysis of the gridiron. His "What It Was, Was Football' record catapulted the former Chapel Hill resident to national fame.

But Andy may have to move over when the November issue of Reader's Digest hits the streets. His potential successor is Thomas Hornsby Ferril, a poet-editor of Denver, Colo.

Ferrill has made a stab at picturing what football would look like to the late Dr. Sigmund Freud. Unfortunately, Dr. Freud was not treated to this American extravaganza on his only visit to the United States in 1909, but he would most certainly have some professional reaction to today's jazzed-up version of the game.

"Obviously," Ferrill believes Dr. Freud might write, "football is a syndrome of religious rites symbolizing the struggle to preserve the egg of life through the rigors of impending winter.

"The rites begin at the autumnal equinox and culminate on the first day of the New Year with great festivals identified with bowls of plenty; the festivals are associated with flowers such as roses, fruits such as oranges, farm crops such a cotton, and even sun worship and appeasement of great reptiles such as alligators.

"The egg of life is symbolized by what is called 'the oval,' an inflated bladder. The convention is repeated in the architectural oval-shaped design of the vast outdoor churches in which the services are held . . . Literally millions attend . . . in anticipation of violent masochism and sadism about to be enacted by a highly trained priesthood of young men . . .

"The ceremony begins with colorful procession of musicians and semi-nude virgins who move in and out of ritualized patterns. This excites the worshipers to rise from their seats, shout frenzied poetry in unison and chant ecstatic anthems."

If Dr. Freud had made his observations on the scene at Chapel Hill or Durham, he could not avoid comment on the fortification of those attending the ritual.

Agronomy would be much involved, since oblong boxes are opened to reveal masses of browned fowl, while the fruit of the vine is carefully poured into small containers. This is used not only to slake the thirst of the ritualists but also to prepare them for the spirit of the occasion.

Dr. Freud would, in truth, have a field day in the stadium. But his visit would never be complete until he had arranged a post-game analytical session with the chief priest of the losing team—Frank Howard of Clemson, for example.

That would send him back to Vienna talking to himself.

What's Wrong With Socialism

I am not a Liberal; I may be a Conservative, but it is doubtful if I could fit in that category either. I do like to consider myself an individual with the right to think as an individual, but I find this to be an unpopular position to take at Carolina. Be that as it may, I wish to take a stand on the state of the nation.

What do the American people want? They want more and more for doing less and less. If there is any disagreement on this statement and I am sure there will be, I will be more than happy to take it up at a later date.

A WELFARE STATE

Yes, we have what it takes to be a welfare state. According to Webster's dictionary a welfare state is "A state that by legislation directly concerned with safeguarding health, providing insurance against sickness and unemployment, and other measures looking to social security assumes a major share of responsibility for the individual and social welfare of its citizens."

We have Franklin D. Roosevelt's great contribution to the welfare state—Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Benefits Under the Social Security Law.

We have unemployment insurance begun and controlled by legislation.

We have Mr. Kennedy's first contribution to the welfare state—free food for the poor.

We have public housing.

If the present administration has its way we will have:

1. More aid to education.

2. Medical care for the aged which will, in time, come to cover all people.

3. Anything else they can dream up.

The interesting thing about the welfare state is that it isn't free. Billions of dollars a year are being spent on this welfare state, and we are paying for it. It is rather like Robin Hood who stole from the rich and gave to the poor. There is one big difference though. The rich are going to say the hell with it one day because they will grow tired of seeing their hard earned money taken away from them in taxes and doled out to the masses. The day approaches.

A SOCIALIST STATE?

No, we don't have a socialist state—yet, but we are getting damn close! When the President of the United States can write a letter to the presidents of the steel companies asking them not to raise steel prices, when television and radio stations are forced to acquiesce to demands in programming and scheduling by the government under the implied threat of not having their licenses renewed, when farmers are regulated in many different ways (How many acres of tobacco can a farmer plant?), when these and other instances of government domination are observed, it is time for a reappraisal of the role that government plays in the operation of our capitalistic system.

When the government dominates business the next step is to run business, and when the government runs business we have arrived.

FORGE AHEAD

What is wrong with the socialist and welfare state, you may ask? WHAT IS WRONG WITH IT? Nothing; if you want competition extinguished, if you want yourself relegated to the service of the State, and finally if you want to serve under the yoke of communism; which will in time collapse of its own shortcomings, and then we will have the foundation for a new society which one would hope would profit from the mistakes of the previous one.

For your leisure reading may I suggest ATLAS SHRUGGED by Ayn Rand.

The true test of civilization is, not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops,—no, but the kind of man the country turns out.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Study In Red— A New Threat

It was with considerable alarm that I learned that the Communists have now begun to undermine True American Art. Fortunately, I am not alone: representatives John Rousselat of California, George Todt of the Los Angeles Herald, and Mary Pickford are busily alerting the country to our collective (excuse me) danger. The Hon. J. H. Roussilat called attention to "the infiltration of Marxist artist into our way of life, and their influence on American artists" last Friday. In early August, Miss Pickford boldy stood up against "Castro, communism, and abstract art," all in on breath.

COLUMNIST TODT, however, seems to be the authority on this particular facet of the Red Menace to Civilization. He writes: "At exhibitions here as well as abroad, the same tired old Marxist names appear with monotonous regularity—Picasso, Dali, Ernst, Klee, Miro, and the rest of their social revolutionary ilk." These artists are merely participators in the broader conspiracy.

Why haven't we realized the truth of Todt's statement, "In true revolutionary style, they created . . . modern art for only one purpose. And that was the deliberate warping of the mind from all that is beautiful, good and true." After observing that one of these "esthetic degenerates" has had the "effrontery to depict Jesus Christ as an ugly insect," he rests his argument with the obvious conclusion that modern art is "fit only for unprincipaled atheists, fools, and subversives."

BEING AN American patriot, who has spent several evenings in Harry's starring at and being stared back at by the paintings there, I find myself sympathetic with these courageous fighters for America. I realize that the word "Revolutionary" has been out of style in this country since shortly after 1776. Mr. Todt reminds me of the line from Dante's INFERNO—"Art, as far as it is able, follows nature, as a pupil imitates his master; thus your art must be, as it were, God's grandchild." Hence I could base my comments on Dante except that his contemporary Florentines considered their fellow-citizens as subversive and exiled him without so much as a HUAC hearing.

ANYWAY, OUR danger is imminent and much needs to be investigated. Art professors the length and breadth of the land are not only teaching about abstract art, but even producing it. And why did Jacqueline Kennedy pass up a chance to see Mona Lisa in order to visit the impressionist museum when she was in Paris? When you catch yourself, as I do, admiring, if not understanding, a Modigliani or a Braque, remind yourself that this only indicates the depth and subtlety of the subversion. America, wake up.

No Rejection Harder Than A Fraternity's

Dears Sirs:

There is no rejection harder to take than the Fraternity rejection. Nothing else makes one wonder so much about himself: What did I do wrong? What did I say wrong? What smiling face put the blackball in the box? But the main question one asks is, "What is wrong with me?"

I think the question ought to be, "What is wrong with fraternities?" Why are they such selfish, exclusive organizations; why do they look for people who look alike, talk alike, and even THINK alike? Why do they show no originality in looking for people who are creative—who can accomplish things—who have talents which add zest to the group? What are they afraid of?

THEY ARE afraid to be DIFFERent. They are afraid to be themselves and like what they like, even if it isn't what others like. (There is no doubt in my mind that if God were running these clubs, the basis for membership would be quite different. Just as a hypothetical question, Would Jesus have gotten a bid?).

A person who has not made a fraternity is the same person he was the week before rush, with the same talents and capabilities. The one thing different about him is that he has had to face a hard blow that many of the others have not had to face.

THE WAY he faces this can be the making or the breaking of him. I have seen boys and girls react in many ways to not getting a bid. Sometimes they become very loud and show-off-ish, pretending that they don't care. One must guard himself against letting this happen—for it only draws attention to the person, and to the very thing he is trying to hide.

Some people slowly begin to drink more and more so they won't have to face what it means not to have a bid. Then the drinking becomes a habit. Don't misunderstand me; after a shock like that, maybe one should drown his sorrows ONE night or ONE weekend, in order to relieve the horrible tension and depression. But to let it get to be a habit is just asking for trouble.

But most of the people to whom this happens will take it in far less dramatic ways. Some just get quieter and quieter till one thinks they've disappeared: they may be studying, or writing, or just rotting. Others lose interest in studying, flunk out of school, and go somewhere else. Some transfer, because they think they can run away from it.

AND THEN, there are the few who are going to become MEN because of this. These are the people who buckle down and make themselves work, no matter how little they feel like it. They find extracurricular activities to absorb their energies. They do not mope around, or sulk, but try to become the best, the most creative, and the most interesting people they are capable of becoming. This is the hardest way of all.

The learn to know themselves, and how they appear to others; they learn to accept themselves, and how they appear to others; they learn to accept themselves; but above all, they learn to like themselves. And that is the most difficult thing in the world to do—especially when you wonder if other people like you. Especially when you didn't get a bid. And this is the ONLY way in which one makes himself stand out above the crowd—so that if later on he wants to join a fraternity, and a fraternity wants him to join it, he will be ready.

CRISIS 1961: Part I

U.S. Reaction Found No Echo In Europe

EDITOR'S NOTE: UPI Foreign News Analyst Phil Newsom has just completed a three-week swing through Berlin and other West German cities and two weeks in Paris and London. The following dispatch, based on interviews with Allied leaders and his own observations, is the first of three dealing with "Western Europe, The Crisis of 1961."

Crisis 1961—Part 1

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

LONDON (UPI)—It is business as usual for the people of Western Europe.

The urgency with which United States public opinion reacted to Nikita Khrushchev's threats against free West Berlin found no answering echo in Britain, France or even West Germany itself.

The reasons are varied. But the end conclusion is inescaptable after a tour in which this correspondent ranged from Bonn to the Iron Curtain, from Berlin to Munich and from Paris to London.

The apathy of the European man on the sctreet or on the farm is in sharp contrast to the efforts of their governments to strengthen NATO's forward wall quickly with men and weapons.

AT WHITEHALL in London, in the Defense Ministry at Bonn, at Elysee Palace and in NATO's shiny new headquarters in Paris, urgent steps are being taken to bring NATO's troop strength by Jan. 1, 1962, up to 24 divisions and possibly to 27.

U. S. air power is crowding the fields of Britain, France and West Germany.

Nuclear strength is growing.

ONLY IN WEST Berlin itself is there a sense of urgency. It leads to a feeling of apprehension but not of gloom.

For 16 years West Berlin has stood as a symbol of a free peoples' self-determination in the midst of Communist dictatorship, until today it is West Germany's greatest industrial city.

There is no doubt that if the Communists come crashing across the wall that divides the city, they will meet with no abject surrender. West Berliners will battle them with paving blocks or whatever weapon comes to hand.

But even more important than West Berlin's 2.2 million people is the symbol Berlin has become of Allied, and particularly United States, determination.

If this shows signs of weakness, then the neutrality latent throughout many of the peoples of Western Europe will come to full flower. Painfully built West European unity will crumble. The people will make their own accommodation with communism.

WHETHER IT be apathy or fatalism resulting from two lost wars, the results can be the same and it is encountered frequently in Germany.

One holds the belief that if there is to be a war, Germany will be the first to be hit.

The other takes the view that the Germans are no longer masters of their own fate. That the decisions for their defense will be made not by them but by a combination of the NATO powers. Therefore, they might as well set back and wait.

Certainly, there is no disposition to fight for East Germany.

In both Britain and France, national problem take precedence over world problems. In France, it is the still unsolved problem of the Algerian revolt. In Britain, it is the question of Britain's proposed entry into the Common Market of Europe, thus ending centuries of British isolation from the Continent.

Anti-German feeling springing from World War II still is strong in Britain, as it is in Belgium, Holland and Denmark.

Governments recognize their problem—that a weak home-front can weaken armies in the field. And they are trying to do something about it.

Meanwhile, it is business as usual.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

the Student Party."

Student Body President Bill Harriss enthusiastically endorsed all of the SP candidates and particularly elaborated on the qualifications of the three presidential candidates. He said, "Richard Vinroot served as vice-president of his sophomore class and should make an excellent class president. George Rosenthal has been chairman of the judicial committee of the Student Legislature and is co-author of the comprehensive amendments to the Student Constitution, which will be submitted to the student body in the coming election.

Frosh Candidate

"Pete Harkness comes from an active political family; he has been a page in the United States Senate and has worked in the office of former Sen. Kennedy. These are indeed unusual qualifications for a president of the freshman class."

U.S. Armed Police Cross Red Border

BERLIN (UPI) — The United States sent heavily armed military police into East Berlin twice Thursday in contempt of Communist warnings such military escorts were "playing with fire." The East Germans, backed by the Soviet Union, protested the armed incursion and sent the United States a note warning it "has no rights" in East Berlin. It demanded punishment of those responsible for such incidents. The U.S. Army rolled five tanks and four armored personnel carriers to the border and then dispatched three jeeps with MP's carrying loaded rifles and tommy guns into the East Zone to escort an American car with two civilians past Communist border guards.

The Communists rushed up brown uniformed troops of the East Germany army but they did not interfere with the MP escort when it took the civilian car into East Berlin and later when it raced past the Reds once again to bring the car out.

Though tension rose sharply as the U.S. tanks stood guard over the jeeps no shots were exchanged and no one was injured in Thursday's incident. It was the second day in a row the Americans have sent armed troops into East Berlin.

Kennedy To Cut Federal Spending

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy said Thursday that he has ordered a "substantial" cut in government spending by slowing down anti-recession programs and postponing certain other projects not absolutely essential to national defense.

Faced with a federal deficit of nearly $7 billion this year, he also said the number of government employes will be held to the "absolute minimum" to help keep federal outlays in fiscal 1962 below ceilings authorized by Congress.

Looking toward fiscal 1963, Kennedy pledged anew that the budget will be balanced "barring extraordinary and unforeseen defense requirements." He mentioned no tax increases and based his balanced budget on a rise in revenues stemming from economic recovery.

The President discussed the budget outlook in a statement to his cabinet and 19 agency heads meeting at the White House in advance of the autumn budget review to be made public Sunday night. Specific budget figures will be disclosed at that time.

Will Show Spending

The review is expected to show estimated government spending at about $89 billion for the current 12 months, compared with estimated receipts of slightly more than $82 billion.

The President did not say how much he hoped to cut previously planned spending. But he said that "total outlays will be substantially less than they might have been" under the congressional ceiling.

Tar Heels Seek Fourth Win At Miami Tonight

By Ed Dupree

North Carolina's Tar Heels step outside the ACC for the first time tonight when they tangle with the Miami Hurricanes in Miami's Orange Bowl at 8:15.

The Tar Heels, holding a 3-2 edge in the Miami series which started in 1946, will be looking for their first victory over the Hurricanes since 1957. After winning the first three games in the series, UNC dropped the 1953 contest, 14-7, and lost last year, 29-12.

Miami will be trying to break a two-game losing streak in their Homecoming game. The Big Wind holds victories over Penn State and Kentucky, but losses to Pittsburgh, Navy, and Colorado give the Floridians a 2-3 mark. Their 1960 record was 6-4.

Carolina's record is marred only by a 27-0 loss to Clemson. Victories over N.C. State, Maryland, and South Carolina put the Tar Heels in a first-place tie with Duke in the ACC. The 3-1 record is the best UNC four-game mark since 1957 and a victory over Miami would give the Blue and White their best mid-season mark since the 1949 season when Charlie Justice led Carolina to a 7-3 record and a Cotton Bowl appearance.

The return of Miami quarterback George Mira, one of the top sophomores in the nation, will strengthen the Hurricane passing attack. Mira has fully recovered from an early season injury and either he or fast-improving John Bennett will start at the signal-calling post. Bobby Weaver gives Miami a triple-threat at quarterback, the spot where the Hurricanes were weakest during the first half of the season.

Halfback Lennie Beck and tackle Jim Shumate of the Tar Heels are on the injured list, but Shumate may be able to play tonight. If Shumate is unable to play, sophomore Vic Esposito, a standout in last week's victory over South Carolina, will start at his tackle position.

Carolina fullback Bob Elliott will have the distinction of playing against his ex-teammates. The hard-driving Tar Heel fullback played freshman ball at "Sun Tan U." before transferring to UNC in 1958.

Probable starting lineups:

Carolina		Miami
LE	Knox	Miller
LT	Hennessey	Maluty
LG	Greene	Reynolds
C	Craver	Livingston
RG	LeCompte	Eggert
RT	Shumate or Esposito	Watts
RE	Yates	Wilson
QB	Farris	Mira or Bennett
LH	Carson	Ryder or Fritzsche
RH	Smith	Spinelli
FB	Elliott	Vollenweider

Carolina Frosh Play Host To UVA's Freshmen Footballers Today At 2

UNC's freshman football team gets back into action this afternoon at 2:00 when they play host to Virginia's frosh in Kenan Stadium. The Tar Babies will be out to even their record at 2-2 against the visitors from the Cavalier state.

The Tar Babies have had a two-week layoff since they beat the Wake Forest freshmen 20-0 and Coach George Barclay has made a few lineup changes for the Virginia game.

Bob Starczewski, starting right tackle, is injured and Barclay has inserted Fred Smith in his spot. The other change finds Richard Gonzales at the other tackle spot in place of John Hill.

Left halfback Dave Braine, a starter until he broke his cheekbone in the N. C. State game, should see some action against the Cavalier frosh, but Ray Jones will get the starting nod today.

The Carolina frosh dropped games to Clemson and N. C. State, but displayed an awesome offense as they walked over the Wake Forest frosh in their first home game two weeks ago. Second-string quarterback Gary Black sparked the offense with his passing, but the running of QB Ron Tuthill, fullback Ken Willard, and halfbacks, Jones and Tommy Ward gave the little Tar Heels a balanced attack.

The Virginians have played only one game, losing to Maryland, 30-18. Their second game with Virginia Tech was rained out, so they will be seeking their first win.

The starting Carolina lineup:

LE—Hanburger
LT—Gonzalez
LG—Fedor
C—Malobicky
RG—Eudy
RT—Smith
RE—Gallagher
QB—Tuthill
LH—Jones
LH—Jones
RH—Ward
FB—Willard

Rosenbluth Plans Pro Ball For NC

CHAPEL HILL — Lennie Rosenbluth yesterday announced plans for what could be North Carolina's first professional basketball league as he announced that he will field a professional team this season that will tour North Carolina's larger towns and cities. Rosenbluth also announced the appointment of Don W. Curtis as General Manager of the new team which will be known as the "Carolina Champions."

"We plan approximately 40-50 games this season in the larger towns and cities of North Carolina," stated Curtis, "and if the response is as we anticipate, we shall do everything within our power to form a full six-club professional league in North Carolina to begin play in December 1962."

"North Carolina is a real hotbed for basketball," added Rosenbluth. "We have pro baseball, so why not basketball too? Talent is no problem. There is certainly enough talent already here in the state to form six well-rounded teams."

Curtis again reminded that the entire organization of the new league depends largely on the success of this year's team.

"This year's club," stated Curtis, "will play on an exclusive basis for civic clubs and community groups as fund raising projects and benefits." Clubs interested in more information can acquire it by writing to Curtis, Box 1025, Chapel Hill.

Besides Rosenbluth, who was the 1957 collegiate player of the year as he led UNC to 32 straight wins and a national championship, the "Champions" will also have the services of All-American Pete Brennan, Joe Quigg, Danny Lotz, Albert Long, and others.

UNC fullback Bob Elliott, a freshman footballer at Miami in 1957, will be playing against a few of his ex-teammates tonight in the UNC-Miami game.

SAE, NROTC, Law School Top Track

SAE, the Law School and NROTC were crowned champions of their respective divisions in the two-day Intramural Track Meet, held at Fetzer Field on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

SAE compiled 22 points in the fraternity division, PiKA coming in second with 18, followed by ATO with 15 and DKE with 12½. Firsts by Haskins Ridens (6.9 in the 60-yard dash) and Stuart Saunders (40' in the shot put) paced the SAE triumph.

Wade Smith won the 60-yard dash (6.7) and the broad jump (19'9¾") to lead the Law School to a victory over the Peacocks in the Grad division. Henry Pharr also made a big contribution to the winning cause, finishing on top in the shot put (?7'8").

Larry Henry of the Med School won two events, taking the 100-yard dash (11.0) and the ½-mile run.

Ray Kernodle scored two firsts for Winston, but it was not enough as NROTC came on to take the team title with 30 points. Winston was second in the Dorm division with 21, followed by Mangum with 11 and three teams tied for fourth with 7.

Kernodle's victories came in the broad jump (20'4½") and the 100-yard dash (11.2). The broad jump mark establishes a new dorm record. Biggest boosts to the Navy point total were victories in the 880-yard relay and the high jump. Bob Franks won the latter with a jump of 5'5".

LEADERS

North Carolina's leading rusher and scorer is senior running back Gib Carson. He has gained 122 yards in 60 carries (3.2 ave.) and has scored three touchdowns—all against N.C. State—for 18 points. Junior running back Jim Addison is the top pass receiver, with eight catches for 56 yards.

Also other seminars include: March 14, Samuel Goldberg, professor of mathematics, Oberlin College, topic—"Mathematical Models in Marketing," and April 11, Wendell R. Smith, staff vice president, Radio Corporation of America, topic—"Market Strategy—The Critical Element in Marketing."

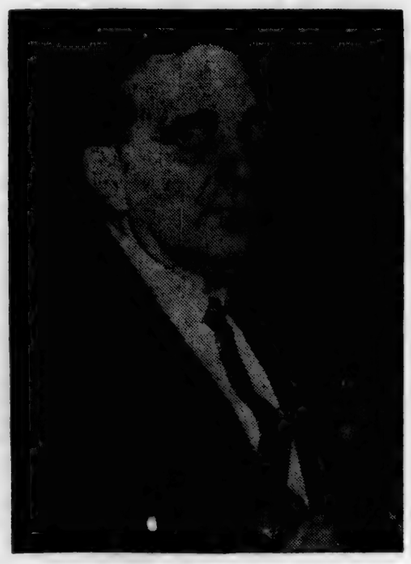
Seminars to be conducted by Arthur F. Burns, president, National Bureau of Economic Research, and Gerhard Tintner, professor of economics, mathematics, and statistics at Iowa State University, will be announced at a later date.

All seminars will be held at 4 p.m. in the Faculty Seminar Room, Carroll. The seminars are supported by the N. C. Business Foundation.

'Government Arm Of Bigotry'

Civil Liberty Speeches Blast HUAC Activities

A lineup of controversial civil liberties speakers at the "Freedom and the First Amendment" conference yesterday blasted the House Un-American Activities Committee.



FRANK DONNER—the author of "The Un-Americans," a controversial book condemning the House Un-American Activities Committee, was one of 19 speakers at the "Freedom and the First Amendment" conference held yesterday at the Presbyterian Church. Donner has been an unfriendly witness before HUAC. Committee Chairman Francis Walter has claimed Donner is a Communist agent. Photo by Wallace

David Wesley, editor of the editorial page, York, Pa. "Gazette and Daily," spoke on "the technicolor hate-mongers, who are anti-pink, anti-red, anti-yellow, anti-beige, anti-brown and anti-black."

Wesley called HUAC the "governmental arm of bigotry."

The day-long "Freedom" conference was sponsored by the Southern Conference Educational Fund, a Southwide integrationist group. The conference was held at the Presbyterian Church here.

Besides Wesley, other civil liberties supporters participating in the conference were: Frank J. Donner, author of "The Un-Americans," a controversial attack on HUAC and Anne Baden, field secretary of SCEF and wife of Carl Braden, who is now serving a year in prison for taking the First Amendment when questioned by HUAC.

Donner claimed that the "Compulsory disclosure" of memberships lists as has happened with Florida National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, meant " the end of private association, the end of anonymity, and with these, the end of dissent."

HUAC's Senate counterpart, James Eastland (D-Miss)'s Internal Security Subcommittee resorts to "the most blatant quackery," said another conference speaker, to assure that "events conform to its preconceived 'conspiracy theory' of history."

Another speaker claimed that "civil liberties are essential to the attainment of civil rights. Without freedom of speech and assembly, integration cannot be attained in the South," he said.

Tanks Face Off Across Border

BERLIN (UPI)—American and Soviet tanks faced each other gun to gun across the East-West Berlin border Friday night in a tense situation that led the U. S. Army to place its 6,500-man Berlin garrison on a state of alert.

Hours after nightfall 10 American M48 Patton tanks lighted by tanks to the border an dthe United States also brought up six armored personnel carriers with its tanks.

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV

Tass Charged Violation

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Friday night the "U. S. forays' 'into East Berlin were a "violation' 'of the East German border. East Germany charged the border crossing by armed MP's was a "provocation."

Despite the tense situation ';' Army spokesman said U. S. military sedans with military passengers in uniform entered East Ger-Communist floodlights stood near the border, their long muzzles pointed toward 10 Soviet tanks on the Communist side of the only border crosing point stil open. The Soviet had 22 tanks in reserve three-quarters o fa mile away.

The tank moves came after a three-jeep trip into East Berlin by heavily armed military police who escorted a civilian sedan in and out of a Communist sector in a demonstration of U. S. determination to maintain its travel rights in the Soviet Zone.

Communist border police tried briefly to close the Friedrichstrasse checkpoint to all Western traffic, West Berlin police reported. But U. S. officials said the threat was insignificant and "just further harassment."

Placed On Alert

Retired Gen. Lucius D. Clay, President Kennedy's personal representative in Berlin, said the fact the MP escort went in and out of East Berlin unmolested showed that the "friction of an East German stoppage is now destroyed."

The entire garrison was placed on a general alert for two hours and 35 minutes. Later the general alert was withdrawn but an army spokesman said an "adequate force will be kept on alert." He did not say how long.

The spokesman announced a ban on trips into East Berlin by all Americans in civilian clothes except for newsmen "until the situation is clarified." He said civilians, including tourists, were being turned back at the border by American MP's.

The U. S. Army moved a number of tanks to the border before the three MP jeeps entered East Berlin. Later both sides rolled many throughout Friday night without trobue at the checkpoint. UPI reporter Wellington Long entered East Berlin Friday night for 40 minutes and reported the Commnist border guards "correct" in their behavior and life in East Berlin normal.

Classrooms Open For Night Study

To alleviate library congestion and to provide better study conditions, a number of classrooms are being opened at night for students, according to Tony Harrington, chairman of the Student Government Campus Affairs Board.

"Studying space in these rooms must be exploited to the fullest, so no special room assignments will be made to any group," said Harrington.

He also reminded students that "it is essential that the rooms be kept in good condition so they will be in shape for use the next morning."

More rooms will be opened if necessary and such suggestions can be made to the Student Affairs Board at the SG Office or to the Campus Affairs Board.

The rooms open for night study are 01 in the Alumni Building, 207B and 208 Caldwell, 07 and 208 Gardner, 105 and 106 Hanes, 105 Peabody, 220 and 232 Phillips, 109 and 216 Saunders and the study halls on the ground floors of Graham and Stacy Dormitories.

IN CHAPEL HILL

Population Should Double In 9 Years

The population of Chapel Hill should almost double in the next 9 years due to the Research Triangle now under development according to a recent estimate by the Research Area Planning Board.

While the Research Triangle Park isn't expected to reach its maximum development until 1980, it is predicted that facilities in the park proper will provide employment for nearly 80,000 people. Adding the members of their families should total approximately 340,000 people.

The reason this will have more of an effect on the Chapel Hill area is that the Township is a 90 square-mile area which extends greatly into the Triangle Park.

At present Orange County has a population of 43,000 and Chapel Hill, 25,000. Nine years from new Chapel Hill alone should have approximately 43,000 population.

And the 1980 prediction is almost 75,000 for the Township and 93,000 for the County. These figures include UNC student enrollment which is envisioned to be 14,000 in 1970.

Honored guests attending will be Chancellor and Mrs. William B. Aycock, Mr. Charles Bernard, Mr. Edward French, President and Mrs. Friday, Dr. and Mrs. James L. Godfrey, Dr. and Mrs. R. B. House, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Gordon Kage, Brigadier Gen. and Mrs. Carlyle Shepard, Dr. and Mrs. Carlyle Sitterson, and the staff of the unit.

Midshipmen and their dates will attend.

'Every Cent Of Bond Needed'

Sanford Backs Race

Gov. Terry Sanford, praising the Torch For Education Marathon said Thursday, "These students will be running for the future of North Carolina."

Sanford said that every cent of the $61,665,000 bond is needed for the state. He said the $31-plus million is vital "so your children and mine will have classroom space when they go to college. I don't believe North Carolinians intend to tremble or faint or shirk now," Sanford said.

More than 700 students from the state's 13 institutions will stage a relay race from Murphey, in the mountains, and Wilmington, converging on Raleigh Nov. 3. Sanford estimated that 2,000 Woman's College girls volunteered but there was not enough streets to accommodate that many girls.

The Marathon for Education is sponsored by the Students Committee for a Better North Carolina which is headed by UNC's Bill Harriss.

Extensive publicity has also preceded the vote coming Nov. 7. It has been estimated that there have been 500,000 pieces of literature printed including one page flyers and explanatory booklets.

There are 2,072,000 registered voters eligible for the coming election, but it is anyone's guess how many will turn out. A top government official estimated 200 to 250 thousand as compared to 1959's 112,000. The reason for the rise in votes is attributed to the rapidly increasing interest because of the publicity.

State Treasurer Edwin Gill insists that the issue will not cause any new taxes. The state's bond rating will mean the bonds can be marketed at a low interest rate.

Chapel Hill will receive $10 million in University construction benefits if the bond is approved, said Bond Committee Chairman John Umstead at the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association Monday night. The Merchants Association passed a resolution giving unanimous support.

Lab Tests On Cyanide 'Farmed Out'

Laboratory tests being performed by the SBI in the cyanide deaths of two students are being "farmed out" in an effort to speed up the investigation.

This was revealed Thursday by Police Chief W. D. Blake, who is awaiting results of the tests. They are being conducted by SBI Agent William Best in Raleigh. Investigation of the mysterious deaths of Mike Barham and Bill Johnson, found Oct. 6 in their Cobb room, is now in its fourth week.

The Police Chief said his detectives checked with the SBI Wednesday and were told that some of the painstaking analysis work was being "farmed out" to other laboratories, including one at State College. The contents of the boys' stomachs, bed clothes, clothing, and regurgitated food particles found in the room are all being studied.

Time Established

The Chief pointed out that the times that Johnson and Barham ate their supper meals on the night before they were found dead had ben firmly established. By analyzing the stage of digestion of the stomach contents it should be possible, thus, to establish the time of the death of each boy, he explained.

"If there was an hour or two difference in their time of death we would then have a better idea of what probably happened," the Chief said.

One theory held by police is that the deaths resulted from powdered cyanide sprinkled on peanut butter crackers the two may have eaten while they played a game of rook on the final night.

Music Group Open

The Music Committee of the Graham Memorial Activities Board announced yesterday committee membership openings for five students.

John Currie, chairman of the Music Committee said the committee is responsible for the selection and arrangements of the Petite Musicales held each year by GMAB.

Special emphasis thi year will be placed on semiclassical programs which Currie said, will interest a greater number of students.

Piano concerts and string ensembles will be the major types of productions. Currie said the committee has a greatly increased budget this year over that appropriated last year and that he feels this will be the best season the Petite Musicales have ever had.

"Positions on the committee will be filled by students who are interested and want to help in the program planning area, regardless of previous experience," he said. All students interested may contact Currie at 968-9068 or at the GMAB office on GM's second floor on any afternoon from 2-4.

'In Danger And Peril'

Suddenly, the borderline between East and West Berlin is being contested not by words and hand weapons, but by Soviet and American tanks.

Now both the U. S. and Russia are engaged in arms rattling. No longer is the issue one in which threats are bandied verbally, with the weapons of war used only as a point of of argument.

Now these weapons are the argument. If either the U. S. or Russia fires with one of its tanks, then no one knows where the argument will end. Certainly there can be no victor, even in the terms of limited war. Formidable enough alone each tank is backed by the much more destructive force of nuclear power.

In a few days the crisis might pass. Both the U. S. and Russia could conceivably draw their heavy armored equipment far back from the border, and another crisis will have ended for the moment.

But the Berlin situation will give birth to other crisis, each more critical than the last. And each will create the same apprehension, multiplied and re-multiplied in succession. This, without question, is what President Kennedy meant when he stood on the platform in Kenan Stadium and told UNC and the world that we will "live out most of our lives in anxiety . . . and in peril."

We will be reminded of these words many times in the coming months.

Flexibility On Germany

In speaking recently of the German situation, British Foreign Secretary Lord Home said: "One false step, one failure in communication, even one failure in comprehension, might mean war." This is the all-important fact to keep in mind as West and East go through their torturous and delicate diplomatic game of seeking a base for negotiation, and as dangerous flare-ups occur in Berlin itself.

In reply to a letter from seventy-two Labor Members of Parliament, headed by Emanuel Shinwell, urging "a more flexible approach" to the solution of the Berlin crisis, President Kennedy wrote that we in the United States "are committed to no rigid formulas and are prepared to explore every reasonable avenue of approach." In practice, Anglo-American "flexibility" is strictly limited to a field that does not alienate the French or West Germans and that will not provoke the Russians into dangerous and irrevocable moves. In the last few days we have seen how difficult it is for Mr. Kennedy to keep to such a narrow line as France and Germany maintain and even stiffen their resistance to negotiation.

We must stand firm on the basic issues of the freedom of West Berlin, access to the capital and the right to maintain Allied military forces there. We may find grounds for discussion in such areas as the reunification of Germany, the Polish frontier, the thinning out of troops, the steps toward disarmament and nuclear controls. The "flexibility" President Kennedy wrote about means utilizing this type of negotiation, and it must continue—nothwithstanding the obstinate opposition of both France, which is contributing little to NATO, and of West Germany, which is contributing so much.

—The New York Times

A Public Service

Today, the entire third page of the DTH has been given over to a great, grey mass of beauocratic nonsense called, innocently enough, constitutional revisions. No one is expected to read it, of course, but we are asked to print it to allow the campus to see what they will be asked to vote upon.

Actually, the constitutional changes amount to little more than updating th present document. Some organizations, such as the University Club which no longer exisits, will be removed along with others which appear and disappear from the beauracracy, such as the Student Entertainment Committee which exisits now, but might not in the future, and hasn't in the past, or at any other time other than now, and might be established or abolished by legislative act, thus becoming valid or invalid according to the whim and caprice of an agency vested with power to establish or abolish agencies—as established by the constitution or pursuant thereto.

We only mention the above as an aid to those who might find the changes difficult to comprehend if couched in more confusing terms.

Catholic Appeal Of Flamenco

"All folk music is essentially the same; one hears a man crying in the dark, and if one knows how to listen, one can tell what he is crying for," Cante Hondo, the generic type of flamenco music the Deep Song, has the reputation of being the only native musical art form in the world that is completely impossible for an outsider to imitate.

Its very nature is unpredictable but perfectly "right" improvisation. One has the feeling that a flamenco artist is actually lapsing into a different language, learned long before his own lifetime, in which he speaks purely from his emotions of his life and death, his love, despair, and implacable aloneness.

FLAMENCO TECHNIQUES are forbidding to the amateur guitarist. It is not unusual for a gypsy or gitane to learn basic chords and simple fingering before his hand is large enough to encompass the neck of his instrument.

Every professional flamenco guitarist has a repetoire of trademarks known as faietas (little lies), rapid, perfect and characteristic runs, usually played with all ten fingers at impossible speeds, designed to be inimitable. Sabicas, the Electra recording artist, is willing to teach his to anybody, but they are so brilliantly involved that he has no danger of being imitated successfully.

It is illuminating to know that he once attempted to take lessons from a professional in Spain, but was run out of the studio when he played a falseta at the request of the teacher.

FLAMENCO IS a tradition unique to Spain and wonderfully characteristic of the people. It is a successful hybrid of three variant influences: the Flemish dances of "visiting" armies in the Dark Ages, which armies gave it its name; the strong flow of Moorish culture from their occupation of Spain for hundreds of years; the gypsy tradition, of restlessness, passion, and wild, deep beauty.

There is in this music an undeniable affinity with artists such as Django Reinhardt, the Belgian-born guitarist and violinist, who was forced to give up violin when a fire crippled permanently three fingers of his left hand, and who developed his own technique pattern of chords and single-string technique that made him Europe's first true jazz musician and the greatest jazz guitarist of his time; with Toki Horvath, the present "King of the Gypsies," whose troupe chose to be homeless after the Budapest uprising of October 1956; with Sabicas, the child prodigy whose orchestral approach to flamenco guitar has made him the target of accusations of having as many as six hands.

THIS MUSIC HAS as many forms as there are local groups in Spain. The types of flamenco are often named after the area of their flowering, but occasionally after an interior significance. Saeta, the "arrow of song," is a ferial tradition in which a professional singer improvises a litany of praise for the saine after whom the feria is celebrated; soleares, the root of flamenco music in general, whose pulsing rhythm amplifies the melancholy of "soledad" (solitude) whence its name; bulerias, originally intended for dance, and now rare in a pure form, is strongly flavored with Old Andalucia; Malaguena, the flamenco of Malaga, whose original form showed the heart of its Mediterranean birthplace, whose recent forms have ingrafted church modes, especially Gregorian.

THE COMMON roots of American blues and Spanish flamenco in the brotherhood of all folk music is evident in the playing of Miles Davis on a recent release with Gil Evans. He performs a dramatic Saeta, reproducing almost absolutely an ethnic recording done by Alan Lomax, and a long, tragic solea, in the basic tradition of Cante Hondo.

The common roots of one people or one culture with another is very easily and wonderfully well demonstrated by a sympathetic hearing of flamenco music. It is purely subjective, fet as profound as an art form can be without losing any of its essential universality.

CRISIS 1961: Part II

What's In The Future For West Berlin?

EDITORS NOTE: West Berlin could be the flashpoint of a catastrophic nuclear war. What is the city's future? UPI Foreign News Analyst Phil Newsom discusses this in the following dispatch, the second of three dealing with "Western Europe, The Crisis of 1961."

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

LONDON (UPI)—A young man raced across Berlin rooftops a few days ago with the Vopos (Communist peoples police) in close pursuit.

On the Western side of the wall dividing East and West Berlin, police waited with a rescue net. With the Vopos reaching for him and with a final dramatic cry of "freedom!" the young man jumped.

He missed the net. Death was instantaneous.

Death is not uncommon along the wall where now a handful of East Germans still manage daily escapes from their Communist prison, as compared to the hundreds who flowed across the line prior to Aug. 13.

The man who died, the few who escape, and the thousands who must remain behind—these are the human side of the story of an isolated city which could become the flash point of the most devastating war the world ever has known.

It is the focal point of a clash between the United States and Russia, two powers which not only are the world's mightiest but which conduct their affairs on the basis of two bitterly opposed philosophies.

And if there is any one point where it may be said the cold war began, Berlin is as good as any.

THE FIRST agreement among the World War II Allies dividng Germany into occupation zones and setting up a separate plan for Berlin was reached in London on Dec. 9, 1944, months before the war ended.

It included the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union, and later was amended to include France.

The war had been over less than a year before Allied commanders began learning the lesson that a contract with communism remains valid only so long as it suits Communist leaders—and only so long as the West has the power to enforce it.

A hero of those early days and of the Berlin blockade was U.S. Gen. Lucius Clay.

In the latter half of September this year, Clay returned to West Berlin as President Kennedy's personal representative.

Shortly after his return he remarked regretfully to this correspondent:

"Things might be diffeent today, if we had known in 1945 the things we learned in 1946."

ASSUMING, AS we must, that Berlin will survive its present crisis, what of its long-range future?

With financial pump-priming supplied both by the United States and the West German federal government, West Berlin has emerged from the ruins of 1945. Today it ranks as West Germany's greatest industrial city.

It has smart new hotels and shops, a solid economy and a people who, in the great majority, have demonstrated their ability to stand up under Communist threats. Workers' housing is probably the best in Germany and new units are going up.

Yet as things stand, it seems that West Berlin soon must reach its peak and then go into a slow decline.

Berlin is a city of the aged, with a death rate that far exceeds its birth rate.

Since the Communist-generated crisis of 1958-59, its work force has been falling at a rate of between 10,000 and 15,000 each year.

Its population, now rated at 2.2 million, has been projected to an even two million by 1964, a population loss of 200 thousand people.

So far there has been no production loss, as machines have taken over more of the work of men.

But if Berlin is to survive and maintain its place, it can only do so with confidence and with uncertainties removed.

"Sleep, Baby, Sleep"

Women Should Also Serve?

Over four decades ago United States women received voting rights. Today they control a major share of the country's wealth. In outright numbers females surpass males. Omitting extreme specialties, such as professional football, no occupation can be said to exclude women. They fly jets, govern states, lead hunting parties, land top jobs. Objectively speaking, only a rapidly fading tradition forestalls complete masculine-feminine equality of opportunity.

ALMOST TEN DECADES ago American men first felt the pressure of military conscription. Recently, in 1948, Congress extended the draft into peacetime. Confused by a muddled multiplicity of armed service "plans" and "deals," today's average young man faces the future with one certainty: an interval of his life, amounting to at least twenty-one months, will be demanded in the name of Selective Service. For several years afterward he will live under the threat of "recall."

WHY? THE EXPLANATION proves simple. His task is to prepare for fighting a war, a war to protect his country, a country not only of men but of emancipated women, women who can control elections and thereby determine the national policy which decides to fight or not to fight.

IDEALLY, THE POPULAR support requisite in time of national crisis should arise out of a voluntary patriotism. If we trust our leaders, who say that we are presently living in grave danger, we must conclude that, among males, voluntary patriotism fails to suffice; hence, the draft. What reason, then, is there to assume that women minus coercion fulfill their customary wartime roles, whether the war be cold or hot? Do they write letters and send packages to strangers, the strangers who make up most of the military? Do they train in hospitals and schoolrooms to equip themselves for replacing former civilians-turned-soldier? It remains almost unheard of. With school behind, women immediately set about finding their life's work, as would most men, had they a choice.

EXAMINING the evidence reveals an imbalanced responsibility. Over one-half of the population is automatically exempt from actively supporting our policy of power politics. Full citizenship has its duties as well as privileges and consistency alone asks that women be called to account for their rightful share of U. S. defense efforts.

NO ONE expects girls to shoulder M-13s or attend bayonet practice. But actual combat occupies at its most intense only a fragment of all military personnel. Paperwork in staggering quantities competes with field weapons for the soldiers' energy and time. Hospital duty removes vital numbers from the battle forces. In many respects, the military is a business, and business found long ago that women are better suited for desk drudgery than men. Nursing, needless to say, also benefits from the feminine touch.

WHY NOT have a compulsory two-year training and service program for American females from eighteen to twenty-five? Military hospitals and offices of all sorts would breathe a sign of relief, and just as importantly, the democratic premise of fair play would at least be honored.

Selective Service should draft a woman each time it calls up a man. Let today's girls find out what "supporting the nation" means to today's boys.

Only Quick Aid Could Help Syria

BEIRUT (UPI)—Only quick massive doses of foreign aid can help Syria overcome the effects of its break with President Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic, informed experts said Thursday.

Large scale construction and development projects initiated by Nassar in the U.A.R.'s Syrian province will be crippled unless funds are found to continue them. The projects include new factories, irrigation schemes, and oil explorations.

Syria's breakaway came just weeks before a Nassar plan to merge the Syrian lira with the Egyptian pound was to take effect, making the two economies virtually inextricable.

Nasser was said to be waiting for the moment when the Syrian and Egyptian currencies reached a solid position in foreign markets before launching the new currency—to be known as the Arab dinar.

BEFORE MERGER with Egypt in 1958 Syria's economy was based on a free currency, free imports and exports, and rich revenues from the Iraq Petroleum Co. pipeline from the Iraq oil fields.

When Nasser took over he introduced a "planned economy," clamped down on imports and regulated exports. Revenues were diverted to Cairo and the Cairo treasury made up resulting deficits in Syria.

Economic experts said Syria could recoup somewhat by liberating trade and currency exchange. But they doubted that projects already launched could be completed without heavy foreign assistance.

CURIOUSLY, BOTH the Syria lira and the Egyptian pound rose several points in Beirut and Kuwait free money markets in the days following the Syrian revolt.

Brokers apparently bet on the belief that Syria would switch back to a free economy and the Syria lira would become active once more in international markets.

The same brokers felt the Egyptian pound was a better prospect because Cairo would no longer be required to support Syria's budget, informed observers said.

Ever since the U.A.R. was founded the national treasury has made up deficits in Syria resulting from industrialization and irrigation projects.

Constitution Amendments Wait Approval

The following amendments to the Student Constitution have been considered and passed by the Student Legislature and will come before the student body for ratification on November 7. Copies of the present Constitution are available in the Student Government Offices in Graham Memorial Union. An explanation of the changes the amendments will effect will appear in subsequent issues of the Daily Tar Heel.

PROPOSITION NO. 1

Paragraph e, Section 4, Article I of the Student Constitution shall be amended to read:

e. to establish procedures for the execution of its business.

PROPOSITION NO. 2

A) Article I, Section 4, Paragraph f of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill be amended to read:

f. To provide laws governing Student Government elections.

B) Article VI of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill be repealed and Article I, Section 4, be amended to add a paragraph n to read:

n. To determine the composition, powers, and functions of a Summer School Student Government.

C) Article I, Section 9 of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill be amended to read:

Section 9. Carolina Women's Council. There shall be a Carolina Women's Council whose duty shall be to handle matters which concern independent women.

PROPOSITION NO. 3

A) Article IV, Article V, and Section 7 through Section 14 of Article III of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill be repealed and a new Article IV be inserted to read:

Article IV

Organizations and Committees

Section 1. Student Union Board of Directors. The composition of the Student Union Board of Directors shall be established by the Student Legislature, provided that the Chancellor of the University shall appoint the faculty members of the Board. This Board shall be the governing body of the Student Union.

Section 2. Publications Board. The composition of the Publications Board shall be established by the Student Legislature. The Publications Board shall have the power to supervise financial administration of all student publications financed under the authority of the Student Legislature subject to limitations contained in the By-Laws of the Publications Board which the Legislature shall approve.

Section 3. Student Publications.

a. Editor-in-Chief Elected. The Editor-in-Chief of the student newspaper shall be elected by the Student Body at large.

b. Freedom of the Editors. Neither the Publications Board nor the Student Legislature shall exercise control over the Editors-in-Chief of the various publications in the performance of their duties, including the appointments of their staff, except where matters of finance be involved.

Section 4. Student Audit Board. The composition of the Student Audit Board shall be established by the Student Legislature. It shall be the duty of the Board to supervise the Student Activities Fund Office, and it shall have the power to inspect the books of any organization receiving funds from the Student Legislature.

Section 5. Elections Board. There shall be an Elections Board whose duty shall be to administer all laws governing elections passed by the Student Legislature. No more than fifty-five percent (55%) of the members of the Elections Board shall be from any one political party.

E) Article VII of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill be repealed and an Article V be inserted to read:

Article V

Elections, Reviews, Recall, and Initiative

Section 1. Elections. All elections for Student Government officers established by this Constitution, or established by the Student Legislature, and all recalls and referendums shall be conducted by the Elections Board. The dates for all elections shall be established by an act of the Legislature, but there shall be no elections held within one week after a scheduled University recess or during a University examination period. Election returns shall be judged by the Elections Board subject to review by the Constitutional Council except that the Student Legislature shall reserve the right to judge the elections of its own members.

Section 2. Time of Inauguration and Oath of Office. All Student Government Officers shall take an oath to uphold, protect, and preserve this Constitution. The inauguration ceremony shall take place within twelve school days after the election, or in the case of a disputed election within twelve days after the resolution of the dispute.

Section 3. Recall. Any constituency shall have power to recall any officer elected by that constituency under this constitution. If the constituency is campus-wide, the petition to recall shall be handed to the President of the Student Body and shall not be valid unless it contains the signatures of at least twenty-five percent (25%) of the qualified voters in the constituency concerned. The President shall, if he determines the petition to be in good order within the limitations of this constitution, direct the Elections Board to conduct an election for the office in question, in which election the officer in question shall have a right to be a candidate. The incumbent shall continue in office until the election returns shall be officially announced.

Section 4. Initiative. The Student Body shall have the power to initiate any act within the power of the Student Legislature, provided that ten percent (10%) of the Student Body shall sign a petition calling for an election on a bill which they shall submit in writing with the petition to the President of the Student Body. The President shall, if he determines the petition to be in good order with the limitations of this constitution, direct the Elections Board to conduct an election on the bill in not less than six, nor more than fifteen days after he shall have received the petition and bill. Public notice of such election shall be given not less than four days before it shall take place. A majority of the votes cast at the election shall be sufficient to pass the bill.

Section 5. Reviews. The Student Body shall have power to call for a ballot on any act of the Student Legislature, provided a petition calling for the ballot be signed by ten percent (10%) of the Student Body and transmitted in writing to the President of the Student Body. The President shall, if he determines the petition to be in good order within the limitations of this constitution, direct the Elections Board to conduct an election on the act in not less than six nor more than fifteen days after he shall have received the petition. Public notice of such election shall be given not less than four days before it shall take place. A majority of the votes cast at the election shall be sufficient to pass the bill.

Section 6. Coercion of Voters Prohibited. No group or organization on the campus of the University shall coerce any student or in any manner unduly influence his vote. The Student Legislature shall have the power to make laws to enforce this provision.

F) Article VIII, Article IX, and Article X of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina shall become Article VI, VII, and VIII respectively.

PROPOSITION NO. 4

Article II and prior amendments concerning Article II of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill shall be repealed and a new Article shall be inserted to read:

Article II

Judiciary

Section 1. Judiciary Bodies Established. The judicial power shall be vested in Constitutional Council, a Men's Council, a Women's Council, a Law School Court, a Men's Interdormitory Court, the Women's House Councils, and a Student-Faculty Review Board.

Section 2. Student Responsibility and the Responsibility of the Attorney General. It shall be the responsibility of every student at the University of North Carolina to obey the Honor Code prohibiting lying, cheating, or stealing, and to report any lying, cheating, or stealing of which he has knowledge; and it shall be the further responsibility of every student to abide by the Campus Code, namely to conduct herself or himself as a lady or gentleman at all times, and insofar as it may be appropriate, to see that his fellow students do likewise. It shall be the responsibility of the Attorney-General to initiate action in all cases or circumstances where there appears to be possible violation of the codes.

Section 3. Jurisdiction, Composition, and Procedure.

a. The Constitutional Council. The Constitutional Council shall have original jurisdiction in all cases involving the constitutionality of any legislative or executive action and shall hear appeals involving the Election Laws. The Constitutional Council shall be composed of three members elected by and from the Women's Council, three members elected by and from the Men's Council, and a chairman who shall be the Chairman of the Men's Council. The Council shall have the power to determine its own procedure.

b. The Men's Council. The Men's Council shall have original jurisdiction in all cases of violation by men of the Honor Code, the Campus Code, and all rules except those cases properly under the jurisdiction of the Constitutional Council, the Men's Interdormitory Court, and the three professional school courts. The Men's Council shall be elected under some form of geographical apportionment to be specified in statute by the Student Legislature. The Student Legislature shall have the power to determine the procedure to be used in the Men's Council within the limitations imposed by this Constitution.

c. The Women's Council. The Women's Council shall have original jurisdiction in all cases of violation by women of the Honor Code, the Campus Code, and all rules except those cases properly under the jurisdiction of the Constitutional Council, Women's House Councils, and the three professional school courts. This Council shall hear appeals from the Women's House Councils. While in the process of hearing appeals, the Women's Council shall not be considered as a judicial body of original jurisdiction. The Women's Council shall be elected under some form of geographical apportionment to be specified in statute by the Student Legislature. The Student Legislature shall have the power to determine procedure to be used in the Women's Council within the limitations imposed by this Constitution.

d. The Law School Court, the Medical School Court, and the Dental School Court. The Law School Court, the Medical School Court, and the Dental School Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases of violation of the Honor Code or the Campus Code by a student in their respective schools. They shall determine their By-Laws within the limitations imposed by this Constitution and subject to the approval of the Student Legislature.

e. The Men's Interdormitory Court. The Men's Interdormitory Court shall have original jurisdiction in cases involving infractions by male dormitory residents of dormitory rules of conduct as established by the Men's Interdormitory Council and approved by the Student Legislature. The Men's Interdormitory Council shall have the power to determine the composition of the Court and the procedures under which it shall operate within the limitations imposed by this Constitution and subject to approval of the Student Legislature.

f. Women's House Councils. Each Women's House Council shall have original jurisdiction in cases involving infractions by women of dormitory rules of conduct as established by the Women's Residence Council and approved by the Student Legislature. The Women's Residence Council shall have the power to determine the composition of the House Councils and the procedures under which they shall operate within the limitations imposed by this Constitution and subject to the approval of the Student Legislature.

Hurricanes Whip UNC 10-0 In Rainy Contest

A driving rain was not enough to stop the fired-up Miami Hurricanes in the Orange Bowl last night as sophomore quarterback George Mira led them to a 10-0 victory over North Carolina.

Mira, who had missed three games with injuries, came off the bench and paced the Hurricanes all the way. Mira passed for 124 yards and called a brilliant game in the third Miami win.

Carolina's running offense was stopped cold by the stout Miami line. A late passing surge almost pulled the Tar Heels back for a 3-0 deficit but two interceptions killed the Tar Heels in the final quarter.

Miami scored in the second quarter on a 30-yard field goal by Wilson. Their final score came in the fouth quarter on a brilliant run by Wilson after he caught a Mira pass.

Down 10-0, the Tar Heels attempted a score with a pro-type offense, with Farris throwing to swing end Bob Lacey. But the second Miami interception stopped the Carolina threat.

The Hurricanes gained 216 yards on the ground against only 21 for Carolina. Carolina rushing offense, which had done well in the rain at Maryland, was almost abandoned in favor of the passing game.

Carolina picked up only one first down by rushing. Miami led in first downs 16-9.

The brighest aspect of the Carolina game was the punting of quarterback Ray Farris who averaged 43.9 yards on seven kicks.

Carolina was penalized 24 yards as against 40 yards against Hurricanes.

Booters Meet Maryland Here At 2

By Curry Kirkpatrick

The North Carolina soccer team, fresh from its finest performance of the year last Tuesday, when they whipped the Davidson Wildcats 2-0, move up to the big leagues this afternoon, as they take on the perennial champions of the Atlantic Coast Conference—the University of Maryland Terrapins.

The visitors, who last year set a new ACC season scoring record of 50 goals while rolling to a 9-4 record and reaching the NCAA championships before losing to St. Louis University in the finals 3-2, have not been beaten in the ACC since 1959. Last year, they won all four of their conference matches, allowing only one goal to be scored against them and this year they have been even stingier, shutting out Virginia 3-0 and North Carolina State 10-0 in their two league games. The undefeated Terrapins, coached by Dale Royal and led by one of Maryland's all-time greats and certainly one of the top booters in the country—Juan Carlos Martin, an All-American center forward, also boast victories over two eastern powers, Army and Penn State. In their engagement with the Cadets, Maryland was extended into an overtime period before Martin "the Magnificent" who has been even more phenomenal this year than he was last, drilled one home to give the Terps a 4-3 victory.

Coach Marvin Allen's Tar Heels, aiming to prove their mettle and anxious to atone for last year's humiliating 5-0 defeat, have won four and lost two so far, with only one of these matches coming in league play. In that one, the boot-ers rolled to a relatively easy 5-3 triumph over State College. They also boast victories over Roanoke 2-0 and Washington and Lee 4-1, in addition to their decision over Dovidson this past week. Their two losses have come at the hands of Navy 6-1 and powerful West Chester 2-0.

Led by forwards Herman Prakke and Bill Shettle, who together have accounted for half the team's scores, Carolina will send their high-powered offensive line, which also includes steady senior Kingman Brown and playmaking sophomore Peter Blake, against one of the most feared defensive walls in college soccer. But the Tar Heels will exhibit a very formidable defense of their own. Bolstered by Captain Dick Bordogna, Charley Battle, and Steve Painter, who made his first appearance at the fullback slot against Davidson, the defensive crew has limited the opposition to only 20 shots on goal in the last two contests, and is looking forward to putting the wraps on Maryland's fabulous Martin.

Also having a lot to say about this will be the Tar Heels fine duo of goalies, senior Tom Griffith, who performed so admirably against Davidson, and the junior blonde "bomber" Larry Steele.

The match shapes up as an outstanding contest of Carolina offense against the vaunted Maryland defense, with the golden toe of Martin giving the Terps the edge. But coach Allen is conceding nothing and says his boys are ready. The finest brand of college soccer anywhere will be exhibited this afternoon at 2:00 on Fetzer Field and one of the largest crowds in history is expected for the contest.

Gallagher Twins Score As Frosh Whip Virginia, 20-0

By Ed Dupree

Quarterback Jim Gallagher entered the game for the first time in the final period and sparked UNC's freshman football team to a 20-0 victory over the Virginia frosh Friday.

Gallagher hit his twin brother, Frank, with an 11-yard pass early in the fourth quarter to give the Tar Babies their second score of the contest, and then scored himself on a 6-yard pass fake-run play for the Tar Babies' final touchdown.

The Carolina frosh tallied first with 26 seconds remaining in the opening stanza, when halfback Hank Barden skirted around left end from the 4. Dave Braine's kick gave the Tar Babies a 7-0 lead which they held until the final quarter.

Fumbles set up UNC's first two touchdowns as both teams had trouble hanging onto the ball. The Tar Babies lost the ball four times on fumbles, while the visitors lost it five times on miscues.

Carolina's Willy Trimble recovered Ralph Corley's fumble to set up the first Tar Baby six-pointer. Richard Zarro and Dave Braine carried the ball to the 4, from which Barden scored on the next play.

Virginia's Gene Angle fumbled on the 18 in the final period and UNC end Christian Hanburger pounced on it to put the Tar Babies within striking distance again. Two plays later, the Gallagher-to-Gallagher pass gave the Tar Babies a 13-0 lead and Dave Braine booted the extra point.

Jackson Ignites Drive

The Tar Baby ground game finally started rolling in the last period, as the Blue and White marched 75 yards for their third TD. Ronnie "Little Train" Jackson ignited the drive with a 38-yard jaunt from the UNC 25 to the UVA 37. Jim Szymaitis then carried 20 more yards to the 17, but a penalty moved the ball back to the 32. Quarterback Gary Black carried the pigskin to the 26 and a penalty against the Cavaliers pushed the ball to the 13.

Four plays later, Jim Gallagher went four yards around left end into the end zone, but a personal foul against the Tar Babies nullified the score and sent the ball back to the 16. After missing on one pass attempt, Gallagher hit Jackson for a ten-yard pass play and then scored himself on the next play.

The Tar Babies left the field with a 7-0 halftime lead, but the visitors outrushed and outpassed the UNC frosh in the first 30 minutes. At the half, Virginia had 80 yards rushing to UNC's 56, and had completed five passes for 52 yards, while the Tar Babies had picked up 34 yards on 3 completions.

A strong second half gave the home team a 13-10 margin in first downs and 273 total offensive yards to Virginia's 146. The Carolina frosh were penalized 100 yards, Virginia 58.

Net Match At 2:30

North Carolina's tennis team, defending Atlantic Coast Conference champions, will stage an intra-squad, Blue-White match today at 2:30.

Coach Don Skakle will have 16 varsity netters in uniform and will have them split into two teams. There will be eight singles matches and four doubles matches.

This will be the first preview of the team which could prove to be the best UNC has ever had.

LAKE NEVER FREEZES

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Scientists have found a miniature Dead Sea in freezes although temperatures there sometimes drop to 60 degrees below zero. Discovery of the shallow pond, 11 times more salty than ocean water, was disclosed Thursday in a dispatch from McMurdo Sound, Antarctica, by Richard Litel of the National Science Foundation.

Alexander, Joyner Win; Grimes And Manly Fall In Football Playoffs

By John Montague

The Alexander Playboys rolled over Grimes Thursday afternoon, continuing their race down the championship highway. Bobby Cox and Jim Beaver each scored two touchdowns as the Playboys had little trouble in blasting Grimes, 31-7, in the semi-final contest.

In another play-off contest, the Joyner Jocks settled one thing—the Manly Riverrats won't make it two championships in a row. The Jocks upset the defending champions, 13-8, on Jim Magner's second-half TD, and thus advanced themselves into a semi-final clash with the Town Touts.

The winner of the Joyner-Town Tout encounter will go up against the Playboys from Alexander in the dorm championship game.

Besides . . the double-barreled scoring punch of Cox and Beaver, the Alexander offensive onslaught included a TD and PAT by Bobby Cornwell. Sonny Simpson tallied a TD for Grimes, with Buster Harrill clipping in a rather futile extra point.

Andy Curl's touchdown coupled with a bad snap from the Joyner center, which resulted in a safety, gave the Riverrats an 8-6 halftime lead. The Jocks' six points were the result of Jim Blake's TD.

However, in the second half the Joyner defense rose to the occasion and thwarted all Manly scoring attempts while Magner crossed the goal for the crucial score. His touchdown was backed up by Jack Brothers' PAT as Joyner won its biggest game of the season.

NO HANDICAP

CHICAGO (UPI) — Police Supt. Orlando Wilson said Thursday that flat feet could no longer be considered a handicap to applicants for his department—now that the department is motorized.

WAAU Tennis

Bonnie Loving defeated Nancy Cates, 6-4, 7-5, in the semi-finals of the women's intramural tennis tournament Friday. Miss Gates is the defending champion and the present state champion. Miss Loving will meet Vivian Conklin in the finals next week.

Jim Hudock Will Captain Tar Heel Basketball Team

Jim Hudock has been appointed captain of this year's North Carolina basketball team, new head coach Dean Smith announced Wednesday.

The 6-7 senior forward is the only player on the team who was a consistent starter last year. He set a new school field goal percentage record of fifty per cent, breaking Lennie Rosenbluth's old mark.

Smith said Hudock "is an excellent leader" and that "his development in practice this fall indicates he should be one of the outstanding players in the ACC this season."

When It Rains, It Rains— On Both Football Teams

By Seve Snider

NEW YORK (UPI)—As the late Bob Zuppke used to say about his beloved game of football, "When it rains, it rains on both teams."

Thus Zup dismissed the wet weather alibi when he'd blown a game he might have won a dry field.

The same approach may be applied today to the "point spread" situation which now is being blamed in some quarters for working a psychological disadvantage on college football teams.

For every team that may go "flat" because it is favored by a sizeable chunk of points, there has to be an underdog that's fired to the heights in the same game by the knowledge it can go-for-broke and perhaps pull off an upset.

Danger In Cards

The real danger of the point spreads lies not in the friendly man-to-man bet in the grandstands but in the big business of the handicap cards available on every campus and in the big bets handled by a professional bookie.

Professional gamblers, seeking to beat the bookie, have corrupted many college basketball players and already have tried their hands at tinkering with college football.

This is a frightening invasion but preventative measures would have to go far deeper than taking the point spread listings out of the public eye.

Pro leagues in both basketball and football have their own "little FBIs" to check on such matters and the NCAA has its private contacts in the other world.

Each conference and even each individual school should be prepared to meet the challenge presented by the eternal war between the professional gambler and the professional bookie.

Cards Available

There have been handicap cards readily available to college kids, athletes and non-athletes alike, for at least three decades that we know of. Those cards are based strictly on the point spread system.

Furthermore, any serious football fan can sit down with a sheet of past scores of the top teams in the nation and in less than an hour come up with predictions of the following week's results that'll be strikingly similar to the "official" spread by supposedly highly informed bookmakers.

Just remember, if you like a team to win by 20 points, make it a conservative 14 and it'll be close to the bookie line.

Importance Of Being Earnest

There always has been a time when a good team comes up to a game unexpectedly "flat"—without that extra zip it takes to get ahead and stay ahead. And from time immemorial, underdogs have won because, as a coach says later, "We really were up for that one."

The players themselves have a sort of point spread built-in. They know when they figure to win and by just about how much. If they feel they can knock off Old Siwash without too much effort, they don't make the effort either in practice or in a game though they may not realize it themselves.

Plenty of upsets are born that way. And there's not much a coach can do about it.

But for every favorite that loses, isn't there an underdog that wins?

Virginia Greeks Object To Pledge

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI)—A Negro student from Trinidad was initiated into the Yale chapter of a national fraternity today over the objection of University of Virginia members who flew here to protest.

The reverse twist of Southern students coming North to try to keep the Negro out of the otherwise all-white Delta Psi fraternity was conducted in utmost secrecy without any banners or picketing.

But the five-man group which flew here from Charlottesville, Va., late Thursday in a twin-engined chartered plane obviously got a flat rejection of their opposition to the Yale chapter taking in Wendell A. Mottley, a sophomore track star.

The Delta Psi fraternity—also as St. Anthony Hall—announced the 25 pledges including Mottley had undergone the final initiation rites and were now full members.

Secret Session

The Southern students were closeted with the Yale members for almost four hours. They declined to comment on what had transpired, but it was expected they would fly back today and that the Virginia chapter must now decide whether it wants to stay in the national fraternity.

Mottley was one of two Negroes admitted to Yale fraternities this fall. The acceptance of Stanley B. Thomas Jr., a Negro sophomore from New York City, by Delta Kappa Epilson had gone virtually unnoticed.

Yale this year has an undergraduate student body of approximately 3,700 with only about 25 Negroes. Mottley, a crack quarter miler, is in the liberal arts school.

Three Dixie Chapters

Delta Psi, founded in 1868, has nine chapters at Columbia, the University of Pennsylvania, Trinity College, Williams College, the University of North Carolina, the University of Mississippi, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Virginia and Yale.

The five youths on the plane from Charlottesville were an immaculately dressed group of very serious demeanor who obviously intended to register their objections in a dignified way. Their spokesman, Ron Young, would say only that the group had come to discuss private fraternity business.

The red and white Aero-Commander plane they chartered cost $350 for the round trip.

UNC Debaters To Face Duke On Television

The Carolina debate team will debate Duke University Sunday night at 9:30 on WUNC-TV.

The debate is the first in a series of 10 North Carolina college debates to be televised this year on controversial issues. Sunday's debate, in which Carolina will take the affirmative, is on the topic: Resolved that labor organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation.

Mack Armstrong and Earl Baker, who achieved an almost perfect record in national competition last year, and Bill Patterson will represent Carolina. Professors Don Springen and Joseph Weatherby will be interviewed on the program with George Hall, station manager at Raleigh WUNC-TV moderating.

The winner of the debate will meet Wake Forest on Nov. 13.

Kemp Does It Again

AUCTIONEER KEMP. Kemp Battle Nye did it again yesterday—had a big, loud sale, that is. He drew the usual crowd of confused tourists, happy students, and confused coeds. Kemp auctioned records every half hour, sold others at 50 per cent discount, brought in people dressed in strange costumes, shouted. Ann Sarrat from Nashville, Tenn. poses with Kemp after spinning the auction wheel in rear.

DRAMATIQUE

The Petite Dramatique production of "Rainmaker" was cancelled last night because of the death of Kenton Kyle, who had a leading part in the play. Kyle died in an auto wreck late Friday night.

"Rainmaker" will be played tonight, however, as originally scheduled, 8:30 in Gerrard Hall.

Junior Election Laws Challenged By Senior

Smith Says Junior Office Not Mentioned

A statement contesting the existence of Junior class officers under the standing Election Laws was presented to the DTH yesterday.

Senior Newt Smith, who submitted the statement, claims that Article IV. Section 3 of the General Election Law makes no mention of the election of Junior Class officers. The section provides for the election of Freshman and Sophomore officers in the Fall election but nothing is mentioned about the Junior Class officers.

Smith emphasized that the standing rule which leaves out the Junior Class officers is completely valid. "The vice-president Bob Sevier signed the bill. This indicates that this bill was correct and passed in the legislative meeting. This same bill was signed by President David Grigg."

No Remedy

"There is no remedy for this oversight of the Elections Laws because the By-Laws of the Student Legislature prohibits the amendment of the Election Laws within 30 days of the election," said Smith.

"I present this statement because I feel that there is no validity in electing Junior Class officers. I also feel that this would be an ideal way to eliminate the class officer system—one at a time," Smith said. He said that the class officer system served no valid purpose under the present Student Government system, and that "a whole page in the Yack was too much for anyone except recognized authorities and representatives."

Smith's statement was followed by a brief announcement from sophomore Jeff Bayer that he would "now press my point even harder."

Bayer is running for sophomore class president as a candidate who "will attempt to abolish class officers if I am elected." Bayer has also claimed that the officer system serves no valid purpose.

Student government officials were unavailable for comment on either Smith or Bayer's charges.

NELSON ROCKEFELLER

N.Y. Governor Asks For Test In Atmosphere

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York called on the United States Friday to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere and move swiftly to develop a neutron bomb.

Rockefeller said he was opposed to another moratorium on nuclear testing. He urged speed in developing a neutron bomb and other "new weapons of greater precision and flexibility," despite any opposition which might arise from other nations.

"It is one thing for America to be conscienciously concerned with the views of neutralist nations," he said. "It would be quite tions," he said. "It would be a quite thing for America to start behaving like one."

Rockefeller's speech to the national convention of Sigma Delta Chi, National Professional Journalism Society, was his first major speech on national issues since the election of President Kennedy last November. His aides termed it "non-political."

De Gaulle Regime Seems Riding High In Spite Of Crises

New Commentary by Joseph W. Grigg

PARIS (UPI) — Despite all its current tribulations, President Charles de Gaulle's regime in France is riding higher and more confidently today than anyone would have dared predict three months ago.

Living from crisis to crisis is something to which the French have long since become accustomed.

Today's French headlines conform to the usual pattern of headaches for the government—Algerian riots in the heart of Paris, a nightly barrage of plastic bombings, angry farmers roughing up the minister of agriculture and a 24-hour nationwide transport tie-up.

The Algerian war is about to enter its eighth year. Moslems and Europeans are daily at each others' throats in the strife-torn North African territory.

But there is a strong feeling among competent observers of the French scene that things could be a great deal worse. In fact, only a few months back the betting was that they would be.

Informed Crystal Ball Gazing

Early this summer a group of senior foreign correspondents in Paris met with a distinguished western ambassador and indulged in some serious, informed crystal ball-gazing.

Their predictions, based on all the evidence then available, included among things that were likely to happen by mid-September:

—A desperate, all-out attempt by extreme rightists, perhaps with support of part of the French army, to ovetrthrow the De Gaulle regime.

—A crippling wave of industrial strikes coupled with widespread farm unrest.

The same group reviewed its predictions this week and concluded they were fully justified at the time they were made. But the group agreed that it was largely through skillful handling and firmness on De Gaulle's part, coupled with a fair measure of good luck, that the predictions did not come about.

Staved Off Revolt

Perhaps the government's biggest success has been in staving off—so far, at least—the expected right-wing revolt.

Astute police work has put many leaders of the extreme rightist Secret Army Organization (OAS) behind bars. Under heavy pressure from the French, the Spanish government interned most of its exiled ringleaders in Spain. The secret OAS radio transmitter which broadcast anti-De Gaulle propaganda daily in Algiers was captured.

This does not mean all danger of a rightist revolt is past. Qualified foreign diplomats here still expect the extremists to launch a final desperate bid—not to seize power in France, because this seems out of the question now, but to set up an independent "French Algeria" republic in Algeria based on the big port cities of Algiers and Oran with their large European populations.

But, it is thought, even such a limited objective would have little or no chance of succeeding. It could only be a desperate last blow by desperate men.

Friday Urges Support For State Bond Issue

North Carolina's "progress and development in the near future is directly related to the success of the Nov. 7 bond issue," President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University said recently.

State-supported universities will receive $31 million if their portion of the $61.7 million issue is passed. Of that amount the Consolidated University — UNC at Chapel Hill, State College and Woman's College — would receive $13.4 million.

Friday told the Daily Tar Heel that the state schools "must have these minimum needs met through this bond issue to progress as they should."

State-supported colleges and universities are an "integral part of the whole education structure," said the CU president.

"Primary Importance"

"During the last session of the General Assembly, primary importance was assigned to improvement of public schools. This was as it should have been. Consolidated University whole-heartedly supports Gov. Sanford's program.

"But, a program for quality education," continued Friday, "requires improvement at all levels and the University is the capstone of the North Carolina public education.

"The legislature provided funds for higher faculty salaries and fulfilled other University needs at its last session. This bond issue, if passed, will provide the more urgently needed capital improvements for the schools."

"Adequate Facilities"

Concerning the entire issue, "One of the most important problems facing the state today is providing adequate facilities for institutions of higher learning, the ports authority, the mental institutions, and the other areas which will be aided by the issue."

In addition to the $31 million for higher education, the bond issue includes $13.5 million for state ports authority, $7.4 million for state mental institutions, $2.9 million for capital area buildings, and $2.6 million for archives and history and state library buildings.

UNC's portion of the $13.4 million which is the CU's share of the educational requests, is $5,-392,000.

Included are: $2 million for "stage one" of the Health Center; $1.6 million for a student union-undergraduate library; $730,000 for a new cafeteria-service building; money for renovations and additions to Wilson Hall, Phillips Hall, Cobb dormitory, the heating plant and steam piping system; and funds for paving driveways and parking lots on campus.

William C. Friday

"Carefully Considered"

"Each item in the bond issue for UNC has been thoughtfully and carefully considered by Chancellor (William) Aycock and his staff," said Friday.

"There is no doubt in my mind but that the items are badly needed," he said.

State College in Raleigh has items totalling $4.7 million in the issue. Included in this request is money for a new 800-man dormitory; renovation and additions to classrooms and research buildings; a new general forestry building; and acquisition of 800 acres of the Finley property.

Two dormitories and additions to classrooms and the dining hall are the major items for Woman's College in Greensboro, the third member of the Consolidated University.

$22 Million Debt

President Friday stressed that students "are carrying a sizeable percentage of the cost of construction of campus facilities included in the bond issue." If the items in the Nov. 7 issue are passed, the student self-liquidating debt for the CU, said Friday, would be $22 million.

UNC's student union-undergraduate library requires $1 million student self-liquidating funds, plus the $1.6 million in the bond issue.

Friday again emphasized the dependence of the state systems of universities on the bond issue for continued progress.

99,000 Enrollment

"Reliable predictions indicate that enrollment in all institutions of higher education will be in excess of 99,000 by 1970. This year's enrollment was 70,000.

"The difference is one indication of the dimension of North Carolina's education problem," said the CU president.

"It usually requires a period of 24 to 36 months to construct a facility once the funds are provided," said Friday.

"This means that we must act now to make provision to meet increasing enrollment demands already upon us. The bond issue will aid considerably toward this goal."

Integrationists Planning Meet With Varsity

The Citizens Committee for "Open" Movies is attempting to set up a meeting with the Varsity Theater manager to ask him to present a plan for complete integration

Chapel Hill's picketing group plans for the meeting for Nov. 7 with Andy Gutierrez of the Varsity.

The 16-person executive committee met Wednesday afternoon after they were elected at the Tuesday mass meeting at the St. Joseph's AME Church. The mass meeting voted to give the theater managers until the first part of January to integrate their theaters for all persons. Until then the executive committee will attempt to negotiate with theater managers.

Varsity Segregated

Presently the Carolina is integrated for UNC Negro students only. The Varsity is completely segregated.

Officers were elected at the Wednesday executive committee meeting. They are: Chairman, Mrs. Evangeline Darity; vice-chairman, Martin Primack; and secretary-treasurer, Richard Ginnold. All are Chapel Hill students or residents.

LOOK FOR BEER BUSTS

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI)—Local police have been keeping their eyes open for any "beer busts" ever since a fraternity house reported the theft of $245 worth of beer mugs.

'Average' College Student Analyzed

By Nancy Barr

What is the average college student like?

What is his major? How much does he spend, How much money does his family make? Where does he live? What is his father's occupation?

A recent "Time" magazine survey has tried to answer these questions plus many others about the average college student. Including state supported schools, parochial and other private institutions, the survey covered a total of 4,69[illegible] college students over a three-year period.

Dads and Moms

According to the survey, more than a third of today's college students have fathers who have attended college, but the percentage is slightly lower for students whose mothers have attended college.

The percentage of women students who have parents who attended college is strikingly higher than men students.

Over three-fourths of the parents of all students are engaged in some form of business, including farming. The other fourth of the parents are employed in education medicine, law, clergy, government work, armed forces or some other profession.

Of the family heads engaged in business, almost one-third are top executives. Other positions held in the order of highest percentages are managers and department heads, skilled workers, semi-skilled and unskilled workers, salesmen farmers ,engineers and the clergy

Less Than $10,000

According to the survey, almost one-half of the parents of college students fall in the $5,000-$9,000 income bracket. Only one-fifth of the parents make just $3,000-$4,999 while almost one-third of the parents make $10,000 or over.

This may account for the fact that about 75 per cent of all students earn part of their college expenses.

Interestingly enough, more university students live at home or in apartments and rooming houses in the college town than live in university-owned dormitories. According to the survey 7 per cent of all students live in fraternity and orority houses.

22 Per Cent Married

Although most of the university students are single, 22 per cent of the men are married and only 0 per cent of their wives are also attending school. The survey shows, however, that 75 per cent of all married students have husbands or wives who have attended college n the past or are now attending college.

The largest number of all students major in the humanities—history, fine arts, music, literature, anguages, philosophy and religion. Business administration, the sciences and engineering majors run high on the male interest list, while women choose education and social studies majors as well as the humanities.

Most students spend anywhere rom $600 to $1,499 for tuition, oom and board and special fees. However, over 20 per cent spend $1,500 to $3,000, while another 20 per cent spend less than $600. The average for all college students falls at about the $1,000 mark.

Education, knowledge and love of learning are the principal reasons for attending college, according to the survey, with the desire for a professional, specialized degree and ability to earn a good living coming in a close second. A few students attend college for social standing, marriage and to fulfill parents' hopes.

Government Institute Librarian Escaped Hungarian Revolution

By Nancy von Lazar

Law cases often turn up unusual twists but seldom does the case of a lawyer pop into prominence through a twist of fate as it has with Olga Palotai, librarian at Carolina's Institute of Government.

Six years ago, Olga had a successful law practice in Budapest, Hungary, where she lived with her husband and two children. This was before the Hungarian Revolution occurred in October, 1956.

Close on the heels of the unsuccessful Revolution, Olgo knew that the only way to secure the kind of life she wanted and needed for herself and her family was to endure all the dangers accompanying an escape from a tyrannical government.

She made her flight to the free West during the time between sunset and dawn through 20 miles of forest dividing the Hungarian and Austrian borders. Necessity forced her and her husband to separate and when she arrived at the fence separating Hungary from the Western world, she found the fence had been cut and not repaired. Olga was able to walk easily into Austria.

"Animal Nothing"

"When your life is at stake, the strongest animal is nothing to man," said Olga.

The Palotais came to the United States in 1957. Olga was determined to learn the English language and to add it to her fluent knowledge of French, German, and Hungarian.

Fortunately, for the Institute of Government, Olga's brother, Tihamer Z. Csaky, M.D., who has been teaching in America since 1949, was an assistant professor of pharmacology at UNC, so the Palotais came to Chapel Hill. Olga entered the University in 1958 majoring in library science and minor in law.

To her European law background, she added knowledge of American law; she complemented her language training with a new profession, library science—where she could use all her languages in an excellent capacity.

"The Institute staff has accepted me as their librarian in spite of the fact of my accent," Olga said.

Unusual English

She occasionally strings words of the English language together in a way unusual to Americans' ears, yet the meaning is not lost and the phrase is often more potent than what we Americans do with our speech. Olga's colleagues tell a story about her way with the English language. One day a friend of Olga's came into the Institute Library just beaming with radiance. Olga looked at her and said, "Marjorie, you have a glamor on your face!"

No Election?

An unfortunate series of clerical errors and administrative oversights has resulted in a contesting of the Election Board's right to conduct an election for junior class officers.

At present ,there is no provision in the elections laws for such an election.. Both the freshman class and the sophomome class officers are mentioned, but the junior class officers are conspiciously absent from the document.

The situation, as nearly as the DTH can find, is that the typist neglected to include the provision for the election of junior class offiers in the original bill signed by Bob Sevier and David Grigg, vice-president and president of the student body, respectively, when the bill was passed.

The matter is complicated by a ruling that the elections laws cannot be changed less than 30 days before the election.

There are two alternatives in this situation, neither of which is desirable. The first is that no election be held; the other is that the Elections Board wink at the constitution and proceed with present plans to have a junior class election.

Newt Smith, who submitted a statement to the DTH contesting the validity of electing junior class officers without a provision, argues that there can be no election.

However, there is another possibility: the issue can be turned over to the Student Council for action. In light of the situation, this is the only way that both the junior class offices and the election laws can be protected.

The Student Council, reasonably, can rule that the intention to include the provision is clear, since the original bill that was approved by the student legislature did contain the provision for the junior class offices, but this section was deleted by clerical error before being signed by Grigg.

In any case, it appears that "abolutionist" Newt Smith has the Elections Board by a rather tender spot.

Not 'Soft'

There has been an unusual silence among the most vocal critics of the U. S. Supreme Court since the court refused to re-examine its ruling that the U. S. Communist Party must register as a conspiracy agent of the Soviet Union.

The court was sharply split (5-4) on the issue in the ruling handed down last June. But even the dissenting members were more concerned with the damage that might later be done individual, non-Communist Americans than providing a constitutional haven for the Communist Party.

The vote of the five-man majority was a clear answer to foes of the court who have charged it is "soft on communism." Even so, the action is not likely to stop an organized attack upon Cheif Justice Earl Warren, a member of the dissenting minority. He has been the special target of extreme right-wingers in recent months.

The decision to allow the June ruling to stand has apparently pulled the last legal leg from under domestic Communists after a fight that lasted 11 years.

It affirms that it is a crime to be a member of the party, knowing the purposes thereof, and every officer and member must be registered as agents of the oviet Union. Records of the party's financial contributors must also be filed.

The action does not officially "outlaw" the Communist Party, but Justice Hugo Black argued that it has the same effect. Justice John Harlan, speaking for the majority, commented that membership must be active, not nominal, passive or theoretical. The ruling does not outlaw any political activity except overthrow of the government by force.

The Supreme Court's review refusal has set the stage for a showdown between Attorney General Robert Kennedy and Communist officials, who have said they will defy the court's ruling.

Undoubtedly, the court action has handed the Department of Justice its strongest weapon in dealing with the domestic Communist threat. And the tough-minded Attorney General can be expected to enforce the law without quarter.

Whether this will result in driving the Communists under ground without lessening their menace is a question that only future events can answer.

Any way you look at it, however, the public rolls of the Communiht Party will be far lesh attractive to members than the opportunity of joining in secrecy.

FROM THE LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL

As Draft Hiked, WHO's Going WHEN?

Q. General Hershey, how many men will have to be drafted in the months ahead for the military build-up?

A. We'ce heard rumors that run all the way from 100,000 to 200,000 men that we might have to furnish in this fiscal year, which started on July 1. think 200,000 is probably a pretty liberal estimate.

Q. We know the draft call is 25,000 in September. Do you think calls will average out at about 25,000 a month for the rest of the fiscal year?

A. I thought so for a few days. At the present time, I doubt if it'll be quite that high, because now, at least, they're talking down the number of people they're going to have in the armed forces. I don't pretend to know what will happen in the future. The Army says the October call will be for at least 20,000.

Q. Who's going to be taken first? Mostly 23-year-olds?

A. This step-up in calls came to us when we were at about the 23-year-old age level. Now, you get confused on that because we get into this kind of business: Somebody will say, "Well, last month your average age was 21"—and that's right, because the men we delivered consisted of 40 per cent volunteers for induction who were 18- or 19-year-olds, and 60 per cent of people actually drafted or involuntarily inducted who were 23-year-olds, so the "average" was 21—yet there wasn't anybody, or very few, who actually went at that age.

Q. Of those actually drafted, are you going to go below age 23?

A. Well, we're going to drop as the number of 23-year-olds exhausts. We've been hanging right on age 23, but the number of men available there isn't going to hold us forever. We're going to move on back toward the 22-year-olds. I don't anticipate this happening very fast.

Q. By the end of this year, do you think?

A. This fiscal year, yes. That'll be next summer.

Q. Do you see any prospect of getting down to age 21?

A. Yes, I see prospects, but these are prospects based on the assumption that something else happens to create more demand.

If you're talking about the present calls, the answer is "No." We have 1,600,000 men that are in 1-A. Now, that's an artificial number, I'm sure, because times tend to cause classifications to get unreliable.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Take the kids in college: I wouldn't want to bet, but I estimate somewhere around 100,000 to 150,000 kids who are going to school are in 1-A now. Why? Because they havn't told anybody they were in school. Why not? Because if they did tell their draft boards, and got deferred, they extended their liability to age 35.

As long as there wasn't any prospect of them being taken, they figured they'd go on and get through college and then try to look around and see what was going on then. But now, with this call-up, things will look different, and many of those kids will ask for deferment.

So we stand to lose from our 1-A's, in the next month or two—I don't know how many, for sure. But even if we lost half of our 1,600,000, we still have 800,000.

The point is, you see, our number on hand is so tremendous, relatively, that we're going to have to exhaust them first before we begin to think of changing the rules any.

And back of all those 1-A's are 2,000,000 registrants who haven't been classified at all. Now, of those registrants, 500,000 or 600,000 are the boys between 18 and 18½ who are registered but not classified because they're not liable under present rules.

If things get serious enough so that the 19-year-olds are gone, then we'd start classifying them at 18.

Q. Do you plan not to touch the boy who's in college?

A. We've had some rules on people going to college, but we have pretty long since gotten on the soft side of the rules: If the college didn't throw him out, we didn't pull him out.

Oh, once in a while you have some boy that forgets to tell his board he hasn't been in college for a year or two, and then about the time they start reaching for him he goes back into school, and sometimes he has a little difficulty with the board.

But, by and large, the people who are in college, who qualify under any of our rules, plus the ones who are in college who are certified as satisfactory by the college—they can finish college before we take them.

Q. Suppose a college student falls below the level of the upper three-fourths of his class. If his college notifies the board, does he then get classified 1-A?

A. No. You probably could prove that we have taken one occasionally. But, by and large, the answer is "No," because, for three or four years, we have been advocating that it's better to have a boy doing something, even if it's only just barely staying in college, than to have him doing nothing.

Q. I judge from what you say that a boy can get into 1-A and still very probably be a long way from being drafted—

A. Yes, unless he volunteers.

Q. So that a boy who is 1-A but has some good reason, such as being in college, even though he doesn't measure up to the requirements as to class standing, would have a pretty good chance—

A. I think he'd have a pretty good chance of getting deferred.

But remember, my local boards read the papers, too, and they tend to react. So one of the problems I've got now is to kind of throttle them back, and it's a very difficult thing to do—at the very time there are good reasons why our citizens tend to believe it is time for action.

Q. Suppose a boy gets classified 1-A and thinks he ought not to be 1-A. Can he go to his own board and try to get reclassified?

A. Yes. The first thing, he goes and asks for a hearing. Of course, he ought to do it within 10 days of getting his 1-A notice, instead of waiting to the next year. He ought to go ask for a hearing.

Q. Does that mean he appears before the board?

A. Yes, he appears personally and tells them, "I don't believe you read what I said about myself," or something.

Now, supposing he gets turned down. Then he, within 10 days, ought to take an appeal, because he has unrestricted right of appeal. He doesn't have to say anything except, "I don't like what I got." Or he doesn't even say that. And that goes into the appeal board.

Q. Does he have to act within 10 days of receiving his notice that he has been put in 1-A — or lose his chance to appeal?

A. Well, otherwise, we have to restore it. The answer is "Yes," he loses it, but, of course, in practice, this is one of the things that drives us to distraction—the cases where a year ago a fellow got in 1-A and he said, "What the hell." And now he comes and says, "Who put me in 1-A?" So then you have to go around reopening cases and restoring his appeal rights.

Q. If a boy in 1-A gets into college for the new term just starting, is he safe for the rest of the year?

A. Yes, if he doesn't get orders before he gets into school. If he's ordered when he's in school, then the law applies that gives obligatory postponement to the end of the college year. He can have that only once, of course.

Q. But without regard to his class standing—

A. Without regard to his class standing, yes; but he's got to stay in school and be satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course.

Q. If during that year, when he is safe, he maintains his class standing, presumably he's good for another year?

A. Yes. Of course, that's presuming things are going to stay as they are, and our demands for men do not rise.

Q. You said there were 100,000 to 150,000 college boys in 1-A. Is this a dangerous thing for them to do—to go to college without telling you? Could they end up in trap?

A. Of course they can end up in a trap. Some of them may have been just lazy, but I don't think so. I think most of them are quite aware of what they're doing. They said, "I'm not going to ask for deferment because that will extend my liability about nine years, and I'll be through with college before I'm 23, anyway, and we'll take a look at it then."

Q. Can students who are in graduate school, who have finished their four years of college, also get deferred to the end of their studies?

A. Yes. Of course, we started out allowing that only on mathematics and science and engineering, and then it turns out the world is as it is because we don't have proficiency in language, and we are as we are because we haven't studied economics and sociology and a lot of other things. And the first thing you know, even music and drawing have become essential—

Q. General Hershey, isn't that considered a loophole in the whole draft law—a young man goes into college at 18, finishes at 22, then takes two years of graduate work, which brings him to 24, and you don't want him any more—

A. No, that's not right. The reason we're drafting them at age 23 is because there wasn't anybody available at 24 or at 25.

Q. You'll take 24- and 25-year-olds if you have them?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. At what stage is a boy given his preinduction physical examination?

A. That depends on when the numbers in the pool of 1-A's who have been examined and accepted begin to fall. The week before President Kennedy made his speech on the Berlin crisis (July 25), I ordered the boards to increase the pool to 100,000.

Q. What do you mean by the pool of 100,000?

A. One hundred thousand men in the United States who have been examined and accepted and therefore are presumably available within 10 days—they're on notice that you can send them any time with 10 days' warning. Practically, that isn't so, because the Army rejects some of them. But, in theory, that's what I have.

Now, we get down to about 68,000 in this pool at the end of June, for a lot of reasons. One is we were short of money. It takes money to keep that pool up, because you have to send men to be physically examined, and we pay for that. They have to go up to the examining station and come back at our expense.

Another thing is that, the older that pool is, the less reliable it is. More things happen to people who are in it—their physical condition, their marital condition, maybe even their student condition can change, if they've been examined and accepted for six or eight months. A fellow might have been a married man when he got examined and now he's a father.

Q. Are fathers still draft-exempt?

A. They're deferred, as a rule. Of course, in theory, if they've been ordered for induction, the Government takes no responsibility for what happens after a man gets ordered for induction. But, practically, we have been canceling inductions in such cases, even if a man comes in with a certificate of pregnancy after he's been ordered for induction. In fact, quite a lot of them have been turned back at the induction station.

Q. What about a father who is no longer living with his wife?

A. He's got to be maintaining a home—living with the children. Our definition of "father" includes that.

Q. Can a boy who is 1-A, but is uncertain when he might be called, go to his draft board and ask for a physical examination in advance?

A. I don't want to say "No," because we've done it quite a lot of times. You see, he's getting examined six or eight months ahead of time. But even when he finds out the result of that, he still doesn't know if he's going to go.

Q. What if he's 4-F? Can he relax then?

A. No. His obligation to serve extends until 35. The need may become great enough to compel the use of large numbers of 4-F's. In addition, there are other responsibilities of citizenship, such as civil defense, in which he can and should participate.

For some months, we've been sorting out those people we think the military would take in an emergency, but who are rejected today. We don't even put those people in 4-F. They're rejected, but they stay in 1-A.

Q. What percentage do you reject for physical reasons?

A. I don't like the "you," because I don't reject anybody. But the armed forces reject somewhere approaching 50 per cent.

Remember, that isn't a good figure for the whole population, because, in the first place, you don't examine everybody; and, in the second place, the pool consists not only of the people who have never been examined, but also includes some people who have tried to enlist and have been rejected. And they contribute to the rejection rate.

Q. Are physical requirements higher now than in the past?

A. Yes. Mental standards went up three years ago. That accounts for part of the rejection rate. Physical standards were changed somewhat several months ago. But we were rejecting around 40 per cent even with the old rules. You can figure that about 40 per cent of the people who are rejected are turned down because of their mental lack, and 40 per cent are turned down because of their physical lack, and 20 per cent have both.

Q. If a boy is 1-A, can he go to his draft board and find out if he's going to be called within a month or two months?

A. No, they can't tell him. In the first place, they don't know any more about future calls than I do, and, in the second place, the thing that complicates it—and there's nothing I can do about it, because the law is very specific—is this:

Suppose he is No. 1 in his draft board and they said, "The next time we take anybody, it looks as though you'd go," and he comes back in three days and says, "You sending anybody?" And the board says, "Yes, we're going to send four." So he says, "I'm going." And they say, "No."

Then he says, "Well, the last time I was in here you told me I was going first!" And their answer is: "Five people have come in here and volunteered since you were here." And the law says you cannot take a man ahead of a volunteer.

Q. When a boy volunteers, how long does he serve?

A. Two years, the same as the inducted man who waits to be drafted. Now, it's different if you enlist, rather than volunteering for induction.

Q. Enlistment is for three years?

A. Three or four, depending on the service.

Q. Volunteering for induction — what does this involve?

A. He volunteers to go on the draft call. And since, at present, we're only sending men to the Army, this means he goes to the Army.

The only thing he does is waive his priority rights. He was back along the line and he said, "I want to go to the head of the line." And that's all there is to it. He goes through the same thing he'd go through maybe two or three years later, when we got down to him, if he just waited for the draft.

Q. He's getting his service out of the way early?

A. That's right. Now, he doesn't go where he wants. He goes where he's sent, just the same as the other people that are inducted at the same time. Maybe there are only two of them going—the other fellow is 23 and he had to go, and this boy who was 8 went up and said, "I'm going along."

Q. And what happens to him after he comes out?

A. He comes home and, of course, immediately then the nature of his Inactive Reserve service depends upon his location in respect to units.

Q. What is his obligation at that point?

A. His obligation is for four years in the Reserves. One of the things to remember is that there are two kinds of Ready Reserves: The "ready" Ready and "unready" Ready. Now, the "ready" Ready are in units, organized, equipped to some extent at least, drilled, and so forth and so on. The other people are on lists.

Q. What happens to the young man who wants to go into the Navy or the Air Force? What must he do?

A. He goes and enlists.

Q. And then is he in for three years or four years?

A. That's right, whatever his contract is. Of course, as the law was written years ago, it said that, after he's ordered for induction, he can't enlist. But, as a practical matter, if we hear about it—if I hear about it—I cancel his induction, because, if he wants to enlist, I say, all right, let him go and enlist.

Q. Is the six months' Reserve program still in effect?

A. Yes, it's still in effect. But, of course, one of the problems there is to find vacancies. (On August 16, the Army announced that enlistments in its six-month Reserve-training program would be restricted to men under age 20, from September 1 through December, 1961; and that no volunteers would be accepted for active-duty training in this period. The Navy, which takes trainees only for its Air Reserve, and the Air Force have not announced a ban on enlistments in their six-month program, but vacancies are often scarce in most recruiting areas.)

Q. General Hershey, do most draft boards have a backlog of volunteers these days?

A. No, not most of them. That varies a great deal. Puerto Rico has got quite a backlog. New York City ran up—oh, it was a year ago or more—I think New York City ran for 16 months once without inducting a man. That is, every man they inducted was a volunteer. I think now we're running about 40 per cent of our calls with volunteers, over all.

Q. Would a draftee have as much of a chance to become a noncommissioned officer, or go to officer training?

A. No, I don't think so. I'm a little afraid that, because the Army's not going to have them long, they obviously tend not to push them up.

Q. General, is the draft going to be a permanent feature of American life?

A. I don't know. Of course, I've said that I'm not going to live long enough to find out that it isn't.

Q. You've been head of Selective Service how many years?

A. Since 1941.

Constitutional Amendments Await Student Approval

g. The Student-Faculty Review Board. The Student-Faculty Review Board shall have the right to review cases of students convicted of offenses by judicial bodies of original jurisdiction. These cases shall be referred to it by the Chancellor. The Student-Faculty Review Board shall be composed of the Chairman of the Men's Council, the Chairman of the Women's Council, the President of the Student Body, and three faculty members appointed by the Chancellor. In the event of a review from the Men's Council or the Women's Council, the Chairman of the Council from which the review originates shall not vote, and the board shall appoint the chairman of another body of original jurisdiction to hear that particular case. The Board shall determine its own procedures, except that a majority vote of its members shall be sufficient to alter the verdict or sentence of a judicial body of original jurisdiction.

Section 4. Election of Officers. The Men's Council and the Women's Council shall elect their own officers from their respective memberships.

Section 5. Offenses and Punishments. Except where the Student Legislature shall have fixed the offense and limitation of punishment, the judicial bodies established herein shall have discretionary authority, providing that they shall take full cognizance of the traditional offenses and punishments heretofore enforced at this University. The power of suspension shall be limited to the Men's Council, the Women's Council, the Law School Court, the Medical School Court and the Dental School Court.

Section 6. General Procedures. The following procedures shall apply to all judicial bodies of original jurisdiction hearing cases involving alleged violations of the Campus and Honor Codes:

a. The minimum number of Council members to hear a case shall be six including a chairman;
b. A two-thirds majority of the council members hearing a case shall be required to convict a defendant;
c. A two-thirds majority of the council members hearing a case shall be required to suspend or expel a student who has been convicted; a simple majority of the council members hearing a case shall be required to impose lesser penalties;
d. A council member shall disqualify himself from hearing a particular case should he possess any prior information which would prejudice his judgment.

Section 7. Rights of the Accused. The following rights shall be granted to an accused student in judicial bodies of original jurisdiction:

a. The presumption of innocence until guilt is proven;
b. The right to face his accuser upon request, except when this is judged to be impossible by the council hearing the case;
c. The right of due notice, which shall be defined as seventy-two hours preceding a hearing. When a defendant so chooses, he or she may request a reasonable extension of this seventy-two hour period. An extension shall not exceed seven days except in the most unusual circumstances. Any extensions shall be granted at the discretion of the Attorney General except that the Council may, at the time of the trial, grant an extension if it deems one necessary.
d. The right to assistance by a defense counsel, who shall be chosen from among those students under the jurisdiction of the specific judicial body in which the case arises. Such defense counsels shall be granted freedom to present all evidence pertinent to the case and the right of summation. Any student may act as his own defense counsel;
e. The right to summon material witnesses through the appropriate judicial body;
f. The right to summon as many as five character witnesscs, and have read in his behalf a reasonable number of statements attesting to his character. These witnesses or statements may come from outside the student body. Character witnesses or character statements shall be permitted the maximum freedom to perform their function;
g. The right to remain within the chambers of the judicial body during any period of testimony, and to question said testimony;
h. The right to a fair trial. This includes the right to disqualify a member(s) of a judicial body from sitting in judgment upon a particular case. The defendant shall be informed of the composition of the particular judicial body by the Attorney-General at least seventy-two hours prior to his trial, and must present a valid reason for such disqualification. Final judgment upon a request for any disqualification shall be vested in the judicial body hearing the case.
i. The right to a public trial, which shall be defined as meaning the presence of no more than two representatives of the student newspaper within the chambers of the judicial body during a particular case. Only people signing a written release may be mentioned in resulting publicity. Unless a defendant requests a public trial, the proceedings shall be kept secret, except for such information as the defendant may disclose at his discretion;
j. The right to a separate trial upon request;
k. The right upon conviction to apply in writing within seventy-two hours to the Office of Student Affairs for an appeal to the Student-Faculty Review Board;
l. The right, upon a verdict, to be free from retrial by a student judicial body for the same offense;
m. The right to be informed of his rights under the Student Constitution at least seventy-two hours prior to his trial.

Manners And Morals Around U.S. Both Bug & Bemuse Americans

(Editor's note: President Kennedy says we happen to be living in the most dangerous time in the history of man. How are the American people reacting under stress? United Press International asked its correspondents in 30 American cities and towns to report on manners and morals morale in this autumn of 1961, to try to find out what is bugging people and what is bemusing them.)

By Jack V. Fox
(United Press International)

These words from a reporter in the nation's capital touched a nerve of response that was evident in almost every part of the nation:

"The Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, seems to have expressed the deeply-felt sentiment of people here when he said recently that if worse came to worst, the one all-important thing is that we 'go out decently.'

"I'd say that the mood of the capital these days, from JFK down, is that we will do the things we must do, including defend the freedom of Berlin, and leave the rest in the hands of God or fate, or however you want to put it.

"I think most people here—even those who talk most pessimistically—are secretly convinced that somehow it's all going to work out and mankind will muddle through without destroying himself. At least, people are acting on that assumption."

The one subject that people everywhere seemed to be talking about most was backyard fallout shelters and whether to build them. Few were actually building. There was a sickening but serious debate on whether a man with his own shelter should shoot down his neighbor, or his children if they tried to enter.

Such an outstanding figure as New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller believes earnestly that people must provide individual shelters to protect the United States from "atomic blackmail."

A great many others disagree. One of them is U.S. Sen. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut. He says the attitude behind it is "all wrong."

"All we seem to talk about is shelters, what size they will be and what kind they will be and who we will keep out, mostly having to do with our neighbors and less fortunate."

Dodd said his wife asked him if they should build one.

"I said no. That isn't my idea to resist communism. We ought to be thinking positively as to what we will do if they attack and not think of the underground as a place to hide. You can't get away from a war."

But the mood across the nation was far from all serious. In New York a sensuous new dance called "The Twist" was becoming the rage of cafe society. Chicago had a new key club exclusively for women.

At the University of San Francisco, students no longer were swallowing goldfish a la Harvard in the 1930s. Instead they smuggled off the campus several live sharks measuring three to four feet which had been swimming in tanks in the biology department.

A bright report came from Brown University in Providence, R. I. There, Robert Hill, assistant dean of students, revealed that the scholastic average of the entire student body is steadily rising. Hill attributes it to young people looking at the present world crisis through very serious eyes and letting off steam in the constructive manner of working harder—rather than any "what's the use" attitude.

Many cities have their own individual problems. Miami is one. The Florida citizens gave a friendly welcome to refugees from Castro's Cuba.

Now the total number of Cuban refugees is approaching 60,000 and the cost of supporting them is $2 million a month. Elementary schools have a majority of Cuban students with only a few Spanish-speaking students. Miamians find themselves competing with the refugees for jobs. The city has called for more help from Uncle Sam.

Indianapolis was agog over municipal announcement that the city intended to enforce its 1905 Sunday "blue law." The law bans "riot, hunting, quarreling, working at common labor or engaging in a usual occupation, carrying persons to and from pleasure parties, selling tobacco in hotels to resident customers and staging theatrical performances."

But what it was aimed at was shutting down the discount houses and other "non-essential businesses" now open on Sunday. Big department stores ran ads saying it would be necessary for everyone to remain open if the situation continued.

One discount house hit back over its loudspeaker system: "Next week we will try to secure a supply of kerosene lanterns because according to the Sunday blue law it will be unlawful for you to drive after dark on Sunday without a person walking in front of your car with a lantern—so bear with us and we will try to have these lanterns available . . . of course, at discount prices."

Baltimore reported:

"This is the first city you hit south of the Mason-Dixon line on the East Coast and the biggest topic here is integration. Maryland for years had a patchwork of integration and segregation. Now college students in particular are creating a big stir on "Segregation Alley"—Route 40 from Washington to New York.

A number of African diplomats were snubbed on Route 40 and the echoes have been heard around the world. Now some white students are doing their own sit-ins at restaurants. One Johns Hopkins law major put it:

"It's funny, here we are doing something big and important that most of our parents neglected or didn't want to do. It puts us on a level with foreign university students. In other countries, students are usually in the forefront of demands for change. They tumbled governments in Turkey and Korea. We feel we are doing the same thing in a quieter way here."

In New York it was "The Twist"—a dance performed to blaring jazz, a dance where partners never touch and seldom move their feet, but sway their bodies in convulsive parallel movements. Society's Mrs. Lytle Hull termed it a "fertility ritual." It has attracted to a run-down night spot on West 45th St. called the Peppermint Lounge such celebrities as Noel Coward, Greta Garbo, Elsa Maxwell, the Duke of Bedford, Tennessee Williams, Serge Obolensky.

Denver's police burglary ring scandal was followed by one almost as bad in Kansas City where a grand jury charged policemen were receiving payoffs from a crime syndicate and also taking fees from professional bondsmen for steering business their way.

In Denver, the public did not seem too shocked. After the finish of the World Series also ended a gambling pool at a filling station on East 6th Ave., the attendants opened a new pool for their customers—how many Denver cops would be arrested for burglary by Oct. 15?

The number came to 43, but there was a hassle because two deputies and a civilian from another county were arrested in connection with the metropolitan burglary scandal.

In Los Angeles, a UPI reporter asked Mrs. Patricia Anderson what disturbed her most. She is a housewife and part-time researcher, college educated, a mother in her late 20s.

"What bothers me? The fact that today the truth is usually the last resort people use when they can't think of something clever or sharp to get by with. There's been such a radical change in values. It's a rarity to come across an honest man or have the truth spoken out in the open. We see this in all areas . . . except in childhood. And we condone it in all areas.

"In school, you always felt you were going to change the world. But the laziness and lack of enthusiasm around you traps you into doing nothing."

OLD BOOK NEWS

While you chaps were lolling around with nothing to do but study, your old bookseller has been out beating the haystacks for fresh temptation—in books, that is.

Things being that way, he has no idea what delicious morsels he will put out in the Old Book Corner's feature case tomorrow. Perhaps he'll put out some dusty old paper-bound treasure he's been saving up. Perhaps the trip will produce something so red hot he'll feel bound to out it right out and share it with you.

One of the nicest things about collecting old books is that the same treasure seldom turns up twice, and that each day brings forth it's quota of pleasant surprises.

JFK Entertainment For Cultured

By Merriman Smith

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House:

The cultured Americans, those who appreciate the finer things of art, literature, music and drama, have been more than delighted by the entertainment tastes of President and Mrs. Kennedy.

For visiting heads of state, the Kennedys have presented opera stars, a symphony on the lawn of Mount Vernon, and Shakespearean players in the East Room of the White House. Later in the current 1961-62 social season at the White House, there will be ballet, instrumental classicists and possibly some of America's leading actors in readings from relatively contemporary works.

Life on Kennedy's new frontier also includes the poets — Robert Frost at the inauguration, and only a few days ago, Carl Sandburg in for a visit with the President and bristling with indignation over recent anti-administration remarks by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower whose tastes definitely did not run to poets.

Two Developments Occurred

Probably the biggest cultural news from the White House to date was reflected in several of the New York newspapers this week. All on the same day, these two developments:

—The world's most noted cellist, Pablo Casals, will abandon a long self-imposed exile in Puerto Rico and play for Kennedy dinner guests at the White House Nov. 13.

—Brig. Gen. Godfrey T. McHugh, Air Force aide to the President, was seen rather prominently in New York learning to dance "the twist." This is a new teenage fad dance, or reasonable facsimile thereof, originated in Philadelphia by a rock-and-roll shouter named Chubby Checker. "The twist" has spread from small gin mills into such posh New York spots as "21" where McHugh was spotted in diligent practice.

Both the President and his wife love to dance, but not necessarily on the same evenings when they have a Casals or a Stern playing in the East Room. On several occasions, the President and his wife have had small dinner dances for closer friends. On these occasions, music was supplied by Lester Lanin, whose music rarely is confused with that of Leonard Bernstein, another conductor.

Prepared For Emergency

McHugh, a man of sophisticated taste, was not necessarily on a scouting trip for the Chief Executive and the First Lady when seen in New York by various columnists learning "the twist." The general, however, is a fine Air Force officer; a man prepared to meet virtually any emergency, national or cultural.

Obviously, he was learning "the twist" for a reason. Any night, it is just conceivable that high-ranking figures at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue might summon the Air Force general for an intelligent briefing on new developments in the world of dance.

But they'd better leave Pablo Casals out of this. Undisputed master cellist that he is, Casals simply cannot swing it. This conjures up the rather frightful version of Chubby Checker in the East Room. Cultured Americans, to arms!

Undefeated Maryland Edges Booters, 4-1

By Curry Kirkpatrick

The University of Maryland Terrapins, led by their incomparable center forward Juan Carlos Martin, proved their merit as one of the top powers in college soccer yesterday by turning back the Carolina booters 4-1.

Martin, a 6'3", 190-pound senior from Buenos Aires, Argentina, was dogged all afternoon by Carolina's George Beim, who played him man for man. Although the 1960 All-American failed to score, he set up three of the Terps' goals with some fantastic placement kicks.

With four minutes gone in the first quarter, the big South American lifted a beautiful corner kick 3 yards out from the open side of the net which outside left Jack Ruhs easily converted. Goalie Tom Griffith had no chance on the play. Later in the same quarter, Martin (pronounced Mar-teen) skied a lead pass to his brilliant sophomore teammate from Turkey, Oyton Tertemiz, who beat Griffith on a drive from 15 yards out. This was the extent of the scoring in the first half as both clubs played sharp, checking defense.

At the outset of the third quarter, outside right Nick Limar broke the Tar Heels' backs when he pushed in a goal from a scramble around the net to increase the Maryland lead to 3-0. Just three minutes later, Herman Prakke, who does not get the ball enough to display his tremendous breakaway talents, bolted down the right sideline and drilled a shot that skipped just a foot past the open corner. This represented the Tar Heels' best scoring opportunity so far, and Coach Marvin Allen's boys were visibly disheartened when it failed.

With 7 minutes remaining in the game, Maryland's co-captain Bob Cummings set up beautifully by a back-of-the-foot flip from the ever-present Martin, beat Larry Steele, with a 5-yard drive that just grazed the post. The Carolina defense was completely befuddled by Martin's tricky move and Steele, who had taken over in the Carolina nets after the third goal, didn't have a chance. This put the frosting on the cake for Doyle Royal's Terps and when, with two minutes remaining in the match, Carolina's Frank Lankford converted Beim's in-bounds kick, Royal had already removed Martin and his supporting cast.

Maryland outshot the Tar Heels 31-17, and although Dick Bordogna and George Kenrick stood out on defense for the losers, it was all Maryland as the Terrapins extended their unbeaten record to 5-0. North Carolina is now 4-3.

In Martin and Tettemiz, Maryland has probably the most potent one-two scoring punch in the country. The two have accounted for 17 of the 26 Terrapin goals.

Duke's Blue Devils Whip State, 17-6; Gamecocks Surprise Maryland, 20-10

RALEIGH (UPI)—Duke rode an 82-yard touchdown run by Jay Wilkinson and Gil Garner's passing to a 17-6 victorly over North Carolina State Saturday when the Wolfpack waited too late to come to life.

Wilkinson, 19-year-old sophomore quarterback and son of famed Bud Wilkinson, reeled off his long punt return specialty in the fourth period for Duke's second and clinching touchdown.

It wasn't until then that the Wolfpack, a favorite Duke whipping boy over the years, woke to the occasion.

Gabe Connects

Roman Gabriel threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to end Johnny Morris, and on an onside Wolfpack kickoff mounted another State threat in the final five minutes but time ran out.

Garner sparked a 54-yard Duke scoring drive in the first period with his passes and halfback Bill Reynolds kicked a 23-yard Blue Devil field goal in the second.

The Duke defense had smothered Gabriel and Wilkinson's rapier-run kept State in deep trouble before 21,800 "Dads' Day" fans hoping to see the Wolfpack end a 15-year famine of victories against Duke.

Duke started on the way to break a two-game losing streak by turning a short, into the wind, quick kick by Dave Houtz into a scoring chance. Houtz's punt took a backward bounce to the Duke 46, and with Garner completing passes of 12, 14, and 7 yards went for the score in 11 plays.

Wright Scores

Halfback Dean Wright caught the 12-yarder on his knees at the one-yard line and plunged over right tackle for the score on the next play.

It was the first time this season that State had not scored first on an opponent and it fired the determined Blue Devils.

They sprang quarterback Walt Rappold loose on a 47-yard run in a drive that reached State's 22. Then a 37-yard Wilkinson punt return and Garner's 13-yard pass to Bobby Hawn moved it into position for Reynolds' field goal.

Duke drove the second half kickoff to State's 34 where an interception stopped the Devils. They drove from their own 32 to State's 4, missing a touchdown when Rappold's fourth down pass was incomplete.

State finally started a drive moving from its four. The drive reached midfield before Nick Maravich had to punt and Wilkinson went down the right sideline from his 18 to score.

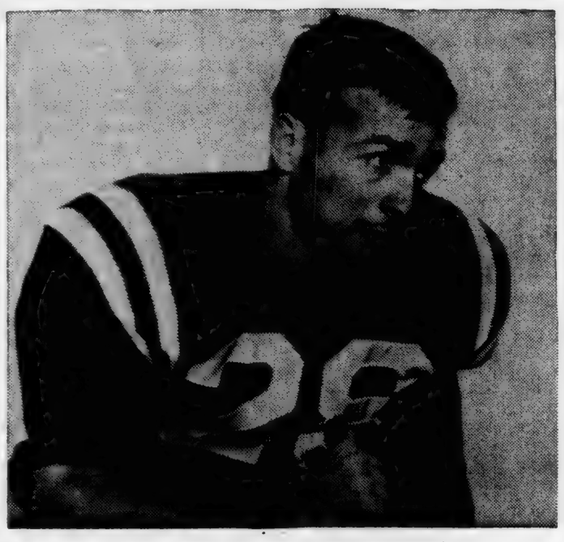
Gabriel's late flurry brought his scoring strike to Morris and he then ripped the Wolfpack back to Duke's 7 where a Rappold interception killed the final threat.

Score by periods:

N.C. State	0	0	0	6	—6
Duke	7	3	0	7	—17

Scoring: Duke—Wright, 1, run (Reynolds kick). Duke—FG, Reynolds, 23. Duke—Wilkinson, 82, run (Reynolds kick). NCS—Morris, 35, pass from Gabriel (pass failed).

Attendance: 21,800.



Dean Wright, Duke halfback, scored first touchdown in Saturday's 17-6 victory over N. C. State's Wolfpack.

Reiley-Frederick Passes Spark Wake's 21-15 Win

WINSTON-SALEM (UPI) — Quarterback Chuch Reiley passed to halfback Donnie Frederick for two touchdowns Saturday, leading Wake Forest's Deacons to a 21-15 victory over Virginia.

The homecoming Atlantic Coast Conference game featured a punting duel between Deacons' end Bill Ruby and Cavalier fullback Tommy Griggs and frequent penalties for both teams.

All the scoring came in the second and third periods.

The Reiley to Frederick combination, however, clicked with 1:20 left before the half and broke a 7-7 tie.

Both teams were stymied the first period, spending most o their time in their own territories.

The Deacons didn't wait long t get started in the second period Halfback Alan White, a standou in the game, shouldered the bur den of a 69-yard touchdown marcl in five plays.

He clipped off 18 yards and ther romped 42 setting up the scor on the Virginia nine. Reiley got seven yards on a keep play anc then White tore over for the firs score of the game.

Virginia battled back to tie i in spectacular fashion three min utes later when junior halfback Bon Freeman grabbed a towering Ruby punt on his own 30, found a broken field, and raced 70 yards for the tally.

With 2:15 left in the first half, Wake's Wilbert Faircloth recovered a fumble by Cavalier quarterback Gary Couzzo on the Virginia 34.

Reiley barely missed on a would-be scoring toss to Frederick but on the next play the combination clicked for a six pointer.

The Reiley-to-Frederick combination struck again for the third Wake score in the third period. The quarterback tossed a perfect pass to Frederick and the play covered 57 yards for a touchdown.

Virginia's Couzzo recovered a Wake fumble by Futch on the Wake 24 to set up the final score of the contest.

Quarterback Couzzo sneaked over from the one after Doug Thomason set it up with an 11-yard run. Stan Fischer then passed to Dennis Andrews for the two pointer.

Score by periods:

Wake Forest	0	14	7	0	—21
Virginia	0	7	8	0	—15

Co-Rec Tilts Wed. At 5

By John Montague

The deadline for men's and women's entries in the 1961 Co-Rec Volleyball Tournament is 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, November 1. The tourney itself will take place on Wednesday night, November 6, beginning at 7 p.m.

Men's organizations and women's organizations will be paired into co-rec teams. Women's organizations may enter as many four-girl teams as they desire, but only one four-man team will be allowed from each of the men's organizations.

Play will be on a single-elimination basis, with 10 minutes or 15 points constituting a game. In order for a game to be stopped by the ten-minute deadline, a team must have a two-point advantage at that point.

Special rules will be in effect to prevent domination of the game by the male participants.

Last year, with only 15 teams participating, the PiKA-Tri Delt team walked off with top honors. Intramural Director Tom Johnson hopes for greater interest and participation this year. He points out that in order to have a real good tournament, about 40 teams are needed.

The action will take place on the main floor of Woollen Gym. Games will be forfeited if not begun by 7:10 p.m.

A team trophy will be awarded to the champions, with individual plaques going to the members of the winning team.

'Stake In Atom' To Visit Durham

The National University Extension Association and the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce are co-sponsoring the travelling exhibit called "Your Stake in the Atom," which is now being circulated throughout the state by the Atomic Energy Commission.

The travelling exhibit, which is open free to the public, consists of four different programs shown simultaneously throughout North Carolina communities. The main exhibit is the large dome structure which houses 100 linear feet of animated and audience participation Commission exhibit is at Wilmington motion picture.

Other programs of the exhibit are a unit which is shown at community high schools with demonstration-lectures on atomic energy; a library unit to encourage reading in the field of science; and a program of civic club talks before community organizations.

Curently, the Atomic Energy Sommission exhibit is at Wilmington where it will remain through October 27. The future schedule includes: Durham, November 22-November 25.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Intramural Managers Meeting for November has been moved up to Tuesday night, October 31, at 7:30. The meeting will be held in 301-A Woollen. Originally scheduled for November 6, the date was changed because of a conflict with the Co-Rec Volleyball Tournament.

Wednesday, November 1, is the deadline for entries in the intramural round-robin volleyball tournament. Play will begin on Tuesday,, November 7, in this point-system activity.

Auburn's Tigers Outgrowl Clemson Tigers By 24-14

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — Senior left end Dave Edwards, a defensive giant for two years, exploded offensively with a pair of magic hands Saturday to spark Auburn to a 24-14 win over Clemson.

Edwards, a 6-1, 198-pounder from Abbeville, Ala., made three fantastic catches from quarterback Bobby Hunt to set up the Auburn touchdowns in a bitter battle between Southern neighbors.

Clemson's first score against twice-beaten Auburn came on an 81-yard march from the opening kickoff. Left halfback Wendall Black twisted over from the two-yard line on the 19th play. Lon Armstrong kicked the first of two extra points. With less than six minutes left in the game, Black returned an Auburn punt 37 yards to the Tiger 11 and four plays later senior fullback Ron Scrudato banged over left guard from the one.

Sophomore quarterback Woody Woodall tied the Auburn field goal record with a 43-yard boot midway in the third quarter to close the Tiger scoring before a homecoming crowd of 36,000. The fourth stringer also made good on three extra point tries.

Auburn's gritty line and alert sidebacks set up a Hunt-to-Edwards aerial attack. Early in the second period Hunt picked off a pass from Clemson sophomore Jim Parker on the Auburn 40 and raced 16 yards to the Clemson 44. The senior quarterback, badly rushed, threw desperately to Edwards, who snagged the bullet with one hand and scampered 20 yards to the Clemson one. Three plays later little right halfback Don Machen swept left end for the score. Woodall converted to tie the score 7-7.

Moments later senior right guard Jerry Gulledge pounced on a fumble by Clemson quarterback Joe Anderson on the visitors' 29. Hunt hit Edwards with a 17-yard pass and daring Dave twisted out of a defender's arms to stumble for a first down on the Tiger eight. Left half Jimmy Burson crashed over right guard on the next play to put Auburn ahead for good.

Early in the third quarter, Hunt bulleted a 20-yarder to Edwards, racing in the left flat for 20 yards and a first down on the Clemson 25. Burson hit right end for 18 yards, fullback Larry Rawson, a sophomore from Pensacola, Fla., crunched for 13 and two plays later Machen outraced the secondary to score from six yards out.

Score by periods:

Auburn	0	14	10	0	—24
Clemson	7	0	0	7	—14

Scoring: Black 2 run (Armstrong kick. Auburn — Machen 1 run (Woodall kick). Auburn—Burson 8 run (Woodall kick). Auburn—Machen 6 run (Woodall kick). Auburn—FG Woodall 43. Clemson—Scrudatto 1 run (Armstrong kick).

Attendance: 36,000.

Pittsburgh Upsets Midshipmen 28-14

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Quarterback Jim Traficant, fully recovered from a pre-season training injury, scored on runs of eight and six yards and handed off for another touchdown Saturday to snap Pittsburgh out of a four-game losing streak with a 28-14 upset over fumbling Navy.

Traficant, who missed one entire game and saw only limited duty in Pitt's four defeats because of a leg injury, played up to his billing potential by figuring in all but one of the Panthers' touchdowns.

Traficant, a senior from Youngstown, Ohio, opened the dikes on the surprised Middies the first time Pitt had the bayy by capping a 55-yard march with an 8-yard touchdown sprint up the middle. In the third period, he pitched back to halfback Ed Clark on a 13-yard scoring play and Traficant scored again later in the same quarter by circling right end for six yards on a keeper.

A couple of Pitt sophomores, halfback Bob Roeder and end John Jenkins, teamed up on a 17-yard scoring pass in the final period for Pitt's last touchdown.

Senior halfback Fred Cox had a perfect day by kicking four placements.

For 58 minutes, while Pitt was putting on its best scoring show of the year, the Midshipmen looked helpless. It was not until second classman Bob Hect, a clever quarterback, passed Navy to the Pitt four and then sneaked over from one yard out for Navy's first score.

Seconds later Hecht passed 10 yards to All-America end candidate Greg Mather for another touchdown with only 26 seconds left on the clock. Mather booted both extra points.

Zeta Beta Tau Reaches Intramural Play-Offs With 19-0 Win Over KA

By John Montague

The ZBT's, led by Mark Schnitzer's point production, added the finishing touches to what must be termed as a miserable week for the KA's, as far as tag football is concerned. In a game which meant either first place and a play-off spot or third place and total elimination from the tournament, ZBT topped KA cold, 19-0.

Thus a week which had begun with the KA's ruling the roost in League VI with a perfect 3-0 mark, ended with the KA's having nothing to look forward to in the playoffs.

The spotless 3-0 record was soiled Monday afternoon when Phi Kappa Sig pulled off a 13-0 upset. This produced a three-way tie for first in the league, and the drawing which followed only added to the KA's misery. The Phi Kaps pulled a second-place and sure tourney spot out of the hat, forcing ZBT and KA to battle it out for the other play-off spot and first place.

The two teams clashed on Friday afternoon, and while the ZBT defense held the KA's scoreless, Schnitzer tallied for two touchdowns and a point-after and Larry Fiwe for another TD to give ZBT a very important 19-0 victory.

The stage is now set for the Fraternity Blue play-offs, which begin Monday afternoon with four games scheduled. In first-round games, DKE will square off with the Phi Delts, ATO faces Delta Sig, Kappa Sig meets Phi Kap Sig and SAE goes against ZBT.

This set-up leaves four teams with first-round byes. They are: Chi Phi, Zeta Psi, Chi Psi and Sigma Nu.

Russians Blast Biggest Bomb In World History

Estimated Yield Is 50-100 Megatons

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Nikita Khrushchev's scientists Monday exploded a monstrous nuclear bomb which Western experts said may have loosed a destructive force equal to 50-to-100 million tons of TNT.

The super bomb, fired in defiance of worldwide protests and pleas, overshadowed the 30-50 megaton weapon exploded by the Soviets last Monday—until then the biggest man-made explosion in history. It spread new radio-active fallout around the world.

In Western eyes, the only good thing about it was that it presumably wound up the Soviet nuclear test series that started Sept. 1. Khrushchev had said the tests would end Oct. 30 or 31 with a 50-megaton shot.

The blast sent a shock wave rolling across the United States and the Weather Bureau said fallout from the explosion would start drifting across this country in several days. At present, winds were said to be taking it over Siberia.

The 1961 Soviet tests may raise to record highs the amount of radioactive strontium-90 in milk and children's bones in the United States. But milk and bone contamination are expected to remain well below what radiation authorities consider prudent levels.

Triggering of the biggest—and "dirtiest"—nuclear bomb brought a new wave of condemnation in non-Communist countries and some demands that the Russian action be met with U. S. tests in the atmosphere to improve America's warheads.

Some scientists who recorded the Soviet blast at 3:33 a.m., EST, high over Russia's arctic proving grounds indicated that the force of the explosion may have been closer to 100 megatons than Khrushchev's promised 50.

Both Swedish and Japanese scientists said their detection instruments indicated an explosion 2.5 times greater than the force of last Monday's 30-megaton blast. That would put the Soviet super weapon at a force of at least 75 million tons of TNT.

Throughout the Western world, from Washington to London and Stockholm, the explosion was denounced as an arrogant show of force.

UNC Students Mixed Words On Bomb

By CHUCK MOONEY

The Russians exploded a 50 megaton nuclear bomb yesterday morning. Sixteen Carolina students picked at random expressed these opinions:

"I think they have as much right to test their bombs as we do ours."

"It really doesn't phase me."

"These dirty b . . . . s!"

"I think they're putting on a show."

"What concerns me most are the political implications and the radiation danger to future generations."

"%$&'—@c?;X&-*%& . . damned bomb."

"It's an injustice to mankind."

"I think they're showing a great amount of courage. They give me a pain!"

"If we set off a cherry-bomb in California, the Japanese students would riot and the Russian students would attack our embassy; it's about time American students showed some concern by similar action in Washington."

"Sounds like they're having a blast."

"It scares the hell out of me."

"It's more propaganda than tactical and I think the propaganda will backfire on them. I'm not sweating it."

"This shows that they mean business. The U. S. should wake up and resume testing."

Campus Briefs

TODAY

The following organizations must come down to the Yackety Yack office in the basement of Graham Memorial to sign contracts for their pages if they wish to be represented in the '62 Yack. Carolina Playmakers, Sound and the Fury, Cosmopolitan Club, Wesley Club, Theta Chi, Phi Delta Chi, Chi Phi, Pharmacy Senate, and Law School Association.

The Committee for Work with Foreign Students will meet tonight upstairs in the "Y" at 8 p.m. The meeting is to help foreign students will colloquial speech, idioms and grammar.

Have you gone for your Campus Chest interview? Positions are still open and interviews will be held Tuesday from 1 to 5 p.m. on the 2nd floor of the "Y".

IMPORTANT!

The State Affairs Committee needs considerable student help tonight at 7:30 in the Rendezvous Room to fold the 6,000 issues of the DTH special "bond issue" edition.

Due to technical difficulties the issue, which was supposed to be printed Sunday, will not come off the presses until late Tuesday afternoon.

State Affairs Co-chairmen Larry McDevitt and Tom White urged all students to help.

"Any one who can spare any time at all—a half hour, hour, two hours—is encouraged to come to the Rendezvous Room.

Drinking Rules Altered At Duke

Duke University has approved a change in rules which will permit the serving of alcoholic beverages at "approved, organized social functions held outside of the University grounds."

The new rule will not affect on-campus regulations.

Ninety-five per cent of the Duke undergraduates supported the changed rule.

The Administration at Duke approved the change on a trial basis after being told by student government officers that the rules would be "scrupulously followed."

The new rule requires a report by a student committee on the "success of the party," attested to by the party's chaperone. If reports by the students and the chaperones conflict, appropriate action will be taken by a special student investigating committee.

The rule goes into effect this weekend, Nov. 4 and 5.

Torchers

A short but "extremely important" meeting of all persons who signed up as torch marathon runners will be held tonight at 7:15 in the Rendezvous Room of GM.

Charlie Brown, spokesman for the torch committee, said the following persons should make a "particular effort" to be present: Harold Bender, Fred Widler, Gene Gudger, Stan Cocke, Tom Watson, Woody Harrison, Alan Sutten, Douglas Pearson, C. W. Hobbs, Dick Akers, Arthur Merrill, Ragan Harper, Al Pollard, Joe DeBlazie, Watts Carr, Mike McClister, Dwight Wheelis, and Larry McDevitt.

e. e. cummings To Read Own Works In Memorial Hall

By Richard Armfield

e. e. cummings, one of America's most popular and controversial poets will appear at Memorial Hall Thursday, Nov. 2 at 8 p.m. to read from his works.

The reading is sponsored by the English Club.

The visit of cummings, who was a member of the famous Paris "exiles" including Ernest Hemingway and Gertrude Stein, is a near-annual feature on the campus, and consistently draws a packed house.

His first book, "The Enormous Room," a prose work describing his time spent in a World War I concentration camp, immediately placed him in the vanguard of American literary figures. His reputation has not diminished since that time.

Major Books

His major books of poetry include: "Tulips and Chimneys," 1923; "Is 5," 1926; "Collected Poems," 1938; "50 Poems," 1940; "IXL," 1944; "Xaipe," 1950; and in 1954 his monumental "Poems 1923-1954" was published.

In 1931, "Eimi," a description of his pilgrimage through Russia, appeared. "i; six nonlectures," a book of lectures given at Harvard, was published.

He was the recipient of the 1957 Bollingen prize in Poetry, for his gift of natural wit and lyric imagination. And he is a member of the National Academy of Arts and Letters.

He has leds a quiet life, living in Greenwich Village, N. Y. most of it, and is much concerned with individual freedom, privacy, and the worth of man.

No Publicity

Very strict about publicity he will not allow photographs to be taken of himself if he can stop it. He gives no autographs.

His poetry, which is most aggressively modern, lacks punctuation, and is sometimes difficult to read, takes on a fuller meaning when he reads it, according to a UNC English professor.

cummings' early reputation was made as a painter. He has exhibited in leading museums in the nation.

Some of his books and poems will be on exhibition in the lobby show cases at the library.

Walter Allen Will Speak In Virginia

Walter Allen Jr., UNC professor of Latin, will be the main speaker at the annual meeting of the Classical Section of the Virginia Education Association, to be held Friday of this week in Richmond.

Entitled "Reading Cicero's Mail," Dr. Allen's talk will be a discussion of some of the problems in the study of the nearly one thousand letters that have come down to the present as Cicero's correspondence, most of them by Cicero himself but some by his correspondents.

MATHEMATICS COLLOQUIUM

Professor H. R. Pitt of the University of Nottingham, England, will speak on "Tauberian Aspects of the Prime Number Theorem" at a UNC mathematics colloquium at 4 o'clock this afternoon in 382 Phillips Hall.

Ferrante And Teicher

Ferrante, Teicher To Appear At UNC

Arthur Ferrante and Louis Teicher are scheduled to descend on Memorial Hall with pianos one week from today (Nov. 7) at 8 p. m. and spend two hours flipping their lids.

The show, a Graham Memorial Series presentation, will be costless to UNC students who flash their ID cards. Spouses will be admitted, with wives or husbands, for $1. Tickets for the general public and faculty members at $2 each will go on sale at 7:50 p.m. on a space available basis.

"Ferrante and Teicher Flip Their Lids" reportedly consists of two hours of "merriment and melody," and is a show that "injects a bright, witty note into concert hall entertainment."

Described as a "casserole of music spiced with humor," the lid-flipping represents a rather distinct departure for the nimble-fingered twosome from the field of long-hair" music into just plain musical hell-raising. Their recordings of 'Exodus' and 'The Apartment' already have sold well over two million copies.

Ike Praises Kennedy

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Former President Eisenhower said Monday that President Kennedy indicates a "very firm intention" of avoiding appeasement of Russia. He said Kennedy is trying to keep the peace, needs the support of the American people and ought to have it.

Eisenhower spoke out against critics of Kennedy's attitude toward Russia during a day of campaigning in San Antonio for a Republican candidate. The candidate is John Goode, running for the seat vacated by Paul Kilday.

Elizabeth To Call Troops

LONDON—Queen Elizabeth will call on Parliament Tuesday to speed up the flow of British troops overseas and to stem the flood of migrants from the multi-racial Commonwealth nations, political sources said Monday.

The sources said the requests will be contained in the traditional speech—written by the party in power—which is read by the British monarch to the opening session of Parliament.

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan is concerned over the government's limited power to call up army reserves in emergencies, the sources said. Especially vital now is the need to bolster the undermanned British Army of the Rhine BAOR in West Germany.

New Katanga Invasion

LEOPOLDVILLE—Troops of the Central Congolese government Monday invaded secessionist Katanga from South Kasai Province in a bid to smash the power of absent President Moise Tshombe.

Central Premier Cyrille Adoula announced the "police action" in a radio broadcast Monday night said his army was determined to fight until Tshombe was knocked out. Tshombe flew to Switzerland Sunday on a visit he said was "for health reasons."

Russia Blast Accident?

UNITE DNATIONS, N. Y.—A delegate suggested to the United Nations Monday that the power of Monday morning's Soviet nuclear blast may have been greater than Russian scientists intended.

F. H. Corner, deputy secretary of the New Zealand Department of External Affairs, told the General Assembly's main political committee previous experience had shown that nuclean reaction was difficult to control and sometimes got out of hand.

Consideration for humanity, Corner said, "has not prevented a quite unnecessary act of political braggadocio, and an explosion of perhaps 75 megatons."

"Was this the result of an accident?" he asked.

More Berlin Troops

BERLIN—The U. S. Army Monday ordered a fresh company of troops into West Berlin in the wake of new Communist claims that Allied access rights to the isolated city no longer exist. The Army said Company A of the 20th Engineer Battalion—recently ordered to Europe from the United States—will move to Berlin on the Autobahn lifeline across East Germany to replace Company D of the 12th Engineer Battalion there.

The announcement said five truck loads of troops from Company D rode to the West Sunday on the Berlin-Helmstedt Highway and others will follow daily. The troop exchange will take place "by increments," the Army said. Informed sources said these movements of troop units both East and West on the highway from Berlin to the West indicated U. S. determination to continue demonstrating Allied ground access rights with combat vehicles.

Morehead's Gifts Numerous

(UNC's second annual John Motley Morehead Day will be held next Friday. Following is a brief account of some of Mr. Morehead's donations to the University.)

Through the efforts of John Motley Morehead, the University has been endowed with three gifts of great distinction.

On November 3, 1931 the Morehead Patterson Memorial Tower, a donation of Uncle Mot and his cousin Rufus Lenoir, was presented to Carolina. This 176-foot North Carolina brick monument features twelve copper bells which have a total weight of 14,350 pounds.

Engraved on these bells are the members of the Morehead and Patterson families who have been identified with the Universty. At the pinnacle of the tower is a self attending clock with four dials facing north, south, east, and west each with a diameter of nine feet. Adorning the Arcade, the lobby at the base of the structure, are tablets identifying the respective families who have passed away.

Along more scientific and cultural lines, Morehead on May 10, 1949, donated a building which houses the Morehead Planetarium and the Genevieve B. Morehead Art Gallery. The Memorial Rotunda displays the famous pictures of George and Martha Washington, and the paintings of such 18th century artists as Thomas Gainsborough and Rembrandt Peale. Here also is the largest aneroid barometer of its kind ever built.

The Planetarium itself, costing three million dollars, is one room containing a Zeiss projector. Nine thousand stars can be brought into view and a spectator can encompass the earth in five minutes.

The Zeiss machine, purchased in Goteberg, Sweden for $67,000, is one of eight in the United States; and one of 27 in the world.

Programs planned by Mr. Anthony Jenzano director of the Planetarium, for the coming season include The Star of Bethlehem and Scouting the Skies.

Located in the midst of a garden containing 25 different varieties of roses and other shrubs is Uncle Mot's third gift; the largest sundial in the world. Donated on May 3, 1956, this most modern example of the most ancient instrument takes a person back to the time 300BC when there is definite proof that a sundial existed.

Foreign Students Comment On Customs At Cosmopolitan Club Dance Last Saturday

By CHUCK MOONEY

How do foreign students like the Carolina style of dancing?

"There is none of this vulgar Twist in Morocco," says Hassan Bahlouli of Casablanca.

"Rock and Roll is done mostly by high school kids in Holland." according to Hans Frankfort of Utrecht.

"This dance (the Cosmopolitan Club dance) is more dignified and in keeping with the college atmosphere," said Kookie Kapoor of India. "The masses in India have no social dances like this one and no Rock and Roll either."

To Find Out

These are some comments of foreign students at the Cosmopolitan Club dance last Saturday night. More than 60 couples danced everything from the Charleston to a Rhumba-line—everything that is except the Twist.

The 30-odd foreign students from all corners of the world reflected varied backgrounds with these comments:

MR. AND MRS. LEADBETTER, NEW ZEALAND—"When we saw it was to be semi-formal, we didn't know what to wear. We don't call them "semi-formals" at home. Friends told us that if it were formal, we should wear tux and long frock; if it were semi-formal, we should wear sports clothes and short frock; if it were informal, we should wear our pajamas."

ELAINE CHANG, SHIANG-HI, CHINA—"What impressed me the most is I haven't seen any strong drinks here. This dance is like the ones in China because there are no Chinese social dances; social dancing came to China with the British."

LUCIA GARCIA, CUBA—"It's almost like the dances we have in Cuba. The band is playing a lot of familiar songs. I haven't seen this in America before."

THE "MUSICMAKERS", DURHAM—"This is the most different group we've played for. We're playing a lotta continental and Latin-American tunes and they're dancing to anything we play. (They were the band for the evening.)

DETMAR SCHNITKER, GOETTINGEN, W. GERMANY—"The club sold too many tickets. We were afraid no one would come, so we hired a small room. This crowd is wonderful."

MARGUERITE BOU-RAAD, LEBANON—"This is a more cosmopolitan atmosphere than Beirut. I like Rock and Roll."

MAURICE CHARPIN, FRANCE—"There are so few opportunities like this for foreign students to mix with American students."

The program, in keeping with the international flavor, featured Lucia Garcia singing Granada and Sibone in Spanish, Charlie Nayfeh dancing a Lebanese folk dance, Hans Frankfort playing the guitar and Al Wright playing the guitar and singing "I Didn't Know the Gun Was Loaded."

SG Committee Awarded $100 By NSA For 'Aware' Program

AWARD MONEY: Student Body President Bill Harriss turns over a check for $100 to Secretary Mary Townsend. The check was awarded to UNC's student government by the National Student Association for the work of the Human Relations Seminar committee.

UNC's student government committee on Human Relations was awarded the Richard Welling Memorial Award yesterday for "the best program to develop students' awareness and knowledge of their responsibilities as leaders in society."

Given by the U. S. National Students Assn., the award consists of $100 and a gold plaque.

The winning Carolina entry included a history of UNC's program in human relations since the first Negro student entered UNC ten years ago. It was written by Roger Foushee.

Student government efforts to integrate Chapel Hill businesses also were cited, as was the N. C. Human Relations Seminar on "Problems and Promises in the Changing South" of last December, and the work of the Academic Affairs Committee with Negro high schools in the state.

"The student government is honored to receive the award for the second time, especially since it recognizes the vital role played by student government in the educational program of the University," said Bill Harriss, student body president.

Last year the student government committee on Academic Affairs won the award for their over-all program.

Mezzo-Soprano Kay Griffel To Perform Tonight

"Kay Griffel—she's a mezzo-soprano of unusual range. I think she has a tremendous amount of promise," said Professor Joel Carter of UNC's Music Department yesterday.

Miss Griffel, 1960 National Teachers of Singing "Singer of the Year," is being presented at 8 p.m. tonight by the Tuesday Evening Series in Hill Hall.

First heard in the Southeast last year at a national singing workshop at Boone, N. C., Miss Griffel is from Iowa. She has had six other engagements in Georgia, Florida and North Carolina since then.

Her program will include Schuman's Frauenliebe and Leben cycle, five settings of Greek melodies by Ravel, several numbers by Henry Purcell and several late romantic and contemporary numbers by Vaughn, Williams, Arnold Bax, Mario Castelnovo, Tedesco and Rachmaninoff.

Atmospheric Testing

Displaying complete disregard for world opinion, Premier Khrushchev has gone ahead with the explosion of a nuclear super-bomb.

This obvious contempt for the feelings of the world community has led some observers already to believe that Khrushchev has decided to forego all attempts at conjuring an image of a peaceful nation which arms only for protection, and pursue a policy of direct and obvious coercion.

The explosion, then, is reduced by this logic, to a bluff which will force the U. S. to give up part or all of her claims in Berlin. By holding the threat of nuclear war over the heads of the nations of the world, Khrushchev thinks he can contain U. S. opposition.

In response to this coercive approach, some in the U. S., notably New York's Governor Rockefeller, have come up with the solution that the U. S. should counter by resuming atmospheric testing of her own.

We can think of no course more riduculous than the resumption of atmospheric nuclear tests by the U. S. Such a move would be nothing more than an approval of the Russian move, and an admission that nuclear threats are the only deterrent to war.

Governor Rockefeller's proposal is nothing more than a continuation of the U. S. policy of reaction, of countermove rather than positive action.

For the U. S. to step into the atmospheric test arena, when she now has bombs perfected which, on the testimony of experts, can deliver a death blow anywhere in the world, would be nothing more than a rash response for the sake of showing our power.

For the U. S. to join the Russians in filling the air with fall-out, even though it would not push us over the danger point, would be compounding the Russian error. We cannot allow ourselves to be frightened into rattling weapons as a defense mechanism.

We need to protect ourselves, but the resumption of atmospheric testing goes far beyond the call for defense and falls into the category of frightened response, and a dangerous response at that.

Old Joe's Bones

The following paragraphs are from a Chapel Hill Weekly editorial commenting on the efforts of Colonel Henry Royall to brand participants in the recent conference on the first amendment as Communists or sympathizers.

We have nothing but contempt . . . for Colonel Royall and anyone else who attempts to brand a man as a Communist by implication, by innuendo, through the guilt by association technique, and because of sheer and unrelieved prejudice.

Without hearing the first word uttered at that conference last Friday, Colonel Royall charged that God was pushed out of His Holy Temple by anti-Christ activities and he urged the Christian Patriots of Chapel Hill to join him at the tocsin. If any Patriots should happen to answer the Colonel's call, we hope they will come with a clapper other than the dusty bones of Joe McCarthy.

What Happened

For those who are still interested in what happened to the "major foreign policy speech" slated for delivery by President Kennedy here, Oct. 12, the answer has now been made public.

The truth is that the President had the text of what was definitely a major policy speech on the plane with him, but got into a hassle with the coterie of braintrusters accompanying him, and decided not to give it.

That is the reason for the rehashed campaign speech that was delivered.

Help Needed

On the front page of this issue, an announcement appears asking for volunteers to help with the folding and handling of 6,000 copies of a DTH special issue on the bond election. These papers will be mailed to the parents of in-state students to encourage them to vote for the bond issue.

In order to accomplish the task in time to get the papers home in time, over 100 people will be needed. We urge every student who is interested in the passage of the bond issue to help. Those who can assist in this project will meet at 7:30 tonight in the Rendezvous Room, GM.

'Children's Group Nominating Mouse'

To the Editor:

Recently I had the great pleasure of attending a political convention presented by one o fthe University's leading parties. To my amazement and disappointment, the meeting was not a convention, but a mob of animals run by a political machine.

These students, who claim to be educated, acted like a group of children at a cartoon show while Mickey Mouse is being nominated for offices. Students booed and hissed so loud that at times some speakers were not heard. When the so-called convention did settle down, many did not know who they were voting for and those who did discovered that their delegation was pledged to a certain candidate.

I seriously ask you, the students at UNC, to open your eyes and examine your student political parties. If you do not take an active and serious interest in your parties now, what type of active interest will you take in national politics later. It is my sincere belief that our political parties should conduct themselves in a more serious manner, instead of the frivolous show, I observed a few days ago. Above all, do not be afraid to critizes or change your government or political parties—this is the only way they can be improved.

Dictatorial Censors

To the Editor:

The TAR HEEL is probably the single most important means of communication on campus, and as such possesses tremendous influence. At present, however, it only represents the editorial viewpoint. The students help support the paper financially and should be guaranteed a few more "commenting" rights than they have at the moment. If a student writes a letter of personal opinion, it is subject to almost dictatorial editing under the statements contained in the "About Letters" section.

On Tuesday, an editorial appeared that said the Yack Beauty Contest must have been more important than the Operation Abolition film because the Contest had late permission. The editorial did not say that Women's Residence Council only grants permission for the event that the permission is requested for, and that the sponsors of the film did not request that permission. Granted, this is only an isolated example; however, the paper often critizes editorially various segments of our Government, such as HUAC, and even other campus affairs. Then they ask the faculty editorially for more freedom of the press, a freedom that they refuse to extend to fellow students.

Why can't we be guaranteed a little short space somewhere — perhaps a weekly four column inch— to put forth divergent views or factual additions concerning the week's editorials which would not be under the present rigid censorship?

Free Enterprise Not 'God'

To the Editor:

I would like to make a few comments on Mr. James M. R. Smith's article on the U. S. as a Welfare State and the possibility of our becoming a Socialistic State. From what I can gather from Mr. Smith's "thinking," he is opposed to past governmental legislation in the areas of welfare and busines, as well as proposed further legislation along these lines. It is the rejection of past legislation in these areas that I would question.

Mr. Smith seems to make a "God" of the free enterprise system and also of the "Survival of the fittest" cliche. I feel, however, that our country is not set up solely on the premise that free enterprise should reign supreme. There seems to be some opinion, instead, that our government must be concerned with the welfare and interests of all of its citizens. This concern is not merely for the strong, the most intelligent the "fittest," or the lucky, but also for the weak the less intelligent and the unlucky. In a country where social and economic ills (on top of personal physical disabilities) do not allow all the people to have even a minimum standard of living at all times, the government has an obligation to provide help. If this makes us a Welfare State, then we are a Welfare State—and must be so.

In regard to governmental controls on business, it seems that Mr. Smith knows little about the period in our history when big business was allowed to run unchecked. We were then, in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, treated to the spectacle of a country under the powerful fist of growing business interests. Fortunately, some people realized that the government (as a representative of the people) must have some control over businesses, which affect the lives of all.

Competition is great—up to a point. But should we allow competition to run wild, we would be denying the interdependence of all people in this industrial age. The higher levels of the population use the lower levels of the population — as workers and consumers—, so it would seem that the "little man" should have some sayso in how he is used. Furthermore, when persons are forced out of the competitive arena (for various reasons), they have a right to a part of the profits, based on their contributions in the past and their posible contributions in the future.

For Mr. Smith's leisure reading, I might suggest a good American history book, and, especially, the sections on for whom our government is set up, the rise of big business, and the Great Depression of the 1930's.

Belated Comment On Theatre

To the Editor:

Belatedly, Mrs. Evangeline R. Darity's letter to the Editor reprinted in the Daily Tar Heel of October 17 came to my attention. Reasons for the situation described concern not only the policies of the management of the Carolina Theater and Mrs. Darity's feelings, but also the more serious matter of public and individual attitudes. Such occurrences should do more than furnish a moment's reading and casual reflection; they should make us pause to examine our own feelings and opinions and weigh our own attitudes against the hurt and bafflement of children, and the humiliation and frustrations of devoted parents who are also good citizens.

Although I know the Darity family and count them friends, I found myself thinking regretfully and objectively of other such experiences happening to other Negro children. For the opening sentence in Mrs. Darity's letter—"I am the mother of two small children"—attests to her chief concern and her automatic second-place position in the matter.

Her eight year old son is old enough to wonder what being an American actually means and why there is a division in standards based on a difference he is learning about for the first time. He was born in a foreign country, but witnessed daily the good services of his parents as representatives of one of our government's operations designed for world benefit. Over and over he was told what coming home would be like, that he would finally know what it meant to be an American.

It must be a shock for such a child and in turn, a source of pain to his parents, to wonder if Americans are classified as goodies and baddies, and if for some reason he hasn't yet grasped, he is consigned automatically to the unacceptable incorrigibles.

If it wouldn't add to the boy's wonder about the way adults run things, I should like to apologize to him in person for the rude suddenness of non-acceptance in a place operated for the pleasure of the paying American public and to thank him and the rest of his family for being good citizens of our country while they live through the troubled days that should make life a more totally human concern for the children of our next generation.

Reader Comments On Conformity

To the Editor:

Crisis! Political upheaval! 50 megaton bomb explosion! These are the words that greet us every morning in the newspaper. Being a student at the University of North Carolina seeking knowledge of the generations before me, what should I expect to hear my fellow students discussing and debating? What type of person should I see sitting next to me in my classes, walking past me on campus, or cavorting through that great social institution "Y-Court"? Being an optimist and an idealist, I expect to see young individuals. More stress should be put on the word individuals than any other. I don't see young individuals, but young, uninformed, small talking and thinking men and women that are the "future of our country."

Does this sound like a dramatic slice at our social conformity? Partially it is. We dress alike, walk alike, talk alike, and basically we are playing our social role of college students very well. There is one likeness many of us have that should be exterminated—conformity of thought. Too much social conformity is a good foundation for mental conformity. This must stop. I'm not the "Old Philosopher" as I am as guilty of this as any one. Let's "think big," but mostly let's think. Remember the trite expression—"you are the future of our nation." Trite, yes, but also true.

What! Starch In My PJ's Again!

To the Editor:

Have you ever rolled over in bed and cut yourself? Do you have trouble buttoning a shirt that has one a quarter of a button left on it? Do you really enjoy walking to an eight o'clock in starched socks? If the University Laundry is trying to build character in the student body they are doing a remarkable job. Personally, though, I find it very difficult to seep in board-stiff pajamas. I go wild over real live whole buttons on my shirts. Need I comment on starched socks?

I would just like to make one small, humble suggestion. If our infamous Laundry insists on washing our clothes in a button-smashing cement mixer, I wish they would use soap instead of straight starch!

Readers Debate The Debate

To the Editor:

On May 12-14, 1960 the House Committee on Un-American Activities held its hearings at the city hall in San Francisco, California. On October 23, 1961, several hundred UNC students tried to attend a controversial film dealing with the so called "Riots" resulting from the improper practices of the Committee. This film, "Operation Abolition" was to be shown in Carroll Hall at 8.30 Monday night. By 8 p.m. the auditorium was full; people were sitting in the aisle, on the window ledges, and many more were gathering outside the door.

By 8:30 some 300 students were assembled on the steps and in the adjoining area of Carroll Hall. Some carried placards advocating their views:

One red, "In God we used to trust, now we have HUAC," another referred to the historical basis: "32-Crucifixions, 1,500-Torture chamber, 1,700-Witch burnings, 1800-Guillotine, 1900-Gas Chambers—HUAC means progress," another placard requested that we "Support Our HUAC, Volunteer for their black list."

And so it went—but the uniformed police guards at the door stood firm and let no more enter, except a few card-carrying faculty members, a placard carrier who said he was working for the American Legion, and some coeds who were better looking to the police than the rest of the crowd.

Somebody felt that this was unjust and he yelled, "Break down the Iron Curtain!" someone else cried, "Let's have a Communist inspired riot." But this was not acceptable, because the crowd realized that if somebody took pictures, they would be shown to the students at San Francisco next year, and this would be too democratic. So the 300 students quietly dispersed, content to read about "Operation Abolition" in the newspaper the next day.

To the Editor:

Well, whoever was responsible for showing "Operation Abolition" came through in the old tradition of not knowing what in Hell he was doing. It is one thing to show the film in an auditorium that has the seating capacity of about one-fourth of the people that wanted to see it, but they also had to schedule the thing on a night when the Yack Beauty Contest was held.

I think it is really pitiful, after all the publicity that has been given the film, to turn away the majority of the people that wanted to see it. This, in my opinion, is just another one of the typical blunders that is so common around this University.

Chandler Van Orman

To the Editor:

In reading your paper's front page article of October 25th, concerning the Lewis-Harrington debate on HUAC, one who did not attend the debate just might be led to believe that Lewis had nothing constructive to offer. That your reporter slightly favors Harrington and the liberal point of view is clearly made evident in the article. If this is the way in which a news item is supposed to be written then you have my apology and I stand corrected. Perhaps this was not meant to be a news item.

If this is the case, might I suggest that your writers confine their personal prejudices to the editorial section of the paper? As a rule, front page stories are news stories and to "editorialize" a news item not only shows bad taste but it also shows an inability to analyze a fact situation.

Jackson Calls For Resumption Of Test

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Weapons, said Monday the United States will have to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere for the sake of security.

"We'll have to," he said, "There can be no question that the Soviets are improving the sophistication of their warheads to the point that the long lead we have may be in jeopardy."

The Washington Democrat said that the United States would not need a lot of tests, "and they would be of low yield."

So far the Kennedy administration has not made a policy decision to resume atmospheric tests. Glen T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, said Sunday that it was up to President Kennedy to make the final decision.

Seaborg said he supposed Kennedy would base his decision in large part on the results of the U. S. analysis of the Russian blasts, which reached their climax Monday with the explosion of a monster-megaton weapon.

Congressional reaction to Monday's Russian test was bitter. Jackson called it a weapon of "intimidation, fear and blackmail." Echoing this, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., said the bomb was "clearly a part of the Soviet tactic of terror to blackmail and intimidate the free world."

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the test "is simply immoral," and added that it "signaled a sad hour in the history of civilization. It is clear we are dealing with a desperate nation."

World Shocked At Russian Explosion

By United Press International

An angry free world deplored the Soviet superbomb Monday as "a great leap backward toward anarchy and disaster."

Reacting with unusual swiftness, spokesmen for governments around the globe expressed shock and indignation at the Soviet 50-plus megaton explosion, carried out in defiance of an appeal from the United Nations General Assembly.

There was no immediate statement from President Kennedy.

But at the United Nations, U. S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson said the U. S. delegation "deeply deplores this contempt for world opinion . . . the world has taken a great leap backward toward anarchy and disaster."

On Capital Hill, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the joint subcommittee on atomic weapons, called the bomb "a weapon of fear, intimidation and blackmail." Jackson said the United States would have to reply with atmospheric tests of its own—involving lower-yield weapons— as a matter of security.

In London, the Foreign Office said Britain "deplored" the explosion and shared "the indignation which will be universally felt at this wanton disregard for the welfare and safety of the human race."

In Bonn, West German Foreign Minister Heinrich Von Brentano charged the Russians with trying to create fear and terror.

"An Insane Decision"

"An insane decision," the Vatican radio said; "morally, politically, socially, economically and humanely deprecable."

The Dutch government said it "holds the Soviet Union responsible for the poisoning of the atmosphere."

The Scandinavian countries were unanimous in criticism, and even in Finland, Russia's tiny neighbor, there was protest. A group of about 50 Finnish students staged a demonstration outside the Soviet commercial delegation in Turku.

Swedish Prime Minister Tage Erlander commented that the explosion was the only answer he had received to his appeal to Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev to call off the test.

2 Carolinians Die

Two members of the Carolina community, Kenton R. Kyle and Wayne H. Cooksey, met death violently over the weekend. Kyle was a UNC graduate student; Cooksey, a Carolina Inn employe.

UNC graduate student Kenton R. Kyle, 23, of Shinnston, W. Va., was killed early Saturday morning when his car overturned on the deserted Hillsboro Speedway. Sheriff C. D. Knight said Kyle apparently was speeding when his 1954 Plymouth failed to make a turn and rammed over a bank. He was thrown out.

Kyle was a well-known student actor and at the time of his death was appearing in "The Rainmaker", a Petite Dramatique production on campus. He had portrayed "Old Tom Harris" in the Lost Colony for the past two seasons. He had appeared in "Deep Are the Roots" at Goodman Memorial Theater, Chicago, in 1957, and while a student at Berea College, Kentucky, played in Paul Green's "Wilderness Road" and was winner of the "Hall of Fame" award as the best actor at the college.

Assistant Manager

Wayne H. Cooksey, 46, assistant manager in charge of food at the Carolina Inn was found dead on Knox Street in Durham about 8 p.m. Sunday. Investigators said he had a .32 caliber bullet through the heart. The Durham County Coroner ruled the death a suicide.

The pistol used was found nearby.

At the United Nations, U. S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson termed it an "arrogant act" that sent the world on "a great leap backward toward anarchy and disaster." The Dutch ambassador to the U.N. called it "an act of terror against humanity." In London, the British government was quick to express its indignation.

Urges Atmospheric Tests

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of a House-Senate atomic energy subcommittee on weapons development, said this country should reply by resuming atmospheric tests that would be limited in number and involve only low-yield weapons. Any such tests could be used in development of an anti-missile missile.

UNC Seeking Fifth Win

Pfeiffer Is Here For Soccer Game

Daily Tar Heel Sports

Allen Men Play At 3 On Fetzer

The North Carolina soccer team will try again for their fifth win of the year here this afternoon against Pfeiffer College. The Tar Heel Booters, who dropped a 4-1 heartbreaker Saturday to Maryland, and thereby almost gave up their hopes for the conference crown, are now 4-3 for the season.

This will be the first meeting of the two teams. Gametime is 3 p.m. on Fetzer Field.

Coach Marvin Allen still maintains that this is one of his best elevens yet. In games so far, the team has shown some good scoring balance, and has proved to be an exciting team to watch.

Little Herman Prakke, a wing, has been a real offensive sparkplug for the Tar Heels. Prakke has scored in almost every game, and was the only Carolina man to crease the nets in the Maryland game.

Bill Shettle has been another consistent scorer for UNC. Big and strong, with deceptive speed, Shettle has been a big factor in the success of the blue and white line. It is Shettle who has been called on and who has delivered when the Tar Heels were due a penalty kick on several occasions.

Other probable starters in the offensive line are wingman Kingman Brown, center forward Pete Blake, and inside man Frank Lankford.

The sturdy halfbacks for UNC are Bill Snyder, George Beim, and Charles Battle. Captain Dick Bordogna and John Kenrich are the fullbacks. Either Larry Steele or Tom Griffith will be in the goal.

Basketball Practices Open Wednesdays At 8

North Carolina's varsity basketball team will be playing exhibitions with the freshman team every Wednesday night until the regular season starts on December 2. The next one of these matches will be held tomorrow night at 8.

Coach Dean Smith has invited the public to view the practice games. "They should be very interesting matches," he said. "Our freshman team is much stronger than it has been in several years, and the varsity may not be as strong as it has in the past."

The coach suggested that fans come early to get a seat in the end stands, because the sideline seats have not been erected yet.

COUNCIL

The Student Athletic Council has announced that date tickets for the Tennessee and LSU games will be half price. The Council said that the deadline for entries to the homecoming queen contest is midnight November 7. Entry fee is $4.

Rett Everett, The Top ACC Runner, Has No Gimmick For His Successes

RETT EVERETT

By HARRY TOCCE

"Anybody can do it if he just works hard," says Rett Everett.

By "it" he means becoming better than the "average" fellow.

The captain of the cross country team is an excellent example of how hard work and perseverance can produce desired success.

This year has been the climax of a successful college career in cross country for the defending ACC champion who owns or who shares at least five records.

They include the UNC course record, the ACC cross-country record, the AAU one mile record, the Duke course record (shared with Jerry Stuver) and the Maryland course record (also shared with Stuver).

This year, the Greenville senior is undefeated, winning in three meets and tieing in one.

Against Clemson Everett took first place in a record time of 20:46 minutes over the 4.1 mile Chapel Hill route. This time was 32.4 seconds better than the old mark set by Stuver last year.

At Charlottesville, he checked in first with a 19:42 clocking over the Cavalier's four-mile distance.

State was his next victim followed by Maryland last weekend. Despite the bad muddy conditions, he and Stuver finished in a tie, knocking off eight seconds from the Terp course record.

Are there any short-cuts?

"No gimmicks," Rett said, "just daily practice of running and exercise."

After a day in class, Everett trods to Fetzer Field for his daily workout.

First up are 10 quarter miles "at good speed".

Then, a la Herb Elliott, Rett runs hills for about one and a half miles. "It's done to strengthen the heart and lungs and to increase stamina," he said.

His workout half through, it's off to Finley golf course. There he will run about three or four miles. "About once a week I will extend myself to seven or eight miles," he said.

For a finish, Rhett does about 10 wind sprints of 100 yards each. No rest is taken between sprints.

Where does a man get the will to do this every day when he has his studies to keep up?

"It's a means of relaxation," he said. "My grades don't come easily. I must study about seven hours a day."

Rett has no special diet, but he does watch his weight by taking only two meals a day. "I tend to gain weight easily," he said.

Coach Dale Ranso spares no words in talking about his prize pupil.

"He's a very diligent worker in anything he undertakes," says Ranson, "and a very accomplished athlete."

Besides setting new records in cross country, he has managed to compile a straight A average in chemistry (his major) and is doing B work in his other courses.

For his excellence in German, he was one of the recipients of the German book award. Everett brushes this off as being unimportant saying, "Don't mention that. They gave one to several others."

Records didn't fall so easily when Rett began as a miler for Rose High in Greenville. His best time for that distance was 4:38 minutes.

As a freshman, he started longer distances. "I did two miles in about 10 minutes," he said. He improved gradually and in his second year, finished "9th or 10th" in the conference.

Grover Woodrow Everett Jr. is a quiet, congenial fellow who doesn't try to impress anyone, but cannot fail to do so. His actions just speak too loud.

Touts, Joyner Battle Today In Semi-finals

The Town Touts and the Joyner Jocks will do battle this afternoon at 4:30, a game which will determine the other finalist in the Dormitory Tag Football Play-Offs.

The Alexander Playboys have already sewed one place in the finals, whipping Grimes last Thursday, 31-7, in a semi-final game.

The Town Touts were regular season champions of League I with a 3-0 record. So far in the tournament, they have drawn a first-round bye and edged Winston in the quarter-finals by 15-14.

The Joyner team lost only to the Alexander Playboys in compiling a 2-1 regular season mark in League VI. Alexander also drew a first-round bye, then upended the defending champion Manly Riverrats, 13-8, last Thursday in the quarter-finals.

This afternoon's meeting on Field 1 will have the intramural spotlight all to itself, as it is the only game scheduled today. The championship encounter will be at 4:30 on Thursday afternoon.

Frosh Don't Play Until Turkey Day

The North Carolina freshman football team, which won its second consecutive 20-0 game here Friday against Virginia, has completed its home schedule and will not play again until it meets Duke on Thanksgiving Day for the annual Cerebral Palsy Benefit Game.

Coach George Barclay's team is following a pattern very similar to that of last year's freshman team, in losing to State and Clemson and defeating Wake Forest and Virginia. Last year, the freshman team lost to Duke by less than a touchdown.

STRONG FEELING

CHICAGO (UPI)—Chemist James Da Kura, 34, feels so strongly that a woman's place is in the home that he quit his job because his wife got one.

And Superior Judge David Canel feels so strongly that a man's place is out supporting his family that he sentenced Pa Kuras to a year in jail Tuesday when the chemist refused to return to work.

GOP 'Reveres' To Attack JFK Today

A "Paul Revere" panel of Republican Congressmen will speak here this afternoon at 3:30 in the Law School Court Room, Manning Hall.

Sponsored by the Republican National Committee, the panel will continue its attack on the Kennedy Administration and the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The panel, led by Rep. William C. Cramer of Florida, will include Samuel L. Devine of Ohio, John M. Ashbrook of Ohio and James Edward Bromwell of Iowa.

Carry "Warning"

Rep. Bob Wilson, chairman of the GOP Congressional Committee, said in announcing the tour that the name "Paul Revere" was chosen, "because these Republican Congressmen will carry a warning to the American people that our system of government is imperiled by the policies of the present Administration."

The Southern panel, one of five touring the nation this fall, will visit 17 other cities in Tennessee, North Carolina, West Virginia and Florida by Thursday.

Rep. Cramer, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of UNC, told 250 guests at a $5-a-plate chicken luncheon in Charlotte Monday that the congressional redistricting bill passed by the 1961 legislature was a "gerrymander scheme obviously aimed at getting rid of Charlie Jonas," North Carolina's only GOP congressman. He also predicted overwhelming re-election for Jonas, who has not said whether he will seek a sixth term.

Excessive Spending

At a $50-a-plate roast-beef supper in Asheville Monday, the panel warned about 200 Republicans that the present administration is guilty of excessive spending, "backdoor financing" of federal projects, indecisive foreign policy, lack of executive leadership and secrecy in government.

Tomorrow the group will also hold a panel discussion at 10:30 a.m. in the Wake Forest Law Building, attend a 12:30 p.m. Fifth District conference and luncheon in Winston-Salem and speak in Burlington at 7:00 p.m.

They go to West Virginia Thursday.

Debate Team Defeats Duke On Television

Carolina's debate team defeated Duke University Monday in the first of a series of televised debates on WUNC-TV.

Mack Armstrong, Earl Baker and Bill Patterson represented UNC in the debate on the topic: Resolved that labor organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation. The Carolina team took the affirmative.

Armstrong and Baker achieved a near perfect record in national competition last year.

Also on the debate program were Professors Don Springen and Joseph Weatherby, who were interviewed by George Hall of WUNC-TV, Raleigh.

This was the first in a series of 10 North Carolina college debates to be televised this year. As a result of their win, Carolina will meet Wake Forest Monday, Nov. 13, in the second debate on current issues.

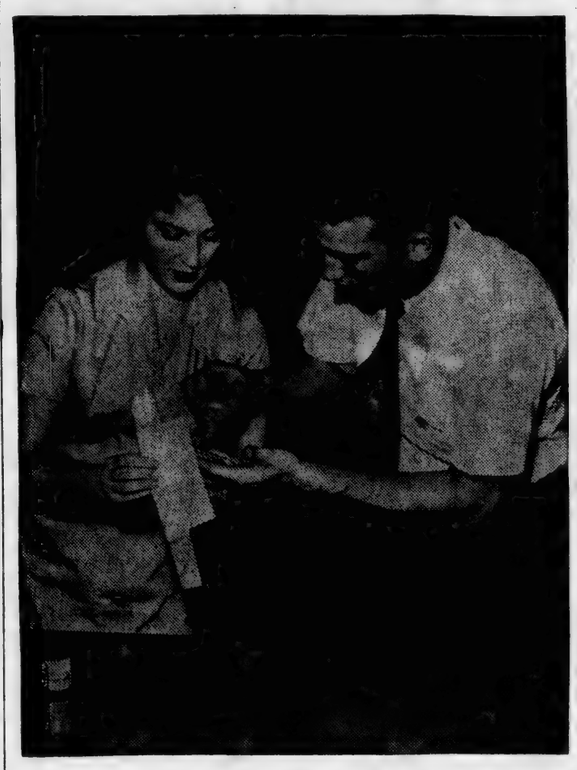
Art Students

UNC students may contribute art objects to the annual art auction of the NC State College School of Design to be held Dec. 4 at 7 p.m. in the ballroom of the college union.

Each year the School of Design sponsors this auction, the proceeds of which go to their publication, the "Student Publication of the School of Design".

The art objects, with the artist's name, will be exhibited a few days before the auction. During the auction his name will not be disclosed.

Bond Issue Mailed



BOUNDING THE BOND ISSUE—Robin Britt of Asheville and Lynn McGregor of Greensboro help other students folding and wrapping the special DTH Bond Issue. The issue will be sent out to over 6,000 parents of UNC students. It contains articles showing UNC's need for the money which would be provided by the November 7 Bond Issue Vote. About 50 students appeared last night in GM's Rendezvous Room to help the State Affairs Committee in sending out the issue.—Photo by Jim Wallace.

Morehead Scholars Grown Since 1951

(Editor's note: This article on the Morehead scholarships is the third in a series of background information of John Motley Morehead. UNC's second annual Morehead Day will be held next Friday.)

By MARTIN KROMMING

The Morehead Scholarships, created in 1951 through the efforts of John Motley Morehead, has maintained for its central purpose the attraction of outstanding young men to the Carolina campus. In awarding this scholarship the Central Scholarship Committee weighs its decision solely on the merits of the boy candidate and casts out any thought of need.

When the Morehead Scholarships became available in 1951 they were presented to North Carolina students for graduate and/or professional study. But in 1954, the committee decided to abolish this plan and offered awards to students in North Carolina public and private schools for undergraduate work.

Out Of State Grants

Finally, in 1955 Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Virginia and Woodberry Forest School in Woodberry Forest, Virginia became the first two out-of-state private institutions to be included in the program.

This year, fourteen private out of state schools along the eastern seaboard were offered two Scholarships apiece.

This year there are 143 Morehead scholars on campus in addition to Jim Reston, who is studying at Oxford, Tom Alexander and Al Rich, who is studying in Spain for his senior year.

Since the Morehead Scholarship program was initiated there have been 318 awards made, of which 288 young men have enrolled in the University.

Given $1,175 A Year

Each in-state and out-of-state student who accepts a Morehead is presented $1175 once a year for four years. Since this amount does not take care of tuition, a North Carolina resident is given $175.00 while an out of state individual is allowed $600.00.

In setting up the scholarship program, "Uncle Mot" made the stipulation that a Morehead student should handle his own affairs and the $1175 he is given can be used in any way he sees fit.

Moreheads have been involved in honors programs, Phi Beta Kappa, NROTC, AFROTC, athletics, publications, and fraternity and dormitory life. The past three student presidents have been Morehead scholars.

Moreheads are actively teaching at Vanderbilt University, North Carolina State, North Carolina, Duke, New York University and the University of Washington.

IFC Hears Deferred Rush Proposal; To Start In 1963

IFC Agrees To New Coed Rule On Visit Hours

The new visiting agreement for UNC fraternities will go into effect today.

President Bill Sullivan of the IFC signed the agreement last Thursday making it the official document for coed and "import" visiting hours and conditions. The agreement was studied by the IFC in conjunction with the Pan-Hellenic Council and the University administration.

The agreement contains a change in the earlier "drinking and conduct" clause. Previously this clause forbid drinking with women visitors present. Now, however, the chapter accepts responsibility for all its members conducting themselves in "full compliance with the Campus Code and, in particular, with regard to the University's policy concerning the consumption of alcoholic beverages."

Each fraternity party must be caperoned by a married couple, housemother or a faculty member. They are required at all fraternity functions where the entire membership is invited to participate.

The IFC recognizes their responsibility in enforcing this agreement and, according to President Sullivan, "this is the most important part of the agreement." Representatives of the IFC will be assigned to fraternities on Friday and Saturday nights and for Sunday morning clean-up. These representatives will also inspect the houses prior to closing hours.

Along with Bill Long, assistant dean of student affairs, Mrs. Martha DeBerry, acting dean of women, representing the administration, the student members of the committee were taken from a cross-section of the involved groups.

The student representatives at the discussion were Janice Haley, Pan-Hellenic Council, Cam Tabor, Carolina Women's Council; Pam Parker, Women's Residence Council; Larry Medford, president of the Professional Interfraternity Council and Bill Sullivan, Billy Riley and Bill Farrell from the IFC.

Dean Bill Long said the new visiting agreement was the "result of collective thought. There was no intention of . . . "one party to superimpose their views on the visiting agreement on the other."

The agreement will be in effect until the end of the school year.

Plan To Hold Rush One Semester Late

By JOE DeBLASIO

A motion to defer rush beginning in the school year 1963-64 was presented to the Interfraternity Council Monday night at a meeting in Gerrard Hall.

The motion, made by Bob Sevier, deferred rush committee chairman, called for a deletion of Article 4 of the Interfraternity Council By-Laws and substituting it with a completely new article drawn up by Sevier's committee. Since this requires an amendment to the by-laws themselves, the motion will not be voted on until the next meeting which is November 11.

Spring Rush

The article calls for deferment of fraternity rushing until the Spring semester with the dates of rushing determined by the IFC. It states that, in order to be eligible for rushing, a student, excluding juniors and seniors, must be in residence in the University for one semester. Also, in a "move to start the fraternity scholarship on the right foot," the prospective rushee must have a 2 or "C" average before pledging.

With regard to the relations between fraternity men and prospective rushees, previously covered in a "strict silence," there will be a modified silence for the first semester. During this time fraternity men may speak to prospective rushees but may not formally entertain them in any manner.

The Thanksgiving, Christmas and semester break vacations will be exempt from this ruling but following the return to school from Christmas vacation there will exist a strict silence until the end of the formal rush.

Silence Impractical

Sevier explained a total strict silence was judged by the committee to be impractical. He said the rules were devised so that the IFC would have the least amount of trouble with violations.

In order to enforce these rules when the deferred rush is installed in spring, 1964, the committee included penalties for convicted fraternities breaking the modified or strict silence.

These penalties include an automatic loss of intramural privileges for the convicted fraternity and an automatic fine of between $50 and $300 depending on the offense.

Each of the representatives of the IFC will study the document in their respective chapter meetings this week and next with a vote on Nov. 11.

McGill To Give Commencement Talk Next June

Ralph McGill, Pulitizer Prize-winning publisher of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, will give the Commencement address June 4 in Kenan Stadium.

McGill won the Pulitizer Prize in 1959 for his editorials on the Southern racial situation. He has been described as one of the most respected "liberal" journalists in the nation and the South. He has received awards from B'nai Brith and other national organizations.

McGill was editor of the CONSTITUTION from the late 1930's through 1960, when he became publisher. The Atlanta paper boasts orator-politician Henry Grady and "Uncle Remus" author Joel Chandler Harris as former editors.

McGill's column is syndicated in a number of major newspapers, including the Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER.

He also has served as an adviser and consultant on national problems during the Truman and Kennedy administrations.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

By United Press International

D. D. Eisenhower

World Protests Bomb

New waves of shock and anger swept the free world Tuesday against Russia's explosion of its super nuclear bomb. Anti-Soviet demonstrations broke out in Britain, Norway, Italy and Japan. World indignation increased when Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev told Communist leaders on Tuesday in Moscow Russian scientists made a "mistake" and joked that the explosion was bigger than the 50-megaton blast they had planned.

In Tokyo, 200 snake-dancing ultra-leftist Zengakurn federation students snake-danced outside the Soviet Embassy in noisy protest against the explosion—their first anti-Russian moves. The Russians ignored them.

U. S. May Test

WASHINGTON—The United States will announce "within a few days" whether it will resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere, the chairman of the House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee predicted Tuesday.

Rep. Albert Thomas, D.-Tex., hinted to newsmen that he expects the decision will be to go ahead with the above-ground tests. He spoke after receiving an "up-to-the-minute" briefing from Atomic Energy Commission and Central Intelligence Agency officials.

AEC Chairman Glenn T. Seabord said last weekend that the decision rested with President Kennedy.

The issue, according to Thomas, is whether such testing is needed to maintain the U.S. nuclear lead over Russia. Seabord has said that the results of the current Soviet series must be analyzed first.

Two New Red Bombs

WASHINGTON—Russia exploded two surprise nuclear bombs Tuesday even as the fallout cloud from its 50-megaton blast drifted across Siberia toward North America.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev had told the Communist Party Congress in Moscow that Monday's monster bomb would end the current Russian test series. But it obviously was not the final shot.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission said Tuesday's first blast unleashed the force of several million tons of TNT, or megatons. The second was described as in the intermediate to high yield range, probably one megaton.

Berlin Police Fire

BERLIN—Communist police opened fire twice Tuesday night on East German refugees seeking to flee across the tense East-West city border to West Berlin.

West Berlin police said six of the fleeing East Germans—most of them women and children—were rounded up by the Communist guards who had fired on them. But about four other East Berliners managed to escape during the afternoon, police said. The gunfire broke out shortly after West Berlin police announced that they had routed East Berlin Communist police in four tear gas grenade duels on the American-Soviet sector border Monday night and Tuesday.

Halloween Recalls Prankster Profs

By CHUCK MOONEY

UNC professors used to celebrate Halloween by putting small sailboats on the main street, placing wagons on top of schoolhouses, setting cardboard boxes full of water above doors to drench neighbors and giving gifts to unfortunate children.

Charles Bernard, dean of admissions, and his brother used to fill small cardboard boxes with water and balance them above screen doors. Then they would ring the doorbell and run. When the people answered the door, they got a shower.

Dean Bernard and his brother also built a skeleton and covered it with tinfoil. They would hide on the roof of a garage on the main street late at night and dangle the skeleton in front of passersby. The skeleton was wired so that it would shock anybody who was brave enough to touch it. There weren't many of these," said Bernard.

Flipped Model-T

"My brother and some boys turned a Model-T over on its top one time," he said.

Political Science Professor Monroe and his friends used to have parties with apple-bobbing contests and taffy-pulling contests. The contestants would get prizes. "Later in the evening, we would take the prizes across town and give them to the less fortunate kids," he added.

Professor Wager, also in the Political Science Department, and a group of friends took a wagon apart one year and re-assembled it on top of their one-room schoolhouse. He said they also stole gates and soaped windows.

Moved Sailboats

Dr. Wallace, of the Political Science Department, and ten or fifteen friends used to lift small sailing skiffs out of the water and line them up in front of the post office on their main street.

Psychology Professor George Welsh and his friends in Pennsylvania would dress up in costumes and sing, dance, recite poetry or tell jokes for neighbors. "Then they would try to guess who we were," he said. "They usually gave us a reward afterwards. Occasionally we would soap windows or write on walls with chalk, but not very often and this was usually before Halloween."

Dr. Adams, chairman of the Department of Philosophy, said that since it was over a mile to the nearest neighbor's house, playing a prank just wasn't worth the walk.

Great Great Granddaughter Of First Student Now UNC Coed

A petite, brunette freshman at UNC has a special connection with the University which none of the other students can claim.

Eighteen year old Martha Capel, a pharmacy major from Apex, is the great great ganddaughter of Hinton James, the first student at Carolina.

The trek of Hinton James, who came to the University soon after its doors had first opened in 1795, has been a subject of controversy for many years. According to legend, James trudged over 150 miles from Wilmington in New Hanover County to Chapel Hill.

Martha, who has heard many stories about her ancestor from her grandmother, Mrs. Luther C. Broome of Peachland, says that she heard he had come part of the way by donkey. A former president of the University, Kemp Battle, said that James had undoubtedly come part of the way by horse.

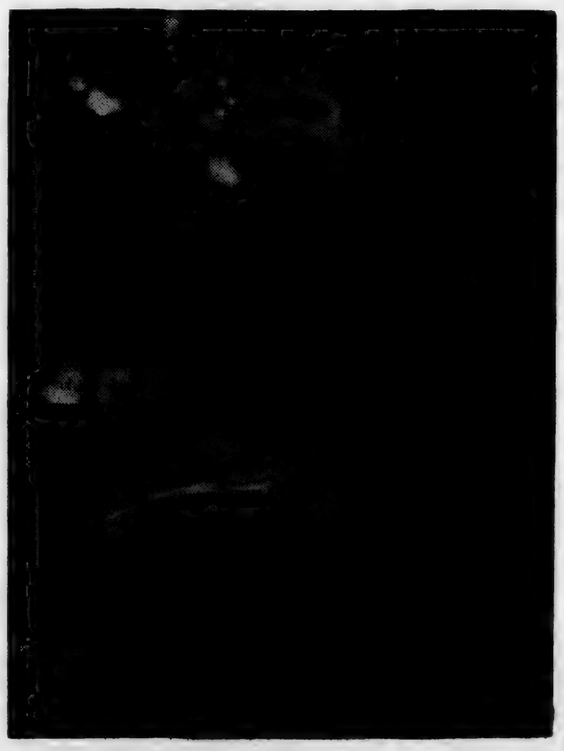
Admires Ancestor

Nevertheless, Martha considers her ancestor to have been most ambitious and admires him for it. "I could have walked from Apex to Chapel Hill," she said, "but not from Wilmington."

The daughter of a former chief of police in Apex, Martha is not only the descendant of the memorable "first student"—she also carries with her the title of "Miss Apex." Crowned in April, she has participated in the "Miss North Carolina" contest and in many public appearances throughout the state.

Martha is not the only descendant of Hinton James to come to the University. The most recent member of the family to study here was her uncle, Chauncey Broome of Peachland, who was a freshman in 1939.

Hinton James has been praised by many at Carolina. Francis Preston Venable, president of the University from 1900 to 1914, called James "the precursor of a long line of seekers after knowledge." As President Kemp Battle said, James was "the Christopher Columbus of the New World of North Carolina culture."



GREAT-GREAT-GRANDDAUGHTER — Martha Capel, great-great-granddaughter of Hinton James, first UNC student, poses under the Davie Poplar. James reportedly walked 150 miles to come to school. Martha is last year's "Miss Apex."

Smith, Bayer Debate Junior Class Offices

Newt Smith and Jeff Bayer will debate candidates for Junior Class officers: Joe Craver, UP and Richard Vinroot, SP, on WUNC-Carrier Current's "Roundtable", Thursday, 7 to 7:30 p.m.

The debate will center on Smith's assertion that there is no provision for the Junior Class officers in the Election Laws and Bayer's proposal to run for Sophomore Class president and immediately abolish the office on election.

The two candidates Vinroot and Craver will defend the validity of election of Junior Class officers and the value of all class officers. They will also examine Bayer's proposal to eliminate the Sophomore Class officers.

The program's director, Charles Erickson said that questions from the audience would be expected and answered. Erickson said that students listening to the program on Carrier Current may also phone in questions.

"This is the first real controversy we've had on Carolina Roundtable" since it began," Erickson said.

Smith has formally protested the Election's Board ruling on his first statement concerning the election. The board ruled to ignore his statement and go ahead with the election. Smith has since submitted a formal protest to the Student Council. He is expected to read excerpts from the protest during the debate Thursday.

Will It Take A Stand?

IFC Future

On Nov. 11, the Interfraternity Council will vote on a motion to impose deferred rush in 1963-64.

Although this news is heartening, the fact that it came after the administration had pushed the idea in its freshman report denies it the same effect it would have had if it had come totally from within the IFC itself, without prodding.

There is no questioning the advantages that the IFC would have gained by originating the plan completely within its own halls, without even the slightest hint from the administration. As it now stands, the ruling came, in large measure, because the IFC was virtually faced with a decision to take the action itself, or wait until the administration took over and set up a plan of its own.

But all of this has little importance in light of the more important consideration of what the IFC will do in the future. It now has the precedent to assert itself.

It has transformed itself from "the most spineless organization on campus" into an organization that can take the reins and guide itself.

The IFC can either use this newfound responsibility nd use it well, or it can revert to its former position of self-protection, reacting rather than acting. It can come up with its own ideas, or it can exist as a body that fights only when it is in danger.

Deferred rush is only a short step in the right direction. Most fraternities at Carolina are also plagued by other problems; one of the most serious is discriminatory clauses.

Schools throughout the country have taken action—or rather the administrations have—in forcing fraternities to rid themselves of clauses barring membership on the grounds of race or religion.

Most of these schools have adopted a ruling whereby fraternities must rid themselves of the national clauses within a certain period, or lose recognition by the college.

Many fraternities have taken their usual defensive attitude, conjuring up rationalizations which they feel defend discriminatory clauses. Carolina fraternities are no exception. Most of them will fight bitterly to uphold their professed "right" to discriminate.

"Anyone has the right to choose his own associates," the argument goes. We agree wholeheartedly. So why have a ruling that forbids associates who happen to be Negroes, Jews, etc.?

Fraternities with discriminatory clauses can pick their associates so long as they are "correct."

It is gratifying that the IFC is seriously considering deferred rush, not only because deferred rush is sound in principle, but because the IFC has taken hold.

Will the IFC now rest on its laurels, or will it take a stand on the discriminatory clauses — and take it before they are forced to do so? Or will the group refuse to face the issue on any terms, waiting for someone else to do it?

The IFC could prove itself as a courageous and responsible organization by taking some action on the discriminatory clauses. It has a start, and a firm one, in its motion to levy deferred rush—a motion which presumably will pass.

The IFC can now crawl back into its shell and wait to fight FOR the discriminatory clauses, or it can take action now AGAINST them.

We are willing to accept bets on which course the body will choose.

Funnies?

As if things weren't grim enough what with the Soviet Union spreading fallout with nuclear tests, East Germans shooting at West Germans, Albania and Red China ganging up on the rest of the Communist bloc and North Vietnamese guerillas about to over-run South Viet Nam . . .

Steve Canyon's ward Poteet is stranded at the airport while Steve rides off in a limousine with a sexy show girl, a Khrushchevian character of Al Capp's is about to push the "Goodbye England" button and an aging Mary Worth is hving to support her son who's already a grandfather himself.

Terry Lee's squadron finds it's unwelcome in England because of the noise made by its jets, Dr. Rex Morgan is being held prisoner in his own office by a mysterious man and the Phantom for the first time in memory has unleased his pet dog on a couple of hapless dogs. Tickets

Some time ago the DTH criticized the Athletic Association for refusing to make free tickets available to the 24 Toronto Exchange students who will be here during the weekend of the UNC-LSU game.

Since that time, we hve learned that although the Athletic Association had declined to donate the tickets, it was because LSU would allow UNC to issue only a limited number of tickets and the Athletic Association had contacted LSU before the DTH editorial appeared in an attempt to obtain the tickets. LSU has since consented, and the tickets have been given.

"I Can't Hear A Thing"

John F. Kennedy much to the disappointment of flaming liberals, has been in a slow but steady drift from the left towards the right almost since the hour the last ballot was counted.

Kennedy conducted his campaign in a manner that classified him politically as a sort of Hubert H. Humphrey with sex appeal. After the election, it began to appear that Kennedy had too shrewd a grasp of political realities to remain the captive of the Democratic left flank to which he had seemed to belong. He shuttled Stevenson and Bowles, the liberal darlings, into lower offices and chose Dean Rusk, a moderate undoctrinaire man for his chief foreign policy maker.

Sobered by the failure of his special Congressional session Kennedy awoke to the fact that the Congress of the United States is not his oyster and became more disposed to use the carrot rather than the stick.

Despite election eve gestures to Martin Luther King, Kennedy has resisted the pressure of the hate-the-South fringe of his party to push a drastic coercive integration program, so that he might smooth the road for the rest of his legislation, and, perhaps because of his good background in American history has even shown some inclination to treat with equality the people of all regions of the country.

Most recently Kennedy has appointed a "tough-minded Republican" to succeed Allen Dulles as head of that liberal nemesis the CIA apparently feeling that none of his Liberal intellectuals were trustworthy where the national safety was vitally concerned.

Observers say that the realities of power are bringing Kennedy, who was a year ago slashing away irresponsibly at Republican foreign failures, into increasing sympathy with the Eisenhower view that politics should stop at the shore. The President, it is said, is growing sensitive to charges that he is soft on Communism, which may mean that Stevenson Bowles, and others of appeasement viewpoint will soon be eased out of the scene.

At any rate, Kennedy has discovered what he seemingly did not know in his campaign, that he has no magic formula to halt the tide of communism, that the application of youth, vigor, and intelligence are not enough to suddenly reverse the tide of fortune and that the American people do not automatically rally to what John F. Kennedy thinks they ought to.

He may have discovered, in his own mind, if not in his public declarations, the inadequacy of the liberal view of a wicked, selfish America which only needs to be more obedient and sacrificial to the "uncommitted peoples" to magically halt the spread of communism conquest.

The New Frontier in foreign policy, closing the gap between theory and practice, is beginning to look more and more like Eisenhower and less and less like what it pictured itself to be last fall. Kennedy is beginning to look less and less like a new FDR and more and more like dear, bewildered bumbling old Ike.

It is already becoming hard to tell what difference there would have been, except for Jackie and Caroline in the White House, if a few more hundred thousand votes had gone to Nixon.

SP, UP Both Urge Bond Issue Support

To the Editor,

The two major political parties, in realizing they are entrusted by the student body to act as a sounding board of students' opinions, have expressed their wholehearded endorsement of the coming "Bond election for a better North Carolina" on November 7, 1961.

It is fortunate that the class offices' nominations have caused a vitalization of the parties in that their organizations can be used for a two-fold project. Pointing out that the two parties have joined hands in putting both their endorsement and their party members completely behind the coming vote. Some of the work done thus far, but which needs even more support from the student body is as follows:

More physical backing in Bill Harriss', Larry McDevitt's and Tom White's request for students to sign up for the "Torch of Education" on Friday, November 3. Sign up for this keynote project at the Graham Memorial informotion desk.

Support in sending personal postcards home to North Carolina residents urging their support for the Bond issue. These will be brought around to University housing units by party workers who will ask students' co-operation in writing and addressing them.

Both the University Party and the Student Party feel these are worthwhile approaches to publicizing the vote and invite all to contact the chairmen of the parties if it will work a few hours for something which will be of immeasurable worth to our University, to our state, and to the advancement of education.

Reflections

According to usually reliable sources a former Chapel Hill Communist has bought a seat on the New York stock exchange. NYSE seats presently sell for approximately $125,000. It appears that Collective Society advocates in this country have decided to form a Popular Front with Wall Street, but against whom?

Harrington And Unionism

At a time when "Jimmy Hoffa" has become a household name and the autocratic powers he possesses have been blasted across the nation's front pages, some persons have assumed that union democracy is a thing of the past, if it had ever existed.

Socialist newspaper editor Mike Harrington, a recent campus speaker (he debated Fulton Lewis III last week on the House Un-American Activities Committee film, "Operation Abolition"), expressed some thoughts on this subject during his two-day stay. His opinions are valuable, not for their objectivity—which would be a debatable assertion—, but for their unique insight into a major domestic problem.

"The labor union," said Harrington, "despite its present stagnant, defensive state with great power in the hands of a union bureaucracy, is still an expansion of freedom."

Unionism in the United States has a long way to go and much room to improve, Harrington admitted. With his great love for unions, and his equally strong insistence upon democratic processes, Harrington is one of unionism's most uncompromising critics. But those who have tidy and simple solutions to the problems of the unions, those who support the Landrum-Griffin bill or favor putting labor under anti-monopoly laws or any other easy panacea, the editor of NEW AMERICA opposes.

Persons who would support government-regulated elections within unions in hopes of getting more conservative or "moderate" labor leaders are mistaken, said Harrington. "Opinions of groups of workers organized as workers is not the sum total of individual workers' opinions."

The individual worker may have "8 million prejudices," but when he is acting as part of his union, he is more "liberal." A major misconception, according to Harrington, is that the worker is more conservative than his leaders. "On major issues—foreign policy, civil liberties, integration—the leaders are more liberal than the workers. But on bread-and-butter issues concerning the laborer's livilihood, the worker is more radical than his leaders."

Harrington, a Greenwich Village (New York) resident and a director of the Fund for the Republic, paused and in the best tradition of the political-social-economic ideas he represents, pulled a two-inch cigarette butt out of a crushed pack and lit it.

"The United States is the only advanced society where the labor union which represents 51 per cent of the workers in a shop, represents all the workers. There," said Harrington, "the unions in this country have an even greater obligation to be democratic.

"Many people denounce factionalism," said Harrington, "but I think factionalism in unions is just wonderful." Factionalism in an inherently monopolistic institution is a prequisite for democracy. Harrington named one union which had a traditional party system within itself, to ensure a democratic situation.

The Socialist editor took a unique position (for a pro-labor man) on governmental intervention in labor affairs.

"There is no real hope for democratization in unions which are not already democratic. There is a necessity for governmental laws concerning some union affairs, although intervening to a minimal extent.

"To take the traditional labor position of 'labor should clean its own house' is a fraud," said Harrington.

"Where a union voluntarily guarantees a democratic internal system it should be exempt from the regulatory laws, excelt for occasional inspection. But for the other unions some sort of regulation is necessary," Harrington concluded.

Class Candidates Discuss Problems

UP Claims Class Officers Needed

To the Editor:

There have now appeared two articles advocating the abolishment of class officers on the grounds that class officers do nothing constructive and are of no significance to the class. Is it true that class officers have done nothing constructive and are of no significance to the class? We think that this point can be debated very postively in favor of the continuance of class officers on what those officers have done in the past and on what they can accomplish in the future.

For example we will take the junior class officers. Let us look at what these officers accomplished last year:

1. Faculty scholarships for $100.
2. Essay contest for $25.
3. Fund raising basketball game which promoted school spirit.
4. Junior class picnic.
5. Made $800 to go toward senior class project.

This record is certainly significant and is to be commended. We feel that a precedent of active leadership was begun last year that should be carried on by future class officers. If elected we would like to start with these accomplishments as a guide and work toward greater achievements by the junior class this year.

—Joe Craver, Gaston Caperton, Betty McDonald, Bob Reardon, Van Oatts; UP candidates for junior clsas offices.

Junior Nominees Adopt Platform

To the Editor:

The Student Party candidates for junior class officers have adopted the following platform:

1. Money making projects:
a. Christmas combo party; b. Junior basketball classic
2. Social regulations revision:
a. Extend coed curfew; b. Date tickets (reduce expense of); 2. Increase number of student seats in gym.
3. Periodic progress reports:
4. Open cabinet meetings, with outstanding minutes published in DTH
5. Class picnic
6. Faculty award of the month, published in DTH
7. Inter-class cooperation and co-projects
8. Appoint dual-secretariat:
a. Secretary to the administration; b. Secretary to the student government (for closer association with administration and student government).

—Richard Vinroot (pres.), Howard Holsenbeck (vice-pres.), Beth Walker (sec.), Leon Barber (treas.) and Mary Marshall (social chr.) SP candidates

Candidate Bayer Clarifies Stand

To the Editor:

Many people apparently have misunderstood my motives in announcing that I would abolish my position if elected President of the Sophomore Class.

I would abolish the position only as a last resort. Before I did this, I would appeal to Student Legislature to (1) give the office constitutional powers and duties; (2) appropriate money for use by the class officers. If the Legislature refused, I would "abolish" the office by refusing to call a meeting or initiating any action. The position would be rendered more useless than it is now (if that is possible.)

Newt Smith's recent discovery that the election of Junior class officers is not legally provided for in the election laws, affords the opportunity to eliminate these positions. I likewise wish to abolish the office of Sophomore Class President—by a popular vote, however, rather than by a typing error.

There is no need for an office with no power, with no money, with no purpose other than to fill space in the Yack.

—Jeff Bayer
Independent candidate for Sophomore Class President

Independent States Position

Open letter to juniors:

My name is Larry Brown. I am an independent candidate for the vice-presidency of the junior class. As a candidate, I have several reasons for writing this letter. First I wish to acquaint you with my candidacy, and second. I would like to express to you several views I have concerning this position.

I am aware of the fact that class officers have been figurehead positions. Nevertheless I feel that the potential contribution of class officers to the University is limitless. If elected it would be my intention to work toward the development of this potential and the establishment of this office as one of responsibility and purpose. I would, encouraging the other class officers to do likewise, make myself available to the administration of the University and the student government in order that our services might at last be utilized by the school.

It is my intention to visit each of you personally before the election. To those of you whom I am unable to see, I hope that this letter will serve to acquaint you with my views concerning the vice-presidency. I will appreciate your consideration and would welcome your support.

—Larry Brown

Bob Spearman Expands Platform

To the Editor:

Perhaps it might be considered a mild form of heresy to deviate even so slightly from the platform and the party that nominated me, but I feel that at least two more planks could have been added to an already sturdy platform, to insure its weathering any slander from the opposition.

It is not my intent to antagonize the University Party, but I hereby issue my pledge to strive for two more inclusions of duties for this year's U. P. class officers.

1. A concerted effort to insure the swift and effective passage of the constitution. It is my firm belief that this issue has been played with long enough and that it is high time to pass the bill. Let's throw politics to the winds.

2. To propose a bill providing for a Sunday supplement to the DTH. This supplement would include feature articles, comic strips, puzzles, and picture sections. Granted, funds must be acquired to accomplish this, but looking at the innumerable instances where money has been wasted in the past, (i.e. this year's Entertainment Committee), I think that without too much lobbying the funds would be granted.

If elected, I pledge myself and my fellow class officers to the task of accomplishing these two planks in conjunction with the remainder of the University Party platform.

Queen Announces New Arms Buildup

By RICHARD C. GROWALD

LONDON (UPI)—Britian Tuesday announced new defense plans that could double the size of the British army from its present size of 165,000 officers and men and voiced support for U. S. nuclear tests in the atmosphere if they become necessary.

The announcement of a defense buildup was made by Queen Elizabeth II in her traditional speech from the throne opening a new session of Parliament. The queen, resplendent in a dress of silver lace, a diamond clustered diadem, and ermine, spoke in the House of Lords.

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, speaking in the House of Commons, said the situation in Berlin was not grave enough to call for immediate mobilization and said he was "strongly opposed to this step at present."

Promises Support

The promise of support for atmopheric tests came in the afternoon Commons session when Macmillan said, "I hope it may not prove necessary either for the Americans or ourselves to make an atmospheric test, however small."

"I must be quite clear and frank with the House," he said. "If we are convinced that a particular atmospheric test was necessary to maintain the balance and to preserve the freedom of the world, then our country would be bound either to cooperate in or support their conduct."

He said no such tests were contempleted in the near future.

The principal issue was the Queen's speech—written by the Macmillan government—on new defensive measures made necessary by world tensions.

The Queen said the government planned to extend the two-year active duty of some army national service men draftees by six months and that some reserve troops also will be subject to recall to active duty.

About 50,000 national servicemen and 140,000 reservists could be affected. The War Office said the present size of the British army is about 165,000 officers and men. There was no indication yet exactly how many men would be added to the army.

She coupled the news of the defense buildup with pledges to continue and increase Britian's partnership with the United States and NATO and to seek an East-West settlement "which will preserve the security and freedom of the people of West Berlin."

Of Monday's explosion of a super Soviet nuclear bomb, the Queen said, "in spite of the action of the Soviet Union in continuing to conduct nuclear tests on a massive scale in defiance of world opinion, my government will persevere in their endeavor to promote an international agreement on the discontinuance of nuclear weapons.

Siberians May Receive Fallout Of Superbomb

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Russians living in a 1000-mile-long corridor in Siberia will be dusted with 3 per cent of the radioactive fallout from the 50-megaton Soviet superbomb, a Weather Bureau expert said Tuesday.

Robert List, chief of the bureau's atmospheric radioactivity research project, said anyone living downwind within 100 miles of the blast would receive 100 roentgens of nuclear rays. U. S. scientists have said this amount would cause mild radiation sickness.

It was not known whether any Russians lived in the area or whether the Soviet Union cleared any residents from the vicinity of the Arctic testing ground.

List said a cloud containing another 1 or 2 per cent of the nuclear debris would reach the Aleutians and possibly western Alaska Thursday night. It may pass north of the U. S. mainland and hit Europe in about a week.

The remaining 95 per cent of the fallout will be washed down by next spring's rains on the United States and other northern hemisphere nations.

The U. S. Public Health Service forecast an increase in radiation in the United States, possibly to record peaks. But it said there was no immediate health danger.

Khrushchev Keeps Power At Congress

MOSCOW (UPI)—The 22nd Soviet Communist Party Congress Tuesday confirmed Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's position as the most powerful Russian since Joseph Stalin.

The 5,000 delegates ended their congress by reelecting Khrushchev first secretary of the Communist party and chairman of the Russian Republic's Political Bureau.

These two posts and the premiership now held by Khrushchev once were held by Stalin—but only briefly.

The closing day elections also were believed to have purged the party leadership of the last surviving, die-hard Stalinists although there was no announcement.

The elections cleared the way for the expulsion from the party of the Stalinists who sought to overthrow Khrushchev—former Premier and Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov, former Premier Georgi Malenkov, former Foreign minister Dmitri Shepilov and former Deputy Premier Lazar Kaganovic.

The elections enlarged the Central Committee—which directs the party between congresses—from 255 to 331 members and alternate members. However the Presidium—the party's supreme ruling body—was reduced from 24 to 16 members and alternates.

Presidium Radically Different

The new Presidium is a radically different body from the one in power in 1956 which was the first Presidium elected after Stalin's death. Gone was the old guard which worked with Stalin and some—like Molotov—who served with V. I. Lenin, also are among the purged and the disgraced.

The presidium's continuity with the past was preserved in the persons of old Bolsheviks Anastas I. Mikoyan, a first deputy premier, and Otti Kuusinen and Mikhail Shvernik, two 80-year-old Bolsheviks.

Khrushchev stands in the middle of that generation which rose to power under Stalin but later revolted against his legacy.

The new Central Committee is dominated by younger men who never met Stalin much less Lenin. They are typical of the new Soviet industrial society.

Khrushchev's new lieutenants are not professional revolutionaries. They are practical administrators, trained in economics and engineering.

They are partly the reason for the congress being officially dubbed "the congress of the builders of communism." The main item on the agenda was supposed to have been adopting Khrushchev's 20-year program for outstripping U. S. industrial production and achieving the world's highest standard of living.

But from the outset on Oct. 17 the meeting was overshadowed by these developments:

—The explosion of the super nuclear bomb Monday. Khrushchev had told the congress to expect a megaton blast. Tuesday he said the scientists made a mistake and the blast was bigger. But, he joked the scientists would not be punished.

—The brutally frank disclosures of the crimes of Stalinism.

—The virtual expulsion of Albania from the Communist fold.

—The deepening rift between the Soviet Union and Communist China.

The congress-demanded removal of Stalin's body from Lenin's Red Square tomb and the accompanying destruction of Stalinism's last vestiges symbolized the end of an era—and probably the start of a new course in international communism.

2 UNC Nurses SNA Officers

Two UNC School of Nursing juniors were elected officers of the Student Nurses Assn. (SNA) of North Carolina at the group's annual convention in Asheville Oct. 27-28.

Sylvia Vincent, of Greenville, was elected president. Toni Thompson, of North Wilkesboro, was elected treasurer.

Miss Vincent is First Vice President of the local SNA chapter, as well as Miss SNA of 1960-61.

Miss Thompson is a member of the UNC Honor Council and served as President of her freshman nurses' class.

US Astronauts Use UNC's Planetarium

"We never know when they are coming," said Morehead Planetarium Director Anthony Jenzano.

He was speaking of the astronauts of which two were here last week-end. "This is understandable because their training takes them anywhere and everywhere."

Last March seven astronauts came to UNC for an intense study of the heavens. They trained in two two-man teams and one three-man team in a two day session. They used a "Link Trainer" which is used to train pilots in celestial navigation. This device was modified to simulate the precise area of the capsule to be used and motorized to simulate motion. It was placed under the planetarium sky where the men were required to quickly recognize and identify the constellations having ceen part of them through a viewer.

Friday night, October 27, when word came that astronauts John H. Glenn and Scott Carpenter were coming, Mr. Jenzano and John T. Britton, head technician, adapted the planetarium projector to simulate any given orbit crossing the equator at any given point.

"This training is in anticipation of orbital flight by man," said Mr. Jenzano. "It is expected that others will come in the future.

Little Christmas in The Intimate

Although the Intimte prefers Christmas to come in December, so many of our friends have loved ones in distant corners of the earth that we've had to weaken a trifle.

If you are among those who need an early Christmas, you'll find a special table, back near the text section, with book catalogs, imprinted Christmas Card samples, and, nicest of all, a supply of tinselly Advent Calendars, which every child should have by December first.

Merry Shopping to you!

Athletes Lead Off The Field

Throughout the years, UNC athletes have played important parts in student affairs both on and off the playing field. As players, they are representatives of the school wherever they go. However, many Tar Heels aren't satisfied merely to use their athletic abilities, but strive to lead in other fields as well.

Ray Farris has been a fine example of the athlete who was a student leader as well as a fine player. Farris, as the top quarterback his junior and senior years, was also elected class president for these years. The man he succeeded as quarterback, Jack Cummings, was also president of his senior class.

Bruce Greene, a guard on the football team, was president of the sophomore class last year. Ward Marslender, halfback, was junior class treasurer. Watts Carr was both a freshman basketball guard and president of his class last year.

This year, there is a new twist to the athlete-student leader picture. Two athletes are running against each other for the junior class presidency, and another is trying for the vice-presidency. One is a football player, and the other two are basketballers.

Joe Craver, football center and outstanding student, will oppose Richard Vinroot, basketball center and likewise a fine student. Both are Morehead scholars. Vinroot did not play basketball last year, but was a starter as a freshman and shows a lot of promise this year.

While these two are battling for the top spot, basketball guard Larry Brown will campaign as an independent for the job of vice-president. Brown, a history student and one of the best outside shooters in the ACC, says he wants to represent both the student body and the athletes at Carolina. "Athletes have received a lot of criticism in the last year," he said. "If I am elected vice-president, I will try to show that athletes are just as capable of leadership as are any other students."

Larry and Joe and Richard are all fighting the same battle. Since the gambling scandal broke last spring and de-emphasis rulings were rushed in, there have been some violent attacks at college athletics. Some of these may have been warranted. Some definitely were not. In seeking office in their student government, these athletes are trying to correct a warped picture that may have arisen in the minds of many.

All three of these are highly capable of holding the offices they seek. They have the integrity to make something of the jobs once they gain them.

Carson Is Real Workhorse

Who's the hardest working ball carrier in the Atlantic Coast Conference? It's Carolina halfback Gib Carson, who has carried the ball more times than any other player. In five games, Carson has run 67 times. Closest behind him is Dennis Condie of Maryland, who has carried 61 times in six games. Carson is sixth in total yards with 200. The league's leading rusher is Alan White of Wake Forest, who has galloped 371 yards in 50 tries for a 7.4 average. Carolina fullback Bob Elliott, who hasn't carried much in the last two games, is ninth in the ACC, with 161 yards on 47 carries.

Quarterback Ray Farris is fifth in passing, with 31 completions for 375 yards. Farris' completion mark is 43%. He stands eighth in total offense with 405 yards, and has been involved on more plays (passing or rushing) than any other player in the ACC but State quarterback Roman Gabriel. Gabriel has 179 plays; Farris, 128.

The player leading the offensive parade, however, is Clemson signal caller Jim Parker, with 666 yards, or 6 more than Gabriel. Parker has only been involved with 107 plays, and has not been a starter but half of the season.

It might be noted that the top ten men in total offense in the conference are all quarterbacks, with halfback White coming in 11th.

Booters Win Fifth Game Over Pfeiffer

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The North Carolina soccer team, on the strength of some fine, spectacular play by the forward line, turned back the Falcons of Pfeiffer College here yesterday 3-1.

Frank Lankford, who last week tallied Carolina's only score against Maryland in the closing minutes of that game, started the Tar Heels off quickly when, with only 45 seconds gone in the first period, he drilled a shot from the rim of the penalty circle (about 30 yards out from the goal) past the bewildered Pfeiffer goalie Sid Jones. Lankford and his teammates continued to pepper the Pfeiffer net for the remainder of the first half, but to no avail as Jones turned back close to 20 shots.

The Falcons, of Pfeiffer, a small school in the western Piedmont region of the state, displayed some remarkable speed and ball-handling by Dean Lamont and little Jerry Mason, who at 5'4" and 140 pounds, must be one of the smallest players in the country. They came out the second half and nearly ran the Tar Heels off Fetzer Field with some deft pasing and accurate shots but Tom Griffith, in the Carolina goal was equal to the task and when Tar Heel outside right Kingman Brown scored at the 8 minute mark of the third quarter, the Pfeiffer attack quickly ran out of gas.

Later on in the same period, Lankford tallied his second goal of the afternoon, set up beautifully by Brown's sole rush down the right sideline, and this score sent the Tar Heel regulars to the bench as Coach Marvin Allen substituted freely during the final quarter.

With two minutes remaining in the game, Lamont was finally rewarded for his hustling play, when Griffin, who had been roaming far and wide from the Tar Heel goal all afternoon a la hockey's Jacques Plante, stumbled, letting the ball get behind him, and the alert Pfeiffer outside right tipped it in.

Sparts Lead Miss, Texas

NEW YORK (UPI)—Four teams each from the Big Ten and Southeastern Conferences dominated the top 10 in the United Press International college football ratings today with Michigan State and Mississippi 1-2 for the second week in a row.

Minnesota moved into the select group in the No. 10 spot following its 23-20 victory over Michigan. Notre Dame, ninth last week, dropped all the way to 20th after being upset by Northwestern.

In between Michigan State and Minnesota were the Big Ten's Ohio State in fifth place and Iowa in ninth.

Southeastern Conference powers besides Mississippi were: Alabama in the No. 4 spot; Georgia Tech in No. 6 and Louisiana State in No. 7.

The only "outside" teams in this week's top 10 were third-ranked Texas and eighth-ranked Colorado.

Besides its four representatives in the top 10 group, the Big Ten also had three among the second 10. Purdue and Northwestern followed Missouri, and Michigan was No. 17. Wyoming was rated 14th, Auburn 15th and Utah State 16th. Kansas and UCLA were tied for 18th place and Notre Dame was 20th.

The United Press International college football ratings with first-place votes and won-lost records in parentheses:

1.	Michigan State 22 (5-0)	322
2.	Mississippi 6 (6-0)	291
3.	Texas 5 (6-0)	286
4.	Alabama 2 (6-0)	237
5.	Ohio State (4-0-1)	201
6.	Georgia Tech (5-1)	136
7.	Louisiana State (5-1)	122
8.	Colorado (5-0)	111
9.	Iowa (4-1)	60
10.	Minnesota (4-1)	51

Runners Take On Duke, SC In Important Battle Today

By ED DUPREE

Can Coach Dale Ranson's cross-country team rebound from a 35-34 loss to Maryland and repeat their performance of 1960 when they took the ACC cross-country championship?

The question could be partly answered this afternoon when the UNC harriers trot against Duke's undefeated Blue Devils. Duke, led by Jerry Nourse, defeated Maryland early in the season and a victory over the Tar Heels would make the Blue Dukes slight favorites to win the championship in the ACC cross-country finals at Virginia, November 13.

But the Trotting Tar Heels, led by defending champion Rett Everett and Gerry Stuver, have been entertaining championship hopes since their season opener with Clemson and they will be conceding nothing to the visitors from Durham.

Backing up the classy Tar Heels duo will be a host of talented runners—talented in their capabilities more than their 1961 performances. Sophomore Charlie Little and Carmine Lunetta, the number six man in the ACC last year, have been fairly consistent. Others who will be counted on to tame the Blue Devils will be Mike Folk, Bob Bennett, Dave Brunson, Charlie Tromba, Larry Henry, Lou Sullivan, Scott Brent, and Ted Cohen.

Dave Blumfeldt is the top man behind Nourse for the Devils. A third man for Ranson's runners to watch out for is Frank Campbell, who finished ninth in last year's championship meet. The other returning lettermen are Vic Braren, Lloyd Brinson, Staley Gentry, Gary Husa, Allston Stubbs, and Louis Van Dyck.

A victory over Duke would not insure the Tar Heels of another ACC championship, but going into the finals on an even footing with Duke and Maryland could be a moral booster which might decide the winner in a tight race at Charlottesville.

'UP Doesn't Represent Dorm Men'

Dorm Man Quits University Party

By Bob Lankford

Mike Putzel, who claims leadership of the Men's Dorm Delegation to the University Party convention, yesterday announced his resignation.

UP Chairman Bill Criswell said that Putzel's designation was self-styled and stated that Dick Brodeur was the head of the delegation. Brodeur was not immediately available for comment.

Putzel in his resignation statement said that he took such action because he could see "no desire on the part of the University Party to represent dormitory men in the Student Government."

Putzel further stated that the UP, while interested in gaining the dorm man's vote, demonstrated no real interest in supporting policies which would prove beneficial to the dormitories.

Criswell said that his party "has a sincere desire to gear itself toward a majority of the students." However, Criswell pointed out, only a small number of dorm delegates attended the UP convention.

He blamed the Student Party for the minority status of the men's dorms at the UP convention: "Last spring the SP labelled us the fraternity party — and perhaps it wasn't entirely false, either.

"But," said Criswell, "now that we have a new administration, we don't feel we should be stuck with last year's labels. We want the opportunity to involve ourselves in the dormitories." The small number of dorm delegates at the convention made a dorm candidate on the ticket difficult, he claimed.

In closing, Criswell said, "I sincerely want the dormitories to be represented in the University Party because I don't want the UP to represent only one-sixth of the campus."

Planetarium Delays Show

Because of the UNC-Tennessee football game here Saturday, the Morehead Planetarium will delay its scheduled afternoon matinee of "Heroes of the Heavens" till 5 p.m. after the game, Director Anthony F. Jenzano announced yesterday.

The program depicting the heavens as "a source of inspiration and a challenge to men of all times" will be given three times Saturday, at 11 a.m. and at 5 and 8:30 p.m. On Sunday it will be given at 3, 4 and 8:30 p.m., and the show will end with the evening performance on Monday.

A new program titled "Meteors, Fireballs and Bolides" will open at the Planetarium on Tuesday evening, November 7, at 8:30 o'clock. It will run through November 27.

Candidates Challenged

Randuy Gilliam, independent candidate for freshman class president, yesterday challenged the candidates of both the University Party and Student Party for the same office to a debate. The topic would be "Resolved: A candidate whose interests lie in groups outside the dorm cannot devote their full energies to dorm improvement."

DR. GEORGE LANE

For Committee:

Geo. Lane Picked By Fulbright

Kenan Professor George S. Lane has been appointed to the Fulbright Committee to select American scholars to be sent abroad.

There are nine members of the committee, also called the Committee on National Exchange of Persons of the U.S. Government.

Dr. Lane, who teaches in the Department of Germanic Languages here, is one of three representatives of the American Council of Learned Societies on the Fulbright Committee.

He will take part in reviewing applications by faculty members and students of colleges and universities in the United States for temporary posts abroad in teaching, lecturing, research appointments and the like.

The committee on which Prof. Lane serves, also acts in an advisory capacity on matters of policy in connection with the Fulbright Act.

He attended a meeting of the Fulbright Committee in Washington, D. C., October 31 and November 1.

Prof. Lane is a former president of the Linguistics Society of America. He received the Ph.D. degree at the University of Chicago and has been a member of the faculty at Chapel Hill since 1938. He was the first to translate for publication an ancient Indo-European language called Tocharian.

Carolina Carries The Torch Today

The Torch Marathon supporting the State bond issue is now near Rocky Mount in the east and Kanapolis in the west. It will pass through Chapel Hill at 6:18 tomorrow morning.

The Marathon will end tomorrow at 11:58 a.m. when the eastern and western teams meet in Raleigh and march to the Capitol.

Runners started in Murphy Tuesday at 11:40 a.m. and in Wilmington yesterday at 8 a.m.

Carolina students will take over in Winston-Salem this afternoon at 4:46 and will carry the torch 90 miles. Their route goes through High Point, Greensboro, Burlington, Chapel Hill, and ends in Durham.

N. C. College students will then carry the torch on to Raleigh.

Abolish Officers?

The validity and purpose of class offices will be challenged tonight at 7 on WUNC when two opposing factions debate the issue.

Senior Newt Smith and Sophomore Jeff Bayer will face off against the candidates for junior class presidency, Joe Craver (UP) and Richard Vinroot (SP).

The debate will center on Smith's charge that there is no provision for the election of junior class officers in the election laws.

They will also meet Bayer's assertion that there is no real reason for the existence of class offices. Bayer is a candidate for the presidency of the Sophomore Class, but says he will resign if elected.

Vinroot and Craver will attempt to defend the validity of electing Junior Class officers and the value of all class offices.

Poet Makes Appearance Second Time

e. e. cummings, called by some one of the major poets of this century, will read from his works tonight at 8 in Memorial Hall.

This will be his second appearance here. His first was in 1955 when he read before a packed house.

The reading is sponsored by the English Club.

cummings launched his literary career 37 years ago with the publication of "The Enormous Room," a description of his experiences in a concentration camp in France. Considered by some one of the greatest novels to come out of World War I, his fame has grown rapidly since that time.

Famous For Lyricism

His poetry, famous for its extraordinary lyricism, playfulness, technical ingenuity, and compassion, first appeared in 1923 with the publication of "Tulips and Chimneys."

Other books of poetry include "Is 5," 1926; "Collected Poems," 1938; "50 Poems," 1940; "IXL," 1944; "Xaipe," 1950; and in 1954 his greatest collection — "Poems 1923-1954."

He has been described as "the terror of typesetters, an enigma to book reviewers and the special target of all the world's literary philistines," because of his sometimes hieroglyphic form of verse.

Difficult To Read

A UNC English professor says his poetry, which lacks punctuation and is sometimes difficult to read, is more easily understood when he reads it.

He is very strict about publicity, shunning it whenever possible. He allows no photographs to be taken if he can help it and gives no autographs.

They'll Run The Boys Out

279 Coeds To Invade Cobb

By Linda Biser

Two hundred and seventy-nine coeds will invade Cobb Dormitory next fall to displace the present male occupants.

The mass movement depends on $50,000 earmarked by the pending University bond issue for conversion of Cobb to suitable women's quarters. More space for men will be available in the new Ehringhaus and Craige dormitories.

University administrators are providing additional coed housing now in anticipation of an increasing proportion of women students. Charles Henderson, dean of student affairs, predicts growth will be primarily in the health affairs programs introducing more freshmen and sophomore women into the university.

Health affairs programs include pharmacy, medical technology, physical therapy and nursing.

Critical Shortage

Henderson noted the conversion will relieve a critical women's housing shortage. "Hundreds of qualified out-of-state women are turned down and this year about 40 late applying qualified in-state women had to be rejected because of lack of housing facilities," he said. (Undergraduate women are not permitted to live off campus at UNC).

Acting Dean of Women Mrs. Arthur DeBerry hopes to operate Cobb as two separate dorms with a housemother for each of the two wings.

A committee made preliminary observations of needed changes noting parlor renovation, installation of housemother's housing, conversion of the billiard room to a laundry room and changed bathroom plumbing. Another male escorted committee tour is planned soon.

"Country Hotel"

Cobb, operated as a "country hotel" in past summers, housing short term institute groups and conventions will be vacant this summer for renovation.

Present occupants returning next fall will fill out dorm preference cards this spring as customary. Only Cobb will be deleted from the male housing facility list.

The H-shaped dorm was built approximately a decado ago in modified colonial architectural style.

It features a large basement recreation study room and four upper floors.

Republican Congressmen

Paul Revere Panel Attacks JFK Plan

A "Paul Revere" panel of three Republican congressmen yesterday attacked the Kennedy administration for centralization of power in the executive branch, excessive spending and a weak foreign policy.

The members of the panel who spoke in the Law School court room were Representatives William C. Cramer, Fla., Samuel L. Devine, Ohio, and James E. Bromwell, Iowa. This panel is one of five sponsored by the Republican National Committee which are touring the country in preparation for the 1962 congressional campaigns.

Speaking of what he called "the greatest shift of power in the history of the United States" Bromwell charged that in the past nine months the cabinet and the National Security Council have been replaced by a group of presidential advisors.

Advisors

Bromwell, a first-termer, in the House, objected that "These advisors don't have to be confirmed as do members of the cabinet." He added that they are not subject to approval by the American public.

Devine opposed further increasing the national debt by giving foreign aid to uncommitted nations.

"They are either with us or against us. And if they are against us we ought to cut off aid," said Devine.

Cramer cited federal aid to education and teachers' salaries as two instances where he feels the federal government is taking away local initiative.

The panel adopted the name of Paul Revere "because these Republican congressmen will carry a warning to the American people that our system of government is imperiled by the present administration."

Tomorrow the group will go to West Virginia.

Law School Host To Officers

The Law School's Battle Senate of Delta Theta Phi law fraternity will be host this weekend to three of its national officers, president Paul Whitfield announced yesterday.

Past Chancellor Meredith M. Daubin, Master Scholar Alfred C. Cordon Jr. and Marshal Earl R. Stanley, all attorneys from the Washington, D. C. area, will be the guests.

Friday evening the officers will speak informally to the fraternity at a smoker to be held at the staff lounge at the Institute of Government. Saturday the attorneys will be guests of the University for the football game with Tennessee.

Formally pledged by Delta Theta Pi law fraternity last Friday were seven members of the second and third year classes from the Law School.

Those pledged were: Floyd Brock, Bunn Level; Al Cole, Clayton; Bill Rand, Wilson; Vance Derby, Chapel Hill; Charles Morris, Chapel Hill; Jim Morton, Proctorville; and Shelby Stephenson, Benson.

Morehead Earned B.S. Here In 1891

(Editor's Note: This article is the fourth in a series of background information on John Motley Morehead. UNC's second annual Morehead Day will be held next Friday.)

By Martin Kruming

Born on November 3, 1870 in Spray, Rockingham County, North Carolina, John Motley Morehead is the only son of James Turner and Mary Elizabeth Morehead. After receiving his elementary education primarily in Rockingham County, he went on to earn a Bachelor of Science degree from UNC in 1891.

Upon graduation, Morehead went to work for his father at the Wilson Aluminum Company. Since the company had to curtail its operations in 1892, "Uncle Mot" headed north and went to work for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in Pittsburgh, Pennsylavnia. In 1897 his energetic young man found a job with the American Calcium Carbide Interest as a construction engineer and it was through them that he journeyed to England, Scotland, and Germany supervising the erection of calcium carbide plants.

Light and Coke

When the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company of Chicago acquired a major interest in the Carbide business in 1902, "Uncle Mot" took on the position as Chief Chemist and Engineer of Tests for the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company and moved to Chicago.

War broke out in 1917 and Morehead offered his services to the United States Army as a Major on the General Staff. Although "Uncle Mot" was not discharged from the army, he was retired to the Officers Reserve Corps with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

In 1919 Morehead moved his residence to Rye, New York since the Carbide Corporation had set up its offices in New York City and needed him to be near their laboratories at Niagara Falls and Long Island.

Envoy, Minister

Retiring from the post of mayor of Rye in 1930, Morehead accepted an appointment as Envoy-Extraordinary and Minister-Plenipoten-tiary to Sweden from President Herbert Hoover in 1931. Upon return from Sweden in April, 1933, Morehead again resumed his position as engineer for the Union Carbide Corporation. Incidentally, "Uncle Mot" is the only foreigner to receive the gold medal Kungl from Sweden.

Morehead's first marriage to Genevieve M. Birkhoof in 1915 terminated with her death on April 16, 1945. On May 11, 1948 he married Mrs. Leila Duckworth Houghton and many expressed sorrow when she passed away on October 21, 1961.

Honorary Degrees

In recognition of "Uncle Mot's" numerous achievements he has received honorary degrees from UNC in 1926, from Upsala University in New Jersey in 1944, and from Wake Forest College in 1944. Morehead is a member of the Republican Party, the American Legion, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity, and the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Along the literary lines Morehead has also gained eminence from his books, "The Morehead Family of North Carolina and Virginia," published in 1924, and "The Analysis of Industrial Gases," published in 1900 and still used as an authoritative reference text.

HALF OF BLIND YOUNGSTERS NOT RECEIVING SERVICES

The American Foundation for the Blind reveals that about 16,000 blind children are enrolled in education programs, where they receive the special services set up bly state and federal governments, but adds the number of blind youth not receiving these services may equal the number who do.

TALKING BOOKS UP 25%

The American Foundation for the Blind recorded for the Library of Congress 195 Talking Books last year, an increase of nearly 25% over the year before, according to the NEW OUTLOOK FOR THE BLIND which contains the Foundation's Annual Report.

Censorship

A recent letter to the editor lodged a complaint against what it called "dictatorial censorship" on the editorial page.

We would like to make clear, if possible, what measures of "censorship" are brought to bear on letters.

The DTH attempts to print every letter received for publication.

We will print any letter that is signed, regardless of viewpoint, if it is libel-free and in good taste. We do ask that letters be as brief as their subject will permit. To put this in concrete terms, we will print any letter under 400 words. If a writer desires to have a longer letter printed, we will be glad to do so if the writer will call us beforehand and explain why he needs extra space.

We do ask that writers exercise a fair degree of reason in realizing that there is a limit to available space. If we receive more letters than can appear on a single newspaper page, then some letters must be held until a later date.

If, for some reason, a letter does not appear within a reasonable time, then the writer has only to call the DTH office to discover the reason —in every case, there is a reason— either the letter was unsigned, a personal attack unreasonably long, etc. If the DTH is in error in not printing a letter, then we will quickly remedy this if the writer will contact us.

To our knowledge, the DTH has this year refused to print only four letters which were signed. Three of these were vicious attacks on various persons and had no place in print. The fourth was blatantly profane and obscene.

We impose only a few restrictions, and these are imposed only for the sake of space and compliance with libel laws and good taste.

As anyone who has read the editorial page regularly can testify, even these restrictions are only loosely adhered to.

If this constitutes dictatorial censorship, then we stand guilty as charged.

State Affairs

Seldom does a committee at Carolina do a job so well that it causes a stir throughout the state. Seldom, also, do individuals devote themselves night and day to doing a job well.

When both of these rare occurrences turn up in reference to the same committee, it is cause for comment.

Tom White and Larry McDevitt have done, and are doing, an excellent job in promoting the bond issue through the State Affairs Committee. Both have expended a staggering amount of time and energy in organizing and carrying through the projects of the committee.

The Torch for Education Marathon run across the state, which is going on now, is receiving a warm reception in every town through which the runners pass.

Both McDevitt and White deserve commendation for their work.

This project and the others carried on by the committee are certain to have a great effect on putting over the bond issue.

GOP In South

The Republicans are playing both ends against the middle in their efforts to establish the GOP in the South.

This campaign, which came to Chapel Hill yesterday with the "Paul Revere" panel of Republican congressmen, is going especially strong in Texas. Last year, John Tower became the first Republican U. S. Senator from Texas in many decades. Tuesday, former President Eisenhower stumped Texas for John Goode, Jr. — Republican candidate for the House of Representatives.

General Eisenhower, the "Paul Revere" boys, and most of the other Republicans working on the South play with the conservative Southern position as skillfully as if they had been taking lessons from "Tricky Dick" Nixon.

Look, for instance, at the Reveremen:

On the one hand, they attack the Kennedy administration as having "reneged" on its civil rights campaign platform. They also claim that Republicans stand for "State's Rights" (local synonym for "Segregated Schools.")

But on the other hand, the GOP 'Saviors' refused (in Asheville) to say whether a Republican congress would take a strong stand on civil rights and shied away from clarifying what they meant by "States Rights" in relation to segregation.

In short, Republicans are attempting to gain strength in the South by posing as the Segregationist Friend and Home Companion. But they're not so friendly when one tries to pin them down to specifics —probably because of the growing influence of the Negro vote both here and in the North.

They're burning the candle at both ends, playing both ends against the middle—it's the same old saw.

We hope they are counting their chickens before they have hatched. Remember what happened to Richard Nixon?

Quality Or Quantity Education For UNC?

Educational Program Gets Back-Handed Compliment

A Raleigh pastor has paid North Carolina's quality education program what seems from here to be an unqualified, back-handed compliment.

Dr. Albert G. Edwards, pastor of Raleigh's First Presbyterian Church, says the program is geared to "the better-than-average student without regard to others. Under-average children are being ignored and forgotten in a system adaptable to only a few."

What he seems to mean by this is that North Carolina schools have, or are, turning their backs on all but students who are geniuses. If this is true, then he is most correct — and we join with him — in pressing for a re-evaluation of the program.

But is it true? Or has Dr. Edwards lent his office and high personal reputation to an opinion without being able to rationally substantiate that opinion?

His statement, quoted above, is one of airy generalities. Further, the statement has not been accompanied by validating information in any of the several dispatches and editorials we have read concerning it.

Yet the charge undoubtedly has, and will, influence the quality education sentiments of many North Carolina voters, who know only that a respected Man of God has criticized the program, so the program must be bad.

Yes, everyone is entitled to his opinion, including Dr. Edwards.

That is not the point.

The point is responsibility.

Does Dr. Edwards' charge result from a close and careful scrutiny and appraisal of the program? If it does, where are his findings?

Or is the charge frivolous, representative of but a slight and fleeting examination of the program?

From here, Dr. Edwards seems to be an unqualified critic who has paid North Carolina educators and sponsoring politicians a very high, if back-handed, compliment. For he implies that they are aware of the value of high goals in education as elsewhere, aware that people are not easily or accurately categorized blanketly as clods or geniuses, and aware that individuals—young or old —usually respond to higher goals with better performance.

Frat Man Answers Charges

In the Friday, October 27, 1961 issue of the Daily Tar Heel there appeared an article written by a Miss Nancy McFadden. The following is my answer to the grosser fallacies and the absurdities of her left-field reasoning.

To quote Miss McFadden: "There is no harder rejection to take than the Fraternity rejection."

This may well be true to some degree in a significant number of cases of fraternity non-acceptance. However, this is not to speculate on the degree of depression, if any, incurred by the institution of the blackball.

Nevertheless, I must reject the tormented 10-year-old reasoning presented by Miss McFadden (holder of two Master's degrees (sic)) to substantiate this age-old argument.

To the dusty archives of the history of this disputed friction point, Miss McFadden had seen fit to add her own fuzzy reasoning, a bit of religious mysticism, and an argument for alleged moral decline of such people under the "duress" of non-acceptance.

To quote Miss McFadden:

"Just as a hypothetical question, would Jesus have gotten a bid?"

"Some people slowly begin to drink more and more so they won't have to face what it means not to have a bid."

"Others lose interest in studying, flunk out of school, and go somewhere else."

THE REASONING of these arguments hardly deserves rebuttal. Her argument is based on points that are shaky, ill-founded and illusionary. Perhaps Miss McFadden may have known a someone who reacted to the situation in this manner — children often make it to college somehow. However, all of this being equal (and excusing the fact that a woman is writing about fraternities) it is hard to believe that the article was indeed written by a supposedly highly educated individual holding no less than two Master's degrees from two high ranking institutions.

To reiterate, Miss McFadden does have a point—the problem of post non-acceptance depression does exist though fraternities do try to moderate it. But, at least in my experience, the problem is by no means as extreme as she would lead us to believe. There are exceptions, but they are rare indeed from what I have seen. I have at least enough confidence in the majority of college freshmen not to expect this sort of childish behavior.

To begin with, fraternities have that right that is implicit to any group or individual — the simple right of choice of company. Fraternities want men of some level of maturity. Here Miss McFadden gives a reasonably valid outline of this maturity in the last paragraph of her article:

"They learn to know themselves, and how they appear to others; they learn to accept themselves, and how they appear to others; but above all, they learn to like themselves." To this I would add "like themselves" . . . as they are. Here is a bit of the essence of maturity—a bit of what makes a fraternity man or any man.

The sort of people Miss McFadden seems to argue for could be little more than lost boys in college whose alleged recourse to drink, loss of academic drive and other symptoms of sheer escapism could be safely labeled as indicative of a childish mentality.

In short, Miss McFadden, you well know that haste makes waste and perhaps your article was written in some sort of emotional haste; but in any event your article is waste, expressly for panty-wastes.

Moving Into 'New World'?

I am an American citizen.

I am against a competitive base for our society.

I do not think nations should compete with one another. Every nation making policy considers only what is in the interest of a Universal Brotherhood of Man before considering its own interests and needs.

One of the major premises of International Politics is that each nation regardless of its power is equal. Sierra Leone is entitled to as much weight in the making of international decisions as the Soviet Union.

The foundation for world government is the United Nations General Assembly where nations of the world are represented equally and are responsible to world moral public opinion. Thus the world's course under majority rule would conceivablly be decided by the naked, the illiterate, the uneducated, and the starved. We hope one day to equate their status with ours.

We must not reward individual initiative. We train exceptional people with a mediocre education, conform them to mediocre standards, levelling them to a mediocre, homogenous mass. We always point out to them that mediocre people made this country great.

We ask of them in class to listen to lectures and repeat the lectures in quiz books. Any creative or spontaneous contribution is discouraged because the world needs cold hard, impartial bureaucrats with no faith, no convicitions, and no ambitions.

And thus we move into The Brave New World—the "last best hope" of man.

University Student Says She'll Vote 'No' Nov. 7

(From the Charlotte Observer "Letters" column):

Since I became eligible to vote, just three weeks ago, my interest in our government and its spending programs has taken on a new view —that of a person with the right to officially approve or reject the measures put before the American public.

As a student at the University of North Carolina, a state tax-supported institution, I have observed during the past year that a great deal of money is put into the construction of new buildings.

On Nov. 7 we, the voters of North Carolina, must decide if the need for more such spending is worth a bond issue of $61.5 million. Here at the University, a good portion of our $13.2 million will go for additional dormitory construction to house the rising enrollment.

While it is supposedly a good indication that more and more young people are seeking a colleg education, I think that this emphasis on the numbers of students and not necessarily on their ability to profit from such guidance is a mistake which is keeping the academic standards much too low.

Even a public institution such as the University must draw a line somewhere. So rather than drop the line lower and add more to the numbers, we would do well to find out just how many of the students presently enrolled here are actually worth the space they are occupying.

I shall exercise my newly-gained privilege on Nov. 7 by voting against the $13.2 million section for the University of North Carolina.

The present housing situation is critical indeed, and its improvement would be worthy of the appropriation. But this excellent place of learning does not need more dormitory space just to increase the numbers of uninterested, unthinking school children who can afford to flock here for a few years of fun.

Balcony Building Suggested

To the Editor,

The headline in this morning's Daily Tar Heel (October 26th) that theater picketing was scheduled to resume on January 3rd unless full integration is achieved brought the undersigned readers to a careful consideration of our situation. Because highly conflicting opinions exist concerning the question of theater integration, it is not likely that a resolution may be reached which would be fully agreeable to everyone involved. Such a solution, however, indeed exists.

This solution involves the construction (from funds half supplied by the theater owners and half by a fund-raising campaign on the part of others involved) of balconies in the two existing Chapel Hill Theaters. The merits of such action are immediately evident. The bottom floor of the theaters would be maintained on a segregated basis. This would satisfy those who do not favor integrated theaters. The balcony would be opened on a fully integrated basis. This would satisfy the Negroes in that they would be admitted to the theaters. It would also be pleasing to the liberal and Christian or liberal-Christian elements who would be able to attend motion pictures in a fully-integrated balcony. The theatre owners themselves would benefit from the increased number of admissions which would in time cancel the debt imposed by one half of the cost of contsruction.

It is hoped that the above suggestion will receive the serious attention of the diverse elements mentioned. It seems an answer acceptable to all.

"Well, Here Today, Gone Tomorrow"

No Planning

Former President Eisenhower, whose administration spent millions training and equipping Cuban refugee troops for something, says "There was absolutely no planning for any invasion in my administration."

White House sources say, "The general is in error."

We submit that the outcome of the invasion clearly bears out the contention that there was absolutely no planning.

Ideologies Endangering Man's Existence

The October 25, 1961 edition of the Daily Tar Heel contained a criticism on my article which appeared on October 17. As the criticism missed my point, I shall re-state my first intention as plainly as possible.

The criticism was based on an assumption that my article was maintaining that America should relinquish her freedom and subjugate herself to communism in order to avoid world annihilation. This, however, was not my whole point. If I were in Soviet Russia and if they were to allow me to speak, I would say that they also should give up trying to extend their doctrine so as to save the world from annihilation. I did not intend to confine my discussion to either side. My discussion was on the human folly which is endangering the existence of their own beings.

WHAT I WANTED to say was that human beings as a whole, without distinction as to their ideologies, should become wise enough to realize that their firmly held convictions to their ideologies are endangering their own existence. The communists can identify their ideology with the basic elements of human civilization just as well as one can do freedom with the civilization. When our forerunners struggled for the realization of their ideologies, there was not the possibility of a holocaust of the entire world. They were allowed to behave so because they had less knowledge of science. The modern world, however, has to be more cautious before proceeding in such a manner, since the potential dangers are so infinitely greater. It is in this sense that we have to modify our traditional ideologies.

We must realize that the period which demands heroic deeds for one's ideology is passing. If this period is not passing, we have to endeavor to urge the transition as soon as possible. As the field of science went into the New Era and changed its older ways, one should not seek on the glory of the old era in the phase of ideologies. We have to realize that as long as we maintain (By "we," I mean human beings as a whole) our own convictions blindly, the ultimate result will be certain destruction of the whole world.

If any ideology is aiming at the betterment of human life, it has to secure the existence of human life first before people start to expound their ideologies. What is the use of freedom or communism if we destroy the whole world? In case a nation confronts a necessary choice between either subjugation or annihilation of the world I strongly hope the nation has the courage and the wisdom to choose subjugation to save the possibilities of a betterment of the world in the future.

Joyner Whips Town Touts In Tag League Semifinals

Trailing 6-0 at the half, the Joyner Jocks battled back to whip the favored Town Touts, 13-6, on Tuesday afternoon and thus advance themselves to the finals of the dormitory playoffs.

Capitalizing on breaks, Jim Magner and Rudy Mintz scored the TD's which more than offset Bob Felton's touchdown for the Touts in the first half.

Early in the second half, a bad snap from the Touts' center on sixth down put the ball on the Touts' five-yard line. Magner went over from here and Jack Brothers made the PAT which put Joyner on top at 7-6.

Later in the half, Mintz gave the Jocks an insurance TD when he intercepted a pass and went all the way for the score. Late in the game the Touts threatened, but Joyner picked off a pass on the Joyner five to halt the drive.

The Jocks will meet the Alexander Playboys for the dormitory championship on Wednesday, November 8.

In the first round of the fraternity playoffs on Monday, Dave Fletcher scored three TD's to pace Kap Sig to a 39-7 triumph over Phi Kappa Sig. Delta Sig pounded ATO to the tune of 28-6, and SAE trounced ZBT, 31-6.

GAME TODAY

The Peacocks will meet the Med School in the tag football championship of the Grad Division this afternoon at 4:30. The game will be played on Navy Field No. 3, as the Peacocks, 1960 champs, defend their title against the underdog Med School.

Wolverines Will Take Duke

Who are the biggest surprisers in college football this year? Could that team be South Carolina, who is shut out twice in a row and then beats Maryland 20-10? Or Miami, who loses when its supposed to win, and vice-versa? From our point of view, it's West Virginia, who has loused up our predictions every week—by winning. The Mountaineers upset VPI, Pittsburgh, and Army within a month, and you guessed it, we picked them to lose every time. This week, the the Mounties play at George Washington, and we're going to pick them over the Colonials by 28-7. But watch out. With our luck and unpredictable West Virginia, it'll probably be the greatest day at GW in years.

Last week we guessed correctly on only 15 of 24 games. This week, we'll try to do better. Starting off with the ACC games, it will be—

MICHIGAN 28, DUKE 13. The strong Blue Devils are stepping out of their class when they go against this strong Big Ten team—just as UNC will be doing twice next year. The gigantic line for the Wolverines will leave the little Dukes gasping.

AUBURN 33, WAKE FOREST 10. The Deacons, too, are moving into fast company with this contest. However, both teams did well against a like opponent, Clemson, and this game could be closer than we predict. The Plainsmen appear strong enough.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE 20, MISSISSIPPI SOUTHERN 13. The Wolfpack has had some tough games against the Southerners in their recent games with this "small college" team. But we think they'll spring back in this one.

SOUTH CAROLINA 24, VIRGINIA 12. The Gamecocks are due for a letdown after their big win last week, and the Cavaliers should be up after losing to Wake. Give it to the Birds on speed.

CLEMSON 21, TULANE 0. The Tigers are becoming the real up-and-down team of the league, just as unpredictable as anybody else. But up or down, they should have too much power and depth for the Green Wave.

MARYLAND 15, PENN STATE 14. The Terps should be ready to play ball again after a miserable game last week. The Nittany Lions, fresh from their California journey, could still make it exciting.

Elsewhere in the nation's top games . . .

ALABAMA 35, MISSISSIPPI STATE 13. The Crimson Tide isn't satisfied with a measley fourth place spot.

Ole Miss To Trip Bengals

MISSISSIPPI 21, LSU 8. This one (at night) is Saturday's biggest battle, as it has been for several years. We think it's about time for Ole Miss to round up all the Chinese Bandits.

MICHIGAN STATE 24, Minnesota 14. If the Spartans aren't careful, they could lose their top ranking in a hurry. They should hold on.

TEAXS 38, SOUTHERN METHODIST 7. The Longhorns don't mind running up the score, and so far, nobody has been able to stop them.

UCLA 20, CALIFORNIA 7. A Bear-fisted brawl all the way.

MISSOURI 20, COLORADO 15. Near-extinction for the Buffaloes.

OHIO STATE 27, Iowa 21. This one is an eye catcher.

NORTHWESTERN 20, INDIANA 14. A big win over Notre Dame showed that Northwestern has what it takes.

OKLAHOMA 14, KANSAS STATE 7. Relief comes for the Sooners.

KENTUCKY 26, FLORIDA STATE 13. The Wildcats by two claws.

Tar Heels End ACC Year Tied For First Spot

Duke's Jerry Nourse set a new course record yesterday but UNC's cross-country team defeated the previously unbeaten Blue Devils 27-29 on the Carolina course.

Nourse's time of 20:25 on the 4.1 mile course bettered Carolina's Rett Everett's old record by 21 seconds. The Duke ace has not been beaten this year.

Carolina's runners Everett, Gerry Stuver, and Carmine Lunetta finished 2-3-4 to help the Tar Heel runners to win on points. Everett's time was 20:50. It was his first defeat of the season.

Stuver finished in 21:08, and Lunetta had a time of 21:26.

Dave Blumfeldt came in fifth in 21:45, and Blue Devil captain Louis Van Dyck was sixth. Carolina's Charlie Little was seventh, followed by Frank Campbell, Lloyd Brinson, and Staley Gentry all of Duke. Dave Brunson 11th, rounded out the Carolina scorers.

South Carolina entered several runners in the meet, but did not have enough to constitute an official entry, and their scores were not counted.

The freshman teams of UNC and Duke finished in a 37-all tie. South Carolina's frosh scored 61 for third place.

Ken Smith of USC was the winner of the race, with a time of 12:37. Dave Radford of the Tar Babies was third in the event.

The varsity win for Carolina enabled them to finish the ACC season in a first place tie with both Duke and Maryland. The Blue Devils beat Maryland, who in turn had beaten UNC.

Vol Coaches Respect Carolina's Offense

Always-tough Tennessee comes to Chapel Hill Saturday in quest of its fourth win of the year. The Volunteers ran their record to 3-2 last week with a 20-7 victory over Chattanooga.

Carolina, who is also 3-2 for the season, has been on the Tennessee schedule longer than any team outside the Southeastern Conference. The teams first met in 1893, when the Tar Heels won by a walloping 60-0 score. In the 30 games played since that time, Tennessee holds a 20-9-1 record. Carolina has won only once in the last dozen games.

Tennessee head coach Bowden Wyatt and his staff have a high regard for this year's Carolina club.

"They've still got a solid ground attack," said George Cafego, Vol assistant coach who has scouted the Tar Heels. "But I've seen them throw and throw well. Ray Farris is an all-around quarterback and he can hurt you with the pass.

"I'd say Farris is one of the better quarterbacks we will face this season. He likes to tuck the ball in and run, and he's mighty smart with his play-calling. But the thing Farris does best is kick. His average is close to 40 yards. In the mud against Miami last Friday (when NC dropped a 10-0 decision) he really boomed the ball."

Cafego, recalling the punch Carolina displayed in its 14-8 upset win over Maryland, also cited Gib Carson, Bob Elliott and Jim Addison as "ball carriers who can put pressure on any defense."

"On offense," he continued, "North Carolina uses a flanking back or slot man on every play. The right half, Ward Marslender or Roger Smith, does this job and blocks or catches a pass or takes a pitchout. They really believe in mixing up the plays.

"The most aggressive lineman is Joe Craver, a center. That big tackle, Tony Hennessey (225), is something special, too. He moves exceptionally well for a man of his size."

Mallon Faircloth, the dashing young sophomore who has risen through the ranks to become U-T's No. 1 tailback, secured his first-team status with a standout performance against the Moccasins from Chattanooga. Faircloth picked up 108 yards rushing and completed 3 of 3 passes for 36 yards.

The only Vol casualty in Saturday's game was end Ken Breeding who suffered a hip bruise.

Tennessee is expected to open against North Carolina with the same unit that started the Chattanooga game: Faircloth, tailback; Wayne Coleman, blocking back; Charles Wyrick, wingback; Bunny Orr, fullback; Mike Stratton and Buddy Fisher, ends; Ken Brown and Paul Tilson, tackles; Joe Foxall and Larry Richards, guards, and Mike Lucci, center.

Professor Studies Race For Alabama

By David Witherspoon

Dr. W. C. George of the UNC School of Medicine was retained this summer by a "group in Alabama" to write a study of biological differences between races, he said yesterday.

A $3000 check from the governor's emergeny fund to George led to an announcement by Alabama Gov. John Patterson's attorney, Ralph Smith of Montgomery, that the study had been undertaken.

George, professor emeritus of histrology and embryology, said that the purpose of the study was "to discover and report the scientific evidence in regards to the racial problem."

He said, "The most dogmatic answers are given by the people who know least about the issue. Nobody has a right to give an answer without a vast amount of information."

Effort to Explore

Smith, who is retained by the Alabama governor to represent him in racial litigation, said that the study was part of an effort to "explore every avenue in efforts to preserve racial segregation."

"Actually, scientific data supports the contention that the white race, intellectually, is superior to the Negro, and that is the point we seek to make with this study," he said.

Smith said that it was their hope in making the study to cause the courts to take a new look at the situation.

George was unable to announce the publication date of the study, to be entitled "The Biology of the Race Problem." "That's up to the people in Alabama," he said.

Other Work

The UNC professor has done other work on the race question. A pamphlet published in England, entitled "Race, Heredity, and Civilization" includes these statements:

"The Caucasion race, in spite of all its frailties, stupidities and evil ways, has demonstrated a capacity for creative greatness that has produced most of the civilizations of history.

"On the other hand, whatever its other virtues may be, the Negro race has never produced any civilization any where at any time."

"We are told that there is no fundamental difference between men. How often have you heard 'All men are created equal,' quoted with the implication that it applies to men's abilities? Most of us will admit that all men should be equal in their right to justice and fair play; but in the biological sense there is no truth in the quotation and it has no valid force or use in solving the race problem."

Morehead Day Program Held In Swain Hall

(This is the fifth and last in a series about John Motley Morehead Day, which is today.)

BY MARTIN KRUMMING

Today the University honors UNC's biggest benefactor on the second John Motley Morehead Day.

Under the direction of chairman Robin Britt, the John Motley Morehead Day committee has planned a special program beginning at 4:30 in Swain Hall. The program will be covered by WUNC television.

Student Body President Bill Harriss, serving as master of ceremonies, will be joined on the speaker's platform by Chancellor Aycock. Morehead scholar Scott Somers will elaborate on the Morehead Scholarship program and Morehead's three donations to the campus.

Dennis Rash, also a Morehead Scholar, will speak about the extracurricular activities which Moreheads are involved in at Carolina. In addition to being program MC, Harriss will give an account of Morehead's life and his achievements.

Included in this commemoration to Morehead will be the entertainment of the Men's Glee Club as well as a taped message from Governor Sanford honoring Morehead.

'Harvey' Film, 'Suite' Are Free Flicks

A light comedy and a heavy drama are this week's free flicks, to be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in Carroll Hall.

On tap for Friday night is "Harvey," the Pulitzer Prize-winning play about a lonely middle-aged bachelor and his invisible 6-foot rabbit friend. James Stewart and Peggy Dow star.

Saturday's film, "Executive Suite," stars William Holden, June Allyson, Barbara Stanwyck and Fredric March ,and is a study of the struggle for power and control that goes on within a business dynasty after the head of the corporation dies.

UNC Delegates To Attend Africa Talk

A seminar on "Understanding African Values" will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday under the sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee near Rocky Mount, N. C.

The purpose of the seminar will be to give students an insight behind the factual information about Africa. It is open to students in the Durham-Chapel Hill-Greensboro are who have received a recommendation from some campus organization.

Delegates from UNC include Wayne King and Jim Clotfelter.

Two Professors

Two UNC professors will be associated with the seminar, Dr. Herbert Bodman, of the history department, who will be the dean of the seminar and Mr. Guy Johnson of the Anthropology department. Several UNC students will attend.

Six countries besides the U. S. will be represented at the seminar, Tanganyika, Union of South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Nigeria, and Liberia.

Students are expected from Duke, North Carolina, State, A&T, East Carolina College, Wake Forest, College, Livingstone, Wake Forest, Woman's College, Guilford, and Shaw University.

Two of the speakers at the seminar will be Betty Challem and Judith Fisher, of the "Crossroads Africa" program, and Jim McCorkle who has studied in Ghana.

U.S. Humorist James Thurber Dies In N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — James Thurber, the boy from Columbus, Ohio, who joined the New Yorker magazine and became one of the towering figures in American humor through the written word, the graphic arts, and the stage, died Thursday at 66.

The humorist and playwright—whose talents continued to pour forth stories, cartoons, and New Yorker "casuals" for years after his eyesight had dimmed and finally failed entirely—died in Doctor's Hospital at 4:15 p.m. EST.

He had suffered a stroke on Oct. 4 and had undergone surgery to relieve a massive blood clot on the brain that same day.

Beanbirds Tap 19 Members In Early Morning 'Chirping'

Fledgling Abilities Noted In Selection

By WALTER DELLINGER

Swooping down upon the campus during today's pre-dawn hours, members of the Noble Order or Old Beanbirds pecked a nest full of new fledglings.

Fledglings accepted into the Order during this morning's chirping included: Sisty "Yellow-bellied" Boatwright, Steve "Goose" Byrum, George "Creeper" Cambell, Watts "Whooping Crane" Carr, Frank "Flycatcher" Cella, Jane "Finch" Forsythe, Wayne "White-rumped" Foushee, Paul "Palm Warbler" Jollis;

Bob "Broad-breasted" McCormick, Jane "Magpie" Merrit, Charlotte "Mewgull" Mooney, Martha "Prothonotaty" Parham, Judy "Rooster" Ray, Bob "Rough-legged" Reardon, Surry "Red-eyed" Roberts, Dottie "Dipper" Shugart, Ginny "scissor-tailed" Temple, Joe "Hellbender" Webb, and Nancy "Nuthatch" Wilson.

The 19 birdlets initiated this morning were chosen for this honorary after "soul-searching" deliberation by members of the order. Membership in the order is based on certain intrinsic qualities. These include the abilities to:

1) Go out on a limb without falling off, even when pushed; 2) perch; 3) give a worthy demonstration of the Beanbird shuffel; 4) twitter-tweet; 5) control their squawks in the air and on the ground; 6) fly alone, even with a broken wing; 7) use their claws to cling to the "strong and sturdy" limbs of wisdom, service, democracy, loyalty, humor, beauty, friendship and humility.

What SP They're UP Saying

University Party Chairman Bill Criswell said yesterday that the UP had been "very active" in attempting to accomplish the various planks of its fall platform adopted at its convention.

Following is the text of Criswell's statement:

"As was stated in a Daily Tar Heel article last Friday, the UP has proposed a realistic platform. To prove the platform is a realistic one, UP class officer candidates have accomplished the following parts of the platform:

"First, two UP candidates went before the Women's Residence Council, proposed an action, and succeeded in getting the coed closing hours extended from 1 until 2 a.m. on both Friday and Saturday nights of the Germans weekend; second, there is a UP candidate on the board set up by the Party to review the Campus Entertainment Committee. Furthermore, the Campus Entertainment Committee has agreed to cooperate fully with this board headed by Whitney Durand. Third, University Party Candidates and Party officials have run in the Torch for Education marathon as a further example of the U.P.'s support of the Bond Issue.

"And finally confetti has been procured to be given out to the cheering section at the homecoming game against L.S.U. This is in accordance with the Party's desire to increase school spirit. It should be evident that the University Party is carrying out its platform with action, and that it is being accomplished by the candidates for class offices."

George Rosental and Peter Harkness, Student Party presidential candidates for Sophomore and Freshman classes respectively, issued a statement yesterday concerning the abolishment of class officers.

The statement, in part, said, "Any large body of people needs leadership and each class at Carolina is no exception .. . The Student Party has a platform this year which advocates more power for class officers . . . The platforms are both well-balanced and flexible, including every phase of Carolina life . . . There has been more interest in Student Government than ever before. Abolishment of class officers is not the way to improve. Instead, we must take the initiative to solve our own problems and try not to dodge our responsibilities."

Both freshman and sophomore platforms include regular communication between the class and the officers. Harkness also advocates additional study space in every dorm and full support from class officers for the Academic Affairs Committee as it investigates possible improvements in freshman courses.

Rosental, the sophomore candidate for president, would attempt to set up a Sophomore Day along the line of Senior Day to celebrate the sophomores leaving General College.

Both the presidential candidates have pledged themselves to work harder to overcome the figurehead conception of class officers.

Dean Approves Coed Late Hour Next Germans

Acting Dean of Women Mrs. Martha DeBerry Tuesday announced the approval of a request asking for the extension of late permission from 1 to 2 a.m. Friday, Nov. 10 and Saturday, Nov. 11 for Homecoming and Fall Germans.

The request was iniated by Beta joint statement by the Dean's office and the Women's Residence Council.

The request was iniated by Betty McDonald and Fuller Honeycutt, University Party candidates for Junior Class Secretary and Sophomore Class Vice-President, respectively.

Pam Parker, chairman of the WRC, said that late permission is not granted without a request, which must be made at least three days before the event is scheduled to take place. All requests are granted serious consideration, she added.

Requests must be made for each individual weekend, according to Mrs. DeBerry. She went on to say that the decision is made by the WRC with the approval of the Dean's office.

CORRECTION

Acting Dean of Women Mrs. Martha DeBerry has informed the DTH that the number of women to be moved into Cobb Dorm next fall is 379 rather than the 279 reported yesterday.

Dean Long Praises IDC 'Improvement'

"This year's Men's Interdormitory Council bears no resemblance to any in the past," said Dean William Long, assistant dean of Student Affairs. "It has improved each year, but this year there has been a particularly noticeable improvement in its effectiveness."

Headed by IDC President Jim Gaulden, the Council has enacted many innovations. Specifically, the monitoring system has been changed so that it is now run on a "Warning Card" basis. When someone in the dormitory violates a dorm rule, he is reported to the IDC representative who sends a note to Gaulden. Gaulden then sends the offender a warning card informing him of his violation and warning him of the consequences of any repeated violations.

Quiet Signs

Quiet hour signs which are bright red on white are posted throughout the dormitories to remind students of the exact hours they are in effect and of the penalty which is carried with violation of them.

To further explain the programs and functions of the IDC, the Executive Council of the IDC is in the process of visiting the dormitory meetings of all the men's dormitories on campus where they give talks and answer questions.

"The boys in the dorms are cooperating very well so far. We hope that they will continue to do so," said Gaulden, who added, "The main thing we're trying to do is to make IDC work the way it ought to work, and to prove that students in dormitories can govern themselves."

Long Commends

Dean Long commented: "I want to commend Jim Gaulden for the exceptionally good job he is doing. He and his organization have helped to remind students of their individual responsibility to discipline themselves."

The activities of the IDC are not confined to law enforcing, but have extended into every realm of dormitory life. This includes the promoting of social activities.

This semester, the IDC has sponsored combo dances at every home football game and will continue to do so. It has held receptions, sponsored freshman trips to girls' schools and supported a better intramural program. This year it is paying several intramural managers to find out whether this would be a more effective means of getting stronger sports participation.

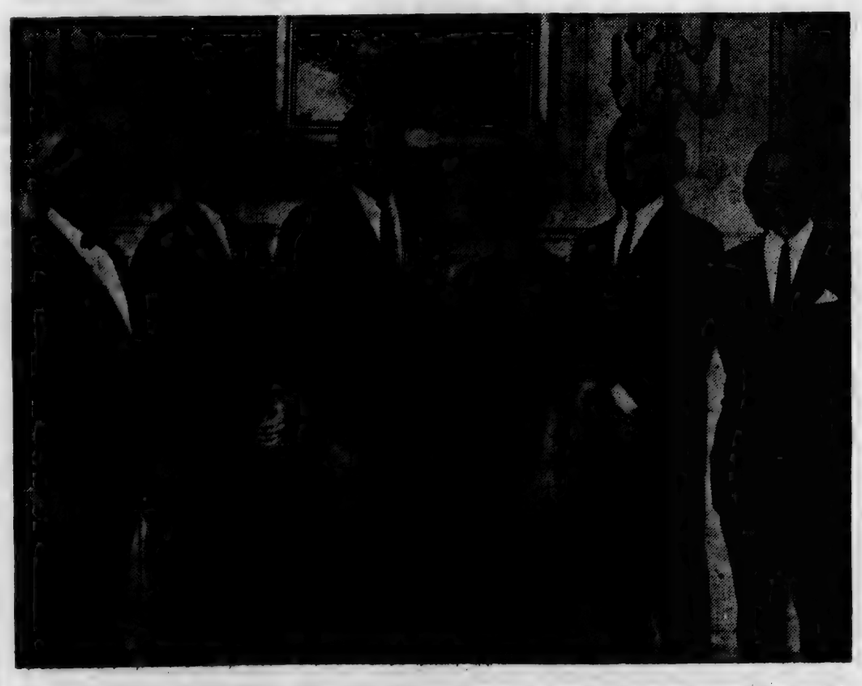
Distributes Questions

Recently the IDC distributed a questionaire to determine how effectively its machinery is working. These questionaires, which have been handed out at dormitory meetings, include the questions about the strength and weaknesses of the organization and also include space for suggestions.

At the moment the IDC is in the process of revising its by-laws. There are several sections in them which need to be brought up to date, according to Gaulden.

"One of our major objectives," stated Gaulden," is to encourage more participation in dormitory activities so that a close relationship between dorm men may be established."

Symposium History Includes Speeches From Nobel Prize Winners, Senators And Diplomats



SYMPOSIUM PLANNERS. The Executive Committee for the Carolina Symposium this year includes (left to right) Chancellor W. B. Aycock, honorary chairman; Bob Sevier, executive secretary; Joe Oppenheimer, chairman; Jan McColskey, secretary; Bill Bevis, vice chairman; and Walter Spearman, faculty adviser.

By CHUCK MOONEY

The Carolina Symposium, started in 1926 as the Institute of Human Relations, has featured Senators, editors, professors, preachers, Nobel Prize winners, foreign diplomats, industrialists and labor leaders discussing everything from foreign policy and missles to integrating and unionizing the South.

The YMCA cabinet created the Institute to stimulate campus interest in national and world problems with a week-long program of speakers discussing various aspects of a central theme.

These programs were to be held once every four years so that a student would have access to one during his college career. The Institute was so successful that its programs were soon moved to one every two years.

Until 1939 the topics discussed had been local or regional. With the advent of WW II, the topics soon became world-wide—"The U. S. in the World Crisis" in 1941, "Total Victory and Global Peace" in 1943 and "The Prices of Peace" in 1945.

The Institute lapsed after 1945 and wasn't revived until 1956, then renamed the Carolina Symposium.

The Symposium has attracted many eminent speakers in recent years including Ralph Bunche, member of the UN Secretariat (who narrowly averted a massacre in the Congo in 1960), who predicted to the 1956 Symposium that Africa would be a key area of revolt against colonialism.

Sergei R. Striganov, Russian charge d'affaire, in 1958 defended the Russian suppression of Hungary and denied that German scientists had played a major role in Soviet rocket development. UNC students needled Striganov incessantly and tartly about Russia's foreign policy. He left UNC saying that he would tell the Russian people about a nation of "automobiles, advanced industry, and agriculture, and Little Rock, Ark."

Victor Reuther, brother of Labor Leader Walter Reuther, told the Symposium of 1958 that "the South will be unionized in the near future."

In that same Symposium, Harry Golden said that the "biggest problems" for the southern Negro would be after he "achieves first class citizenship, politically and economically."

"The South's Mr. Courage," Harry Ashmore (editor of the Little Rock "Arkansas Gazette") answered Golden's speech with a defense of Little Rock's schools and segregation in general.

This year the Carolina Symposium will feature a Senator, a Harvard professor and other outstanding speakers, discussing "Today's Revolutions."

We Won't Miss An Anonymous Caller

A few nights ago, one of Chapel Hill's ex-Yankee citizens received a phone call asking her to "take her stupid ideas and go back North with them." Besides the fact that geography has no bearing on the validity of ideas, the caller neglected to give his name before underlining his convictions with an epithet and hanging up.

Anonymous phone calls are certainly nothing new in Chapel Hill; one more is hardly cause for editorial comment. Nor is the call a particularly earth-shaking event in the life of its recipient, Miss Mary Gilson. Miss Gilson has received more than one such call, not only in Chapel Hill, but in Chicago, New York, and in other cities where her views have been opposed.

That Mary Gilson is no longer a young woman also has but tiny significance.

What is important is that Mary Gilson is perfectly willing to say what she feels publicly, never attempting to hide behind a telephone receiver, never asking that her name be "withheld," or never using any of the other devices that have been used by her attackers.

The difference between Mary Gilson and her anonymous caller this week is that she has courage and her caller does not. She is a complete person. He is nothing more than a voice on the telephone, an unsigned letter, a rumor and a whisper.

We are convinced that Miss Gilson has no intention of going "back to the North" and that no anonymous caller will budge her one inch. The plain fact is that she loves the South and Chapel Hill. But she does not love them so much that she is blind to their imperfections.

Her anonymous caller is not only blind to those same imperfections, but is equally blind to the difference between honest, forthright opinion and cowardly, full - blown prejudice.

Chapel Hill would miss the presence of Miss Gilson. We doubt seriously if anyone would miss her caller.

Does Slogan Have To Be Popular

"This is a Republic, not a Democracy. Let's keep it that way."

This happens to be a slogan of The John Birch Society, an organization for which the Herald holds no brief.

It also happens to be a slogan that the U. S. Post Office Department and Pitney-Bowes Co. apparently have declared war upon.

Pitney - Bowes makes and rents postage meter machines, which are used by many volume mail users in place of stamps. The Post Office Department winds up with the postage meter revenue.

For years, Pitney-Bowes and the Post Office Department have permitted postage meter users to use postage plates that included slogans, drawings and such. For instance, you might see a postage meter impression that had alongside it the slogan, "Keep American green" or the slogan, "The shortest distance between two points is a truck route."

There was no objection to these slogans. But then along came the John Birch folks with a slogan and allof a sudden the Post Office folks and Pitney - Bowes had second thoughts.

Spindale Mills of Spindale, N. C., is protesting against this vigorously. Spindale says it can't get a plate with a slogan reading "This is a republic, not a democracy."

What's the difference between one slogan and the next one? Are postage meter slogans acceptable only if they coincide with the political beliefs of Pitney-Bowes or of the Post Office Department?

How'd that old saying of Voltaire's go? Something to the effect that "I don't agree with a word that you say, but I'd gladly die for your right to say it."

That ought to hold good today, too—for Birch-barkers and Republicans and overshoe manufacturers and truckers and all of the rest.

A Dumb Move

Last week, the Administration confirmed that it would go ahead with plans to give Yugoslavia's Tito a nuclear reactor.

We also plan to train Yugoslav scientists in operating it.

This is a program of the International Atomic Energy Agency, which was set up as an outgrowth of Eisenhower's Atoms for Peace proposals in 1953.

Tito, of course, calls himself a neutral—which means he is pro-Russian, but stands to gain more by playing both ends against the middle.

And, naturally, the reactor is to be used only for peaceful purposes.

And, naturally, if we didn't give Yugoslavia a reactor, Russia would.

All of which proves one thing. We're not only gullible and naive, we're plain stupid.

Why The Bomb, Mr. K?

On Monday the Soviet Union exploded the long threatened (and long dreaded) fifty megaton nuclear bomb over the Arctic testing area, near the island of Novaya Zomlya. The question which confounds the world is—why?

There is not a target in the world which warrants the utilization of an explosive force of such magnitude, including the vast, seething, metropolitan complexes of New York, London and Tokyo. Clearly there was no military need. The Soviet Union certainly must be aware of the threat which additional radioactive fall-out poses to all humanity including the Russians.

THERE ARE several possible answers to the question, but only time will reveal which one is the actual one. The world is not unaware of the fact that there is an increasing rivalry between the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China. The recent quarrel between the Soviet leaders and Albania, which adheres more closely to Peiping's dogma than Moscow's, emphasized this conflict.

WAS "THE BOMB" an effort to coerce China into a more subservient role? Is there a power-struggle occuring within the very walls of the Kremlin? Are these things connected with Khrushchev's recent vilification of Stalin and the projected removal of his remains from the Lenin Mausoleum in Moscow's Red Square? Or is the bomb simply meant to frighten the world?

The fact remains that Mr. Khrushchev will be criticized from Ecuador to Egypt for this action. Criticism will not perturb him. He will say that the Western Imperialists forced the action. The fury of the world will be refracted from Moscow, but the seed of acute fear will have been implanted upon the world's masses.

Peace Corps Helps Its Members

By Sydney J. Harris

Lecturing at a college in Michigan recently, I was asked by many of the students what I thought of the Peace Corps. Apparently, this project has fired the imagination of a lot of American undergraduates.

The Peace Corps, it seems to me, will have absolutely no effect upon peace or war. It is much too late for such undertakings to influence the course of world events. Nor will it do a great deal of good for the underdeveloped countries.

If we accept these two blunt facts, then it is possible to approve of the Peace Corps, wholeheartedly — for what it will do to the American youths who take part in it.

It is education of the best sort—education that involves young adults in the problems and suffering of others. It will broaden the sympathies and deepen the understanding of the men and women who enroll in the Corps. It is better, in many ways, than a year in college.

Indeed, I should like to see a year's college credit given to the young people who join the Corps. Some of the wealthier Eastern colleges, as you know, already include a year's stay in Europe as part of their four-year curriculum. But not many can afford this educational luxury.

I should like to see the Peace Corps transformed into a permanent project, as a living link between Government and the colleges. It would be beneficial to everyone if thousands of college students could be induced to spend their whole junior year abroad, as members of the corps, with full academic credit for their work abroad.

As Dr. Lawrence Kubie points out in his valuable book "Neurotic Distor tion in the Creative Process," maturity and wisdom are gained not by formal study but by participating in the needs of others.

Young people of college age are turned too much inward upon themselves in their pursuit of a career; their studies make them neurotically self-concerned at precisely the stage in their emotional lives when they need to turn outward to the world, to give of themselves and to identify with the problems and sufferings of other people.

If the course of formal study is too prolonged, the student may achieve narrow scholarship but not broad wisdom. Breaking into this self-preoccupied pattern with a year of intensive work among the less fortunate can be the best therapy for college students—and can do much toward humanizing our relations with the rest of the world.

It would be immensely naive to believe that the Peace Corps can move us an inch toward peace; but it is an encouraging leap forward in the humane education of young Americans.

'This Farce Called Campus Politics'

At last, fate has blessed the student body by giving them the very legal oversight that will enable them to begin doing away with the class officers. It has been brought to the attention of an embarrassed student legislature that there is no provision for the election of junior class officers. And there can be no provision amendment prior to the time of election because of a statement within the law stating that all amendments must be made prior to thirty days before the election.

THIS PARADOX of legal mumbo-jumbo characterizes the typical inefficiency and lackadaisical administration of the student government which is so rapidly losing favor in the eyes of the student body. This body of so-called representatives seldom has been, and certainly isn't now, any more popular than it is representative. In the first place the mass of students don't care who gets elected or appointed to student government positions. In addition the students running for these positions seldom care whether or not they get elected. And finally, those who do get elected find that they have to hold more than one office because there aren't enough students interested in filling the available posts.

IF THIS FARCE called campus politics were to cease within the structure of this University, what would be the result? First of all, the University administration would lose that portion of its reserve set aside to farm out petty problems. There would be no more bloc voting, no more fraternity pressure, at least not within the political sphere of campus affairs. There would be no more convention circuses, no more delegation pledges; and looking at it from a personal angle, dormitory residents would be deprived of the pleasure of campaign "social calls."

Political Extremes Unhealthy

Last year's controversy over the John Birch Society and this year's regarding the House Un-American Affairs Committee are symptomatic of reactions within the soul of this country. Now, those who oppose each of these organizations are heard in similar strengths.

Extremes in political opinion are never healthy; they are more suited to totalitarian regimes and the audiences that applaud whatever Comrade Khrushchev says in Moscow.

But it seems ironical that it is the fear of these very forces, of which we are becoming increasingly concerned, that motivate this behavior. This phenomena is not peculiar to the United States. There are many followers of Bertrand Russell in England who would be willing to spend a night in the puddles of Trafalgar Square to be labelled a pacfist.

But today it is neither the pacifist nor the warmonger whom we should extoll. What we need is good common sense in the face of a danger that is perhaps turning out to be not quite as dangerous as we thought.

Battle Park Becoming Trash Dump

Battle Park, a 66-acre triangle of native forest owned by the University, is becoming a student trash dump.

Once frequented by courting couples and students "just walking through," the park is now used by botany students and picnikers. Forest Theater is the apex of the woodland triangle which points to the heart of the UNC campus.

J. S. Bennett, director of UNC operations, is "discouraged with the up-keep of Battle Park. Every year we go down there and repair the outdoor ovens and clean up the area. Two days lated we go back and find a mess."

The "mess" is a clutter of trash, broken ovens and beer cans.

Abused Battle Park is the last considerable acreage of old Chapel Hill. It was deeded in part to the University by the Junior Order of Gimghouls with the stipulation that it be used "for park purposes only."

The remaining 31 acres were conveyed to the University in 1793 by Hardy Morgan, who did not specify any particular usage.

THE PARK is dedicated to Kemp Plummer Battle, Reconstruction president of the University, who was the first to clear paths, build fireplaces and bridge the many brooks.

After the president's death in 1919, the park fell to disuse.

Concern for the forest reaches as far back in recorded history as 1832, when Dr. Caldwell, presiding professor of the new University, was outraged by the villagers' plunders on the woodland. Although unheeded, he recommended the employment of a forest ranger to stop the abuse.

Repeated attempts have been made through the years to restore the park. The Battle Park Association organized to repair the bridges and fireplaces.

A former president of the park association, Phillips Russell, journalist and professor emeritus, says of the park: "There is a race between the University and the automobile industry, and you know who is winning, don't you? The automobile industry. Where is it all to end?"

THE CHAPEL HILL native has a "nightmare" of the campus, in which he sees skyscraper dormitories and concrete parking areas, with not a shrub or tree in sight.

Will Battle Park be a traget for the University's need for dormitory and parking space?

Chancellor Aycock says, "The University has no plans to use Battle Park except for a park, unless the Trustees change their minds."

But this decision was made by the Board of Trustees ten years ago before the park became a student trash dump.

How Does One Define Liberal?

Who is responsible for attaching false meanings to various words and thus misleading large numbers of people?

Who originated the charge that the market economy "(to use the correct term instead of the misleading one, capitalism)" is an economic system favoring the rich and that socialism is a system favoring the poor?

How does one answer such a charge? Collectivists (Liberals, Socialists, or what have you) answer by proudly pointing out that the market economy has made some men rich while many remained poor. They conclude that the rich "acquired their wealth by taking it from the poor." They fail to remember that "men had been struggling to throw off the shackles of exploitation and oppression since the beginning of history, that poverty, scarcity and starvation had been the condition of men throughout all the pre-capitalistic centuries, and that the release of human energy to engage in private enterprise and own private property provided the first real chance the poor had ever had." Consevatives answer by pointing out the following:

Free private enterprise has done more to create more wealth for more people more quickly than any other kind of economy know to the history of the human race. It must never be forgotten that wealth cannot be distributed unless it is first produced. Wealth cannot be created unless people work and produce. With human nature as it is, people work best to produce most when they are free to reap the rewards of their labors; when, as a result of their work, they have something which they may call their own.

How does one define a Liberal? When you consider the many virtues claimed by Liberals, it is difficult. Such consideration would reveal the Liberal to be a man composed of one part Constitution, one part Statue of Liberty, one part tractor (for Fidel), one part picket-sign and one part pious platitude. When you base your definition on economics, as does Mr. Buckley, you get the following:

The salient economic assumptions of Liberalism are socialist. They center around the notion that the economic ass can be driven to Point A most speedily by the judicious use of carrot-and-stick, an approach that supersedes the traditional notion of conservatives and classical liberals that we are not to begin with dealings with asses, and that Point A cannot possibly, in a free society, be presumed to be the desired objective of tens of millions of individual human beings.

Membership Grows In United Nations

The admission of Outer Mongolia and Mauritania more than doubles the original membership of the United Nations. It also concentrates a vivid spotlight on some of the U. N.'s attributes and problems.

The delay in these two elections belies Article 4 of the U. N.'s founding document, which says that "membership in the United Nations is open to all peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the Charter." Outer Mongolia and Mauritania came in only under a political agreement that Nationalist China would not veto Outer Mongolia.

The Security Council vote for Outer Mongolia, with the United States abstaining, showed that this country is willing to admit new members which are Communist if there is a political advantage to be gained.

Another point raised by this vote is the effect on the United Nations of the admission with full Assembly voting privileges of such states as Mauritania, whose huge territory supports only 650,000 persons, or Outer Mongolia, which has only about a million people. These two countries could in theory balance the votes of the Soviet Union and the United States. So could any two of the other little nations, including Luxembourg, Iceland, El Salvador, Albania and many more. The system of equal voting in the Assembly is embedded in the Charter.

If the time ever comes when the Communist world and the free world can agree on sensible changes in the United Nations, some adjustments may be expected in the voting procedure. It might be possible, for example, to give a weighted value to Assembly votes based on such factors as population and contributions to the U. N. budget. The great number of new members may also suggest an enlargement of the Security Council, possibly with a permanent seat for a bloc of small African or Asian nations. We cannot look for anything like this to happen in the near future. Meanwhile, we may be glad that even the smallest nation can stand up and be heard in the Assembly.

We Won't Miss An Anonymous Caller

A few nights ago, one of Chapel Hill's ex-Yankee citizens received a phone call asking her to "take her stupid ideas and go back North with them." Besides the fact that geography has no bearing on the validity of ideas, the caller neglected to give his name before underlining his convictions with an epithet and hanging up.

Anonymous phone calls are certainly nothing new in Chapel Hill; one more is hardly cause for editorial comment. Nor is the call a particularly earth-shaking event in the life of its recipient, Miss Mary Gilson. Miss Gilson has received more than one such call, not only in Chapel Hill, but in Chicago, New York, and in other cities where her views have been opposed.

That Mary Gilson is no longer a young woman also has but tiny significance.

What is important is that Mary Gilson is perfectly willing to say what she feels publicly, never attempting to hide behind a telephone receiver, never asking that her name be "withheld," or never using any of the other devices that have been used by her attackers.

The difference between Mary Gilson and her anonymous caller this week is that she has courage and her caller does not. She is a complete person. He is nothing more than a voice on the telephone, an unsigned letter, a rumor and a whisper.

We are convinced that Miss Gilson has no intention of going "back to the North" and that no anonymous caller will budge her one inch. The plain fact is that she loves the South and Chapel Hill. But she does not love them so much that she is blind to their imperfections.

Her anonymous caller is not only blind to those same imperfections, but is equally blind to the difference between honest, forthright opinion and cowardly, full - blown prejudice.

Chapel Hill would miss the presence of Miss Gilson. We doubt seriously if anyone would miss her caller.

When you base your definition on economics, as does Mr. Buckley, you get the following:

The salient economic assumptions of Liberalism are socialist. They center around the notion that the economic ass can be driven to Point A most speedily by the judicious use of carrot-and-stick, an approach that supersedes the traditional notion of conservatives and classical liberals that we are not to begin with dealings with asses, and that Point A cannot possibly, in a free society, be presumed to be the desired objective of tens of millions of individual human beings.

Membership Grows In United Nations

The admission of Outer Mongolia and Mauritania more than doubles the original membership of the United Nations. It also concentrates a vivid spotlight on some of the U. N.'s attributes and problems.

The delay in these two elections belies Article 4 of the U. N.'s founding document, which says that "membership in the United Nations is open to all peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the Charter." Outer Mongolia and Mauritania came in only under a political agreement that Nationalist China would not veto Outer Mongolia.

The Security Council vote for Outer Mongolia, with the United States abstaining, showed that this country is willing to admit new members which are Communist if there is a political advantage to be gained.

Another point raised by this vote is the effect on the United Nations of the admission with full Assembly voting privileges of such states as Mauritania, whose huge territory supports only 650,000 persons, or Outer Mongolia, which has only about a million people. These two countries could in theory balance the votes of the Soviet Union and the United States. So could any two of the other little nations, including Luxembourg, Iceland, El Salvador, Albania and many more. The system of equal voting in the Assembly is embedded in the Charter.

If the time ever comes when the Communist world and the free world can agree on sensible changes in the United Nations, some adjustments may be expected in the voting procedure. It might be possible, for example, to give a weighted value to Assembly votes based on such factors as population and contributions to the U. N. budget. The great number of new members may also suggest an enlargement of the Security Council, possibly with a permanent seat for a bloc of small African or Asian nations. We cannot look for anything like this to happen in the near future. Meanwhile, we may be glad that even the smallest nation can stand up and be heard in the Assembly.

Huyck To Address Planners' Forum

Alfred P. Van Huyck will address the Planners' Forum, today in Ackland Art Center 115 at 4 p.m. His topic will be "Urban Renewal and the Power Structure in a Small Community." He will include excerpts on tape of public hearings and slides.

This lecture is one of a series sponsored by the Planners' Forum, an organization of students in the Department of City and Regional Planning.

Van Huyck is the director of urban renewal with Herbert H. Smith Associates, Trenton N. J., and has been a visiting lecturer in Planning at Dartmouth College. He was the Sears-Roebuck Fellow in City Planning at Carolina in 1957.

The public has been invited to the lecture by the Forum.

U.S. Prepares For Atmosphere Tests If 'Deemed Necessary' For Freedom

By Merriman Smith

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy announced Thursday that the United States is preparing to resume nuclear tests in the air—and will start the explosions if they are deemed necessary to protect the free world. With the approval of key members of Congress, the President declared that above-ground tests will be ordered if a current study of Russia's explosions shows such action is needed to maintain a nuclear advantage over the Soviets.

"We have taken major steps in the last year to maintain our lead—and we do not propose to lose it," he said.

Kennedy pledged that the United States would hold fallout from any atmospheric tests to an "absolute minimum." He said he had no intention of exploding anything like the 50-megaton bomb which Russia set off "in complete disregard for the welfare of mankind."

Denounces Russians

In a statement read to newsmen in his office, the grim President denounced Russia's "campaign of fear" but again offered to sign a nuclear test ban treaty so long as it provides for adequate inspection and control.

"In the meantime, as a matter of prudence, we shall make necessary preparations for such tests so as to be ready in case it becomes necessary to conduct them," he said.

While the President did not say so, his scientific and military experts want to conduct atmospheric tests to "proof test" nuclear warheads for intercontinental rockets, anti-missile missiles and battlefield weapons.

Some members of Congress have called for atmospheric tests to try to develop a neutron bomb capable of killing troops on a battlefield without destroying buildings or other property.

The President issued his statement after an extended meeting of his policy-drafting National Security Council. A special guest at the meeting was former President Harry S. Truman, the man who ordered the atomic bomb dropped in World War II.

Survey Pacific Area

Scientific teams already are surveying this country's Pacific proving grounds, the site for big tests, to determine how long it would take them to get them back in shape. In the past it has taken about six months to prepare the proving ground and organize a task force to carry out an ambitious test program. But it could be done quicker.

Smaller atmospheric tests could be staged sooner at the Nevada test site, scene of this country's current underground explosions. But for shots in the megaton range this country has always gone into the Pacific.

Shortly after the White House conference, Kennedy left for New York and a meeting with Arthur H. Dean, chief U. S. negotiator on a nuclear test ban and a delegate to the United Nations.

Dean has been carrying the U. S. fight against a U. N. resolution sponsored by India and five other countries calling for an uninspected moratorium against all atomic tests. He said Wednesday the United States opposed it because Russia could not be trusted to abide by such a voluntary policy.

Kennedy, making the same point in his statement, said the evidence shows that Russia prepared for its current test series while its representatives in Geneva were "pretending" to negotiate a test ban agreement with the United States and Britain.

Would Approve Resumption

A decision by the President to order a go-ahead on atmospheric tests would be approved by nearly all members of the 16-man House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee. A UPI poll showed that eight favor immediate resumption while most others on the group said they would back the President in any decision he makes.

Russia announced on Aug. 30 that it was resuming atomic tests after a 34-month moratorium. Since then it has conducted 28 announced tests. All but an underwater shot involved fallout-producing bombs exploded in the air.

On Sept. 5, Kennedy ordered the resumption of "no fallout" underground tests by the United States, saying Russia's continued testing left him no other course.

Tar Heel Booters Meet Little Lynchburg

Big Five Meet Is Next For Harriers

BY ED DUPREE

UNC's cross-country team ended their dual meet schedule on a successful note with Wednesday's 27-29 victory over a highly regarded Duke team ,but the real test for the Tar Heels doesn't begin until next Monday, November 6.

That date will find the Carolina harriers competing with Duke, Wake Forest, Davidson, and host team N. C. State in the Big Five or State championship meet at Raleigh. In reality, the meet will serve as a rematch for the Blue Devils and Tar Heels and shapes up as another thriller between the arch-rivals. Neither Wake or State is a contender for the ACC championship and Davidson, the lone Southern Conference entry, does not figure to challenge the favorites from Chapel Hill and Durham.

All Finals in Ten Days

The following Monday, the ACC finals are to be held at Virginia and the theme of the big race could easily be one word—revenge. Maryland's Terps were stomped by Duke, 45-25, and Coach Jim Kehoe's crew will be out to turn the tables on Al Buehler's Blue Dukes. Coach Dale Ranson's Tar Heels missed an unbeaten season because of a 35-34 loss to the always potent Terrapins and they would like nothing better than to top the Marylanders in the conference finals. And if the trotters from Duke fall again to UNC in the Big Five meet, the stage will be set for an all-out revenge battle for the three powers.

The third important Monday, November 20, will give an ACC team a crack at the NCAA championship.A chance to represent the conference at this race will be added incentive when the runners toe the starting line ten days from now. 1961 performances indicate that either UNC, Duke, or Maryland is capable of flying the ACC banner high against the keen competition they will meet in the finals.

Scores Give Duke Slight Edge

The three teams are so evenly rated that it is virtually impossible to pick a favorite for the finals. A comparison of scores would make Duke a slight favorite since they romped over Maryland by 20 points. The Duke-UNC and UNC Maryland meets were so close that a switch in any two positions could have changed the outcome.

But, it must be pointed out that a number of conditions could influence the outcome in the championships at Charlottesville. In the UNC-Virginia meet, Rett Everett set a new course record and the Carolina team found the UVA course very much to their liking. Yet, Everett, the UNC senior who lost a race for the first time this year Wednesday, runs better in cold weather than in warm weather —and Wednesday was a perfect day for swimmers, golfers, and summertime sprinters to advertise their talents. Thus, a cold day at Charlottesville in ten days could make Everett a slight favorite over Duke's unbeaten Jerry Nourse.

Maryland Up and Down

Maryland's up-and-down Terps may have found themselves in their victory over UNC last week. Coach Ranson warned his runners before and after the Maryland meet that Duke was not necessarily 20 points better than Maryland and the results of UNC's meets with both Duke and Maryland serve to prove his point. Yet, at the same time, Ranson was quick to give Duke all the credit it deserves for its surprisingly easy win.

But the Big Five meet is foremost in the minds of the Duke and Carolina harriers—the winner of the Raleigh affair could easily rate the favorite's seat when all eight ACC teams run in what could be the fastest cross-country race since the conference was formed.

UNC Seeks 6th Victory

By Ed Dupree

UNC's Soccer team will play host to the booters from Lynchburg College this afternoon at 3 on Fetzer Field. The Tar Heels will be looking for their sixth win of the campaign—they have dropped three contests.

The Carolina booters will have their hands full with the Lynchburg team, a member of the Mason-Dixon Conference. The Virginians came to Chapel Hill last year and handed Coach Marvin Allen's crew a 1-0 loss, their first of the season.

Roanoke, Washington & Lee, N. C. State, Davidson, and Pfeiffer, have been the five Tar Heel victims this year. Their losses were to West Chester, Navy, and Maryland—easily three of the nation's top ten teams.

Top Carolina scorers in the first eight games have been Herman Prakke, Bill Shettle, and Frank Lankford. Kingman Brown and sophomore Pete Blake round out the starting offensive line for Allen's booters.

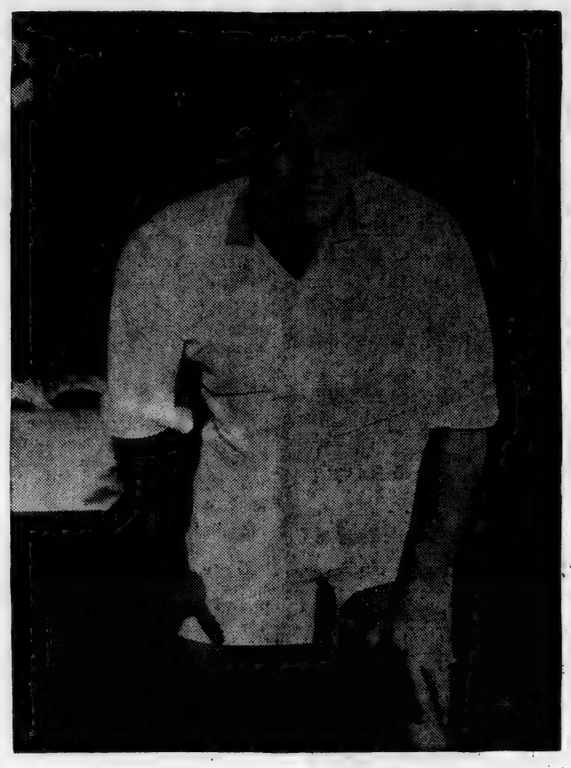
The starting fullbacks will be Captain Dick Bordogna and John Kenrich. At halfbacks, Bill Snyder, Charles Battle, and George Beim should be the starters.

The goalies, Larry Steele and Tom Griffith, are both on the injured list. Griffith will definitely miss today's game. Steele is a doubtful starter and if he is unable to play, then George Beim will likely switch to the goal position.

PEP RALLY

There will be a pep rally for the UNC-Tennessee game tonight at 6:15 at Emerson field. Come out and support the Tar Heels!

One rat can destroy enough feed in one year to produce eight dozen eggs, five broilers or 10 pounds of pork. In addition, the pests kill small animals, start fires, spread disease, and scratch and gnaw property.



JOHN KENRICK—starts at fullback for Tar Heels in Soccer match against Lynchburg College today at 3 p.m.

TICKETS

Half-price tickets for out of town games with Duke and Wake Forest go on sale Monday, November 6, in Woollen Gym. Sales end Saturday, Nov. 11. The half-price rate for the Duke game at Durham on Nov. 18 applies only to students who pick up special coupons in advance at the Woollen Gym ticket office. These coupons and an ID card must be presented there at a special student gate adjacent to the east side of Duke Stadium. Date or student wife ticket sell for $4.50, the normal ticket price.

For the Wake Forest game in Winston-Salem on Nov. 25, half-price tickets will be sold and must be presented along with an athletic pass card for admission at the game. Students may buy additional tickets for their wives or dates at $4. Half-price tickets are non-transferrable.

Protests Mar Frat Blue Play-Offs; Phi Delt, SAE Victories Questioned

By John Montague

With the possibility of validated protests clouding the picture, SAE and the Phi Delts joined Zeta Psi and Sigma Nu in the march toward the Fraternity Blue tag football championship. Two of Wednesday's four games are being contested and are awaiting the ruling of the Intramural Office.

The games being disputed are the Phi Delts' first-round 6-2 triumph over DKE and the SAE's 13-7 win over Chi Psi in the quarter-finals. Both protests are being based on interpretations of the ineligible-player rule.

The Phi Delt-DKE contest has already been played twice. DKE won the first time by 20-19 in overtime, but the game was replayed because the DKE's used an ineligible player. This time Riley Pleasants' TD gav the Phi Delts a 6-2 victory. Lucius Burch accounted for the two DKE points with a safety. Now the DKE's are claiming that the Phi Delts used an ineligible player.

John Brabson's two touchdowns led SAE to a 13-7 conquest of Chi Psi. The latter held a narrow 7-6 advantage at the half on the strength of Dick Lewisohn's TD and John Kirkland's PAT. However, Brabson did it again for the SAE's in the second half, and this time Jim Pittman added the extra point. The official outcome, however, is still a question mark.

Zeta Psi and Sigma Nu both won their quarter-final contests in undisputed fashion. The Zetes, all-campus champs of 1960, moved into the semi-finals by upending Kappa Sig, 14-6, while Sigma Nu also forged ahead, dropping Delta Sig, 13-7.

Stu Orgain and Sam Thompson were TD-makers for the defending champions in their win over the Kappa Sigs. A safety accounted for the other two Zeta Psi points. Kappa Sig standout Dave Fletcher scored his team's lone touchdown.

The Sigma Nu offensive output consisted of touchdowns by Guy Carr and Jerry Rucker, coupled with Bob Wacker's point after. Buddy Talbert crossed the goad for the losing Delta Sig's, John Corbett contributing a PAT.

Over in the White Division playoffs, the Delta Sig Rogues earned a place in the finals by topping Sigma Nu, 13-8.

Frisco's "Shotgun" Is Favorite Against Lions' New "Zephyr" Attack

By Norman Miller
United Press International

The Detroit Lions, who have been staggering along with a punchless offense, shoot their new "zephyr" attack at the San Francisco Forty-Niners Sunday in an effort to stay in the National Football League championship race. The "zephyr" is a four-flanker offense dreamed up by coach George Wilson because the Lions' attack has averaged only 15 points a game this season.

Wilson's formation, a gimmick like the "shotgun" popularized by the Forty-Niners, is designed primarily for passing. It puts quarterback Jim Ninowski under center with only fullback Nick Pietrosante behind him. The halfbacks, Terry Barr and Olympic hurdler Glenn Davis, are flanked wide along with the ends, Gail Cogdill and Jim Gibbons.

For both Detroit and San Francisco this is a "must" game. Each has been beaten three times and NFL experts regard this as the maximum number of games a title contender can afford to lose. In an earlier meeting, the Forty-Niners clobbered the Lions, 49-0.

Sticks With "Shotgun"

Coach Red Hickey of San Francisco said he would stick with the "shotgun" which shot a few duds in the last two games.

"You can't blame those defeats on the shotgun," Hickey said. "We would have lost those games to the Bears and Steelers no matter what offense we used. We lost the ball 17 times on fumbles and interceptions in our last three games. You just can't do that and win ball games."

Oddsmakers have established the Forty-Niners as 4-point favorites to win that game on the West Coast.

The Philadelphia Eagles, who lead the Eastern Division with a 6-1 record, and the Chicago Bears, runnersup in the West with 5-2, clash in the NFL's top game. The Eagles are a 3-point pick on their home field.

Coach Nick Skorich of the Eagles said this was "the biggest and most important game for us since the start of the season." It's the start of a tough three-game grind for the Eagles, who meet the New York Giants and Cleveland Browns on the following two Sundays.

Sees Team Improving

Coach George Halas, whose Bears now have won four straight games after a dismal start, said his team "is improving with every game."

"We have to because we're still young," Halas commented. "The Eagles have tremendous power, running and passing, and they have a sharpshooting passer. I don't know whether anyone can be any tougher."

The Green Bay Packers, who lead the Western Division with a 6-1 record, were favored by 6 points over the Colts at Baltimore; the Cleveland Browns were picked by 10 at home against the Pittsburgh Steelers; the New York Giants were 14 at home over the Washington Redskins; the St. Louis Cardinals were the choice by 1 point at home against the Dallas Cowboys, and the Los Angeles Rams were 9 over the Minnesota Vikings on the West Coast.

In the American Football League, the Boston Patriots were favored by 3 points over the Dallas Texans in a Friday night game in Boston. On Sunday, the San Diego Chargers were 17-point picks to make the New York Titans their ninth straight victims; the Buffalo Bills were 11 at home over the Oakland Raiders, and the Houston Oilers were 10 points over the Broncos at Denver.

CLASS ELECTIONS DECLARED INVALID

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Validity Of Class Officers Is Questioned In Hot Debate

'Are You Real?' Newt Smith Asked

BY LOUISE CASAGRIN

Contesting the validity of the election of class officers, and the worth of their jobs, Senior Newt Smith and Sophomore presidential candidate Jeff Bayer faced a panel of presidential candidates in a rip-roaring roundtable discussion on WUNC's Carrier Current Thursday night.

"It's just a way of getting a picture in the Yack" and planning "happy little picnics" stated Jeff Bayer, who said he feels with no money and no function class officers are useless.

If elected Bayer would not only refuse to have his picture in the annual, but would publicly announce that he would call no meetings of his committee. This "break in tradition" would be a "dramatization of the point."

In his campaigning the candidate has found that "most for a change." However, "this is just a means to an end—we won't abolish class officers for good."

Countering his accusations, the panel asked Bayer if he weren't merely employing a political gimmick to insure his election. "Shouldn't we use a positive approach if we want to get more money," Joe Craver, UP candidate for President of the Junior class, questioned.

"Even if we don't have the money, the functions of the officers are not entirely useless," remarked Bob Spearman, UP candidate for Freshman president. "What about the support for the bond issue?"

In reply to SP Junior class presidential candidate Pete Hawkins' statement that chances of getting money from the legislature are poor, Bayor contended the dramatization of its need might counteract this.

Continuing in this spirited vein the second half of the program was devoted to a discussion of the validity of Junior class officers. These officers were not provided for in the Elections Laws and the Election Board was challenged on this point by Newt Smith.

Smith stated, "I'm going before the Student Council tonight to see what they can do about it. I think they're a little worried."

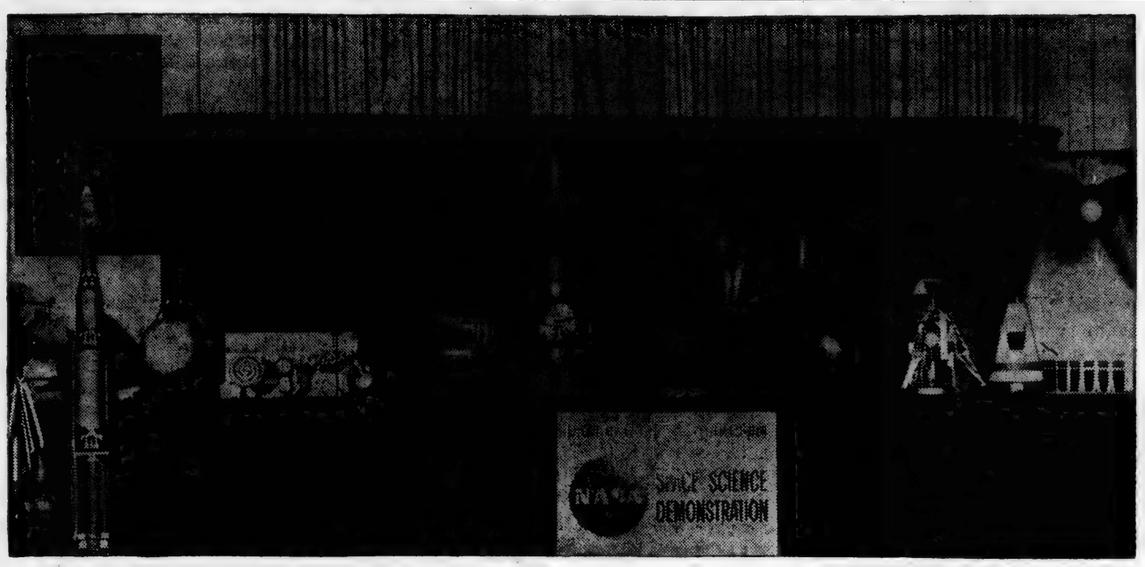
"Are you real?" Richard Vinroot, SP Junior class president, questioned. "Why make a big to-do about a little typographical error?"

Pointing out that as a transfer from Georgia Tech perhaps Smith "did not fully appreciate Carolina," Joe Craver remarked. "Nothing makes me feel better than to go to a basketball game when they come out dribbling that little blue and white ball."

"I am graduating in January and do not need publicity," stated Smith, when asked why he was bringing up the issue. "Since the university is run on the basis of a Student Council, class officers are completely obsolete."

The debate concluded wit hno resolution.

Moderated by Rohn Randell, Student Legislature parliamentarian, the panel also included Brooks Henry, UP candidate for president of the sophomore class, and George Rosenthal, SP candidate for president of the sophomore class.



TRAVELING SPACE SHOW—A mobile science demonstration unit sponsored by the Department of Air Science will present two 50-minute programs here Thursday. The programs to be held at 12 and 2 p.m. in Memorial Hall, will include models of satellite launch vehicles, space probes and other electronic devices used in space experiments.

Council's Decision Changes Little In Election Procedure

DTH Commentary

Student Council's decision to declare the Election Law B W-29-14, invalid, has thrown the campus, especially the candidates in the coming election, into a terrible confusion.

The decision by the Council actually has changed very little. It means that the election will be conducted according to the previous election law, BW-25-30, and the subsequent amendments to that law, or Constitutional amendments which supercede it.

The most important change occurs in the date of the election. The invalid Election Law stated that the election would occur the first Tuesday of November. The older law which declares the date of the election as the second Tuesday in November now holds.

This, of course, will affect the candidates' campaign plans, and those who have spent their alloted amount will suffer. The extension of time may swing the election to the SP side, who will have more time to set up dorm support, but this advantage will be lost in other differences in election procedure.

The old election law differs in the allotment of campaign expenditures to parties, stating that the parties may spend up to $100 in the campaign and $20 in the run-offs. This will probably aid the UP in their chances of swinging the election. Their treasury boasts a surplus whereas the SP's cannot afford much more than the expected $40 of the invalidated election law.

There is also a change in the qualifications required of the candidates. The candidates are required to have earned at least 25 hours in the two semesters preceding the election, in addition to the C average. It is not known whether this will affect any of the candidates; Dave Buxton, Elections Board chairman, said that it probably would not.

The candidates will have to turn in their Expense Account at 6 p.m. Monday, which is still at the $15 maximum amount.

Buxton said that the request for the absentee ballots must be turned in by 5 p.m. Friday due to the change. He also announced that the poll-tenders would have to attend a meeting to be announced at a later date. "Anyone who wishes a copy of the old election law, BW-25-30, should come by the Student Government office," said Buxton.

In the actual procedures of the election there are some minor changes. There will be a change in the polling places, but Buxton has not commented how this will be done.

In an administrative decision, Buxton said: "Because there are no clear geographic areas for the Judicial Districts, we will follow the Men's and Women's Judicial Districts as stated in General Elections Law BW-29-14.

The only other change this invalidation procedure will cause will be the effect the controversy has aroused in the student body opinion. Probably, the fact that the invalid law was proposed, passed and signed by members of the UP will cause some beneficial effect on the SP's chances. However, the SP will be hurt because of the economic advantage granted the UP in the old election law.

In effect the disruption caused by the invalidation of the General Elections Law will be negligible. The campaign will last longer and the issues will be re-hashed. However, both parties stand to gain. Reverting to the old elections law will probably insure a close campaign, giving no appreciable advantage to either Party.

Election Is Slated For November 14

The Student Council declared the General Election Law invalid late Thursday night on the grounds that the law never legally passed the Student Legislature.

This decision brings into effect the previous election law; therefore, moving the election of class officers from this Tuesday to Tuesday, Nov. 14.

The Council, acting on an appeal by Senior Newt Smith, ruled that "there is no evidence which can in any way verify its passage as a law under Robert's Rules of Order or any special provisions."

Smith presented the minutes of the Student Legislature as evidence of his contention that the final copy of the elections law had never been voted upon.

Defending the validity of the law, John Randall, parliamentarian of the legislature, presented a statement from Bob Sevier. Sevier, vice-president and presiding officer of the legislature when the law was brou.ght up, said the law had been passed.

Smith, however, presented testimony from two legislators also present who said they had no recollection of its passage. He also quoted from the minutes.

According to the minutes of the legislature, the General Elections Law was brought before the legislature for final consideration on October 6, 1960. It passed by a vote of 17 to 2 after the addition of several amendments.

Smith claimed that a quorum (26 members) was not present at that vote, but Randall explained that the law was still valid since no one challenged its validity at that time.

On October 13, the bill was brought up for reconsideration by Rep. Oppenheimer. The reconsideration was granted and several amendments voted int othe bill. A bill was then introduced concerning funds for the Toronto exchange, and the legislature continued business without voting on the final version of the elections bill.

Smith claimed that once the bill was accepted for reconsideration, it was no longer considered passed and must be passed again to become law. The Council upheld this interpretation.

Earlier in the Student Council session, Smith had argued that the now invalid general Elections Law did not contain any provision for the election of Junior class officers. The Council did not rule on this contention since the later ruling invalidated the whole law.

Council Chairman Tom Cannon said that Smith's appeal on the Junior class officers case did not enter into the council's decision on the law as a whole.

Randall also argued against Smith on the Junior class officers issue. The parliamentarian said that the law originally passed by the legislature contained provision for the Junior elections and that their omission in the version signed by Vice-President Bob Sevier and President David Grigg was only a typographic mistake.

Marathon Ends In Raleigh

The "Torch for Education" marathon ended yesterday morning at 11:55 in downtown Raleigh before the Charles B. Aycock Memorial in Capitol Square.

A student from North Carolina College and one from N.C. State ran the final mile ending the 700-mile marathon which began at the mountains and the sea.

Several hundred students from 12 state-supported schools participated in the marathon which was designed to gain support for the upcoming $61.7 million statewide bond issue referendum on November 7. The issue carries a large portion designated for capital improvements for the state-supported colleges.

Two teams, starting from Wilmington on the sea, and Murphy in the mountains, carried the kerosene-filled torch the 700 miles in about 70 hours.

Meeting the students at the Aycock Memorial, Gov. Terry Sanford told the crowd gathered there, "I want to thank all of these student representatives who have participated in carrying to the people of North Carolina this message of the importance of new expansion of institutions of higher education.

"We have an opportunity to move forward," Sanford said, "if we are going to lead the nation in education we have to be prepared."

Sanford said he felt the bond issue would be approved at the polls.

Dr. George Clarifies His Story

Dr. Wesley C. George, retired UNC anatomy professor, has denied his study for Alabama is designed to prove the Negro is inferior to the white man.

"You start out to find what the evidence leads you to," he said.

Admitting that he is making a study for the state, he said officials have "never talked of proving anything. "We talked in terms of what science has to contribute to this problem. If science has anything to bear, we'll bring it out."

Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, said yesterday in New York, "Is Gov. John Patterson confessing, through the initiation of this study, that for all these decades the segregation policy of the state of Alabama has been based upon guesswork?"

Patterson has made $3,000 available for the study.

Prof. George, the author of several booklets on race and its implications, has spent more than 20 years studying the differences between races.

"We have here in this country a racial problem . . . one of the most fundamental issues that confronts the American people," George said. "If we are going to arrive at a proper judgment in understanding the fundamental nature we are dealing with, we are going to have to discover what the fundamental nature is."

FINGER-PAINTING

A finger-painting festival exhibit and sale will be held in the garden of Ruth Faison Shaw, Estes Drive, today and Sunday from 12-5 p.m.

The exhibit will include "paintings by world-famous personalities including Gertrude Lawrence." Coffee will be served. The Shaw house on Estes Drive is described as "the first on the right."

TV Show Honors John M. Morehead

Governor Terry Sanford and Chancellor William Aycock were among the participants featured over WUNC-TV last night in celebration of John Motley Morehead Day at Carolina.

Student Body President Bill Harriss was master of ceremonies of the program which included Scott Summers and Dennis Rash, both Morehead Scholars.

Gov. Sanford, appearing on tape, called attention to the "invaluable" enhancement of Carolina's eductional program by Mr. Morehead's contributions, especially the Morehead Scholarship Program.

Chancellor Aycock, referring to the Morehead Scholarship Program, noted "he created this formula—his resources—plus young menof promise—plus the University of N.C.—and then proceeded to mix these ingredients to produce an effective solution for providing the leadership he visualized."

The Men's Glee Club, directed by Dr. Joel Carter, added a musical touch with their renditions of the "Old North State," the "Carolina Loyalty Song," and "Hark the Sound."

The following Morehead Scholars who lead various campus activities were introduced on the program: Bob Bilbro, Tim Burnett, George Campbell, Al Cronenburg, Allen Eure, Doug Fambrough, Tony Harrington, Al Roper, Pope Shuford, Bill Sullivan, Tom White and Ward Purrington.

'Executive Suite' Tonight's Movie

Tonight's free flick, "Executive Suite" boasts an all-star cast which includes William Holden, June Allyson Barbara Stanwyck, Fredric March, Walter Pidgeon, Shelly Winters, Paul Douglas, Louis Calhern, Dean Jagger and Nina Foch.

From the novel by Cameron Hawley, "Executive Suite" is the story of a business dynasty and the struggle for power and control that goes on within its skyscraper headquarters when the head of the corporation dies.

Tomorrow night Ingmar Bergman's "Seventh Seal" will be the special Sunday cinema. The film takes place in Europe in the middle of the 14th century when the black death romped wildly.

The free flicks will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall. ID cards will be required.

Openings & Interviews

Professor Leroy F. Merrifield of George Washington University Law School will be here Tuesday to interview prospective students for the law school. Several scholarships are available. For further information contact Dr. Gordon Cleveland in South Building.

The following companies will be interviewing on the campus next week:

Monday—U.S. Naval Weapons Lab; Kleeb & Bullard, CPA; Burlington Industries; Sears Roebuck & Co.

Tuesday — Burlington Industries; A. M. Pullen & Co.; International Business Machines.

Wednesday — The Kroger Co.; Corning Glass Works; Procter & Gamble Co.; Gulf Oil Corporation.

Thursday—Socony Mobil Oil Co.; General Electric Co.; The Upjohn Co.; J. B. Ivey & Co.

Friday—General Electric; Ethyl Corp.; The Upjohn Co., and Atlantic Refining Co.

Correction

During the 1958 Symposium, Harry Ashemore did not defend segregation but attacked it. He won a Pulitzer Prize for his articles on integration. The DTH regrets this error.

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included Nancy Wason, Sandra Stawhum, Vicky King, Sue Matuszak, Dorene Acker, Fran Rhyne, Dave Williams, William Caperton, Doug Reed, Mercer Blankenship, Charlie Mattes, Eugene Howden, Walter Shuford, Horace McKee, Claude Pryor, Neil Pharr, Mike Harper, Paul Williams, Dewey Collins, and Robert Lankford.

Tennessee Alumnus

Sen. E. Kefauver Here To See Game

U.S. Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee will be in Chapel Hill today to watch the game in Kenan stadium between the Volunteers and the Tar Heels. The senator and his family arrived last night by plane and will eat lunch with President William Friday today.

According to the senator, the main reason for his visit is to see his daughter, Linda, who is a student here. Linda is a junior Art History major and lives in Alderman dormitory. She and her date, Ray Francis, will accompany her father and family to the game, and they will be sitting on the visitors' side.

Senator Kefauver, an alumnus of the University of Tennessee, was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity. After the game the senator and his family will visit the Kappa Sigma chapter here in the little fraternity court.

Senator Kefauver has been in the U.S. Senate since 1948, and was the Democratic nominee for vice-president in 1956.

From 18 Countries

64 Allied Officers Touring Campus

Sixty-four allied officers from 18 counries will tour the UNC campus today. During their stay, the officers will view a program in the Morehead Planetarium, tour the Institute of Government and attend the UNC-Tennessee game.

The officers, many of them from southeast Asia, have been attending special classes at Ft. Bragg on unconventional warfare and counter-insurgency operations since early October.

Dean of the Faculty James L. Godfrey, who will meet the group, said it was "good to see friends from abroad when they can visit us. We hope their stay in this country has been good and that their visit to UNC will be a happy one."

During their tour, the officers will be guided by seven to ten UNC students, some of whom speak Spanish, French and possibly Vietnamese.

Nations represented by the officers are Canada, Germany, Italy, Korea, Nicaragua, Norway, Republic of China, Thailand, Vietnam, Argentina, Australia, Bolivia, India, Great Britain, Indonesia, Lebanon, Pakistan and the Philippines.

Don't Call It Science

Dr. W. C. George of the UNC School of Medicine is a better propagandist than he is scientist.

Dr. George has been hired by the state of Alabama to conduct a "study" of the Negro problem in that highly scientific and advanced state. He claimed yesterday that the "study" was not being conducted to "prove anything," but should be considered "in terms of what science has to contribute to this problem."

The only contribution Dr. George's type of "science" contributes to the problem is a negative one, and he should know this better than anyone else.

In the first place, Dr. George has spent many years and published several booklets on the race question. His conclusions from these "studies" are that "the mean level of the intelligence in the Negro is roughly 20 per cent lower than in whites, and that Negroes are generally inferior to whites.

He has expressed these and similar views for a long time. He has been teaching at this University since 1912—almost 50 years. His racial studies have been conducted for over 20 years.

In short, he is a man whose mind is made up. We do not and cannot contest his conclusions concerning the "inferiority" Negroes. He has conducted the studies and drawn his conclusions. He has a Ph.D., and will for the moment assume his conclusions are correct since we can offer nothing better.

BUT to say that his new study for the state of Alabama is a scientific one is ludicrous. Certainly the enlightened governor of Alabama, Dr. Patterson, has read Dr. George's booklets or at least heard of them. And certainly the state of Alabama would not hire a "scientist" whose conclusions on the race matter might possibly differ from those of the state.

This, too, is perfectly valid. No one could expect a state to spend $3,000 of its money and not get its full worth.

The state of Alabama knows that Dr. George has said, "the arguments used by integrationists are almost wholly specious." And the state knows that Dr. George will probably say the same thing in his "study" for Alabama.

All this is well and good. Dr. George has the right to say anything he pleases, and the state of Alabama can hire anyone it wishes.

But is this "scientific?" Obviously not. The conclusions have already been drawn; there will obviously be no new theories advanced, no new facts brought to light. The base of science is objectivity. This is not science, it is propaganda.

And we're not just condemning Dr. George and Alabama. It would be just as ludicrous if the NAACP hired a Doctor to study the inherent abilities of the Negro.

You can have your propaganda campaigns, people, but please don't call them "scientific."

Class Officers?

Senior Newt Smith, claiming there was no provision for Junior Class officers, succeeded in getting the whole election law invalidated. Sophomore Jeff Bayer claims there is no need for class officers without any money or power. His fate is undecided.

Both debated the six SP and UP candidates for class presidencies Thursday night. As in most debates, no one 'won.' But both sides raised good points.

The "abolitionists" said class officers were figureheads; the party candidates pointed to several achievements of class officers. The abolitionists said that Student Government at UNC was based on the whole student body, not on separate classes; the party candidates said accomplishments could be made within this system.

The important point of the debate was not who was right—that will be decided Tuesday (oops, Tuesday a week). Or sometime. The debate was important, however, in focusing light on a long obscure problem.

The electorate has finally been given a clear opportunity to examine class officers in depth. Party candidates can no longer rely on good looks and a party organization to get into office. They must present some concrete arguments and back them up.

Of course, this is theoretical. Even in the debate, some of the party men relied on the Glories of the Blue and White and the true Carolina spirit to make their points. This only serves to prove the abolitionist point.

The challenge to the class officer system can be made a useless farce by both sides. If the candidates continue to react with meaningless blurbs of "Carolina life," and if the challengers use the issue as a political gimick nothing will be gained—no matter who wins.

But if both sides and the whole student body take this as an opportunity to improve the system, all will benefit—again, no matter who wins. In short, this is a time to think: Think "yes," Think "no," but think something. Do something. Vote.

Outing Club, Aim Arrows Elsewhere

Letter One

To the Editor:

Why, when people come to the Carolina Open Archery Tournament from as far away as New York, Arkansas, South Carolina, and from all points of North Carolina, can't the Outing Club get information to the student body about this event through the Daily Tar Heel?

Every important newspaper in the state, most of the local television stations (Ray Reeve, for example, devoted a large portion of one show to the Carolina Open Archery Tournament) and radio stations gave this event feature coverage. National magazines, from the June issue to date, have given this event national acclaim.

What is wrong with the Daily Tar Heel when students who pay for this publication can not get a message of major importance to many interested students?

IT AMAZES ALL those concerned with this tournament that the Daily Tar Heel staff has such a distorted system of values that international celebrities can acclaim an event to be of value, but the Daily Tar Heel considers it worthless.

Two of the major manufacturers of archery equipment sent representatives to cover this event. Representatives of four national magazines were present.

R. R. Nichols, who is the outdoor writer for Bowhunting magazine and a range inspector for the National Field Archery Association, and a high authority in the NCAA commented on the outstanding publicity, set up and overall procedures of this tournament.

WHY, WHEN WE gave the Daily Tar Heel all the information in proper newspaper form, (in several articles and pictures) were these articles not printed so that more students could enjoy the benefits of having this state-wide tournament at Carolina.

We noticed that you had as small an article as possible in Saturday's paper about the tournament. Can you really expect sportsmen to attend a major tournament when given last minute notice without a chance to practice. Competitors always practice for a few weeks in advance of a tournament at the particular distances to be used in this tournament. Students of the university, who by chance saw the minute article had an immediate 50% disadvantage in this competition. We think it inexcusable that the staff of the Daily Tar Heel caused, by omission of promised articles, the students of Carolina to be eliminated from fair competition because of lack of notice.

YOU MIGHT NOT think of a STATE-WIDE archery tournament as important, but many archers on campus and in town would have liked to attend this meet, but they were failed by their main news source.

Do you consider all the time and money devoted to this by the Outing Club and the support by the NCAA, National Archery Association, National Archery Association, National Field Archery Association, television personalities and students of this great university so insignificant that they should not be given the benefit of a school supported newspaper which serves the university as a means of communication between campus organizations and students?

We demand an answer.

Respectfully,
Charles A. Blumenthal,
President

Howard M. Lewis,
Vice-President

Letter Two

Mr. Editor:

We have noted that you have decided not to print the letter we sent to you on October 14. We think that we have a just gripe and want it put before the students of the university. We also note that your sports editor has continued to refuse to print articles submitted by the club and in particular, the articles concerning the winners of this state-wide archery tournament. Maybe, this article was incriminating or something? We are sorry that we have to write condemning you, but you are the overall policy maker and it is your policies that the sports editor follows.

We have decided that since this letter states a series of facts that other campus organizations and clubs have faced in regard to supression by the Daily Tar Heel in this liberal university, that this letter should be out in front of the students, by someone, by some means. If we don't see it in the Daily Tar Heel within a few days, we will be forced to use other means to get our message to the student body. This message will consist of the complete text of our letter and a current statement.

Expecting to see the complete article in the Daily Tar Heel, We are,

Respectfully yours,
Charles A. Blumenthal
Howard Lewis

Sports Editor's Reply

Reply to Blumenthal and Lewis:

It is not the policy of the Daily Tar Heel to censor news of any campus organization. However, it is not the policy of the Daily Tar Heel to be a special publicity agent for any group, either.

Concerning the Outing Club Tournament of October 14—Mr. Blumenthal's protests were in error and completely unfounded. The September 20 edition of the DTH carried on page 5 a story about the plans for the archery club for the coming year. This story included all the information that was released to the paper by Mr. Blumenthal. The story we received had to be rewritten and were deleted. Contrary to the opinion expressed by Blumenthal and Lewis, the information was in the DTH well in advance of the time of the tournament.

THE OTHER STORY printed in the DTH was on the day of the tournament. It was not intended to persuade students to enter the tournament, but it did tell them where it would be held, at what time, and who would be entered. Those who would have been interested in entering had already learned about it.

Mr. Blumenthal writes that he had given the Daily Tar Heel "all the information in proper newspaper form, in several articles and pictures." However, this is not the case. The DTH received two stories from Mr. Blumenthal. Neither of these was in proper newspaper form, if there is any such thing. Both required complete rewriting jobs. The picture that was submitted was of such size as to make the printing of it in the DTH impossible. This picture was the only one received.

THE DTH RECEIVED no report as to the outcome of the event, as Mr. Blumenthal erroneously states. The tournament was held on the weekend when the sports editor was in Washington for the Maryland football game. The sports staff was busy all day, and Mr. Blumenthal made no effort to see that the results of the meet reached the sports office. Quite possibly, the results were not complete until far after the paper's deadline.

This paper will not beg students to enter or attend such an event, no matter how many "national celebrities" should be present. Mr. Blumenthal, in his press releases, was making such a plea.

Quite possibly, the archery equipment manufacturers had more interest in the tournament than merely a liking for good bowmanship. They may have wanted to sell a few arrows. The "four national magazines" represented write about archery and outdoor sports exclusively, and so their presence is nothing out of the ordinary.

WE WOULD LIKE to commend Mr. Blumenthal for his interest in the Tar Heel, and in seeing that his organization is well publicized. It would be much easier for this paper to cover the campus events if all clubs were equally interested. However, we still retain the right to determine the news value of what we receive, and it is our responsibility to decide what goes in the DTH, unless there is not space for it. In no case has the editor of this paper decided what is to be printed on the sports pages, nor has the sports editor decided what appears on the editorial page.

Editor's Reply

Editor's Note: No letter, to our knowledge, has been "suppressed" by anyone on this paper. This year we have withheld only three letters, merely as protection against libel.

Had either Blumenthal or Lewis contacted the DTH by phone, telling us that he wanted the letter printed, and had not sent it to us merely to lodge a personal complaint, we would have been more than glad to comply.

To our knowledge, we have printed every letter submitted for publication, when it was known that the letter was so intended, and free of libelous material. We will continue to follow this policy, not only for the Outing Club, but for any individual or organization that cares to have personal opinions printed.

If any letter is submitted for publication, and does not appear within a reasonable length of time, a phone call to the associate editor will clear the matter up.

We repeat, nothing free from libel has been or will be refused space on the editorial page—even when it is made up of hotheaded, ridiculous and completely unfounded charges such as those preceding.

Minor Explosion On The Home Front

Intellectual Left Invites Disaster

Dear Mr. Editor:

The recent article of Clyde Wilson shows, if in a somewhat haphazard fashion, a recognition of the fact that the realities of the present world situation have noticeably altered the character of the present administration. President Kennedy certainly in recent months has leaned more on the advice of his sound and realistic advisors than the irresponsible "dreamers" of the left flank.

It should be apparent even to the fiercest of Liberals that Mr. Khrushchev is not going to be deterred by U.N. resolutions and world universal moral public opinion—(I doubt that there is such a phenomena).

The President recognizes it is military power that will convince Mr. K. that we mean business and that all the "humanitarianism" of the intellectual left is not a deterrent to war but an invitation to disaster.

It is time to crack down on the Communists internally through the HUAC and the enforcement of the Communist Central Act of 1950, and externally by impressing upon the Russians that the alternative to reasonable accommodation is war.

War Crimes—Nazi And Otherwise

Adolph Eichmann's trial has almost completed the record of Nazi genocide. Much opinion has been voiced that the trial was itself illegal. Be that as it may, the public could do worse than remember this statement quoted in U. S. News for August 28, 1961, and credited to an unnamed Israeli official closely involved with the trial:

"The full evidence brought out at the trial was a clear indication that a distinction has to be drawn between the Nazi government and the German people . . . Nothing in the trial tended to show that the mass of the German people knew about the mass extermination . . . The evidence tends to show that they probably did not know . . ."

On this score, at least, it will hereafter become the world to be silent. The collective guilt of the German people is now an exploded myth; and, if we realize this, we should also realize that even while Eichmann's foul deeds were in progress the human race bore witness to another genocide no less fiendish. This was the Anglo-American air terror, an open policy of "obliteration."

MUCH HAS BEEN written about the senseless bombings of London, Berlin, and Hamburg, but the greatest aerial massacre of the European conflict was visited upon Dresden, almost at war's end. Early in 1945 the Russians fearing use of Dresden as a railway channel for German reinforcements, called on their British ally to "neutralize" the city. This could easily have been effected by perimeter bombing—destruction of the exits and the railway by precision attack. But a much more inviting traget presented itself to Germany's enemies. About 750,000 refugees from the Russian advance had poured into Dresden, making easy victims, massed as they were for an air assaut.

The first blow fell on the night of February 13, as the overloaded refugee trains stood ready for departure. Shortly after ten o'clock, 244 British Lancasters swept over Dresden in wave formation and dropped about 3,000 conventional bombs and 400,000 incendiaries. Like a Roman candle the city flashed ablaze, beautiful and awesome in a whirlpool of carnage that would have disgraced Attila.

Huge districts were convulsed by a tidal wave of fire that howled and raged like a prehistoric monster, greedily devouring buildings, streets, and terrified humans. At 1:22 A.M. a second wave of 529 Lancasters struck at the city merely releasing their ordnance over the dark areas. This flight dropped 5,000 standard bombs and 200,000 incendiaries, many of them tearing directly into the massed panic-stricken crowds.

HIGH WINDS whipped into force, blasting people into the flames. Dimly through the roar of the firestorm came the hellish din of exploding buildings and the death cries of the agonized victims. Masses of people, trapped between walls of advancing fire, waited helplessly for the end. At dawn a dense pall of smoke floated three miles over Dresden.

The firestorm raged unabated. Around noon February 14 the Americans joined in the game: 311 Flying Fortresses came over the dying city to send another 2,000 explosives and 50,000 firebombs on the stunned, incredulous survivors. Finally the next day, a fourth attack finished the job; 210 B-17's participated and 461 tons of bombs cascaded earthwards. Outside the city, fighter planes soared low and machine gunned fugitives in the Elbe Meadows.

How many perished in this malodorous butchery? No one knows for sure, but we do know that the number exceeded 300,000. The ruins were so clogged with dead that in many places the clean-up squads were forced to burn the bodies with flame throwers.

The menace of the railways had been dealt with.

Full Hall Hears e. e. cummings

A large crowd of students and townspeople, sitting in the aisles and on window ledges of Memorial Hall, heard e. e. cummings read his poetry Thursday night.

Picking selections at random from his volumes "Poems 1923-1954," and "95 Poems," the poet gave a diversified presentation of his works, often interrupted by laughter and applause.

Introduced as an "artistic and personal radical," "daring, controversial and startling," cummings made good his reputation. He ranged from the thought-provoking poems on the Hungarian revolution and the "American" speech, to the tenderness of his two final love poems.

Modulating his voice, and adjusting his accent with the verse, cummings dramatized and emphasized the poetry. The reading was concluded by an encore demanded by applause.

This was the poet's first visit to the Carolina campus since 1955.

Tennessee Brings Powerful Offense Against Tar Heels

By Harry W. Lloyd

The University of Tennessee comes to Chapel Hill today fully armed with its tearaway orange jerseys, its deceptive single wing offense, and its long reputation for rugged football. The Volunteers, coached by Bowden Wyatt, have a 3-2 record this year.

North Carolina, with a similar 3-2 mark, returns home after a three-game road stand. While the Tar Heels were away, some new stars burst into prominence, and these players should play big roles at Kenan Stadium today.

One is Bob Lacey, the big sopho. more end, who will see most of his action on offense. Lacey will have his hands high to grab the passes of Carolina quarterback Ray Farris. Others who gained a reputation since the Tar Heels last played at home include halfback Roger Smith and tackle Vic Esposito.

Tennessee still has some talented men to run the tailback spot of their strong offense. This year's leaders include Mallon Faircloth, George Canale, and Glenn Glass. Bunny Orr, the fullback, is a top notch runner.

A feature of today's game will be the halftime "Band Day" celebration, in which high school bands from 56 schools will participate. A crowd of 30,000 has been predicted for the game.

Thus far this year, the Volunteers have beaten Mississippi State, 17-3, Tulsa, 52-6, and Chattanooga, 20-7, and have lost to Auburn, 24-21, and Alabama, 34-3.

Peacocks Defend Grad Title; Top Medics 28 To 25

The Peacocks successfully defended their 1960 Grad School Tag Football Championship Thursday afternoon, squeezing by the Med School, 28-25.

The underdog Med School matched the champs in touchdowns, but lost by the margin of one extra point and a safety. The game was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way, with the Peacocks holding a 14-12 advantage at the half.

Touchdown makers for the winners, who now move into the All-Campus semi-finals against the dorm champion, were Jerry Steele, Joe Ellenburgh, Jim Pfohl, and Dave Knecht. Charley Poindexter and Eddie Burke added important point-afters.

Booters Win By 2-1

By Curry Kirkpatrick

The Carolina soccer team posted its sixth victory of the season yesterday afternoon on Fetzer Field, nipping Lynchburg College in a 2-1 thriller.

The outcome was not decided until the last period, when with seven minutes remaining in the game, Herman Prakke lifted a beautiful corner kick three feet out from the goal, which wingman Peter Blake headed into the left side of the net.

Prakke had scored the Tar Heels' first and tying goal by converting George Beim's in-bounds kick with 10 seconds left in the first quarter. The Hornets from Lynchburg had gone out in front at the four-minute mark of the opening period on a freak play, which saw the ball ricochet off the leg of halfback John Kenrick into the Carolina goal.

Larry Steele, playing with a badly-bruised thigh, was a standout in the Tar Heel nets, especially in the crucial fourth quarter when he turned back twelve Lynchburg shots, including a penalty kick which would have tied the game.

Chancellor Speaks On Bond Issue

'It's Not Sufficient To Endorse The Status Quo,'—Aycock

An address by William B. Aycock, Chancellor of the University at Chapel Hill, in connection with the State-wide bond issue on Nov. 7.

The bond election to be held on November 7, 1961, will pass if the people of the State are adequately informed on the issues involved. The purpose of the state-wide bond election is to provide essential capital improvements for several state agencies and institutions. The ten items to be voted on involve an initial outlay of $61,665,000. But this is not the full picture.

Item 6 to provide $13,500,000 for the development of our ports in Wilmington and Morehead City is in reality a loan which is to be repaid from port receipts. Thus the ultimate expenditure from state tax sources will not be $61,665,000, but only $48,165,000.

Another important point is that several projects in item 3 (Higher Education) and item 4 (Community Colleges) must secure matching funds in order to qualify for support from the bond issue. Matching funds of not less than $12,200,000 will be required. Consequently, the total value of the capital improvements program is approximately $73,000,000 rather than $61,665,000. This program involving over 200 specific projects has been carefully screened by the Advisory Budget Commission and approved by the North Carolina General Assembly. The basic issue on November 7, 1961, is whether or not we concur in the judgment of our elected representatives in the need for a capital improvements program of $73,000,000 which will require an initial investment by the State of $61,665,000 but an ultimate tax expenditure of over $48,165,000.

Can the State of North Carolina afford this investment? It has been stated forthrightly by state officials that the credit rating of the State is high and that low interest rates on the bonds would be secured. Also it has been asserted that the present tax structure is broad enough to retire the bonds in an orderly manner without the necessity for a tax increase. Regardless of political or economic views we—as North Carolinians—must agree that members of the General Assembly and the executive branch of our State Government have through the years proved highly responsible in fiscal matters.

A bond issue for a growing State is comparable to borrowing by an individual with a growing family. A person with a good credit rating and a steady income often finds that the only feasible way to finance a new home or a growing business is to borrow. So it is with a growing and developing state. In the past when the people of North Carolina have invested in the future of the State, the decision proved to be a wise one.

Over two-thirds of the proposed capital improvements is for education in some form. Item 2 (State Training Schools), Item 3 (Higher Education), Item 4 (Community

Race Measure Tabled By SG

Financial Bill Is Withdrawn

A resolution which would have voiced support for complete racial integration of downtown theaters was tabled by Student Legislature Thursday night after considerable debate.

Although one of the theaters has admitted Negro students, there is no clear policy on the matter, Tim Tetlow, sponsor of the bill, said in debate.

The motion to table was made by Bill Whichard, a supporter of the bill who used the move to test the chances of the bill's passing. In effect, opponents of the bill voted to table, proving that had the bill been submitted for a vote it would have met defeat.

Controversial Bill

Another controversial proposal, to appropriate $300 to reimburse the Orientation Committee for a dance held this fall, was withdrawn by its sponsor, Bill Criswell.

The bill will be rewritten and submitted. In its new form the bill will state what funds the Orientation Committee will need to continue this year's programb. The proposal had been criticized by opponents who claimed that if passed in its original form the bill might indicate Legislative approval of spending funds and then expecting the body to meet the bills.

Asks $155

A bill asking for $155 for Student Government offices was returned for further study to the Finance Committee.

A bill which clarifies and expands the powers of the Rules Committee was passed by voice vote.

In other action at the session, Finance Committee Chairman Arthur Merrill announced a permanent weekly meeting time of 8:30 Mondays. Rules Committee will meet Monday at 5 p.m.

NEHRU HITS BOMB TESTS

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru said Saturday the resumption of Soviet nuclear tests was an evil thing and that it "is of the utmost importance to put an end to all nuclear tests by formal treaty."

The explosion of the big Soviet bomb "shocked us," he told reporters at London Airport where he arrived from India en route to the United States and talks this weekend at Newport, R. I., with President Kennedy.

CHANGES—Above is a map of proposed or under way additions to the University's facilities. The proposed student union and undergraduate library would be at the south end of Emerson Field. Cobb Dorm will be renovated to accommodate women students next fall. Franklin Street is at the top, and the two X-shaped buildings at lower center are the new six-story men's dormitories, to be ready for occupancy next fall.

Chemistry Grant Is Set Up

The R. O. E. Davis fellowship in chemistry has been established at UNC through a $10,000 bequest in the will of Mrs. R. O. E. Davis.

The fellowship was named for her husband, Royall Oscar Eugene Davis, recognizing his interest in sciences in the University here.

Mrs. Davis was the former Birdie Pickard, native of Chapel Hill and a graduate of the University in 1902. She died here June 25, 1961. She lived at the Carolina Inn several years after the death of her husband in 1949. They were married in Chapel Hill in 1906.

The fellowship, according to Chancellor William B. Aycock, will be awarded annually to a student who is adjudged as outstanding in chemistry.

Mr. Davis was a member of the class of 1901, and received the Ph.D. in chemistry in 1903. He taught chemistry at the University here and later became a chemist for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D. C.

FOURTH TERM

BONN — (UPI)—The Christian Democratic Party voted Saturday to join the Free Democrats in a coalition government. The move ensured the election of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer to a fourth term.

Fallout Shelters Panel Set Monday

The Chapel Hill-Durham Branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom will sponsor a panel discussion on the subject: "Fallout Shelters—Safety or Illusion?" from the WUNC-TV studio in Swain Hall on the UNC campus at 8:30 p.m. Monday.

The studio will accommodate from 75 to 100 persons and audience participation is invited.

Mrs. Wayne A. Bowers, chairman of this meeting, will introduce the following panel: Moderator, Dr. Donald Irish, formerly on the faculty at Ohio Wesleyan, and now at UNC working on a three-year Research Grant in the Institute for Research in Social Science.

Panel speakers, the Rev. Vance Barron, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church, who has had a long-standing interest in this question; Dr. Warner Lee Wells, professor of surgery at Memorial Hospital, who served with the Atomic Energy Commission in Hiroshima, Japan, from January 1950 to June 1952, and who translated the book "Hiroshima Diary" written by a Japanese doctor.

Dr. Emil Chanlett, Professor of Sanitary Engineering in the University, and Director of a Training Program for Radiological Health Specialists in the School of Public Health; and W. G. Wren of Hillsboro, Veterans' Service Officer for Orange County, as well as Director of Civil Defense for Orange County.

The public is invited to attend.

UNC Student Injured

UNC student Norwood G. Clark, Jr., 19, was admitted to N. C. Memorial Hospital with a badly bruised left arm yesterday authorities said, after he was struck by a car while crossing Raleigh street near Lewis Dorm.

Chapel Hill police said the accident, investigated by Campus Police Chief Arthur Beaumont, occurred shortly before 5 p.m.

Authorities said Clark, who lives at 204 Graham, apparently ran between a bus and a car into the traffic lane, where he was struck by a car driven by UNC student Zebulin Ward May. Police said no charges would be filed against the driver.

Hospital authorities said Clark is in satisfactory condition. They said X-rays showed his arm, although badly bruised and scraped, was not broken.

Music Group Honored

The local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia music fraternity was selected by its national office as the outstanding chapter in its province.

The award came last Tuesday at the province convention held here at UNC.

This plaque is the second in the past year for Alpha Rho chapter. At the fraternity's national convention in 1960, it was the winner of this area's manpower award. This area consists of chapters from South Carolina, Furman, William and Mary, East Carolina and Davidson.

The outstanding chapter award is for the past year, during which Jay Lambeth was president. Presiding now is Bob Greason, who is also president of the band.

Ben-Gurion's Aide Speaks Monday

Zvi (Harry) Zinder, public affairs advisor to Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion of Israel, will speak Monday night at 8 in Howell Hall.

Zinder, a native American and graduate of Northwestern University, will speak on "Turmoil in the Middle East."

Beginning in 1936, Zinder covered Palestine, Syria and Lebanon for AP, and later became Middle East war correspondent for Time and Life at its Cairo headquarters. During the war he covered both the China-Burma-India and European theatres of war.

On the eve of the establishment of the Jewish State of Israel, Zinder joined the staff of the Jewish Agency in Washington, which was to become the first Embassy of Israel. He remained at the Embassy until 1950 as Public Relations and Information Officer and later became Press and Public Relations Officer of the Israel Delegation to the UN.

Zinder returned to Israel in 1954 as Director of the Press and Information Office of the Government and served as Director of the Israel Broadcasting Service, establishing the country's modern broadcasting network.

At the end of 1960 he assumed the post of Adviser to the Prime Minister on Public Affairs.

A Basic Fallacy Of U.S. Conservatives

The conservative movement in this country is basically hypocritical. This hypocrisy at its core renders useless any contribution which the movement might make to our society.

Any conservative will tell you that his primary concern is with freedom—freedom of all kinds: economic freedom of the individdual, freedom from governmental control, political freedom.

Unfortunately, this is a lie. Every major segment of the conservative movement in the United States is either ignoring or actively restricting the freedom of our Colored citizens.

The conservatives only pay lip service to freedom. They work and talk in areas where freedom is already established. But they completely forget the most important area of freedom in this decade, perhaps this century; the freedom of the Negro American to live as a dignified human being.

Not only do they forget this freedom, they work against it.

This basic hypocrisy is not limited to any one segment of the conservative movement. It has been a part of the movement in past years; it is a part o fit today. It is true of the young conservatives and the old conservatives alike. It permeates all type of conservative organizations. It is expressed by political leaders such as Senator Goldwater and by citizen groups such as the John Birch society.

Look, for instance, at the work of John T. Flynn—an old-time conservative active in the forties. Flynn is the author of several booklets such as "The Roosevelt Myth." Flynn describes the "effort by the Negroes to destroy our institutions." He also says, "The depression and the rise of the Communist and New Deal Socialist wing in New York . . . made it possible for the socialist wing of the Democratic-Red alliance to capture the Negro votes. He claims that the drive for Negro voting rights is a plot by the "Socialist Planners."

Such views are not restricted to old conservatives. THE NEW GUARD, official publication of the Young Americans For Freedom (YAF), devoted an article in its August edition to an attack on the Congress of Racial Equality. YAF, too, claimed that CORE was full of Communists and Communist sympathizers.

The John Birch Society, the GESTAPO of the American conservative movement, has similar feelings. Stanley Mosk, State Attorney General of California, and his assistant Howard H. Jewel recently prepared a report on the John Birch Society for California Gov. Edmund G. Brown. They report stated, "Domestically, the John Birch Society opposes civil rights."

Not only is this prejudice against Negroe freedom and opportunity evident in citizen organizations. It manifests itself in political expressions of the conservatives. The same Southern governments who howl about state's rights pass laws making it almost impossible for Negroes to vote in their states. The same Southern governors who protest federal government encroachment of their economic freedom go out of their way to encroach upon the economic freedom of their Negro citizens.

Nor is this unconcern for colored freedom limited to the South. Senator Barry Goldwater, the fair-haired by of the conservative politicians, in his manifesto, "The Conscience of a Conservative," says, "It may be just or wise or expedient for Negro children to attend the same schools as white children, but they do not have a civil right to do so which is protected by the federal constitution, or which is enforcable by the federal government." Senator Goldwater says the states should decide this matter for themselves, which is to say Senator Goldwater may be sort of generally in a vague way for freedom of the Negroes, but is unwilling to do anything about it. He must realize that a Southern state left to decide this for itself will decide against freedom.

Conservatives have a just and legitimate point when they say that some integrationist organizations have Communist members. We will concede, for the sake of argument, that such organizations are undesirable. We will not concede that this should negate all efforts toward integration. If conservatives are truly interested in freedom, they should start an organization for Negro freedom and not allow it to become Communist controlled.

The conservative movement has something positive to offer our society. Many of its economic policies are valid, if not carried to a rabid extreme. But its policies of segregation—both latent and blatant—can reduce any positive influence its other views may have.

The hate-mongers and the rabid segrationists will support the conservatives in this. If the conservatives want this support, they are certainly welcome to it. Intelligent people, however, can learn something from the conservatives. They can, that is, if the conservatives shed their present cloak of segregation. This cloak hides any real offering which the conservatives can make.

We think it is fallacious, hypocritical and useless for U. S. conservatives to ally themselves with the segregationists. The plight of the Negro in our society offers a most important task to anyone truly interested in freedom.

We ask the TRUE conservatives to join with the TRUE liberals in this fight.

And this is not a vague idealistic platitude. Any true conservative and any true liberal will join or support the citizen's committee when and if it renews theater picketing next January.

'Fallout Shelters---Safety Or Illusion?'

TAKING a long, searching look at the nation's fallout shelter program, guided by astute political observer Charles A. Wells, is an unnerving experience.

According to Wells, editor and publisher of the newsletter "Between The Lines," the great civil defense drive sweeping the nation is accompanied by much deception and "promotion"—is, in general, unrealistic.

Wells' comprehensive and documented analysis—appearing in the Nov. 1 edition of the newsletter—has something other than its thought-provoking merit to commend its being reprinted here, however.

Monday, at 8:30 p.m., "Fallout Shelters—Safety or Illusion?" will be the subject of a panel discussion over WUNC-TV.

It will be interesting to compare the panel's findings with those of Mr. Wells, whose article follows.

—Garry Blanchard

IS IT CIVIL—IS IT DEFENSE?

The great civil defense drive, which we forecast early last summer, is now on full blast with more deception than anticipated—and some astonishingly demoralizing overtones. The military extremists continue to make much propaganda of the views of the one eminent scientist, Dr. Edward Teller, who accepts the extremist viewpoint—that the atom is just another weapon. Teller's fame is based on his discovery of the lithium hydride short-cut to the hydrogen bomb; otherwise he does not rank with the world's leading nuclear physicists who gave us the atomic age and who thoorughly disagree with Teller.

The truly great names, Leo Szilard, Niels Bohr, Hans Bethe, Max Born, Robert Oppenheimer, C. P. Snow and others are all convinced—as was Albert Einstein—that with the atom everything has changed—that human survival is doubtful in atomic war. But the public hears little of the other side of the story; meanwhile Teller continues to be widely quoted, often in fields where he is not qualified to speak—radiation, genetics, the engineering problems of bomb shelters, etc.

An inquisitive reporter, interviewing Teller, made the discovery that the scientist himself had not built a shelter for his own family!!!! He explained that in a metropolitan area like the San Francisco Bay region, a small shelter would offer scant protection. He advocates large community shelters, yet his statements are ballyhooed widely to promote small home shelters. (AP, Sept. 14.)

GROSS DECEPTION was practiced by Life magazine recently in a dramatic spread that pictured about 90 per cent of our population as surviving an atomic attack. The catch to that prognostication was that the Life report of the megatons presumed to have been hurled by the Russians equaled but a fraction of what U.S. tacticians would expect the Soviet to use. It is widely held in military circles that the Russians would never hit us unless they could strike with total target coverage, for that is our own strategic concept. Arthur T. Hadley's authoritative study on atomic war, "The Nation's Safety and Arms Control" (Viking), states that 140 million Americans would die in atomic attack, and that a full-scale civil defense shelter program could cut this figure more than half. But 60 to 70 million dead would mean at least 20 million more suffering from serious lingering afflictions caused by radiation—which still leaves the Life report sounding glib and irresponsible.

HERE ARE the high points of deception and obvious error in the shelter program as it is now being pushed:

- All scientists concede that no shelter small or large can protect life in the target area itself, for deep penetration and total destruction will include a diameter of 10 to 15 miles. In a study by the Washington Post (Oct. 1) on what would happen in the nation's capital under a nuclear assault, it is estimated that death and destruction would be total in such an area.
- For some additional distance the intense heat would seal and glaze over, melt, fuse or weld all non-inflammable enclosures and cremate all life within.
- Beyond this, for many more miles around, the fire storm and air blasts would do much damage, particularly affecting any ventilation system attached to an underground shelter—a most critical part of a shelter's mechanism. No shelter, no building, large or small, can be absolutely airtight under such circumstances. The enormous suction of air rising after the vacuum blast would pull air out of any enclosed area with tremendous suction force, the shelter itself thus becoming an air bomb. If the shelter did not split at the seams, then when the upward and outward rush of air reversed itself and the air rushed back into every crack and fissure, it would be air heavily laden with deadly radiation. This same process would be repeated during the subsequent fire storm. A structural engineer of note comments, "My conviction is that any shelter, large or small, for miles around an attack area will become a poison gas chamber by this process. We have no structural knowledge of ventilating systems that could cope with this problem—of which we know practically nothing."
- Beyond these dangers are the problems of water supply, food, medical care, etc., which are so mountainous that the public has been told nothing except the most vague generalities. The particulars are too startling and foreboding for public consumption. For instance, how do we go about burying 50 to 70 million dead whose bodies are in themselves repositories of death-dealing radiation? (In the accidental death of employees in a U.S. atomic plant recently, it was several days before the bodies could be touched.) And it is openly admitted that medicine and medical facilities will be so scarce that care will be given only to those who are able to get up and walk. What disciplines will be imposed when millions are desperately seeking to help and to save their families? Any account of those first days after the Hiroshima blast sheds light on these factors—suffering and sorrow so pitiful and extensive that one turns away from the half-read report to spare one's own composure.

THE LAW of primitive savage survival will obviously prevail. No one questions this. In fact the social and moral problems that survival entails have already burst upon us as Civil Defense spokesmen and shelter advocates openly speak of the right of the individual neighbors who have no shelter or whose shelter may be no longer operable. When a Roman Catholic editor, Rev. L. C. McHugh of the Jesuit monthly America, endorsed the right of the "Christian" householder to shoot his neighbors in the "name of Christ" to keep them out of the shelter, we have come full circle from the caveman to Golgotha and back to the cave. It is significant that a noted Jewish scholar, Rabbi Herbert Brichto, professor of Bible at the Hebrew Union Seminary of New York, was the first eminent religious leader to disagree. "The preparation . . . of such a shelter program . . . for the survival of a fraction of the human race is immoral. . . . We must put all our efforts into avoiding such a catastrophe."

* * *

MASS INSANITY would replace any overall strategy when half of our population began shooting at their neighbors to keep them out of shelters o rto secure and protect food and water supplies when the shelters or to secure and protect unrestrained savagery would serve the enemy's purpose more effectively than any psychological weapon that could be devised. So widespread is this acceptance of antagonism towards neighbors who might not have a shelter or whose shelters might become inoperable that hundreds of shelters are being built secretly—so the neighbors won't know about them! So report CD officials in some communities (N.Y. Herald-Tribune, Oct. 3.) Many contractors and building inspectors corroborate this.

TO SEE HOW FAR Dr. Teller's fanaticism has carried us, here are the words of Dr. J. M. Wolfe, director of Biology and Medicine of the Atomic Energy Commission, speaking at a symposium on radioecology (mand and his environment): "The effects of nuclear war on man would create vast areas that would be useless to the survival of man. Fallout shelters in many areas seem only a means of delaying death and represent only a part of the survival plan at best. With such an environment . . . the question is where does man go after his sojourn in shelters? What does he do upon emergence? Even if some semblance of civil order had been preserved (as is most unlikely in view of the appalling chaoos), the means of existence, heat, light, food, would be virtually non-existent." Why is not the public given these views from a first-rank authority serving the Government's atomic agency — instead of the perpetual re-hash of Teller's warped thinking?

THE FAST BUCK shelter promotion which fills the air everywhere reveals motives that are neither patriotic nor altruistic. Here is a building boom ready made, and every community is now to be swamped with sales promotion for "a little shelter of your own right off the furnace room—at prices ranging from $200 to $4000." The military extremists who dominate the Pentagon and have bewitched the President into this program are not presenting a scientifically prepared and carefully tested system of disaster protection, but are launching a helter-skelter shelter free-for-all which spurs unquestioned enthusiasms because the contractors, the lumber, cement, steel, glass and fiber industries, plus the banks (property improvement loans) see the shelter program as injecting new life in the prolonged war boom. And the war-is-inevitable military leaders see in the shelter program the chance to condition the public mind to accept the war-is-inevitable psychology, killing all interest and hope in building peace or promoting disarmament and strengthening international authority. Can it be that the Administration swings in behind the plan because it will guarantee prosperity for the next several years?

NO CIVIL DEFENSE in Europe, reports a Reuters dispatch on Oct. 3. "Americans 5000 miles from the Iron Curtain are digging out shelters, knocking down the walls in their basements, while Europeans within sight of the Russian rocket sites have no shelters, no evacuation plans, no active civil defense plans and aren't looking for any."

Europeans visiting the U.S. think Americans have gone daft. In Russia the civil defense program is a rarely publicized systematic program carried on as part of the Soviet Army and Air Force activities. Having suffered 17 million casualties in World War II, it is to be expected that this generation of Russians would have plans for protecting their population, should war come again. But there is none of the rash, high pressure publicity that we have here. There have been several distorted reports in the American press about the Russian civil defense program, playing up what they are doing and ignoring what they are not doing. The N.Y. Times Moscow observer, Theodore Shabad, reported on Aug. 25 that in Russia there are no public air raid drills comparable to those in the U.S., that Russian city streets have no signs pointing to shelters; newspapers and radios do not publicize civil defense information. In Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev, subway systems provide ready-made shelters with little more beyond that. A manual is available for the adult population, dealing with defense problems involving chemical, radioactive and bacteriological attack.

DTH Forum

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank you for your publication of my suggestions concerning the constitutional amendments and the Sunday supplement for the Tar Heel. These issues, however, pertain to the whole student body. I would like to set forth briefly my program as it pertains particularly to the freshman class.

Clearly one of the main problems is the lack of social life for the majority of freshmen. To act on this matter I will, if elected, attempt to arrange several class dances during the year, with girls from Woman's College. On a smaller scale, I shall work with the dorm presidents to arrange dances between the men's and women's dorms on campus.

I also feel definite action can be taken concerning the freshmen and scholastic affairs. Study conditions in the dorms are vastly improved this year through the more vigorous action of the I.D.C., but matters are still far from ideal. I would make a determined effort to get ample classrooms open all night in which freshmen can study. The number available now is insufficient and most are closed by 11 p.m.

ANOTHER WORTHWHILE endeavor for freshmen to undertake in this regard wouud be to sponsor a class scholarship. It could be financed by class contributions and set up so that all freshmen would be eligible to apply.

An additional project which I strongly support is the establishment of a teaching award whereby the freshmen could honor one teacher for his outstanding contribution to the education of their class.

Finally, I wish to help draw the whole class into a fuller realization of and participation in state and national affairs. The best current example is the state bond issue, to which all freshmen can contribute by informing their friends and relatives across the state of its importance; but the same type of occasion will often present itself in the future.

It appears to me that such a program would be of clear benetfit to the entire freshman class, and is within the power of an efficiently functioning freshman cabinet. To me, this platform is far more realistic and would be much more effective than the dark abolition threats of Mr. Jeff Bayer.

To the Editor:

The HUAC debate in Carroll Hall was a most successful function in that it created what appeared to be a near-even split in opinion.

The disappointing aspect was that so many people seemed to have made up their minds before they had heard either speaker or even seen the film. The confusing amount of propaganda that has been circulated has not made it easy to form the mature opinion that both speakers recommended.

One sensed, however, that the film was not quite as inmacurate as most people expected. Fulton Lewis was not the "witch-hunter," but rather an articulate law student who had clear and reliable information to back up his opinions. On the other hand Harrington presented his argument crudely and appealed, in rather an amateurish way, to the predetermined attitudes of the body present. He was right in thinking that the majority supported him and he appealed to their emotions instead of their reason.

I contend that Lewis was successful in that he provided more logical reasons to support his argument that were verifiable. If one is basing one's opinions on emotional appeal, Harrington clearly won. Since when do normal college students base their opinions on this premise?

Dear Mr. King:

After looking over the slates of class officers nominated by the two campus political parties, it was with very great alarm that I realized that of the fifteen candidates nominated by the University Party not one is a non-Greek. On the other hand, the Student Party has chosen to sponsor candidates from dorm, fraternity, and sorority—all-campus candidates.

Since this situation is by no means unique this fall, it can only be concluded that either the UP has little or no all-campus representation at its nominating conventions or that UP does not believe in sponsoring leadership for all the campus and representative of all the campus. Perhaps both of these factors explain the situation.

However, the Student Party has recognized that leadership of quality and excellence exists in all areas of the campus and that representation is the heart of class offices. Obviously the Student Party is the only party that has given the campus slates of representative officers.

With the expanded role for all class officers proposed by so many during the current campaign, it is imperative that we all select persons who can reflect accurately and wisely the quality and diversity of individual classes. Only the Student Part yhas offered all-campus, representative class officers.

Refunds Made On Free Bookcovers

Students who paid 15 cents for A. H. Robbins bookcovers at the Book Exchange during the opening weeks of the school year may have their money refunded, it was announced yesterday.

H. R. Ritchie, general manager of the Book Exchange, said the covers had been given to the Book Exchange free of charge and sold because of a clerical error.

"This occurred during our rush season when we had several new people working for us who did not know the covers were free," Ritchie said.

Colad Company, Inc. of Buffalo, N. Y. manufactured the covers as free advertising material. The Company also produces non-advertising bookcovers which are to be sold.

Ritchie said the mixup occurred because the "Colad people shipped both types under the same label."

New York Seminar

All student's interested in the UN Seminar trip to New York, sponsored by the Collegiate Council of the UN have been asked to return their applications to the "Y" by 5 p.m. Monday. No applications will be accepted after this date.

The Seminar will leave Chapel Hill by chartered bus at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 22, and will return Sunday evening, Nov. 26.

All students selected to attend will be notified Friday by campus mail.

Colleges), Item 5 (Archives and History and the State Library), Item 10 (Agricultural Research), all constitute a part of our educational system. Moreover, a part of Item 7 (Mental Institutions) will go for facilities essential for a program of education to rehabilitate many of our mentally ill and thus make it possible for them to become productive citizens. One of the brightest chapters in North Carolina's history during the Twentieth Century is the giant steps which have been taken to care for our mentally sick. Expanded facilities for rehabilitation and custodial care are essential to future progress.

A discussion of each of the projects is not possible. However, brief mention of the needs of the University at Chapel Hill is typical of the needs in the other institutions and agencies. On October 12, 1961, the University observed its 168th birthday. Since observing its 163rd birthday five years ago, the enrollment has increased 2,044 students or an increase of over 500 a year for the past four years. If the annual increase had been the same since the founding of the University, the enrollment would be approximately 80,000 today rather than 9,080. In the context of the rapid growth which has already occurred and impending further growth, the need for a cafeteria, an undergraduate library-student union, an addition to Wilson Hall (Zoology), an addition to the Health Center, an expansion of the heating plant and renovations to a classroom building and a dormitory is apparent. The same is true in other educational institutions and agencies covered in the bond issue.

Item 1 (Capital Area Buildings—new facilities for state employees) would eliminate substandard and in some instances hazardous quarters for many of our state employees in the Capital City. Furthermore, an annual outlay of approximately $70,000 for leased space would be eliminated. Item 8 (Local Hospital Construction) would provide assistance to local communities to qualify for Medical Care Commission matching funds and thereby make provision for some of the 3,000 hospital beds needed now.

The underlying purpose of this bond election is to enable the State to move another step forward in the development of its resources. To expand the ports at Wilmington and Morehead City is to utilize more effectively some of our water resources. To spend less than $1,000,000 (Item 9) to protect our 17,000,00 acres of forest land valued at more than a billion dollars and to improve the facilities in our dozen state parks is another example of wisely investing in an important natural resource. Most of the funds, however, constitute an investment in our human resources. North Carolina's most realistic hope for future greatness lies in the investment of a significant part of its material wealth in our vast human resources.

These are difficult times. It is not sufficient to endorse the status quo or to find security in past achievement. Rather it is an opportune time to express faith in ourselves, in our institutions and in our future. True, a favorable vote for this bond issue will not solve all the capital improvement needs in all areas in our State. But a vote for it is a tangible way to support a program which provides for orderly progress in many areas in a growing and developing State. On the othe hand, a vote against this modest but essential program will unnecessarily delay the orderly progress which is now evident. One test of the quality of our educational system is the extent to which we comprehend the significance of our acts. I am confident that a sufficient number of North Carolinians will pause, ponder, and reflect on the significance of their vote. If so, the outcome on November 7th will be favorable.

Tar Heels Score Late To Nip Tennessee, 22-21

Farris-Marslender Pass Scores 3rd TD

By Harry W. Lloyd
DTH Sports Editor

North Carolina reached deep into its bag of tricks while the time was quickly slipping away here yesterday and scored a breathtaking 28-yard touchdown and a two-point conversion to whip Tennessee, 22-21.

With 15 seconds remaining and the Tar Heels standing on the brink of defeat, quarterback Ray Farris threw deep into the near right corner of the Tennessee end zone. Halfback Ward Marslender went high into the air and pulled in the missile for the touchdown as some 35,000 fans in Kenan Stadium screamed their approval.

Halfback Gib Carson, who ran brilliantly all afternoon and amassed 121 yards on the ground, took a swing pass from Farris for the all-important two points conversion.

The Tar Heels had moved ahead at halftime by 14-7 on the flashy running of Carson and fullback Bob Elliott. However, the visiting Volunteers smoothed the kinks out of their deceptive single wing offense in the third period and moved to take a 21-14 lead on a 29-yard runback of an intercepted pass by center Mike Lucci and a 13 yard pass from wingback Mallon Faircloth to end Mike Stratton.

Bowden Wyatt's orange-shirted troopers appeared to be driving for a clinching score late in the game after taking over on their own 33 with 5:31 remaining. The Tar Heels were penalized 15 yards for a foul on a hard tackling play. Third string fullback Marty Baracca took a pair of reverses for 10 and 11 yards to give the Vols a first down on the Tar Heel 20.

Wingback Hubert McClain carried to the 17, but on the next play, Carolina's Joe Craver threw tailback Glenn Glass for a four yard loss. Baracca picked up 6, giving the Tennesseans a fourth-and-five situation on the 23. Kicking specialist George Shuford attempted a field goal from the 31 which dropped short just below the goal posts. There remained a minute and 21 seconds to be played when Carolina regained ball possession at the 20.

Deep in their own territory and with the time their biggest enemy, the Tar Heels had but one weapon to rely on—the throwing arm of Ray Farris. After one incomplete pass, Farris hit end Steve Yates in the flat for an 11-yard gain, and then connected with Bob Lacey for eight.

After another incomplete pass came the crucial play. With fourth and two on the 31, Farris faded back looking for a deep receiver, but he found none. Just before the rugged Tennessee linemen converged on him, he slipped a soft pass to his safety-valve, Carson, who grabbed the ball behind the line of scrimmage and scooted to the Volunteer 43 before being tackled. At this point, the Tennessee defenders were guilty of roughness, and the visitors were penalized 15 yards to the 28.

On first down from the 28, Farris threw down the sideline for sophomore halfback Dave Henry, who had just entered the game. Henry cut inside, but was well covered by halfback Charles Wyrick and couldn't reach the ball.

On the next play, Farris called a similar play, but Marslender was the deep receiver. Marslender, who earlier in the game had made a diving catch to keep a touchdown drive going, broke down the right sideline, cut outside, and went into the air with the same Wyrick. The Carolina receiver, who last year was competing with Farris for the quarterback spot, outfought the Tennessean for the ball and tumbled to the ground with the pigskin in his possession, thereby scoring the third UNC touchdown.

As coach Jim Hickey later explained, the Tar Heels had no other thought but to go for the dangerous two point try from three yards out. With Carson in motion to the right and flankers wide to both sides, Farris took the snap and faked to fullback Elliott. He turned and looked for both of his flankers, and found both of them covered. After making a head feint toward the goal as if he were going to run, he passed for Carson, who was dashing for the goal line. Carson took the ball without breaking stride and plunged ahead for the winning score.

The Tar Heels, who won their fourth game of the year against two losses, broke open a vicious running attack early in the contest. On the first series after the opening kickoff, they drove 67 yards in eight plays for the score. The key play of this series was a 40-yard dash by Carson which carried the ball to the Tennessee two yard line. Elliott was stopped at the one on the next play, and then Farris sneaked over the middle for the touchdown. Elliott booted the extra point with 11:08 left in the first quarter.

The Blue and White appeared to be on the way to another score on the next series of downs until halfback Jimmy Addison was hit hard and fumbled on the Tennessee 30.

On the first Vol play, tailback Glenn Glass faked a reverse to his fullback and took off down the right sideline. He went 60 yards before Addison and Lacey conspired to pull him down at the Carolina 11. Carolina came within inches of stopping this threat as the Volunteers couldn't score in four plays. But they did the next best thing, picking up a first down inside the one yard line. Fullback Jack Nichols then hurdled over for the score, and Garry Cannon kicked the point to tie the game.

Carolina moved back to take the lead on an 80-yard sustained drive after this kickoff. It took 17 plays to cover the distance, and the Tar Heels picked up six first downs along the route. Plays featured in this drive were a 10 yard burst by Carson, the 14-yard diving catch by Marslender, and two seven yard slices by the never-say-die Carson. Bob Elliott burst over from four yards away and then added his eighth point of the day on the extra point to push the Heels ahead by 14-7.

Jim Hickey's boys threatened again before the half was over. Joe Davies recovered a fumble on the 50. Farris then hit halfback Roger Smith with a wide pass to the left. Smith almost broke free, but was pulled down at the 17. Three running plays from here gained but five yards, and then Elliott tried a field goal from the 18. The attempt was short, and there were no more scoring threats in the first half.

The Volunteers took the kickoff and were moving well until Faircloth fumbled on fourth and 2 at the Carolina 22 and Junior Edge recovered for UNC. On third down after two non-gaining plays, Farris passed over the middle. The ball ended up in the arms of the alert Mike Lucci, and the Tennessee linebacker was able to rot into the end zone unmolested for the tieing score.

The Tar Heels punted for the first time in the game on the next series. Tennessee took over at the 22, and moved for the leading score in seven plays, which included a 21 yard dash by Glass, a 10-yard run by Faircloth, a nine yard scamper by Nichols, and a 15-yard penalty against UNC. The first play of the fourth quarter was a 13-yard pass from Faircloth to Stratton which earned the score.

The teams then exchanged punts before Carolina's desperate drive stalled on the Tenessee 32 with three consecutive incomplete passes. The Vols then began their drive and missed the field goal, allowing the Tar Heels to take over and march for the winning score in the last minute.

The Tar Heels played without the services of tackle Tony Hennessey, who sprained an ankle last Monday. Steve Serenko, who was also injured Monday but recovered quickly, opened at left tackle and played all the game with the first unit.

Partisan Carolina Crowd Storms Field Before Finish

By Curry Kirkpatrick

It was Carolina's day in Kenan Stadium. Dame Fortune finally smiled down on the Tar Heels, as they squeaked past the University of Tennessee 22-21, in what will go down in history as one of the most thrilling games ever witnessed in Chapel Hill.

Only last week, the Tar Heels had gone down to a heartbreaking 10-0 defeat at the hands of Miami in a mud-splattered contest in the Orange Bowl. But yesterday, it was a different story as Jim Hickey's warriers refused to give up. Down 21-14, with a minute and six seconds remaining in the game, Ray Farris guided the fired-up Tar Heels 80 yards to pay dirt, and then flipped a pass into the right flat, which Gib Carson carried over for the deciding two points only 15 seconds from the final whistle.

Carolina supporters, in a frency over the fabulous drive, rushed wildly onto the field, and the game had to be halted momentarily while University policemen ushered the enthusiasts to the sidelines.

The capacity crowd of 35,000, who witnessed the cliff-hanger under threatening rain clouds, was treated not only to a very exciting football game, but also to a beautiful pageant of color and sound.

During halftime, the UNC Marching Tar Heels were hosts to bands of 56 high schools from all parts of the state, here in observance of the University of North Carolina's annual "Band Day." The nearly 3700 muscians, decked out in all colors of the rainbow, made a spectacular sight as they covered the entire ground area of the stadium. Performing in unison under the direction of Earl Slocum, conductor Emeritus of the UNC Band and Professor of Music here at the University, the bands put on a splendid show, including in their concert and excerpts from Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel."

Saturday's thriller brought to an end a series which goes back to 1893. Carolina's win yesterday marked their tenth victory in the rivalry. Tennessee has won 20 of these over the years and the two teams have tied once. The Volunteers are now 3-3 on the season, while the Tar Heels, who face another tough encounter next week against powerful L.S.U., stand at 4-2.

Hickey: Our Most Satisfying Game

By ED DUPREE

"I don't believe I've ever had a more satisfying win," exclaimed UNC Coach Jim Hickey, after his team's last second 22-21 upset victory over the Vols from Tennessee.

Referring to the touchdown drive which saw his Tar Heels travel 80 yards in 66 seconds the Carolina mentor said, "That's the first time our 'two-minute offense' had paid off."

Hickey explained that they had worked on the quick touchdown play quite a bit during the past three seasons, but this is the first time that it had won a game for UNC.

Another first was Carolina's two-point conversion which gave the Blue and White their 22-21 lead with only 15 seconds remaining on the clock. "We've worked on that play quite a bit — usually every Thursday," Hickey added, "but that's the first time we've used it."

Gib Carson, the man who scored the two-pointer on a pass play from Ray Farris, was praised by Hickey for his outstanding play. "This is the best football game Carson's ever played for Carolina," the tired Tar Heel coach remarked.

LeCompte Best

When asked if he thought Tar Heel co-captain Jim LeCompte's play was below par today, Hickey had a quick rebuttal. "LeCompte's the best lineman in this conference. I don't think he's ever had a bad game.

Hickey's thoughts then turned to the weather—the 78 degree November afternoon was easily one of the biggest problems during the hotly contested game. "This was a hard day to play. One of the toughest jobs we had was keeping fresh substitutions in the game—but maybe that's what won the game for us."

"I've never seen North Carolina stronger than we were in the first half. The blocking was sharp and the offense moved real well."

The Tar Heel coach, likeable in either victory or defeat, thought the warm weather wore out both teams. "We were real tired in that last half, but then so were his (Wyatt's) boys.

When asked when he really thought his team would score the final marker, Hickey countered with: "I thought we could get it all the time, but I guess I'd have to say that the first down and 15-yard penalty was the turning point."

"This makes five good games we've played now," added Hickey. "I'd like to think that this game could be the making of a good team. It's the easiest team to coach in the world.

"This Tennessee team has tremendous speed. But our ends did a real good job, at times, stopping their backs. We found their single wing tough as the devil to stop.

Hennessey Didn't Play

"One thing—Hennessey (injured with a sprained ankle) didn't even play. We worried about that, but Serenko did a real good job—he played the whole game on the first unit and he had a bad ankle too."

Hickey said that his team had two rough games coming up, but when the scores of the Virginia-South Carolina and Wake Forest-Auburn games were relayed to him he laughed and said, "Make that four tough games."

"Next week?" Hickey asked in response to another question. "I haven't even thought about next week." But it's a safe bet that he knows who is on his schedule!

Wyatt Wished 2-Pointer Had Come Earlier

By Harry W. Lloyd

Tennessee Coach Bowden Wyatt took a couple of long drags off his filter cigarette before looking up to face the questions of the small crowd of reporters waiting outside the dressing room door.

Wyatt, wringing with perspiration, tried to loosen his collar to cool himself from the unusual November heat, but his collar was already loose and his black knit tie was dangling out of shape. Although the heat of the battle was over, Wyatt continued to perspire. His sweaty face gave one the impression that he had been crying a little.

"That boy that made the catch for the touchdown should have been covered," he said. "But he wasn't. It was a great throw Farris made."

The defeated coach, who suffered his third loss of the season against a like number of wins, still gave credit to his own boys. "Both teams deserved to win this one," he admitted. "The second half showed a good effort by both clubs.

"That roughness penalty late in the game really hurt us."

Student Peace Union Insignias Make Appearance On Campus

Several Student Peace Union insignias have been painted upon buildings on campus in recent weeks. In the picture to the right, a SPU symbol has been painted onto the gun in front of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps armory.

Other Peace Union symbols have been found on an Air Force ROTC annex building, on the side of Old West dormitory, and on a side of the YM-YWCA building.

Campus police officials have not caught any of the persons responsible for the middle-of-the-night writings.

The Peace Union symbol at the Air Force ROTC building was accompanied by a painted "Ban the Bomb."

International Group

The Student Peace Union is an international organization with major branches in Britain and France. The group is dedicated to the easing of East-West tension and the abolishment of nuclear weapons by all powers.

Peace Union groups have been demonstrating in mass in London recently in protest against Russian nuclear testing.

N.C. Votes Today On Bonds; Issue Is Expected To Pass

Sanford Makes Eleventh-Hour Passage Appeal

From DTH Wire Reports

Governor Terry Sanford made an eleventh-hour appeal for approval of the $61.7 million state bond issue and expressed confidence that voters would approve the issue at the polls today.

In a special statement Sunday, he said, "our state has a tradition of progress and I cannot see any reason for us to turn back now." In a press conference earlier in the week, the governor appeared more cautious, saying that chances for the bond issue were "very good."

Sanford also stated that "the need for these capital improvements has been established without a doubt. The state is in a sound financial condition and these bond issues fit into our long-established program of bond retirement with no change in our taxes.

"Sound Issues"

"These bond issues are sound. They provide improvements that our growing state must have. These improvements can be paid for as they are being used. These bonds mean progress in the best North Carolina tradition."

The issue is divided into 10 propositions, each of which is to be voted on separately. Educational institutions would receive about $31 million to be used for dormitory construction, classrooms, paving, land and other improvements. Also included in the issue are funds for improvements at state mental hospitals, community colleges, new state office buildings, the Medical Care Commission for aid to local hospital construction, agricultural research and the State Library. $13.5 million are earmarked for expansions in state ports facilities in Wilmington and Morehead City.

"All Children"

Passage of the issue, said the governor, does not end the state's all-out push for "quality education." This program, he stressed, is geared for all children regardless of their talents, and is definitely not for "the exceptionally talented children who might become scientists."

Sanford pointed out that the job was not finished when the General Assembly approved the bond issue referendum. Local support would play an important role in the future of the program. Although the legislature passed a monumental educational program, the governor said the "final responsibility rests with the students themselves."

GUBERNATORIAL APPEAL. Governor Terry Sanford made an eleventh-hour appeal to the people of North Carolina for the passage of the state Bond Issue today. UNC has a large share in the Issue. Voters are expected by most observers to pass the issue today.

Aycock And Friday Ask UNC Support

By JOHN MEDLIN

Voters today will pass judgment on the $61.7 million statewide bond issue, which includes $5.9 million for UNC capital improvements.

Almost half of the $61.7 million are earmarked for improvements at state educational institutions: Of this $31.6 million, the Consolidated University will receive nearly $13.5 million for capital expenditures. Outstanding are plans for a new student center and separate undergraduate library, and an addition to the health center.

Since its passage by the state legislature in the spring, the bond issue has been the subject of much discussion and publicity. Recently a trans-state marathon was run by state university students in support of the issue, urging voters to show their approval at the polls Tuesday.

"Orderly Progress"

In a recent address, Chancellor William B. Aycock of UNC firmly endorsed the issue, saying, "A vote for it is a tangible way to support a program which provides for orderly progress in many areas in a growing and developing state. On the other hand, a vote against this modest but essential program will unnecessarily delay the orderly progress which is now evident."

The Chancellor claimed that it was "not sufficient to endorse the status quo or to find security in past achievement."

The bond issue is broken into 10 separate proposals. The third of these allocates $31 million to state educational institutions. With its share of the money, UNC plans to make an addition to the health center at a cost of about $2 million; build a new student center and undergraduate library ($4.6 million); and make additions to the heating plant and steam piping system ($1.3 million).

Improvements

Also included are plans for improvements on the cafeteria and service building, remodeling Cobb dorm for its conversion to a girls' residence, renovation of Phillips Hall, paving for driveways and parking lots, and an addition to Wilson Hall, the Zoology building.

State College will receive a total of about $4.7 million to be used for new buildings, remodeling, landscaping and air conditioning of the library. The Agricultural Experiment Station will receive $240,000 of State's allotment.

Woman's College in Greensboro is to receive almost $3 million, if the issue passes. These funds will be used to renovate dormitories and make various additions to existing buildings. Two dormitories will be constructed, half of the cost to be taken from the bond issue funds.

Other Portions

The remainder of the funds, about $31 million, will be divided among the following categories:

1. Capital area buildings—$2.8 million.
2. State training schools—$1.1 million.
4. Community colleges—$1.4 million.
5. Archives and History and State Library Building—$2.5 million.
6. State ports—$13.5 million.
7. State mental institutions—$7.4 million.
8. Local Hospital construction—$.5 million.
9. Natural resources conservation and development—$.9 million.
10. State Agricultural Research stations—$.8 million.

Weavers Come To Duke Show This Thursday

The Weavers, considered by some as one of this country's best folk singing ensembles, will present "Folk Songs Around the World" at Duke University, Thursday.

Appearing at 8:15 p.m. in the Indoor Stadium, they are sponsored by the Major Attractions Committee of the Duke Student Union.

Members of the group are vocalists Miss Ronnie Gilbert and Lee Hays, guitarist Fred Hellerman and banjor player Erik Darling.

"Good Night Irene," "On Top of Old Smokey" and "Kisses Sweeter Than Wine" are only three of the favorites waxed by the Weavers throughout the country, Canada, Europe and Israel.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at Kemp's Record Shop in Chapel Hill and will be available at the door of the Indoor Stadium the night of the performance.

Urban Renewal Discussion Held

"Problems and Prospects in Urban Renewal" will be discussed by Carl Feiss, city planning and urban renewal consultant, this Wednesday.

The public is invited to his speech at 8 p.m. in the Morehead Faculty Lounge.

Feiss has been active in planning and urban renewal since 1934.

He is a former staff adviser to the Eisenhower Committee on Housing Policies and Programs, and the Chief of the Division of Slum Clearance and Urban Redevelopment

Times' Editor Matthews To Talk On Cuba

Herbert Matthews of the New York Times will speak on "Recent Events in Cuba" at 8:00 p.m., Friday in Howell Hall Auditorium.

The event is sponsored by the International Relations Committee of the YM-YWCA and Pi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary. The public is invited.

Matthews is the author of a recent book, "The Cuban Story," which deals with the nature of the Cuban revolution.

He has been with the Times since 1922 as a reporter, foreign editor, and war correspondent. In 1949 he became a member of the editorial staff of the Times.

He is the author of several books on contemporary history. Among them are: "Eyewitness in Abyssinia;" "Two Wars and More to Come;" "The Fruits of Fascism;" "Assignment to Austerity;" "The Yoke and the Arrow."

His autobiography is entitled "The Education of a Correspondent."

A bill to appropriate part of the expenses for Matthew's speech will be considered by the student legislature Thursday.

Outsiders Blamed For Student Riots

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) University of Virginia officials blame outsiders for Sunday's rioting by 500 young people who finally had to be quelled by 50 police officers using tear gas.

University President Edgar F. Shannon Jr. banned all future "open" fraternity parties in an effort to prevent future disorders. Anyone can come to the traditional parties.

About 500 persons, many joyous because of a surprise football victory over South Carolina Saturday, milled around Fraternity Row in the small hours Sunday but soon poured into a city street and blocked it with a bonfire and ropes.

When police arrived, they were bombarded with rocks, beer cans and bottles.

Officers called for state police reinforcements, but by the time they arrived, five persons had received minor injuries, 21 were arrested, a car was burned and two other cars—one a squad car—molested.

Dean B. F. D. Runk insisted the riot was not connected with a similar disorder last Thursday when several hundred students were dispersed by tear-gas for protesting a Thanksgiving holiday of only one day.

Runk noted that most of those arrested were not Virginia students. Two said they were from Washington and Lee, two from Hampton-Sydney and others from various other colleges.

HOMECOMING QUEEN

Midnight tonight is the deadline for entries for Carolina Homecoming Queen, Bob Bilbro, chairman of the Student Athletic Council announced yesterday.

The Queen chosen in judging Wednesday and Thursday will be announced Saturday at halftime of the UNC-LSU game. Judging will begin with a reception in Alderman Dorm Wednesday at 3:30 p.m.

Any group may enter as many girls as it would like, Bilbro said. Names and a $4.00 entry fee for each girl should be turned into Kay Mixon at the Chi Omega house before late hours.

South African Liberal Talks On Apartheid

A former Liberal member of the South African parliament will speak in Howell Hall Wednesday at 3 p.m. on the "Crisis in South Africa."

Leslie Isidore Rubin, 52, is in North Carolina to speak here and Woman's College in Greensboro, where he will be today.

From tonight through Thursday he will be in Chapel Hill.

His talk Wednesday will be sponsored by the Carolina Forum and will be an informal discussion session.

Rubin represented the African peoples from 1954-60 in the South African parliament. In January of last year he resigned to become senior lecturer at the University College of Ghana (west Africa.)

The author of five books on African affairs, Rubin is currently on an American lecture tour.

Missing Artist

People lose many things, but how many people have ever lost an artist? Mrs. "Mac," proprietress of Harry's has.

Some time ago the lady art patron loaned out a square foot of wall space to the elusive artist on which to hang his picture of a bird. The little bird, done in red oil on a black and grey oil background, apparently has been forgotten. "It's been so long I don't even know whose it is," she said, "And there's no name on it."

This week a customer walked in to Harry's seemingly intrigued by the painting and asked to buy it. No one knew to whom it belonged and so the little bird remains on the wall until the artist comes to claim it.

Rocky Speaker

MORGANTON (UPI)—Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, a leading Republican candidate for the presidential nomination in 1964, will be the featured speaker at a North Carolina GOP fund-raising dinner Dec. 14.

Parking Cars Registrations Key Problem

Unregistered cars and students parking in the already - crowded staff parking areas are the two key campus automobile problems.

"We've been lenient about parking tickets," sai dSafety Officer Arthur J. Beaumont, "because we realize that parking is difficult here."

"We've issued as many staff stickers as there are spaces and we can't have students parking there too," he said.

Under a new rule, five tickets will send a student's car home, with a letter to his parents. (One car was sent home just last week.)

A warning letter is sent to students when they get their fourth ticket, and their cases are reviewed after the fifth ticket before any action is taken.

Students may park in the Bell Tower lot, many of the lots adjoining the dorms and in the unpaved lot on Pittsboro St. across from the Tri Delt house.

It is against University rules for a student to "own or operate a car in or around Chapel Hill" without registering it in the Dean of Student Affairs' office.

"We are going to start a drive on unregistered cars," said Rudy Edwards, assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs. "We will make a full-scale, full-range check on them."

"When we find one, we automatically drop the student from the university, forcing him to pay a late registration fee to get back in.

Judo Instructor Finds American Boys Quick To Learn 'Philosophical' Sport

By FRAN GOINS

"American boys are stronger than I expected," said UNC's first judo instructor, Hideo Kusama. "They are tall, big fellows and can pick up judo quickly."

The Japanese exchange student teaches about 50 students in the first judo course to become a regular part of the physical education curriculum.

"As an instructor, I feel responsible to teach the correct judo as a ceremonial and philosophical sport," said Hideo, a graduate student in political science with an eye on the diplomatic service.

"I teach the original Japanese judo, and I am very much interested in the criticisms of my American students."

Judo Adapted

Hideo would like to see judo adapted to American culture. "Judo may be as popular in the United States as baseball is in Japan," he said.

Slight 5'5" Hideo has earned the black belt, the highest rank in judo. After training for three years for the black belt, he demonstrated his knowledge and skill before a panel of judges in Kodokan, Tokyo, center of Japanese judo.

He gave his first classes in the eight-week course their practical final examination yesterday.

One of Hideo's students, Bill Freune, a junior from Washington, D. C., commented, "It's fun, but it's hard. I can't go playing around with a guy who doesn't know what he's doing."

Falling Practice

"It teaches you how to fall," Bill said, but looking down at the blacktopped "Y" court, he preferred a mat.

According to Hideo, Americans misunderstand judo and confuse it with jujitsu and karate. Judo is a sport; jujitsu and karate are means of defense. He teaches all three to demonstrate the difference to his students. A highly flexible sport, judo requires more time to learn.

"People are proud of a judo man and scared of a jujitsu or karate man," explained Hideo.

Compared to wrestling, judo is more relaxed. The competitor plays with his partner, waiting for the best timing and calculating the best method. Then with sudden fury, he whips into action, usnig "all his energies."

Physical Discipline

"Judo is valuable because it is a physical discipline. It makes responsible people and gives them more confidence," Hideo said. "I highly recommend it for Carolina students," but it's "a little rough for coeds."

The International Olympic Association has recognized judo as a world-wide sport. The first judo tournament is expected to be held in the 1964 Tokyo Olympic Games.

Hideo thinks the "United States will make a very good showing because judo is becoming more and more popular."

As a Japanese exchange student, he feels a responsibility to reflect the Japanese culture. Hideo has also lectured on Japanese flower arrangements and demonstrated the tea ceremony.

New classes will begin Nov. 13 and will be held on Monday and Wednesday, 1-3 p.m. and Tuesday and Thursday, 11 a.m.-1 p.m., continuing for eight weeks.

JUDO. Jon Hembree, left, practices judo with instructor Hideo Kusama. Kusama says that American students are stronger than he expected and quick to learn the sport of Japan. He hopes Judo might become as popular here as baseball is in Japan.

Ferrante And Teicher Come Here Tonight

Graham Memorial Activities Board will present, "Ferrante and Teicher Flip Their Lids" in Memorial Hall tonight at 8 p.m.

There will be no charge for UNC students with I.D. cards.

Dates will be admitted for $1.

Starting at 7:50 p.m., if space permits, the doors will be opened to the faculty and general public for $2.

Ferrante and Teicher are best known for their million sellers, "Exodus" and "Theme from the Apartment." The two artists combine pop classics with show tunes and their own arrangements of such popular composers as Gershwin, Rodgers, Kern and Porter.

Foreign Policy

Today's Cassandras seem bent on leading every American to the inevitable conclusion that the West is not only losing the cold war, it is doing absolutely nothing about it.

The West, we are told by almost every pundit capable of pushing a typewriter key, is fast losing its prestige, its military status, its internal security and, above all, its nerve.

By some misapplied logical exercise, we are expected to conclude that because the communists have vowed to conquer the world, they are necessarily going to do it. In any given encounter, if the West does not come out 100 per cent victorious, "the West has lost again to the inexorable communist juggernaut."

Analysis after analysis washes over the American people telling them that we are undergoing a steady retreat. Disasters, naturally, make better fodder for newspapers, radio, television and magazine analyses than successes, but this is only half the reason for doomsday prophesies. Part of the basis for the depressing picture painted by news media is attitude. American history has not laid a basis for the American mind to take in stride momentary halts in our "march to final destiny." We are heir not only to a history of success, but also to a tendency toward the "easy solution" — complete, concise and final.

If there is a conflict, we tend to think there is necessarily an obvious path to victory. No question, to the American, has more than two sides. Conflicts are made by only two opposing factions—one is right, the other is completely, irrefutably and irreversibly wrong.

Thus we have a complex of values and attitudes which fosters a demand for the big win, the total victory.

We cry for guts, for toughness, for inflexible belligerence without any exercise of diplomatic ability, brains, or a carefully applied, long-range plan for foreign affairs.

Any plan that deviates from the short-sighted immediate and decisive step to "total victory" is looked upon with varying degrees of scorn by Americans, with the greatest output of vitriol pouring from the proud, all-American Conservative camp.

This camp, particularly articulate on this campus of late after a long self-imposed silence, vaunts itself with a plea for a positive, immediate and "completely American" foreign policy.

Fight communism on its own terms: react. We hear this with daily unceasing fervor, couched in less succinct terms. React to Castro, react to Russian nuclear testing, react to the Berlin crisis, react to the neutralist nation. React and be American.

Peculiarly, our foreign policy could not be more American. The United States, with notable and unfortunate deviations such as the Cuban invasion and the plea for resumption of nuclear atmospheric testing, has hewn to a policy of non-reliance on the leadership of other nations and non-reaction to Russia.

This Nation's foreign policy is bound to the leadership of no other nation. NATO and similar alliances, non-aggression, foreign aid, the Marshall Plan, Point 4, the Alliance for Progress, participation in UN programs, the Truman Doctrine—those are undeniably American. They are not, however, geared to immediate and total victory. It is difficult to visualize any system that could be.

t would be the height of folly to stand proudly and shout that we have won the battle, that our defenses can be reduced to nothing and our efforts against Communism completely stopped. But is it more reasonable to hold our heads and moan that we are losing and will continue to lose?

Should we continue to look at the ledger and find nothing but deficits, drowning ourselves in the belief that all is lost? Should we completely disregard the long battle that the Soviet premier waged unsuccessfully against the UN? Should we pooh-pooh the decline of the Soviet monolith that Stalin left Khrushchev in Eastern and Central Europe? What of Albania, which openly defied Russian dominion? What of Greece and Turkey, which have withstood the Soviets since the end of WW II?

What of Africa? The UN held the line against communism in the Congo before it could move fully. It is true that some countries of North Africa lean toward communism and that some South African nations look alarmingly as if their systems will slide if they are not halted. But there are other emerging African nations, a score or more, that seem singularly unimpressed with Marxism, communism, Nikita Khrushchev or "the bomb."

In the Kremlin itself, all is not roses. Trouble with China is not to be ignored, nor is the resiliency of the UN. World communism, though a long way from crumbling, is not the force it was under Stalin. Even Khrushchev's super-bomb is not the force that we are wont to label it, since to drop it would scarcely eliminate the possibility of immediate and massive retaliation from the U. S.

Yet the Soviet dictator is described with faithful regularity as supremely confident. Perhaps he is, but it would seem that his confidence is not so broadly based as we are led to believe.

The U. S. is certainly not miles ahead of the communists in the international struggle. But neither is she in a position that is impossible. We cannot allow ourselves to view the world situation with dark and gloomy mien, piling frustration upon anxiety until we see the Russians as superhuman. Nor can we forsake our present foreign policy for one which vainly promises immediate solution and total victory.

Such a policy is impossible to formulate.

Putzel Presents Full Statement

To The Editor:

On Thursday, I issued a prepared statement to the TAR HEEL concerning my withdrawal from the University Party.

My purpose in doing this was to rebut Chairman Criswell's statement that I was not the leader of the Dorm Delegation, and foremost, to give my reasons for leaving the Party. However, after much controversy in the Editor's office, Wayne King decided that the whole issue was not newsworthy. I do not contest his right to decide what is best for the paper, but I do think that my statement is worthy of being read by anyone who may be interested. Excerpts from that statement follows

Bill Criswell approached me directly and requested me to recruit a delegation of dorm men to go to the Nominating Convention. The delegates by common consent accepted me as leader, and at the Convention Criswell recognized me as spokesman for the delegation. Dick Brodeur, whom Criswell claimed was leader of the Dorm Delegation, by his own public statement, said, "I am just a third string jockey washer for the University Party." Brodeur was a sergeant-at-arms at the convention and never spoke for the delegation.

This is just another example of UP "bosses' attempting to undermine any existing opposition by the Dorm Delegation.

Criswell stated that last year's label, "fraternity party," ". . . was not entirely false, either." If this label was "not entirely false" last year, it is entirely TRUE this year. It occurs to me that if Criswell was entirely frank with the campus at large, he would change the initials of his party from UP to FP.

The dorm men will not be duped into voting for candidates who do not understand, or for that matter do not want to understand, dormitory problems.

Reader Recommends Boy For Honor Seat

Dear Editor:

I would like to personally recommend GEORGE BENSCH for an Honor Council seat from Judicial District III. I have known him for two years and can truly vouch that he is a sincere qualified candidate. He is a conscientious pre-med. student, and I'm sure he would be a great asset to the council. He believes more in rehabilitation than punishment; this seems to me to be a wholesome attitude and a well-needed liberal stand. Through his experience as an orientation counselor, George has realized the requirement for a stronger foundation in the application of the honor system. A vote for George Bensch is a vote for a better honor system.

Dr. George Has Great Responsibility

Dr. W. C. George is indeed correct when he says nobody has a right to give an answer to the race question without a vast amount of information.

It is, however, very doubtful that a study of the biological differences between the races by Dr. George under the sponsoring of a "group in Alabama" to be used to fight integration will provide that information.

Rationales to preserve segregation have always been found, and if the Alabama group is paying Dr. George the $3,000 which has been reported it would certainly not be pleased with any evidence contrary to its preconceived notions.

Dr. George has denied that the study he is making seeks to prove the white race intellectually superior to the Negro. He has reportedly said, "The purpose of the study is to determine what science has revealed with regard to racial differences in general, to what extent they are hereditary or environmental." It is hoped that this is truly his purpose and that his study is not merely a search for one-sided evidence to advance a preconceived thesis to be used by Alabama segregationists.

Dr. George, a former histology and embriology professor in the UNC School of Medicine, has been in the past an outspoken opponent of integration. He has lectured on the subject and has written several pamphlets opposing racial mixing which would lead one to carefully examine his study for evidence of bias. These pamphlets include "Race, Heredity, and Environment" and "The Race Problem from the Standpoint of One Who is Concerned About the Evils of Miscegenation."

It is hoped that Dr. George's training and experience as a scientist will have allowed him to overcome any personal bias and resist the temptation of monetary gain in order that his study be conducted in a truly comprehensive and objective manner. There have been previous examples of supposedly scientific studies which were penetrated by the prejudices of the researcher.

A Nazi anthropologist proved quite adept at demonstrating that the Sioux Indians were in reality a branch of the mythical "Aryan" race, leaving a certain Nazi official, whose grandmother was an Indian, untainted by an "impure" racial background. It is too easy to admit evidence which will advance one's prejudices and deny that which refutes them.

Careful examination of Dr. George's study will, in the end, determine if it was conducted with the objectivity which he claims. A mistaken conclusion, although detected, would still carry a great deal of weight with the public because of the author's prominent position. Dr. George has a great responsibility as a scientist to conduct a sincere and unbiased search for truth and not to perpetrate as truth mere racist propaganda.

Liberals Holding 'Schizoid Policy'

What can the Liberals do? They are faced with a dilemma. On the one hand their leaders give lip-service to opposing Communism; on the other, with few exceptions, their leaders praise Socialism. The fact is that the Communists who today threaten the world have a socialist economic system.

Thus, Liberals must oppose Communism but love its economic system. Michael Harrington, the socialist who was cheered so wildly by the Liberal element on this campus, is a perfect example of this philosophy.

"The NEW REPUBLIC," perhaps the most influential Liberal publication, exemplified this policy of schizophrenia when it opposed the appointment of John A. McCone as the new Director of C.I.A. William F. Buckley, Jr., caught them in the act and had this to say:

"The NEW REPUBLIC" objects to the appointment of John A. McCone as the new Director of Central Intelligence on the grounds — hold your breath—that "he is the kind of man who hates Communism not because it has betrayed the revolution, but because he assumes it is the revolution." The Director of Central Intelligence should, that is to say, be a man who hates Communism because it has 'betrayed' the lofty ideals of those gentle men Lenin and Trotsky, or if not theirs, those of that gentle man Karl Marx: one, moreover, who does not hate Communism because it 'is' the revolution; one, that is, who does not hate the revolution. Derned if it isn't happening to us all the time. Just as we have talked ourselves into believing that the Liberals are against Communism, some Liberal spokesman has got to up and say something like THAT, and we're in the soup again.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

We Should Invite K To Lenoir Hall

We should invite Nikiti Khrushchev to eat in Lenoir Hall; he would feel right at home. He could choose the "special" meat, two vegetables, bread and butter, coffee or tea. Yes, he would marvel that it was a good bargain—just as his Socialism (Communism) is.

However, which one of us has not turned down his choice of meats for the "special" because of the pressure of "it only costs 40c?" Thus, the result is that our "free" tastes are soon dictated by the Lenoir "Presidium." Mr. Haruo Knoishi, who has written several articles in the DTH suggesting that we Americans should not be so dogmatic in sticking to our ideology, perhaps should visit Lenoir Hall.

American Legion Sponsors Movies

American Legion Post No. 6 of Chapel Hill sponsored the showing of "Communism On The Map" and "Operation Abolition" Monday.

Communism On The Map is a filmstrip, tape recorded, placed into distribution May 15, 1960. Subsequent events such as student riots in South Korea, Japan, Turkey, Latin America, upheavals in the Belgian Congo, Laos and the alarming progress of the disease of muscular Castrophy on the body of Cuba all fall within the pattern of world conquest by Communism exposed through the filmstrip.

Operation Abolition needs no better advertisement than the following joint statement by seven ministers who sat through the San Francisco hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee May 12-14, 1960: (Dr. G. Archer Weniger, Oakland; Rev. George Moore, Walnut Creek; Rev. Don Watson, Oakland; Dr. Roy H. Austin, San Francisco; Dean Wm. G. Bellshaw, San Francisco Baptist Seminary; President H. O. Van Gilder, DD, Western Baptist Bible College, El Cerrito; and Dr. Arno Q. Weinger, San Francisco).

"The frightening drama of the Communist inspired student riots of May 12-14, 1960 has been captured in a startling Film authorized by the House Un-American Activities Committee entitled 'Operation Abolition' ". The film is a 40 minute documentary taken by news cameramen both inside and outside the City Hall. Local Communists are identified as they incite the crowds to wild disorder and violence, in which several policemen were hospitalized. Communist charges of police brutality are ridiculous.

"One could not be an eye witness to this tragedy without a fear of those few who are dedicated to this party of treason and yet who so successfully staged this dress rehearsal for revolution in our own area. This film is one of the most effective counterblows for liberty imaginable. These Communists, together with their fellowtravelers, dupes, suckers, unwitting tools and a few regretable allies in the ministry little realized that they would be making a pemanent record which would expose their treasonable activity.

"Inasmuch as the communist conspiracy has launched a massive attempt to discredit this film, we ministers who were eye witnesses to this horrifying development locally, wish to certify that this film is a true and accurate representation of the activities of the hearings. The commentary is truthful. The film is not 'doctored'. The sound track is not distorted. The left wing charge that this film is a forgery is a manifest lie. While the original films were probably five hours in length, most was repetition of the obstructionist tactics of the subpoened witnesses. Nothing was eliminated which would show the rioters in any better light. In fact, we were amazed that the Committee would allow witnesses Wm. Mandell and Douglass Wachter to freely express their vicious propaganda attack upon the Congressmen . . . . "

In the American Mercury, July 1961, pp 122-124 is an article written by a man from Sandusky, Ohio. The following quotes are from that article in the Mercury Forum:

"I am Latvian by birth and was in Latvia when the Communists took that country over. When I watched the film OPERATION ABOLITION I could not help but feel I was back there seeing those things happening all over again . . .

"In Latvia, before the year 1939, less than three percent of the peoples were Communists or their sympathies. In 139 when Russia decided to subdue Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania all hell broke loose. At a given signal there were riots everywhere; policemen were stoned, spit upon, beaten and disarmed by crowds who were led by few but trained Communists . . . .

"Many people in the U. S. have the mistaken idea that Communism is just another political party and the Communists should be given freedom to express themselves in a truly democratic country. But in a democracy we don't permit anybody to teach crime or sell and use dope or teach and promote vice and protect it under law . . . .

"I know how Communism works and saw it again in the Film OPERATION ABOLITION."

PETER ZENKL, Ex-Vice Premier of Czechoslovakia and Lord Mayor of Prague, now Chairman Executive Council of Free Czechoslovakia, said in THIS WEEK MAGAZINE, October 29, 1961:

"My native country was lost to the Communists in 1948 without civil war. I bear partial responsibility for I was there and as Vice Premier and Member of Parliament, in a position of some authority . . . While democratic Czechoslovakia's defeat was composed of many factors, one important element facilitating the Communist march to power was wishful thinking. We believed that Communists would be transformed into partners in a parlimentary sense. The contrary happened."

Dr. B. L. Ullman Invited To Sit On Balzan Prize Committee

Kenan Professor Emeritus B. L. Ullman has been invited to be a member of the general committee on prizes of the newly established International Foundation for the E. Balzan Prize, a prize which will be awarded to outstanding contributors for the progress of peace and humanity.

The Balzan Foundation envisaged by the former director of the Milanese newspaper "Corrire della Sera," Eugenio Balzan, who died in 1953, was put into operation as a result of the testament of his daughter Angela Lina Balzan.

The foundation, which will hold its official ceremony of inauguration November 16 at Bern, Switzerland, is drawing inspiration from the Nobel Foundation by awarding a peace prize. In addition to the peace prize, the Foundation will also give two annual awards. One of these awards will be for a distinguished person in literature, philosophy, and art, and the other for achievements in the sciences: physics, chemistry, technology, and medicine.

Dr. B. L. Ullman

International Character

The international character of the foundation will be represented committees. The honorary president of the general committee on prizes will be Luigi Einaudi, former president of Italy, and the active president will be Professor Vincenzo Arangio-Ruiz, vice-president of tthe National Academy of the Lincei.

Currently, Dr. Ullman is president of the Mediaeval Academy of America. He was elected to this office in 1960 to serve a three-year team, and this election followed his service of three years as president of the Fellows of the Academy, a group of distinguished scholars in the field of mediaeval art, history, language, and literature.

A native of Chicago, Dr. Ullman attended the university there, where he received a B.A. and a Ph. D. degree. He has served as chairman of the department of Latin at the University of Pittsburgh, chairman of the department of classics at the State University of Iowa, and Professor of Latin at the University of Chicago. He also served as annual professor at the School of Classical Studies of the American Academy in Rome.

Dr. Ullman joined the faculty of the University in 1944 and served as chairman of thte Department of Classics until his retirement in 1959. He is the author of numerous articles on the alphabet, mediaeval anthologies, Renaissance texts and Latin textbooks.

Among the scholarly and professional organizations in which Dr. Ullman has held offices are the American Philological Assoc. president; and the American Classical League (honorary president).

Polish Studies Open At UNC

Students interested in Poland will have a chance to study there this February.

An exchange program calling for one year's study abroad, was announced by the National Student Association recently.

The NSA requests that those interested write immediately for applications and information.

They are to write: the Director, Special Exchanges, United States National Student Association, 3457 Chestnut St., Philadelphia 4, Pa.

To quality, students must be able to speak Polish and have a good knowledge of the politics, history and culture of the country.

Preference will be given graduate students—especially those who have projects which will be advanced by exchange study.

EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT needs this book

to increase his ability to learn

An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the pressure which concerns today's college student upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.

Christian Science calms fear and gives to the student the full assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—his only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.

Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

UNC Runners Capture State Title

Duke's Nourse Breaks Record With 20:52.8

North Carolina's overall team balance told the difference in the State Cross Country Championships on the N. C. State course at Raleigh yesterday, as the Tar Heel runners led the field with a low score of 35 points.

Duke University, paced by a record performance by unbeaten Jerry Nourse, was second with 57. Nourse ran the 4.1 mile course in 20:52.8 to eclipse the old mark set last year by UNC's Rett Everett and Jerry Stuver of 21:36.

Mike Sabino of High Point, whose team didn't figure in the scoring, was second in the individual race with a time of 21:26, followed by the defending champions, Stuver and Everett.

Following UNC and Duke in the team scoring were: Wake Forest 104; Catawba 123, Davidson 126, N. C. State 132, and Atlantic Christian 228.

Individual finishers:
1. Nourse Duke, 20:52.8. 2. Sabino, High Point, 21:26. 3. Stuver UNC 21:42. 4. Everett, UNC, 21:43, 5. Blumfeldt, Du, 21:53. 6. Lunetta UNC 21:56. 7. Venable, Catawba, 22:05. 8. Longhorns Move Into Top Notch; Alabama Second

The University of Texas, undefeated this season, and Alabama, who also has a perfect record, replaced Michigan State and Mississippi as the top two teams in this week's United Press International coaches poll.

Michigan State, who lost to Minnesota by 13-0, dropped all the way to seventh place. Ole Miss, toppley by LSU 10-7, fell to eighth. Ohio State moved to third, LSU took fourth, and Minnesota climbed to fifth place. Georgia Tech, who whipped Florida 20-0, is sixth.

The highest ranked representatives from the ACC is Maryland, 13th, who upset Penn State. The Terps have lost two conference games, and are third in the league.

Soccer Freshmen Battle UVa Here

The freshman soccer team will still be trying for its first win of the season today as it takes on the Virginia Cavayearlings here at 3 o'clock.

Coach Art Lemery's team has dropped one game already this year to the Virginians in compiling an 0-4 record. Their other losses have been to Appalachian, Duke, and Warren Wilson.

Coach Lemery, although disappointed by the teams record, has expressed faith that his team can win. Several of the losses have been in the final quarter of the game. Warren Wilson punched out a one-point victory in the final 30 seconds of play.

Lemery was faced with a lack of experienced personnel, but thinks that most of his players have learned a lot of soccer since the season got underway.

Included on the freshman roster are:

Ronald Bone, Louis Bowler, Michael Chanin, Gordon Coley, John Dunne, Elliott Dworin, Ed Edwards, Henry Flinn, Joe Jefferds, Richard Jemison, Edgar Jenkins, Martin Kruming, John Larson, John LeGrand, Park McGinty, Walter Peter;

Dietzel Devised 33-Man Team Because Reserves Were Weak

Louisiana State coach Paul Dietzel, whose team plays UNC here Saturday, has a particular phrase that puzzles football fans who are unfamiliar with LSU's Fighting Tigers and their three team system of substitution. When Dietzel refers to his "33-man starting team" it's not a violation of the rules, but rather a deviation in substitution, a unique system which helps LSU keep fresh players in the game at all times, and has proven to be a boon to squad morale.

It all started in 1958 when depth appeared to be LSU's primary problem. Without enough depth for two teams. Dietzel founded his now famous three platoons—the White team, Go team, and the Chinese Bandits. The three units share the playing time in each game, and Dietzel insists that a "third team" is non-existent.

The White team, composed of LSU's eleven best athletes, starts every game, and plays both offense and defense. The Go team specializes in offense and the Chinese Bandits specialize in defense. Thus, LSU owns a first unit and two second units, but no third team.

Dietzel says that LSU was almost forced into this system of play in 1958 when the Tigers had to depend on reserve strength that "could play only one way". So the Go team, using the best offensive reserves, and the Bandits, utilizing the defensive experts, were born and will never be forgotten in Louisiana. LSU went undefeated and won the National Championship that year.

Where did Dietzel get those names? LSU's starting unit customarily wore white jersies in practice. The offensive specialists were called "Go team" because of their ability to move the ball. And Chinese Bandits were so nicknamed because their comic strip counterparts in "Terry and the Pirates" are known as the "meanest, most vicious people in the world."

Outstanding examples of the offensive and defensive specialists are still apparent on the 1961 LSU roster. The Chinese Bandits have some top defensive players in linebackers Steve Ward and Buddy Harris, guards Dan Hargett and Sammy Odom, tackles Bob Richards and Fred Miller, corner back Bob Pilgrey and halfback Tommy Neck.

The Go team also some top performers in fullback Jimmy Taylor, quarterback Billy Cannon, halfback Johnny Robinson, guards Jerry Stovall and Jim Hooper, tackle Ken Kavanaugh, and end Jerry Stovall.

Taylor, a 185-pound fullback who ranks as the team's fourth best ball carrier and quarterback Lynn Amedee, the Tigers' top passer. Halfbacks Ray Wilkins and Bo Campbell are able runners and good receivers. In the Go team line are three junior linemen who make up for their lack of size and power with efficient, intelligent line play. Tackle Rodney Guillot (214), and guards Dexter Gary (204) and Eddie Habert (196) seldom overpower opposing linemen, but as three of the LSU team's outstanding students, they rarely make missonnel who are standouts in offensive football. There's Charlie Crantakes.

LSU's system of substitution gives 33 players a chance to play in every quarter of every game. It has boosted the morale of the squad, cut down on the number of injuries, worn down the stamina of opposing teams late in the game, and helped thte Tigers compile a record of 25 wins, six losses and one tie over the past three seasons.

VOTERS DEFEAT STATE BOND ISSUE TOTALS HEAVILY AGAINST EDUCATION

SBI Reports On 2 Cobb Deaths Still Incomplete

Walter Anderson, director of the State Bureau of Investigation yesterday said the SBI report on the two UNC deaths is expected as soon as an ill lab technician recovers.

Chemist William Best, who is handling the poisoning case, has a flu virus and is presently at his home in Gastonia, said Anderson. Investigation of the mysterious deaths of Mike Barham and Bill Johnson found Oct. 6 in the Cobb dorm room is now in its fifth week.

Anderson said that a case of this nature usually takes "about two weeks," but in this case stomach contents of the two youths was run through an atomic activator last week at State College. "We are letting this material cool off this week, so we can examine it," said Anderson.

Activities Needed

The director said that the SBI wanted to determine if elements of peanut butter were in the contents and this could only be determined by the activator. Local police have theorized that the deaths may have resulted from powdered cyanide sprinkled on peanut butter crackers the two may have eaten while they played a game of rook on the death night.

The contents of the boys' stomachs, bed clothes, clothing regurgitated food particles and other items in the room are all being studied by the SBI.

Anderson said that it would take "only about a day" to wind up the case as soon as Best recovers. Chapel Hill Police Chief W. D. Blake also said that Best had been subpoenaed for other cases around the state recently and therefore had not "had as much time as he needed."

The SBI has had the case three weeks today.

Kennedy, Nehru Talk

WASHINGTON—President Kennedy and Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru held a "free and frank" exchange on world problems Tuesday, ranging from Berlin and Laos to nuclear testing and neutralism.

Nehru said the second day of his talks with Kennedy were "very good." The President called them "very fine."

The two men found they had so much ground to cover in this, their first official visit together, that they scheduled another conference for Wednesday.

Adenauer Re-elected

BONN—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, 85, was re-elected to a fourth term in office Tuesday by an expectedly narrow margin in the West German Parliament.

Adenauer squeezed through by a bare 8-vote margin—his slimmest margin of victory since 1949 when he was elected as West Germany's first chancellor by one vote, admittedly his own.

Ecuadorian Revolt Smashed

QUITO, Ecuador—Loyal government troops smashed an army revolt Tuesday after President Jose M. Velasco Ibarra ousted and arrested his opposition minded vice president, Carlos J. Arosemena.

A battalion of engineers at Chimborazo who opposed Arosemena's ouster was battered into submission in four hours by infantry rifle fire and an air force threat to bombard the mutinous garrison.

U.S. Asks Test Ban

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—The United States Tuesday asked quick approval by the General Assembly of a call to Russia to join it and Britain immediately in renewed negotiations for a nuclear weapons test ban.

The Soviet Union, objecting to the move, said there is "no urgency whatever" in the question of a treaty to ban further tests.

The assembly's Main Political Committee, by a 67-11 vote with 16 abstentions, late approved a U. S.-British resolution calling for immediate resumption of talks on a foolproof test ban treaty under a veto free system of inspection and control.

Buxton Intends Old Law Use In Polling Places

Elections Board Chairman Dave Buxton yesterday said he intends to change several locations of the polling places according to his interpretation of the old Election Law.

"As I interpret the old Election Law, BW 25-30, Article IV, Section 1 leaves considerable room for determination of the location of the polling places," Buxton said. The article states the polling places shall be opened during set hours "unless otherwise determined by the Elections Board."

Buxton said the changes to be made are in areas where there is little voting or where it is impossible to get poll-tenders for the time required. "Previously these polling places were poorly administered, had few or no poll-tenders and recorded very few votes."

"There will be no hardship on any of the voters because of this change, since all students have to come to the campus for class anyway," he said. Buxton is eliminating three polling places.

Town Men's IV

Town Men's IV, instead of voting in Gerrard, Victory Village and Glen Lennox, will vote in Gerrard Hall only. Town Men's IV consists of the area bounded on the west by Columbia Street, on the north by Franklin and the Chapel Hill corporate limits on the east and south. Also all men living outside of the Chapel Hill city limits vote as Town Men's IV.

The students living in Town Men's III will vote at GM instead of Gerrard or the Western Union. Town Men's III is the area bounded by Franklin Street on the south and the east and west by the Chapel Hill city limits.

The residents of Town Men's II will cast their votes at the Scuttlebutt as before. The area is bounded by Cameron on the south, Columbia on the east, Franklin on the north and the Chapel Hill limits on the west.

Town Men's I

Town Men's I will vote at the Naval Armory or at the Carolina Inn. That area is bounded by Columbia on the east, Cameron on the north and the limits of Chapel Hill.

Buxton said that all students will vote in their own dormitory except four: Kenan will vote in McIver; Connor will vote in Winston; Teague will vote in Parker; and Emerson will vote in Ruffin. Residents of Memorial Hall and other University buildings will vote in Old East.

Buxton said that there will be a pledge required of the voters at the polling places due to the old election law. "This pledge says that the voter has not voted before that day and that he is voting in his correct district. The violators are guilty of an honor code violation," Buxton said.

VOTING. Mrs. Clyde Merritt, a teacher at Estes Hills school, emerges from the voting booth in Woollen Gym. Orange County Board of Elections Secretary Clyde Carter has predicted that about 4,350 Orange residents would vote in yesterday's Bond Issue Election. This figure, 28% of the county electorate, is the same as that of the County bond referendum held last March.

Art Heyman Fined In Fraternity Fight

DURHAM (UPI)—Art Heyman, Duke University basketball star, was found guilty today of slugging a 19-year-old Duke pre-med student in a fraternity house fight.

Recorder's Court Judge A. R. Wilson convicted Heyman on a charge of assault and battery resulting in serious bodily injury and fined him $25 and costs. No appeal was noted.

Heyman "had no business being in the fraternity house," Wilson said, in finding Heyman guilty. Heyman pleaded not guilty to the charge brought on complaint by Taylor Greenberg, 19, of Norfolk, Va. Greenberg said Heyman hit him a "sneak" open-handed blow in the fight last month.

Heyman, a Duke junior from Rockville Center, N. Y., and one of the nation's highest-scoring college basketball stars as a sophomore was not a member of the fraternity. Greenberg's mother, Mrs. Milton Greenberg, filed the complaint last week charging that her son had been hospitalized for a week for treatment of an eye injury.

Testimony indicated that the fight started in a chapter room of a fraternity house.

Appearing with Heyman in court was Vic Bubas, head basketball coach and Fred Shabel, assistant coach. Heyman did not testify.

Mitchell Tries Break Hold Of Democrats

NEWARK, N. J. (UPI)—Former Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell Tuesday sought to break the Democrats' eight-year grasp on the New Jersey statehouse by defeating a gubernatorial candidate for whom President Kennedy personally campaigned.

The race between Mitchell, labor secretary under former President Eisenhower, and Democrat Richard J. Hughes, a former state judge, drew a possible record voter turnout. A vote of more than 2.2 million—more than 70 per cent of those eligible—was foreseen.

Neither Mitchell, 60 and enthusiastically backed by Eisenhower, nor Hughes, 52, had been elected to public office before. Both are Roman Catholics, and the winner will be the first of that religion to become governor of New Jersey. Hughes was considered the underdog.

Will Succeed Meyner

The winner will succeed Gov. Robert B. Meyner, a Democrat who was barred under the state Constitution from seeking a third four-year term.

The White House and GOP high command watched the outcome as a popularity test for the Kennedy administration and a possible signpost for next year's crucial congressional elections.

New Jersey was an ideal place for such a test. It gave Kennedy a bare 22,000 margin in 1960.

There were no popular statewide issues. Both camps brought in national figures—among them Kennedy, Eisenhower, former President Truman, New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, former Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and three Kennedy cabinet members—to make the race a national battleground.

Governor Accepts Ten Issues' Defeat

RALEIGH (UPI)—Governor Terry Sanford said last night he had "no quarrel" with the citizens of North Carolina for their downing the $61.7 million bond isue. "I don't think they wanted it," he said at a special press conference called after the governor had given up hope for any of the ten special bond issues to pass.

"It was a repudiation of our attempts to get the bond issue passed," Sanford said. He added that he thought it had no effect, one way or another, on his "quality education" program or other areas.

The Governor said he had talked with John Umstead of Chapel Hill, who headed a special bond issue committee, and "It's may duty to tell the public the bond issues appear defeated. I go along with the decision of the public which decided it did not want to do these things. After all, I am a great believer in the democratic principle."

Many state officials including Sanford aides were shocked. They had forcast comfortable margins for most if not all of the ten proposals on the ballots.

(Following are the latest available totals in the state wide voting on the ten bond issues with 1417 of 2100 precincts reporting.

1) Capital Area Building: 64,236 for, 171,775 against

2) State Training Schools: 85,337 for, 138,147 against

3) State Education Institutions: 81,102 for, 151,191 against

4) Community College Improvements: 109,062 for, 143,090 against

5) Archives and History Building: 62,090 for, 164,750 against

6) State Port Construction: 74,800 for, 146,974 against

7) State Mental Institutions: 101,159 for, 125,619 against

8) Hospital Improvement: 81,837 for 140,922 against

9) Natural Resources Conservation: 72,723 for, 151,030 against

10) State Agriculture Research: 72,318 for, 150,588 against

In an unexpectedly large turnout Orange County voters approved eight of the ten issues. Issues number one (Capital Area Buildings) and number five (Archives and History Building Funds) were defeated.

Approximately 47,000 Orange residents voted on the issues. Observers had predicted a vote of only 35,000 people Tuesday. Chapel Hill voters accounted for nearly 3,000 of the votes cast.

Beggar's Opera Is Playmakers' Next Production

The Carolina Playmakers will present John Gay's 'The Beggar's Opera" in the Playmakers Theatre Nov. 15-19. This off-beat musical of London low-life is their seaond major production of the season.

The currently popular "Threepenny Opera" is based on Gay's musical, first presented in 1728. It has many of the same characters including Macheath, Polly, Lucy and the Peachums.

Robert Williamson of Cerro Gordo will play the heroic highwayman Macheath. Williamson has appeared in "South Pacific," "The Great Diamond Robbery" and "La Traviata" here and Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" at Manteo.

Susie Cordon Plays

Susie Cordon of Chapel Hill will play the notorious Mrs. Peachum. The daughter of former Metropolitan Opera star Norman Cordon, she has appeared in leading roles in "Celestina," "The Great Diamond Robbery" and "The Sandbox." She has also played Queen Elizabeth in "The Lost Colony."

Ranrolph Umberger of Burlington will play Mr. Peachum, and Claudia Bray of Atlanta, Ga., a student at Duke, will play Lucy.

Also in the cast are Jack Hargett, Lorenzo Durham, Janet Green, Cathy Orne, Dorothy Silver and Isabel Zimmerman, James Wagner, Wallace Johnson, Betty Ferguson, Allen Scruggs, Jim Oldham and Doss Phillips.

"The Beggar's Opera" is directed by Russell Graves, staff director of the Playmakers who staged last season's "The Great Diamond Robbery." Musical director is Earl Gates of the Music Department and the dances are being staged by Dorothy Silver. Stage manager is Sandy Moffett.

Tickets for "The Beggar's Opera" are available to season ticket holders at the Playmakers Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall and at Ledbetter-Pickard. They go on sale to the general public on Thursday at $2. All seats are reserved.

Carolina YDC Gives Votes At Convention

Carolina's YDC last night committed its delegation to the State YDC convention to vote as a block for "Dub" Graham and Al House.

Graham is presidential candidate and House is running for national committeemen. Both are graduates of the UNC Law School and are past presidents of the UNC-YDC.

The State convention will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Jack Tar Hotel in Durham. Most of the heavy vote gathering will take place Friday.

UNC will have 13 votes. The total college vote will come to nearly 60 out of the estimated 500 votes that will be cast at the convention. UNC holds the largest single block of college votes.

The YDC elected T. LaFontine Odum as chairman of the delegation and Clarence Carter as vice chairman. There will be no other elected members of the delegation. The delegation will be open to all members of the UNC-YDC who can get to Durham Friday night. The only votes which have been committed are those to Graham and House.

The YDC is paying all voting and registration fees. Students who come and are members will be admitted to the caucuses.

Ram Room Makes Atmosphere Social For Cobb Men's Dating

By LINDA CRAVOTTA

The glow of soft red lights . . . comfortable chairs and sofas . . . pine-panneled bar . . . soft music from a stereo . . . all of these things go together to make up the atmosphere in the Ram Room of Cobb Dormitory.

Opened on Saturday nights from 9-1:00 for dormitory men and their dates, the Ram Room has "more atmosphere than any other social room on campus," according to Mike Putzel, chairman of the Ram Room and vice president of Cobb.

The original idea for the construction of the Ram Room was set forth by Buddy Broom during his campaign last spring for the presidency of Cobb. When Broom won the election, one of his first acts was to take action in getting the Ram Room established.

Together with Earl Baker, a dormitory resident adviser, Broom began carrying out his construction plans. He and Baker built the pine-panneled bar from which cokes are sold for 10c apiece and potato chips are served on the house.

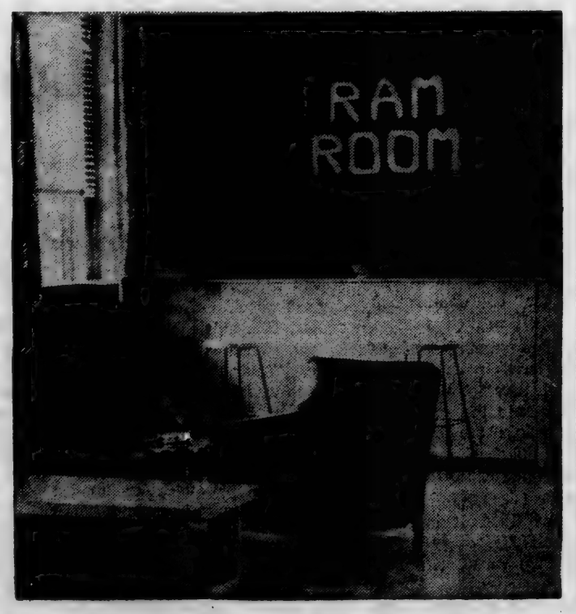
The red furniture was secured by trading non-red furniture from Cobb for red furniture in the other dormitories around campus.

Flashing Light

In the corner of the bar area, a flashing red light plays on the wall adding more atmosphere to the red-themed Ram Room. Prints by Van Gogh and Matisse decorate the wall. Confederate and Yankee cartoons decorate another wall. It should be noted that the Yankee cartoon hangs higher than the Confederate one, because of the fact that Broom, Baker and Putzel are from the north.

A combo party is planned for the near future in the Ram Room. To provide additional space the short corridor and another adjoining social room will be opened.

"Although the social room is in Cobb Dormitory, residents of other dorms are invited, too," said Putzel, who is the "official" bartender. "Although we generally have couples only, stags are not turned away."



RAM ROOM. Cobb Dormitory's Ram Room provides an atmosphere more social than most dorm social areas for Cobb residents to bring their dates and study. Earl Baker and Mike Putzel were instrumental in setting up the room.

South African Liberal Talks On Apartheid

A former Liberal member of the South African parliament will speak on the "Crisis in South Africa" at 3 p.m. today in Howell Hall.

Leslie Isidore Rubin, 52, represented the African peoples from 1954-60 in the South African parliament. In January of last year he resigned to become senior lecturer at the University College of Ghana, West Africa.

With Alan Futom, he was one of the founders of the Liberal Party of South Africa and its first national vice-chairman. His books have included, "This Is Apartheid," "The Law of Costs in South Africa" and "Unauthorized Administration in South Africa."

Part-Time Lecturer

During the past ten years he has been a practicing attorney and a part-time lecturer in Civil Practice and Procedure at the University of Cape Town.

UNC Debators Take 3rd Place At Wake Forest

The Carolina novice debate team, George Carson and Roy Kirk, won the third-place trophy for negative teams at the Wake Forest Novice Tournament last week.

The two boys won five of their six debates in the two-day event which was attended by twenty-six teams. First place went to the University of Pittsburgh.

Carolina was also represented by Charles Heatherly and Kellis Parker, who argued the affirmative side. Professor Donald Springen accompanied his team to Wake Forest.

The varsity team will attend its first tournament of the year at the University of South Carolina, Thursday and Friday. In their only previous appearance thus far, the varsity defeated Duke in a TV debate. Going to South Carolina will be Bill Patterson and Mack Armstrong for the affirmative and Bill Imes and Haywood Clayton for the negative.

How Long?

The question of southern integration has many facets, all of which have been the subject of continuing controversy and comment. The moral and legalistic aspects have naturally assumed a position of high importance, since these are subjects which command an air of immediacy.

Both sides of the argument have resorted to psychology, religion, sociology, philsophy, and to a lesser extent, the arts, in advancing their point of view. Clergymen, politicians, scientists, lawyers and others have been working overtime in providing grist for the various mills that produce comment on the issue of integration.

Strangely, in our super-materialistic society, the question of economy has not commanded its share of attention, taking a berth far back in the order of importance. But it is in the area of economics that the South stands to benefit most from making better use of the potential inherent in the Negro population—a potential that has been realized, in the main, only by the most menial of tasks. In every southern city, even the most casual of observers can find Negro college graduates sweeping floors, waiting tables and otherwise wasting the talents that education can provide. This situation is not confined entirely to the South, of course, but it is in that area that it is most widespread. And it is in the South that the Negro population comprises such a large proportion of human resources.

Here in N. C., for instance, the Negro population comprises roughly one-fourth of the total. In Georgia, it makes up nearly one-third, according to the figures listed in the latest World Almanac.

Should the South suddenly be able to break down all racial barriers—in education, in job opportunity and training, in attitude—the resulting economic thrust supplied by the Negro population would be unequaled anywhere in the world.

As the situation now exists, the Negro population is hard put to carry its own weight in most southern states. The number of Negro welfare cases alone is staggering. These cases are the result, in good proportion, of the white attitude in not providing adequate training and opportunity.

Obviously, the Negro cannot shake off over a century-and-a-half of servitude and unequal opportunity in a twinkling. Some progress has been made, grudgingly, in providing the Negro with physical opportunity, with schools and other facilities. But in attitude, much of the South is but a short step beyond the Civil War.

Legally, we are in an era that functions under the 1954 Supreme Court desegregation decision. In attitude, however, much of the South still lovingly embraces the Dred Scott decision of 1857 which sees the Negro as a piece of property. Here exists a major paradox. Even if, for the sake of argument, we bar all legal and moral considerations, the laws of simple economy dictate that a resource should be cultivated and utilized. This is as true for human resources as for any other.

* * *

Yet the Negro, the South's virtually untapped human resource, is denied the path towards bettering both himself and the South.

How long, O, Gentle Southland?

College & Communists

The administrators of the New York city colleges helped—rather than hurt—the interests of the Communist party with their recent decision to prohibit Communists from speaking at student forums. Witness the experience of Bejamin J. Davis, the party's national secretary, whose invitation to address a Queens College group led to the ban.

Columbia University students, irked at thi sabridgment of academic freedom, promptly arranged a meeting for Mr. Davis on their campus. He told them he had been deluged with requests to appear on television and radio and to speak at other institutions. "And the publicity I have received couldn't be bought by all the gold in Moscow," Mr. Davis crowed.

Now City College undergraduates are talking of boycotting classes to protest the ban; a mass indignation rally has been held and the Communists are getting a sympathetic attention they never otherwise would have had. If the heads of our municipal colleges will not see that their policy of suppression strikes at the free exchange of ideas basic to higher education, they must be aware that our miniscule Communist party thrives on "martyrdom." The ban is wrong, as we have stated previously; and it is also self-defeating.

'We Hold These Truths Self-Evident?'

The concluding resolution of our Declaration of Independence asserts: "that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be free and independent states . . . with full power to do all acts and things which independent states may of rights do."

These "free and independent states" were created and founded upon Judaic-Christian precepts now under world-wide attack. The truth that made us free is everywhere assaulted by an onrushing force of fraud, falsehood, and lies flying the Red banner of international Communism. It openly boasts o its intention to bury God-given freedom under an avalanche of activated atheism. Thus far, we have been content to let this force march on un-resisted.

OUR WESTERN civilization, and particularly our American republic, was ounded upon these precepts. It has been sustained solely by them, and by what they have meant to the peoples who were guided by them. The civilization that was founded upon them stands alone as the only obstacle between the Communist swine and their goal of world domination.

But now our civilization is in grave danger of being destroyed, from without and from within. In the name of "progress," a clique of socialist welfare-staters assure us that the only way to overcome the temptation of Communism is to succumb to it—and to see that other nations have no other choice than to tag along. They frequently and flagrantly give aid and comfort to the enemy, under the malicious falsehood that it is humane.

THE GOLDEN RULE is not a mandate to commit national suicide. It is not a mandate to sacrifice even individual rights that were so generously bestowed by the Creator. If the Golden Rule is to be really observed, then we should apply it both to our friends still free who look to us as the guardians of freedom, and to those that we have permitted to be swept into Godless slavery behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains.

Christ told us that the truth would make us free. We are fast losing the freedom that the truth gave us That truth is Christianity and the responsibility it places upon the individual. That truth is that this responsibility REMAIN with the individual, and that it not be gradually or suddenly usurped by a Communist-socialist-welfare statism. That truth is that all men and generations ought to have the chance to know and practice this truth. It is not un-Christian to oppose those forces that seek to destroy this truth.

THE MASTERMINDS that work night and day to destroy our civilization are, of course, concentrated in the Kremlin. But their dupes and agents roam at will all over the world, preaching propaganda and lies designed to bring us to our knees. They are equally at home at conference tables as well as in military establishments. Through our stupidity, they are provided forums and media through which to disseminate their poison, all with one ultimate goal: to destroy our civilization and the rights that hold it together.

We validated this piratical conspiracy when we recognized the Communist dictatorship as the government of Russia in 1933. We rescued it from the consequences of its own treachery by embracing it as our ally in World War II. We permitted it to occupy Berlin, and to sweep 100 million Eastern European people into its godless orbit of dictatorial slaver. They remain helplessly chained there to this day.

WE PERMITTED the anti-Communist army of Chiang Kai-shek to be driven from the Chinese mainland, leaving more than 500 million Chinese to the tender mercies of Mao Tse-Tung and Chou En-lai.

This, then, is the conspiracy with which our politicians assure us we can "co-exist." This is the conspiracy to whose mercies we left the Hungarian freedom-fighters, and for whom we cruelly double-crossed the Cuban invaders. This is the conspiracy that enslaves hundreds of millions, and which will permit at least 20 million Chinese to starve to death in communes this winter.

"Co-existence" with these murderers ought to be considered immoral.

ADLAI STEVENSON has told us that, under the U. N. charter, we are no longer free to intervene unilaterally to prevent the spread of Communism. True enough, but apparently we are still free to intervene to HELP Communism. We have repeatedly done that, and are preparing to do so again.

We are charged with the duty to save civilization for ourselves and our posterity; and to free those helpless humans whose slavery we permitted. In this civilization lies the good that man has produced in his stay on earth. If it is permitted ot be abolished, any urther residence on earth will be little better than that of any animal unfortunate enought to be left. Christianity and freedom will then disappear for a thousand years.

SHOULD WE take steps to save ourselves, our welfare-staters would undoubtedly tag us as being bigoted, prejudiced, reactionary, conservative, old-fashioned, fanatical, witch hunters, fascists, and the legion of other misnomers that the "liberal" mind can produce. So be it. But we will also retain our freedom.

"For what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and yet lose his own soul." Without a speedy reversal of our present policy of containment, appeasement, and "co-existence," we will lose both the world and our souls. There is a fate worse than death.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident." We hope so. But we have been given reason to wonder.

—Martin L. Wilson

"Notice The Big Change?"

Edit Page Open To Anyone...

To the Editor:

The editorial page, and indeed the whole Daily Tar Heel itself, has taken a one-sided view to news events and the world situation. This is the so-called Liberal attitude and it is one which the readers of this newspaper have had to endure in increasing quantities. The Daily Tar Heel is the broadest and most effective means of communication on campus. But he Tar Heel is losing readers which it wil continue to do if the staff and writers of this newspaper persist in writing articles that show partisanship and infexibility.

As Clyde Wilson's article—"J.F.K. Drifting From the Left" pointed out quite rightly, world events change daily and policies have to be adapted as such. Khrushchev's policy depends on the element of surprise and continuous change. One would hope that Washington and the Government is not preoccupied with a policy that has any "label" whether it be Liberal or Conservative. The President himself is realizing a new trend in events at this moment.

BUT STILL we hear such words as "world opinion." The Editor referred rather loosely to this in an editorial this week. I would seriously question that there is any such thing, and if there is, it should have nothing to do with our foreign policy.

Our dealings with each foreign nation is different. While we should not support the Socialist Govt. in British Guiana, we should be doing all we can to give aid to countries that we know are committed in our effort to prevent the inflitration of Communism throughout the world. What Nasser, Sukharno, Tshombe, and Nehru think of our foreign policy has got nothing to do with the issue, UNLESS they show an active desire to fight Communism. What they have shown on a number of occasions is that they are perfectly able to look after themselves.

Thus we must be ever-ready to accept new ideas without bias or prior judgment. These facts, even if we dislike them, often turn out to be the reality of the situation. We cannot afford to be misinformed on the essential issues of today. A GREAT DEAL OF RESPONSIBILITY LIES WITH THE PRESS, AS THE STAFF OF THIS PAPER IS READILY AWARE.

—Tim Tetlow

Editor's Note: World opinion, for better or worse, does exisit and has a definite bearing on our foreign policy.

As for foreign aid, should we refuse aid to the emerging nations of Africa, for instance, merely because there is no immediate and pressing danger of Communism there?

That our aid programs have been poorly administered is an unfortunate fact. But it does not follow that we should eliminate the programs. The neutral nations are becoming a vital force in the shaping of world affairs. Do we disregard them?

The ideological struggle is not confined to one front. It involves, directly or indirectly, every nation in the world. We cannot afford to lose sight of India, of the Congo, of Indonesia, of the United Arab Republic, or of any other nation merely because our first concern is Russia,

The editorial page, incidentally, is open to anyone: Liberal, Conservative, Nazi, Communist.

ATTITUDES By Clotfelter

'Laugh Aloud When Things Get Ridiculous'

Fully-clothed in the red, white and blue of the Nation . . . marching steadily toward the time when that Day of Reckoning shall have obliterated all the Reds and fellow travelers and their families and friends and people who read their newspapers and who think very loudly and who favor any one of numerous causes which have been dubbed Pink . . . marching steadfastly backward is the American Legion, host for Monday night's two-ring circus in Memorial Hall.

A packed Carroll Hall audience had seen the first clown show October 23 when "Operation Abolition" had been shown. The audience Monday saw "Operation" plus an added attraction (apparently in the place of the Tweenty cartoon): "Communism on the Map," a flick which portrays Red subversion around the world.

Of course the Legion did not allow a debate, which would include an agent of the Conspiracy—an agent such as Socialist Mike Harrington, who debated Fulton Lewis III at the "Operation Abolition" showing last month. Aside from a National Student Association—sponsored sheet handed out, there was no protest, no opposition to the House Un-American Activities Committee's Red-infested film, or to "Communism on the Map."

But we suppose a Legion audience wouldn't want to be told nasty, unpleasant facts. It wouldn't want to find out the truth about "Operation Abolition" (a subject which previously has been covered in some some detail in the DTH.)

A Legion audience wouldn't want to hear the opposition viewpoint on "Communism on the Map," a film put out by Harding College of Searcy, Ark.

Persons of Legionnaire mentality might not like to have former HUAC Staff Director Richard Arens challenged when he says (in the film), "The Supreme Court has all but wrecked the structure of internal security."

Innuendo and half-truths are the meat of this film, as in: "In West Germany today, Communists are present in every aspect of national thought." Or: "Serious students think that the Communists will take India whenever they choose."

"Communism on the Map" marched further into the land of make-believe with allegations that Iceland is Communist-dominated, that Venezuela is a "Communist satellite," that America's NATO allies are not to be trusted, and on and on.

As the Legion audience watched breathlessly, "Communism on the Map" presented conclusive proof that the U. S. is surrounded by Red satellites; that only Formosa, Switzerland, and maybe Canada and West Germany are still free of Communist domination, the rest of the world being under the control of the hammer and sickle.

A Legion audience wouldn't want to hear any opposing arguments and Monday night it didn't. American Legion Post No. 6 of Chapel Hill fulfilled a traditional purpose of that glorious organization: the advancement of an over-fed and under-educated "Americanism." (Mr. Henry Royall was responsible for bringing "Operation" and "Communism on the map" to town. Mr. Royall is chairman of the Legion's Americanism Committee.)

Many persons in the audience sat quietly and absorbed Monday night's True and Deep Message. But others, less willing to become Legion "dupes" either watched in quiet disbelief or took the advice of a California student, as reported in "Operation Abolition,": ". . . Laugh out loud when things get ridiculous."

Reader Disagrees With Editorial

A disturbing lack of insight was manifested in the editorial "A Dumb Move" which appeared in last Friday's Tarheel. Editor King's stand against U.S. aid to Yugoslavia and, in fact, all nations which call themselves "neutral" was hopefully a ruse to attack controversy.

The logic of the argument, which concludes that "we're plain stupid," consists of several rather dubious premises. It is stated or implied that (1) "neutral" is equal to "pro-Russian," (2) Yugoslavia will be able to get a war device from Eisenhower's Atoms for Peace program, and (3) Russia is waiting to give Yugoslavia anything that we won't.

However, more important than the article's logic, or illogic, is the basic issue of foreign aid to countries not allied with the West. The United States has not denied aid to right-wing dictatorships such as Spain, where U. S. missile bases are located. Yet this is wise not only for military reasons, but more important, it materializes America's support for so-called neutral countries that oppose Soviet imperialism and mass bomb testing.

Does it not make sense to apply this reasoning to Yugoslavia, where Russian militancy has been consistently condemned, and a progressive economy has successfully benefited the populace without the tyranny and oppression felt in Russia and Spain?

The United States will never be able to return to the conservative's utopia of isolation it experienced in the days before global conflicts and ideologies. But more consequential this country cannot survive amid these global passions without acknowledging all of mankind, and letting democracy be felt in every corner of the world.

Students In National Survey Like Basketball, Read 'Life'

By NANCY BARR

Is basketball your favorite sport? Do you read "Life" magazine? If you own a record player, have you bought or received 17 records this year?

The "average" student has, according to a national survey of college students.

The survey, which covered 198 colleges and universities including UNC and five other North Carolina schools, has tried to discover college students' likes and dislikes.

According to the survey, basketball is the favorite sport of all the students together, but swimming is even more popular among the women. Football ranks fourth among the students, with swimming and tennis taking second and third place. Baseball and golfing also rank high in the favorites' category.

Surprisingly enough the survey shows that 30% of all students do not watch TV during the school year an danother 30% watch less than one hour per day. Only one per cent watch four or more hours per day.

One-third No Books

Unfortunately a third of all university students read no books at all aside from required reading for courses, the survey shows. But almost one-half of all the students read one or two books per month besides required reading. There was no significant difference between the amount read by men and the amount by women.

Although many more men than women keep cars on campus, about one-half of all students own cars at school. As might be expected, only a third of the cars were purchased when new, and more men than women buy used cars. Over two-thirds of the cars were bought by the students themselves, with parents buying the cars for the remaining third of the car-owning students.

According to the survey, men own more sports equipment such as tennis rackets, golf clubs, skis, ice skates, bicycles, hunting and fishing gear, than do women. The median value of sports equipment for men is $101 while women have about $41 worth. But women own more cameras than do men, with over half of all students owning them.

More Female Records

Again, women own more record players than do men, with slightly less than half of all students keeping record players in their college rooms. Of those who own record players 68% generally receive or buy between five to twenty records a year, with 17 records as an average.

Almost everyone in the survey owned a radio, almost two-thirds of all students owned typewriters and 68% of the men owned electric shavers.

A survey of college wardrobes showed that men owned on the median about two suits, three jackets, an overcoat or topcoat, a raincoat, about 15 shirts, four pairs of shoes and one hat. Girls own a median number of ten dresses, 15 suits, skirts and jackets, four coats, 12 sweaters, 13 blouses, 10 pairs of shoes and three hats.

About two-thirds of the men value their wardrobes at $200 to $599, while half of the women value their wardrobes from $600 to $1,999. Over 10% of the women and only 1% of the men value their wardrobes at $2,000 or more.

Clothing Expenses

To replenish their wardrobes over a third of all students spend $100 to $199 per year. However, 21% of the women and 5% of the men spend $400 or more each year on clothes. The median amount spent yearly for clothes by each student is $157.

Surprisingly, students own much less room furnishings than might be thought. Although over one-half of all students own clocks, towels, blankets and lamps, but less than one-half of all students own bedspreads, sheets, pillowcases, pillows and rugs. Less than one-third own curtains and draperies. Less than one-fifth own electric coffee makers, hotplates, bookcases and other furniture.

Although only 39% of the students smoke, the largest numbers of smokers buy from six to eight packs per week. Nine or more packs a week are consumed by 14% of the smokers. There is no significant difference between the percentage of men who smoke and the percentage of women who smoke.

50% Read Life

Over one-half of the students read "Life" magazine regularly, with "Time," "Reader's Digest," "Post" and "Newsweek" following in popularity. According to the survey, only about 8% of the college men read "Atlantic," "Saturday Review" and "Harper's" regularly, while 16% read "Playboy" and 6% read "Esquire."

"Seventeen" is the most popular fashion magazine among the college women with 19% of the women reading it regularly. The other fashion magazines in order of popularity are "Ladies' Home Journal," "Mademoiselle," "McCall's," "Vogue," "Glamour," "Charm" and "Harper's Bazaar."

In voting for the magazines the college students took for first choice, the men decided on "Time" and the women chose "Reader's Digest." "Life" ranked second for both and had the largest number of total votes.

School Of Nursing Holds Anniversary

Carolina's School of Nursing is celebrating its 10th anniversary and first Alumnae Day today and tomorrow

The two-day session will be highlighted by an address, "A Talent for Mercy," by Lucile Petry Leone, assistant surgeon general of the U.S. Public Health Service, tonight at 8 in Carroll Hall.

The meetings, open to the public, will include a speech by James L. Godfrey, dean of the faculty, at 2:30 p.m. today in the Nursing School auditorium and the presentation of a portrait of Dr. Elizabeth L. Kamble, dean of the school, at 3p.m. Thursday.

Gov. Terry Sanford and Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House will be luncheon speakers today and tomorrow.

Estableshed In 1949

The Division of Health Affairs was established in 1949, and it now includes the schools of medicine, nursing, pharmacy, public health, dentistry and Memorial Hospital. The nursing school became the first national accredited four-year nursing school in the state.

From its beginning, the nursing school undertook a fourfold approach to the nursing needs of the state: undergraduate education, graduate training, continuation education through extension courses, institutes and workshops and research in the field of nursing.

The undergraduate program now has 232 students. Of these 215 are generic students — those who are high school graduates and have met the school's requirements.

17 Qualified Nurses

Seventeen students are enrolled in the general program; these students are qualified nurses who have graduated from a hospital diploma program and who are currently registered in practical nursing in their own state. It takes about two years to obtain the BS in nursing.

Opening in 1955, the school's graduate program developed as part of a regional project in graduate education and research planned jointly with the Southern Regional Education Board. So far, 50 students have been registered in this program.

The school also presents announced short courses which carry university credit and a yearly series of non-credit institutes. In 1960-61, 502 nurses came from over the state to enroll in this program.

Byrd-Controlled Virginia Elects New Governor

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI)—Voters went to the polls Tuesday to elect a governor for this border state which hasn't had a Republican chief executive in nearly a century.

Scattered showers along the coast and general apathy held down the turnout. Election officials said only about 400,000 votes would be cast.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate was energetic H. Clyde Pearson, a 36-year-old Southwest Virginia lawyer.

He stumped the state attempting to stir up a flurry of issues ranging from school integration to industrial development, but was virtually ignored by Virginia's long-entrenched and confident Democrats.

Ferrante & Teicher Flirt With NC Girls

By CHUCK MOONEY and MAMIE REEVES

Ferrente and Teicher, Yankee piano players who use smiles and mimic southern accents to flirt with Carolina coeds set up their portable grand pianos in Memorial Hall yesterday afternoon.

"I feel 'rite' at home here at UNC," said Arthur Ferrente. "My nephew played football for Carolina a couple of years ago. Do you rember him? His name is Ludlow."

Ferrente taped his index finger to avoid breaking the fingernails during practice. Teicher lounged on a make-up desk swinging his left foot back and forth.

"There's nothing special about our pianos. We take them with us because we can't find two in most concert halls," said Lou Teicher.

Piano Problems

"We had more problems before we started taking them than since. A leg fell off of one during a performance at Black Mountain, N. C.

"Pedals fell off, keys stuck; so we finally gave up and brought our own.

"We're trying to figure out a way to get the audiences to come to us. We're playing about five night" from "Westside Story." shows a week and the traveling is very tiring," Teicher said.

"It seems that everywhere we've played recently they've had a heat wave," said Ferrente. "Last week in Pittsburgh it was murder. Is it always this warm here?

"Next week in Montana when we need heat they will probably have a cold wave.

"We outran a tornado once between St. Charles, La. and Bayshore, Texas. It was horrible. We were flying. We weren't sure we were going to get away," he said.

"How did we happen to record 'Exodus'? Well, you know the old cliche about being in the right place at the right time. 'The Apartment' was just tapering off and the company asked us to do it.

"We weren't sure we should do it. They said it couldn't hurt us so we did," Ferrente added.

"We were afraid 'The Apartment' was too concertoish for a pop record, but we took a chance on it anyway."

Smith To Mold Cage Team Around Vet Trio

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Sports Editor

Dean Smith, Carolina's new head basketball coach, stepped into a complicated position when former coach Frank McGuire lef to join the professional game. As McGuire's replacement, he has a winning tradition to uphold, a tough schedule to face, and only three players who have passed the test of competition.

Smith realizes the problems that he will be facing in his initial season as the Tar Heel coach. However, he stands ready to face them directly as they come. The former Kansan is even optimistic in his outlook for the coming season.

"We have some good news already," he said yesterday over a cup of coffee in his Woollen Gym office. "The administration has decided to end the probation of Jim Donohue on December 31, and he will be ready to play after our first three games.

"This has been one of the few pleasant situations here since I became coach," he said frankly. "Jimmy was held out last year, but he was a starter for the first half of the '59-'60 season before Doug Moe became eligible.

"He will be our biggest man at 6-8, and should be able to help a lot both at rebounding and shooting."

3 Sure Starters

For the opening game of the year here December 2 against Virginia, Smith is sure of only three starters. Those three are his guards, Don Walsh and Larry Brown, and center Jim Hudock. "Those three boys are as good as any other three in the Atlantic Coast Conference at their respective positions," Smith stated.

"Hudock is our leader, and we are counting on him to be a really fine captain. He is versatile enough to play in the pivot or move to the corner.

"We don't have any real big scorers back from last year. Hudock averaged 11.6, and Brown was next with only about 4.5 points a game. But Brown is capable of scoring a lot of points.

"Hudock is the only real starter we have back. Walsh started in 14 games, Brown started four, and Yogi Poteet started seven times."

Poteet, who will be ineligible until the second semester begins, is one of four academic casualties. The Hendersonville senior, who Smith says would have been a starter this year, was ineligible to register this fall, but will regain his eligibility next January. It hasn't been decided yet whether he will play during the second semester or wait until the '62-'63 season for his final year of eligibility.

"That depends on several factors," the coach stated. "We will have to consider our record, and we will also consider the opinions of the seniors. We will have to wait until the time arrives to make a decision."

McComb Also Gone

Poteet wasn't the only prospect to be hit by the books. Big Ken McComb, who was scheduled to be a starting forward, was knocked for an academic loop a year ago and never regained his eligibility. McComb is now playing semi-pro ball in Spain.

Two more who were lost because of their book work, or lack of it, were Bill Galantai and Marty Conlon. "Galantai was the one we really hated to lose," Smith said. "He would have pushed hard for a starting position. Conlon didn't fail out, but he fell down ten quality points and decided not to come back to school."

"Ranking just below our first three boys we have three more, who are in a close race for the forward positions," the coach disclosed. "Dieter Krause, Bryan McSweeney, and Mike Cooke have alternated in these positions to date.

"I know we don't play in a sophomore league, but we are going to have to play sophomores anyway." McSweeney and Cooke are sophomores, and Krause is a junior who didn't play much last year.

"Right now, Krause and McSweeney are out in front for the forward spots. This is the first time that Cooke has ever been out of the backcourt. Although he's 6-2, he played guard in high school, and he's like a duck out of water when he's stuck in the corner. But he's a strong boy with a lot of ability and should learn how to play any position.

"Krause has been bothered some with a leg injury, but he has it licked now."

Nine In Picture

Smith continued in his groups-of-threes with another triumivrate that should supply most of the reserve duty. Included in this group are forwards Art Katz and Harry Jones and guard Peppy Callahan. "I'd say right now that these are the nine boys who are in the picture for the next season," Smith disclosed.

The three that round out the 12-man tea mare Richard Vinroot, Bruce Bowers, and Charlie Burns, but the coach says that these players haven't gained the experience that would make them serious contenders for a place on the coming year's team. Charlie Shaffer, who has been considered a good prospect, still hasn't recovered from a year-old knee injury, and won't be able to play.

Carolina Captain Jim Hudock and Coach Dean Smith

Varsity, Frosh Exhibit Tonight

The UNC varsity basketball team will play the freshman team in an open scrimmage game in Woollen Gym tonight beginning at 8 o'clock. Coach Dean Smith has invited all students to watch the full-scale workout.

Although there are no sideline seats available as yet, there is considerable standing room for spectators in addition to the end seats.

In an exciting contest last week, the varsity nosed out a 67-53 win over the freshmen.

Frosh Booters Win First, 4-1

By Curry Kirkpatrick

Paced by Mary Kruming's two first-period goals, the Carolina freshman soccer team yesterday turned back the University of Virginia by 4-1.

Kruming, who has been a bright light for Coach Art Lemery's Tar Babies in an otherwise dreary season, scored first with 9 minutes gone in the first quarter. He added a second marker with only 10 seconds left in the same period on a solo rush from his right wing position. It was all Carolina needed.

The Tar Babies added to their margin in the second quarter, when Richie Trendbath, a substitute left inside, countered his team's third goal. Jim Talbot, the Tars' center forward, closed out the Carolina scoring as the third period ended, enabling Lemery to substitute freely for the remainder of the game. The frosh subs gave Virginia's Bob Baron a "gift goal" with 6 minutes left, which averted the shutout.

Carolina, avenging a tough early season loss to these same Cavayearlings, are now 1-4 on the season, with two games remaining. They travel to Fort Bragg this Friday, before closing out the schedule against Duke on November 16.

Mural Report

The SAE's gained a spot in the Fraternity Blue Finals by upending last year's all-campus champions, the Zeta Psi's, by a score of 19-8. Saunders Midyette was the offensive gun for the winners, scoring two of the team's three TD's. Keith Stoneman added the other and Stuart Saunders made the point-after.

David Frye scored for the losing Zetes, who also picked up two points on a second-half safety. The win, which highlighted Monday's intramural action is a big one for the SAE team. They will meet the winner of today's Sigma Nu-Phi Delt battle in the Fraternity Blue championship game, scheduled for Monday, November 13.

The Phi Delts gained the semi-final berth by downing the Chi Phi's in a real ofensive show, 33-26. The Phi Delt scoring was split between seven players. Riley Pleasants, Ed Pleasants, Semi Mintz, Bill Hubbard and Steve Harris all notched TDs, while Jim Hartung, Charlie Jonas and Mintz got the PATs.

Tom Clark and Jack Spencer did all the Chi Phi TD-making, each scoring twice. Alton Russell made two extra points for the losers.

In the White Division semi-finals, the Phi Delts pushed past the ATO Colts, 7-0, thus gaining the opportunity to take on the Delta Sig Rogues in the finals today. George McDaniel scored the important TD, Max Boxley adding the point-after.

A team composed of three girls from McIver Dorm and four boys from the Baptist Student Union swept undefeated through four co-rec volleyball matches Monday night to win the 1961 championship in this annual all-campus event.

The BSU-McIver combo downed the Mangum-KD 2 team in the finals by scores of 6-3 and 7-5. On the way to the finals, the champions defeated SAE-Kenan, DU-Kap Kap Gam and Avery-Nurses 2.

Soccermen Top Abbey By 4 To 1

By Ed Dupree

Frank Lankford and Herman day as the UNC soccer team dropped Belmont Abbey, 4-1, to run its season record to 7-3.

Prakke tallied the first goal of the contest at Belmont, N. C. with 11 minutes gone in the first period and the Tar Heels never lost the lead. Three minutes later, Lankford scored on a penalty shot to run the UNC lead to 2-0.

Lankford scored again on a penalty shot with only 4 minutes gone in the second quarter and the visitors went off the field at halftime with a 3-0 lead against the homestanding Crusaders.

The Crusaders scored their lone goal in the third period, but Prakke countered with 18 minutes gone in the stanza on an assist from Lankford to give the Tar Heels their final 4-1 margin.

UNC coach Marvin Allen substituted freely in the final quarter as neither team dented the nets for a marker.

Larry Steele played all of the match at goalie for Carolina and was credited with 20 saves. Tom Griffith, who usually shares the net duties with Steele, did not play because of a badly-sprained ankle which also kept him out of the Lynchburg game last week.

The Carolina booters step back into Atlantic Coast Conference competition tomorrow when they travel to Charlottesville to battle the Virginia Cavaliers. Their ACC record thus far shows a 5-3 victory over N. C. State and a 4-1

Totals Confirm Bond Defeat; Officials Are Disappointed

Prime Reason Said Opposition To Tax

RALEIGH (UPI)—A silent turnout of unorganized opposition squashed all 10 of North Carolina's $61.7 million capital improvements bond issues Tuesday in emphatic fashion.

The results were a stunning setback to Gov. Terry Sanford and other "go forward" leaders who had pressed for approval of the measures carrying money for college and university campus building programs, state ports expansion, mental hospitals and other items.

Political observers quickly began assessing the meaning of the surprise rejection.

Some issues fell by margins of two to one. In some counties, many of them listed as "key" political centers for the Sanford administration the vote was even bigger against the bonds.

Sanford had given hearty support to the bond issues although they were proposed by the Advisory Budget Commission before he was inaugurated last January. Sanford however sat in on the Advisory Budget hearings and said the bonds went hand-in-hand with his quality education program.

The 1961 General Assembly which enacted the quality education program and gave Sanford $69 million in new taxes to finance it also approved putting Tuesday's bond issue proposals to a vote.

The same Legislature stopped short though on Sanford's recommendation that his entire tax program be submitted to an advisory vote. The new taxes including extending the sales tax to food went into effect July 1.

This according to political observers was the limit to which voters were willing to go in giving the new governor additional revenues. Sanford and his aides including State Treasurer Edwin Gill apparently were keenly aware of this and emphasized for several weeks that the bonds would not mean new taxes.

John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill, chairman of the bond-supporting Citizens Committee for a Better North Carolina, said it appeared that the voters felt that the bond issues represented a "tax proposition."

Just last week, he said, he felt the bond issues would pass, but became more aware of the groundswell against them as election day approached, Umstead said.

The vote was heavy—for a bond issue. It was expected that final tabulations will put the figure close to 300,000. In the most recent bond election, 1959, only about 112,000 voters went to the polls.

1,300 Students In Protest Rally At East Carolina

GREENVILLE, N. C. (UPI) — North Carolina voters may have enthusiastically defeated the bond issues Tuesday, but an estimated 1,300 East Carolina College students marched on downtown Greenville Wednesday to protest the defeat.

The male students conducted a noisy one hour, 15-minute orderly demonstration and returned to the campus after a talk by President Leo Jenkins.

He told the students that the college would continue its expansion program "in the best way possible." Jenkins spoke from the steps of one of the buildings which was to have been replaced by funds provided in the bond issue.

ECC's new $250,000 football stadium would be finished, although private funds will be needed to raise an additional $50,000, he said. Private sources have already raised $200,000, but the bond issues allotted $50,000 to the project.

Aycock Says Cause Misunderstanding

By JOHN MEDLIN

Disappointment, but not defeat, seemed to be the consensus verdict yesterday on the bond issue vote among leading University officials.

Chancellor William B. Aycock told the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday that he was "personally disappointed, but not discouraged." He felt that the voters, who overwhelmingly rejected all 10 proposals of the $61.7 million state bond issue, did not fully understand the facts behind the issue.

"Lots of people don't know what's going on in education. We have to have a lot of facilities to go along with our growth. We need more efforts to interpret our needs to large numbers of people in the state," he added.

Aycock offered no guesses as to why voters rejected Sanford's bond project. "Full understanding," he said, "will outweigh any reasons that predominated this time — whether economical or political. A look at our educational history will reveal that when the people really understand, they will let themselves be guided by the facts, rather than other influences."

"Will Get Them"

"Uutimately," Aycock continued, "we will get these improvements that we need. Until then, we'll do the best we can with makeshift. We must look to the future with good heart and hard work."

Howard D. Henry, Graham Memorial director, expressed disappointment that Tuesday's negative vote indefinitely delays plans for a new student union. Construction of the union, with an undergraduate library, was one of the UNC projects to be financed had the issue been passed.

"I have only dark sentiments today," he declared. "This is a disheartening day for the Union and for the campus. The bond issue defeat means a sad delay. We're falling behind, you see. We had counted on funds from the Legislature, but the people said no."

Praising student promotion of the issue, Henry said that he didn't think "they could have done more than they did." He expressed confidence that the bond issue defeat was only a temporary setback. "You can be sure that we aren't licked yet. This is just one sock on the jaw; there will be others before we get what we want."

Plans Thwarted

For Consolidated University President William C. Friday, the defeat was a realization that "we will not be able to do what we had hoped to do in improving our educational opportunities for our young people."

He told the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday that he and his associates would meet today "to review the situation."

Friday said he was "very grateful to Bill Harriss, Larry McDevitt and all the other students who did so much to acquaint the people with the bond issue's meaning to the University."

Harriss is president of the student body and chairman of the statewide Students for a Better North Carolina. McDevitt is State Affairs Committee co-chairman and organized the Torch Marathon.

"Still Recovering"

Director of Development Charles M. Shaffer also was "very much disappointed." He felt that there wasn't too much he could say. "We are still recovering from the shock of not getting it," he explained.

"I would like to thank Larry McDevitt and Tom White, chairmen of the State Affairs Committee, who did an excellent job on publicizing the issue. They worked long and hard, and spent a lot of time and effort on this, and I want to express my appreciation, no matter what the outcome was," Shaffer said.

As to the future of various Carolina projects which would have been undertaken with the bond money, Shaffer was indefinite. "It's really too early to say offhand. We may seek funds from private sources. But right now it's just too early. We are still recovering from the shock."

Students Surprised, Shocked Over Defeat Of Bond Issue

By DRENA EDWARDS

"Student Government as a whole was shocked at the performance of the people of the state," said Student Body President Bill Harriss yesterday, commenting on the defeat of the bond issue.

Harriss added that "We have already begun working on other means to secure the student union and university improvements."

Most of the students polled by telephone yesterday afternoon expressed similar surprise and disappointment at the defeat of the bond issue that would have meant $13,700,000 to the Consolidated University.

Bob Hartsell, who supported the bond issues attributed the defeat to two facts. "The people didn't understand the mechanics of financing the bonds and the defeat was also an expression of antagonism towards Gov. Sanford's food tax."

Brenda Smith, who prefers more selective entrance requirements to the building of more dormitories, said "I just hope it was a vote against higher taxes rather than against quality education." She added "I had no idea it would be defeated. It seemed that all the supporters said something but the opposition kept quiet."

"Very Disappointed"

"I was very disappointed," said Dailey Derr. "I'd like to see the things that were proposed added to the campus."

June Todd thought that "It's ironical that the people of this state should vote down an educational measure."

Mary Woolman said "Yes, I was surprised. But I'm from out of state. Several state people have told me it was because of the heavy tax passed last spring. "I was very disappointed."

"Actually I was very surprised," said Mike Spain. "It seemed like everyone was really behind it. Especially after the big promotion from the torch marathon."

Police Support?

Further comment on the torch marathon came from Bill Leake. He said that several of his friends who ran in the torch marathon heard a farmer in a country store say he would not vote for anything supported by a torch runner followed by a police car.

Nevertheless, Leake reported that he and his fraternity brothers at the Beta house were "surprised and disappointed."

Similarly Steve Jones said "Most of the boys in the Chi Phi house are surprised and disappointed. Six of us carried the torch and 20 went to the marathon."

Raise Taxes?

John Wilson expressed shock that the bonds were defeated. "I thought it would pass. I believe the people voted against it because they thought it would raise taxes," said Wilson.

Bob Northrip remarked "It is a rather unfortunate thing that the state rejected it."

Germans Rules To Be Enforced

Chandler Van Orman, Chairman of the University Dance Committee, announced university rules governing the Germans concert this Friday night.

Memorial Hall will be opened at 7, and bids will be taken at the door.

Anyone displaying evidence of the consumption or possession of alcoholic beverages will be refused admission.

Inside Memorial Hall, No Smoking rules will be strictly enforced. Any violation of the rules or if the Campus Code will be taken to the Honor Council.

Playing at the Germans will be The Brothers Four and Joe Bushkin on the piano.

JFK Pollster Speaks In Howell Hall

Louis Harris, a key figure in the presidential campaign of John Kennedy, will be the featured speaker in the second Journalism lecture of 1961-62 tonight at 8 in Howell Hall auditorium.

Harris will speak on "Polling: A New Form of Operational Report." He is president of Louis Harris and Associates, Inc., New York.

Legislature To Debate UN Visit Money

Student Legislature will decide the fate tonight of a bill which would provide funds for six UNC students to attend the National Collegiate Council for the United Nations, which meets in New York City Friday-Saturday. Prime Minister Nehru of India will address the meeting.

It is expected that an amendment will be proposed to limit the number of students attending to five. Two honor students in political science, two from student government and a Daily Tar Heel representative will be the five representatives.

Government Gives 1 Million In Loan

The federal government today loaned one million dollars to the University to build apartment dwellings for married students.

Chancellor William B. Aycock was informed by Horace R. Kornegay, member of Congress, that the Community Facilities Administration of the Housing and Home Finance Agency has granted the loan to build housing for 92 student families. The federal loan will be repaid from student rentals.

This will be an addition to the present Married Students Housing project here and will replace gradually the temporary wartime wooden housing units now used by married families who are in the student body.

Besides the temporary wooden barracks and other wooden structures which comprise Victory Village, the University two years ago built 222 brick two-story apartment units. The million dollars just granted will increase the number of permanent-type apartments for married students to 314.

Rep. Kornegay stressed that the new housing will be two-story buildings also and are intended for older graduate students with families of more than one child. Each apartment will have at least two bedrooms and some will have three bedrooms.

MONOGRAM CLUB

The Monogram Club will meet tonight at 7:30 for a short business session.

The members of the club may pick up their sideline passes at the upstairs office any time today.

U.S. Navy Plane Crashes With 11 In Atlantic Ocean

BOSTON (UPI)—A Navy patrol bomber with 11 men aboard crashed in the Atlantic off the Virginia coast Wednesday while returning from antisubmarine warfare exercises.

The Navy here said two bodies, plane debris and a lifejacket were recovered by the carrier Lake Champlain some 300 miles east of Norfolk, Va.

Names of the crewmen, officially listed as missing, were withheld pending notification of kin. The P2V Neptune twin-engine patrol bomber vanished shortly after heading toward Brunswick, Maine, Naval Air Station from exercises with the Lake Champlain. The Brunswick base lost another aircraft of the same type about a year ago when it plunged into the sea off Nova Scotia. All eight crew members were lost.

The Lake Champlain reported that the bodies and wreckage were picked up in different areas miles apart. The P2V had been flying with a group of carrier-based planes.

The life raft contained the initials of the plane's squadron at Brunswick.

Military Rise To $50 Billion Hinted By JFK

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy Wednesday raised prospects of a $50 billion-plus military budget next year by declaring he would propose higher defense spending to keep U.S. armed strength ahead of Russian might.

The President also told a news conference the United States was pressing ahead with plans to resume nuclear tests in the air if a study of recent Soviet tests shows such action is necessary. Rejecting any more voluntary test moratoriums, Kennedy said:

"The Soviet Union tested while we were at the table negotiating with them. If they fooled us once, it is their fault. If they fool us twice, it is our fault."

'Seminars Abroad' Offers Plan For Students To Visit Europe 'In Depth'

By GARRY SUTHERLAND

Will you go to Europe . . . and not see it?

On most European tours, you see 85 cathedrals, 65 castles, too many ruins and meet only other Americans. Everything is so organized, so mass-production-assembly-lined, that you have the feeling, "Let's see, today's Tuesday . . . this must be Belgium!"

Seminars Abroad, sponsored by the "Y" and consisting of a small group of Carolina students, is completely different. The itinerary, the time spent in each place, everything is planned by the students.

"There is special emphasis on meeting Europeans, on encountering European minds, on understanding how they live and think," said C. C. Shotts, general secretary of the YMCA. Carolina students will meet academic and political leaders, journalists and students.

This is the fifth year of Seminars Abroad, which was started in 1957 as a year-round program for students wishing to have a profitable summer experience in Europe.

Planning and study begin in the fall with weekly seminars in the spring, including a three-day seminar in Washington with the State Department and the embassies of the countries to be visited.

The trip covers eight countries and from 12 to 15 major cities of Western Europe in 68 days. At present the plan is to leave New York via jet for Prestwick, Scotland, on June 10. From there the students will go to Edinburgh for two days.

Paris is the next stop, where the students will see not only the Paris that tourists know, but also a small village in the Ile de France; spend a day on the estate of a wealthy farmer getting an insight into the France of the landed aristocracy; attend a lecture by a well-known professor at the University of Paris, and meet French students of the university. All this is in addition to the usual sightseeing, shopping, night-clubbing and a day and a half trip through the Loire Valley.

In Dublin they will meet Irish students for a brief seminar on Irish literature and politics. That night they will visit the world-famous Abbey Players and will tour Dublin and the outlying countryside the next day.

From Dublin they go for four days to Switzerland, probably Berne and Lucerne, then nine days in Italy, Florence, Elba and Rome. In Florence they will meet Madame Camberti, who is active in international and social projects and, as she describes herself, "one of the three Quakers in Italy."

The group will spend four days in Vienna and then go on to Salzberg, noted for its extraordinary scenery. Near Salzburg are the salt mines of Hallein, a popular tourist attraction. There the students will don the heavy white working clothes of the miners before going down into the mines. One year the Carolina coeds were so amused at this get-up that they organized a dance routine that brought cheers from the Europeans and cries for encores, holding up the visit to the mine for half an hour!

After a day in Heidelburg (world politics permitting), the group will go on to Berlin for five days where they will meet and talk with West German students and political leaders.

The trip winds up with three days in Copenhagen, two in Amsterdam where they hope to visit the Hague and three more days in London before flying back to New York. Those wishing to remain longer and travel independently may do so.

HEADED FOR EUROPE . . . are 19 of the Carolina students on last year's YMCA sponsored Seminars Abroad. Again this year UNC students will plan the itinerary and time schedule for their own trip.

Mass Integration Meet Scheduled To Hear Report

A mass meeting of the Citizens Committee for "Open" Movies will be held at St. Joseph's AME Church tonight at 8. The executive committee will report to the group on its recent meetings with Chapel Hill theater managers.

The Citizens Committee is the group which picketed the Carolina and Varsity theaters for their segregation policies last winter. The Carolina now is desegregated for UNC Negro students only. The Varsity is still completely segregated, according to Manager Andy Guttieriez.

Maybe Next Time

The last hurrah has echoed away and Carolina is silent in the wake of the bond issue failure. Most particularly those who banked so heavily on its passage, are gloomy. The planned undergraduate library-student union didn't even get to the drawing boards. The new cafeteria is last week's pipe dream, along with the new heating plant and various additions and renovations to present facilities.

It's tough to take. Not merely because Carolina didn't get the nearly $6 million it counted on, but because the defeat reflects an attitude on the part of North Carolina's people that bites deeply into most of the beliefs that we hold close.

North Carolinians spend vast sums for entertainment; annually they slide millions across counters for tobacco products, for alcoholic beverages and other non-essentials. But on a bond issue for education? Nothing.

On a bond issue for mental health? Nothing.

On a bond issue for hospitals? Nothing.

On a bond issue for conservation? Nothing.

And so on down the list of needed improvements. Nothing. Nothing, nothing, nothing.

If the situation allowed for it, there would be cause for bitterness. The defeat is a slap that is hard to ignore, impossible to laugh off. Many, we are reasonably sure, voted against the issue as a reaction to the across-the-board state sales tax which included food and drug items. Although we, too, are dissatisfied with this tax, we adhere to the belief that there are more valid avenues by which to express dissatisfaction.

But, as always, there is little effect in dwelling on the failures of the past, no matter how serious.

Bitterness, though perhaps warranted, will not build a student union, or cafeteria.

UNC and other institutions will have to shake off the defeat and start over again. We'll have to start earlier and talk louder. Instead of carrying a torch 90 miles, we will have to carry it 200, or 500, or whatever distance is necessary to make the state aware that we still need the improvements.

And there is bound to be a next time.

Curtains

United Press International reports that East Berlin Communists have erected card board screens at strategic points along the Berlin border in an attempt to stop persons from either side from waving at each other.

At the same time, it looks as if world communism is on rocky grounds with the Chinese Communists openly contesting Moscow's leadership. Recently the Peiping regime has allowed the gap between Russia and Communist China by endorsing the defecting Albanians as "correct" and "glorious." The Red Chinese leadership has also praised Stalin, whose body has been removed from its tomb in hopes of removing the last vestige of the Stalinist regime in Russia.

The crux of the ideological split between the Chinese and the Russians is the insistence of the Chinese upon adherence to a policy of revolution in direct opposition to Moscow's line of peaceful coexistence.

Needless to say, the Chinese opposition has been only verbal, and has yet to be followed up by overt action. The split nonetheless is widening and the West is hopeful that the gap will serve to further weaken the world Communist threat.

What has this to do with the cardboard blinders in Berlin? Nothing except it is interesting to note that the Iron Curtain is not being patched by the Bamboo Curtain . . . and in Berlin the Reds are even resorting to a cardboard.

Peace Corps

The Peace Corps has picked itself up from where it tripped over a post card in Nigeria.

Recovery of its position will doubtless get a lot less attention than the bad jokes spawned by a dropped message home about primitive conditions in the West African nation.

But with the let's-forget-about-it message issued by student leaders in the Nigerian university where the trouble developed, the Peace Corps has accomplished quite a lot. It has proved it can weather the kind of difficulties its members might meet in any so-called underdeveloped country.

By keeping its collective mouth shut, the Peace Corps has shown that it is in Nigeria to work as, if, and when the host country wants. Where customs, or in this case, sensibilities are offended the Peace Corps is ready to acknowledge any blunders with just a reminder that it is young and trying.

These characteristics together with the traning the Peace Corps members bring are indeed the Peace Corps' strong points. That they have seen it through an unfortunate situation in Nigeria should remove doubts at home as well as abroad about the Corps chances of living up to its high expectations.

Poetic Parody

Dear Sir:

In the Daily Tar Heel for November 7, 1961 there appeared an unfortunate piece of verse. Although it is not worth answering seriously, I think that a reply in verse is required. For the benefit of your readers I shall put Mr. Wellman's stanzas above my own so that they can see what it is I am parodying.

European Combine

Here is the sleeping colossus,
Grimly preparing to rise,
Stirring from late morning slumber,
Groaning and blinking clear eyes.

Hark to the whispering thunder,
The ominous tune of the dance;
This is the whirlwind of power,

Russia looks up, sags and trembles,
And sneakily cowers away.

Reflections

If members of the Negro rights group, ORE, keep getting arrested, the name will have to be changed to CARE.

A suburb of Cleveland, Ohio, recently appropriated $250,000 for the construction of fallout shelters. That's a vast sum for a half-vast project.

Terry Sanford, asked what went wrong on the bond issue, commented, "Well, the first mistake was calling it."

An Arkansas man recently had stitches put in his index finger for a bad gash. The reason: he was bitten by his pet rabbit.

Prostitute: Symbol Of Our Age

In this age of super sophistication, tolerance, and laissez faire sex, such an occurance as the glorification of the prostitute does not shock many of us. After all this is the age of the "adult movie", where kids must be accompanied by an adult in order to see about 90% of the movies that come out. This, one supposes, is to keep our youths' morals intact and prevent any Freudian breakdowns when the youth finds out to his great astonishment and disillusionment that pure sex has very little to do with the stork delivering diaper clad babies.

Last year the adult movie achieved its greatest triumph when Elizabeth Taylor and Shirley Jones won academy awards for their performances as prostitutes. This achievement becomes significant when one remembers that such stars as Ona Munson, who portrayed Belle Watling in "Gone With The Wind", have had their careers ruined by taking on the role of a prostitute.

THIS CHANGE in attitude toward the prostitute in our society sould point toward two different trends in this modern age. On the surface it seems to point out the great amount of liberality and tolerance that exisits in today's society. At last we are beginning to take a mature attitude toward sex and think of it not as something evil but as something very natural and good. In other words it is only human to have sex craves, and because nature is what it is man cannot be expected to overcome all the desires of the flesh.

It is because of this trend in society that the prostitute is able to thrive, and some cities such as Philadelphia have even considered legalizing prostitution. But there is a more subtle trend in society that can be taken as a damning indictment upon our age.

WILLIAM FAULKNER unveiled this trend in his acceptance speech of the Nobel prize. He pointed out that today's younger writers wrote only of "glandular love" and were not concerned with the universal values of human love. According to Faulkner these writers deal only with passion instead of compassion.

This trend towards passion and glandular love can be seen in advertisements, movie billboards, and drug store book counters. By these methods of commercialization, the "naturalness" of sex has become sensationalized and distorted to the point of taking on an unnatural glow. It becomes unnatural in that it glorifies the prostitute, adulteress, illicit love, and even perverted love.

Those who speak out against this trend are not taking a puritanical and intolerant attitude toward sex (although they are often accused of this by those who consider themselves the ultimate in sophistication).

They are simply trying to preserve the awareness in art and life, itself, of man's spirtual needs. They do not want to have Dostoevski's famous line, "Man Man! One cannot live quite without pity." changed to the modern version of, "Man! Man! One cannot live quite without a prostitute."

JUST HOW FAR this trend will go is unpredictable. Whether or not this trend is one of the causes of the ever increasing rate of divorces, suicides, and illegitimate children is still a debatable subject among sociologists.

But there are those who claim that society's values can be reflected by the adult movie. It is suggested by these people that, when Walt Disney produces a full length color cartoon and does not allow children under sixteen to see it because it deals with a passionate love triangle between Donald Duck, Goofy, and Minnie Mouse, then we might start worrying about our sense of values.

"Think We Should Consider A Falling-Out Shelter?"

RAMBLINGS By Robinson

Do Instructors Conform To Habits Of Colleagues?

Enthused over the importance of his niche of knowledge, every UNC instructor attempts to communicate small portions of learning to his students. As the instructor tries to adhere subject matter to student brains, he reveals what kind of person his field of knowledge has made him.

Every human being is different from his fellow, but the instructor-student relationship brings to the surface characteristics that are repeated in different instructors of the same department.

For instance, young chemistry instructors, submerging themselves in their own research work, rarely bring themselves down to the undergraduate level. Only the experienced lecturers make the effort. Quantity rather than quality teaching is the keynote because of the immense amount of material to be covered. Only the most vigorous students, swallowed up in Venable's anonymity, manage to survive the dry colorless lectures of the fledgling professors.

IN ECONOMICS, most instructors have the skill to transmit their enthusiasm to students by bringing the subject alive in the classroom. Instructors' interest in student problems show them to be considerable and desirous of getting the subject across.

In German, too many instructors are carried away by their own importance, while others are very personable but recite entirely from the textbook. The Prussian influence, with its good and bad aspects, is unmistakable.

Journalism courses, for the most part, are fast moving; taught by men with a sincere interest in the individual student and a mature understanding of their subject and people. The instructors have had their easy-going, and realistic but sentimental attitudes strongly shaped by their chosen career.

Young mathematics instructors are characterized by their live-and-let-live manner of conducting classes. The informal atmosphere brings the subject closer to the students willing to learn. And full professors pour out the subject with enthusiastic vigor. They do a good job of conveying their love for the subject to their classes.

CLASSICS PROFESSORS show quiet reverence for antiquity in their mien and way of comparing present problems with the Roman and Greek past. But the scholarly cloak conceals enormous physical and mental energy fed by the philosophies of the ancient cultures.

These generalizations all have their exceptions, of course. And departments like history, English and geography are so diverse that they can not be typed.

But the problem is always present that while an instructor strives to teach, he will conform to the habits of his colleagues. The instructor who is acutely aware of this influence, especially by the older professors, will be judicious in choosing the best traits of his department.

On Teaching Hate

Gen. David M. Shoup's renunciation of "hate" campaigns so far as the Marine Corps is concerned is a salutary note that invites emulation in the other services. "As far as the Marines are concerned," the commandant said, "we try to teach them to be god citizens, to be good soldiers. We don't attempt to build a big hate against anybody. We just train them to fight whatever enemy the President may designate."

Hate is an especially dangerous weapon because it continues to linger even after wars have been fought. Moreover the "hate" campaigns make no allowance for the fact that an enemy today may be an ally a few years hence. The deliberate teaching of animosities may thus be very confusing and even self-defeating. The very nature of military training is certain to arouse some degree of hatred for a potential enemy. General Shoup suggests that artificially stimulated passions, added to a soldier's natural reactions, may even interfere with fighting efficiency. We surmise that the young men in the armed services are mature enough, and sophisticated enough, to fight effectively for their country without any artificial injection of political and ideological hates.

Thanksgiving Holiday, 3 Days Instead Of 4

To The Editor:

Rapid comprehension of the significance of current events, large numbers, and a tendency to participate in group action, are the characteristics that make students at a university the prime movers in many mass demonstrations against an unpopular precept or legislation imposed by authority. What is the nature of such an unpopular precept that it can goad a relatively sophisticated group into acts of mob violence?

In 1956, Hungarian students assumed a large part in the heroic effort to gain some semblance of freedom from the ruling communist puppet regime. In June of 1960, Japanese students demonstrated their disfavor of the pending Japan-U.S. pact in a language that even the Eisenhower administration could understand. Exactly one year later, they again demonstrated against governmental foreign policy. In restless South America, students frequently publicly protest exploitations by government officials. These are but a few of the motivations behind foreign student demonstrations.

BUT WHAT of the recent student riots in the United States? What flagrant violations of human rights have propagated them? Let us examine some: Last year at Marquette U. in Milwaukee, de-emphasis of intercollegiate athletic competition precipitated student riots. On Labor Day this year 1500 college students rioted at Lake George, N. Y. in a three-day drinking spree.

Why? Who knows? This past weekend, U. of Virginia students hurled missiles at police who were trying to disperse the unruly crowd. The protest was over the shortening of the Thanksgiving vacation tnd curbing of fraternity parties. Other riots could be pointed out.

All, with the admirable exception of the Thanksgiving vacation and lack the genuiness of purpose which seem to characterize the demonstrations of our overseas contemporaries. I am not advocating riots here, but I do believe that they reflect a noteworthy difference in attitude between the foreign and U. S. student.

SO WHAT? What difference does it make if we like to riot over sporting events, jazz festivals, etc., rather than governmental actions, edicts, etc.? This is the difference: As the world power struggle now stands, only a few degrees separate the cold war from a very hot war indeed.

The Berlin stand off and the USSR nuclear tests have deatl a gloved slap to the face of the free world. The urgency of this challenge was first realized in President Kennedy's appeal for a united effort by the American people to meet any crisis that may lie ahead. Certainly the American college student was listening as that appeal was delivered to the nation.

Certainly he understood that just because he does not shoulder a rifle he is not excused from doing his part to meet the challenge.

What then is the American student to do? In the present context, this question might be answered best by noting what he should not do. Especially in this time of world tension, the eyes of the free world are upon its leader, the U. S. Therefore the seemingly small aspects of American life assume a new significance. American students, as a part of the American image, can not, must not, advertise a corporate egoism and smallness of character by continuing to riot over trivialities.

UNC-Reynolds Planning Made On Fellowships

Plans are underway for the second UNC R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company Summer Fellowship Program in Economics, it was announced this week by "Viewpoint," the quarterly report of the School of Business Administration.

The six-week program, designed to assist junior and senior high school teachers in broadening their understanding of economics, is scheduled for the first session of summer school in 1962.

A total of 60 "Research in Progress" studies are now being conducted by faculty members of the School of Business Administration. These include research in such fields as finance, insurance, labor, marketing, money and banking, statistics, economic development, business economics, international economics and Soviet studies.

The quarterly report also announced Professor of Finance Avery B. Cohan as recipient of the Drexel Research Professorship for 1961-62.

Problem Of Pep Rallies: Attendance; Spirit Is There, But Not People

(There will be a pep rally tonight at 7 p.m. on Emerson Field with a band concert. Following is a commentary feature on UNC pep rallies.)

DTH COMMENTARY
By BRIAN MARSHALL

What's wrong with pep rallies this year? Attendance is bad, that's for certain.

There were about 50 people at the last rally Friday night. Jim LeCompte was asked to speak for his team, and with the pledge to victory he thanked his fellow students for showing up.

What's happened?

Head Cheerleader Al Roper says he doesn' know. "There just seems a general lack of interest this year. I'm to blame, I guess.

"Maybe we schedule them at a bad time. People date on Friday night and this weekend there's Germans. It might be better to hold them on Thursdays."

It could also be that there's a lack of publicity. Students often comment, "I didn't know anything about it."

Then there have been no pep bands at this year's rallies. "We're just trying to save them for the Duke game," commented Roper. "Next weekend is Germans, so that won't be any good."

Well why not? There have always been pep bands at the rallies. They do a lot to create excitement.

Jay Lambeth, now a grad student, was in charge of these things for four years. During that time he never missed being at a rally with a band. This year he hasn't been to any.

"It boils down to this," he said. "We're not opposed to playing for a pep rally. We just don't like being warned only a few minutes in advance. You say we ought to have one every week, but we've also been told at the last minute that we weren't needed.

"If they'd like a pep band, they should notify us a few days in advance. Band members have schedules and things to do too."

During the basketball season last year, the school asked us to send a group to Greensboro for the Kentucky game. After we got there they gave our job and seats to a jazz band, and from where we sat we couldn't even see the game."

Band president Bob Greason dittoes these remarks. "We just have not known about these things in time. If this can be done, we'll be glad to provide music for these rallies."

Anyway, what's been done in oher times and places? Well, three of Carolina's former head cheerleaders now live in Chapel Hill and can tell of other times.

"Conditions are different today," says Billy Arthur. "I was around from 1930 to 1933 and the campus was smaller in those days. Everyone knew each other. Since we didn't have automobiles or much money, we were closer and thus had more spirit. You might say we were captives in Chapel Hill.

"Today there are too darn many other things to do."

Vic Huggins of 1925 agrees. "Today the student body is big. It's more unwieldy and harder to control.

"You figure that cheerleaders are born and not made. The really fine ones come up only once in awhile. It all takes great desire from the cheerleader and cooperation from the students. That doesn't come every year. It's a difficult job to be head cheerleader."

Perhaps Carolina's greatest was Kay Kyser of 1927. He was later to become the famous band leader, but in those days he was combining a variety show with each rally. It helped attract people and set the right mood.

At that time rallies were held in Memorial Hall and Kyser's shows were always quite original. His were "Cheerio Shows," not pep rallies. He always had his prerehearsed core of about 300 from among the students and this was the "Cheerio Section." They did stunts and led the cheering at all shows and games.

Everyone knew when the next "Cheerio Show" was going to be. These were so special that they would stop movies to warn when show time was approaching. Everyone took part—faculty members, townspeople and even the hired help from dorms and fraternities.

There was a lot of comedy and Kyser made a big effort to give the students some free and enjoyable entertainment. It paid off in a lot of school spirit that carried over to the game.

That takes care of other times. Today, other places don't seem much different from Carolina. Some of the grad students can tell about them.

Math student Clay Ross formerly attended the University of Kentucky. "At our pep rallies," he says, "the boys would go to see the girls and the girls would go to be seen."

"Cornell wasn't terribly original," notes Curt Swezy, an anthropology student. "We'd have class officers give speeches."

"The Citadel was more cohesive," feels Richard Manns, a student of business administration. "Don't get me wrong. I like Carolina for the way it is. Since we were in military school though we were organized and everyone knew each other. Thus we had a stronger bond for enthusiasm at the games. On Thursday nights, a rock & roll band would be in the dining room and it would get people in the mood for the pep rally at 7 p.m."

Carolina's school spirit is strong. Last year two very successful pep rallies in downtown Chapel Hill helped result in upset victories over Notre Dame and Duke. The student body stayed loyal despite a mostly unfortunate season.

Then, as Vic Huggins pointed out, "the cheering at the games has been pretty good."

The spirit is there alright.

Unofficial tabulation, giving the breakdown of the 10 issues:

1. Capitol area bonds, for 86,442; against 198,228.
2. State Training Schools, for 117,454; against 173,800.
3. State-supported colleges, for 120,158; against 174,318.
4. Community colleges, for 109,424; against 173,990.
5. Archives & History & State Library, for 83,208; against 192,335.
6. State ports, for 100,143; against 183,777.

8. Hospital construction, for 107,301; against 171,352.
9. Natural Resources, for 95,052; against 183,913.
10. Agriculture tests farms, for 95,276; against 186,392.

When the results became evident with mounting returns Tuesday night, Sanford called a special news conference and conceded the bonds were lost.

He was plainly disappointed. Solemnly he told reporters, "It appears the desire of the people not to want these things.

"I am a great believer in the Democratic principle and I have no quarrel with the decision of the public."

But in Greenville, N. C., more than 1,300 East Carolina College students streamed off the campus and staged a protest march and noisy demonstration. The students at ECC had been among the hardest campaigners in favor of the bond issues.

There was strong reaction elsewhere around the state.

Sanford and Umstead's committee had campaigned on the local level, a strategy which Sanford had found highly successful in his campaigns for the governorship last year.

MAIL FRAUD

WILMINGTON (UPI)—James H. Kraus, 61, a Wilmington postal clerk is free under $500 bond on charges of mishandling 80 cents in postage funds.

He is charged with accepting four parcels and failing to account for 20 cents postage in each. Officials said he resigned the post as a result of the charges.

HIGHWAY FATALITY

VANCEBORO (UPI)—A collision on Highway 17 four miles north of here Monday night took the life of Earnis Edward Lewis, 35, of Rt. 1, Vanceboro.

Officers said the acident occurred when Lewis attempted to turn left off the highway.

Robert Harold Emerling of Richmond, N. Y., was held without bond pending a coroner's inquest and charged with failing to give an audible signal while passing.

THE SPORTS Tabloyd

Duke University might do well to drop one of its outside opponents and add Maryland if it wants to play a nine-game schedule. The Blue Devils aren't having any success against non-ACC teams. Their '61 record already shows losses to Georgia Tech, 21-0, and to Michigan, 28-14. This week, the Blue Devils have their last opportunity for a non-conference win when they play Navy at Norfolk. Our predictions say that Duke will lose.

Last week, we guessed right on 13 and missed four.

Game by game, here is the way our predictions for this week are:

Navy 23, Duke 14. It is too bad that the Devils have to lose on the week before the Carolina game too. The Middies got off to a slow start by losing to Penn State, but have only dropped one ga mesince then. Duke still can't foind itself.

Wake Forest 20, Virginia Tech 13. The Deacons haven't fooled too many people yet, but should be able to pick up enough punch to down the Gobblers.

Maryland 28, N. C. State 20. All expectations say that this one will be a passing duel between Dick Shiner and Roman Gabriel. Shiner, however, has the better receivers and a superior line. Gabe has played well against the Terps in the past, but his play alone can't win the ball game.

Clemson 14, South Carolina 7. Of course, this one is the traditional rivalry of the Palmetto State, and past records can be junked. The Tigers seem to be just a little bit better.

Virginia doesn't play this week. (This is not a prediction)

Army 51, William & Mary 13. The Cadets never have any trouble building a good looking record with such teams on their schedule. However, the point is open to question whether the West Pointers really have a good team. For a team of their standing, they play the softest schedule in the country.

Mississippi 60, Chattanooga 0. The frustrated Rebels, who couldn't score when it counted against LSU, shouldn't have much trouble making points against the Noogies. But Chattanooga isn't LSU, either.

Florida 21, Georgia 20. The Gators pull one on the Bulldogs, but not in a snap.

Georgia Tech 27, Tennessee 14. Bowden Wyatt will be relieved not to have another close ball game. But he would also be relieved if he were playing somebody besides Tech.

Kentucky 20, Vanderbilt 7. The Wildcats let the air out of the Commodores' sails.

Miami 30, Tulane 6. Hurricanes have always made Waves grow higher. But this time, the Wave will just beat on the beach.

Penn State 23, West Virginia 14. We should know better, but we can't go against the Lions this week.

Syracuse 33, Colgate 0. Colgate just isn't the brand that makes you wonder where the Orange went.

Notre Dame 20, Pittsburgh 7. Three losses in a row is about all the Irish can take.

Rutgers 27, Delaware 13. Let's not overlook the Ivies.

Villanova 22, Detroit 19. Another for the Wildcats.

Michigan 35, Illinois 7. The notably weak Illini have little chance against the Wolverines.

Ohio State 26, Indiana 8. Just a stiff workout for the Bucks.

Minnesota 21, Iowa 10. The Hawkeyes have been a real problem for the Gophers for several years. Minnesota, despite its record, is the underdog in some quarters, but we think they should win.

ELSEWHERE

Kansas 31, Kansas State 8. Michigan State 27, Purdue 7. Missouri 19, Oklahoma 13. Northwestern 17, Wisconsin 14. Rice 25, Arkansas 22. Texas 38, Baylor 13. Texas A&M 14, SMU 7;

Boston College 20, Texas Tech 18. Air Force 12, California 7. Colorado 29, Utah 15. Southern Cal 21, Stanford 13.

Carson Has Shot At Rushing Title

By HARRY W. LLOYD

If Gib Carson can run as well against the LSU defenses here Saturday as he did last week against Tennessee, then he will be the favorite in the ACC individual rushing race. The Carolina halfback, who grinds out the yards whether in a spectacular fashion or not, gained 121 of the measuring marks last week to move into second place in total yards rushing. Only Alan White of Wake Forest, who has played in one more game than has Carson, has more yards.

The flashy number 29, who has carried 84 times this year, averages a modest 3.8 per carry—but he owns a 53.5 yards per game mark. White, who slumped last week against Auburn, has an eye-catching 7.2 yard per carry average, but is almost even with Carson in the game mark with a 54.5 figure.

For the statistics buffs, this one—the top two carriers in the UNC backfield, Carson and fullback Bob Elliott, have an 86.0 yards per game average, the best of any one-two combination in the ACC. The White-Donnie Frederick duo at Wake has an 80.5 total. Ernie Arizzi and Dennis Condie total 73.4 at Maryland. South Carolina's Dick Day plus Bill Gambrell totals 66.1.

The total offense figures in the ACC thus far show just one thing—if you want to make yards, the best way is to become a quarterback. This statement is proved overwhelmingly by the fact that the top 10 yardage makers in the entire league are all signal-callers.

These figures can be explained, because the quarterbacks can get a lot of yardage out of just a few passes. But these figures also point out that there isn't a real running-receiving threat in the conference who is sure of making a lot of yards.

The ACC's offense leaders rank this way: Gabriel, State, 760 yards (649 on passing), Shiner, Maryland, 728 (685); Parker, Clemson, 666 (473); Costen, USC, 640 (541); Farris, UNC, 572 (538); Anderson, Clemson, 553 (366); Rappold, Duke, 517 (439); Novak, Md., 480 (343); Reiley Wake Forest, 430 (352); and Garner, Duke, 421 (passing yards unavailable).

The Tar Heels rank in the second division of the ACC in both rushing offense and passing offense—but are in fourth place in total offense. Their respective figures are 140.8 per game, 88.2 and 229.

The figures released by the ACC Service Bureau concerning the UNC stax didn't jibe . . . they credited the Tar Heels with 2 extra rushing yards. They were different, anyway, from those issued by the Carolina publicity office. The ACC statisticians need a little more practice on their arithmetic.

One factor that probably accounts for much of the success of the Virginia team this year is their better rushing defense. Last year, the Cavaliers were dead last in this category. Today, they are fourth. But in stopping up the holes in their line, the Cavaliers have allowed a lot of passes to be completed on themselves. They have given up an average of 138.0 yards per game through the air—worst in the league. Their rushing defense figure is a respectable 153.1. These totals, however, make the Wahoos the most generous team, although they have shown a lot of improvement over last year.

The Tar Heels have two players who have caught nine passes. They are halfback Jim Addison, with 67 yards, and end Bob Lacey, with 138. End Steve Yates has averaged 22.5 yards on 4 receptions. Roger Smith has 8 catches for 69 yards.

There seems to be no lack of receivers in the Tar Heel camp. Ward Marslender, whose total catches to date consist of the two fantastic ones he made here last week, has a total of 42 yards on them.

In the scoring column, fullback Bob Elliott leads the Tar Heels with 22 points. He has 2 touchdowns, 7 of 8 extra points, and one field goal.

Gib Carson is second with 20 points, on 3 TD's and a two-point conversion. Other Carolina scoring includes Farris, 12; Beck, Addison, Lacey, and Marslender 6 each, and Edge 2. The Tar Heels have scored 80 points and have given up 88 although they have a 4-2 record.

Soccermen Travel To Virginia Today

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The North Carolina soccer team, currently riding the crest of a three-game winning streak, moves back into conference action this afternoon as they take on the improved University of Virginia Cavaliers in Charlottesville.

The Tar Heels, who last faced an ACC opponent on October 28 when they fell to mighty Maryland, have, since then, beaten three non-conference foes. Pfeiffer, Lynchburg, and Belmont Abbey have all fallen before the impressive efforts of Coach Marvin Allen's booters.

The Carolina team has been remarkably free of injuries this year. Up until last week only junior fullback Bob Jones, who has been hampered with a painful ankle injury all season, was unable to see full duty. But recent accidents have caused Allen's fine brace of goalies—Tom Griffith and Larry Steele—considerable harrassment.

Griffith was involved in a freak misplay at practice, when he stepped on a ball and turned his ankle. The lanky senior has missed the last two matches, and it is doubtful if he will see action this afternoon. Steele, the flashy junior, who usually shares duties with Griffith, has done a remarkable job considering his painful thigh, which was bruised in the Maryland game. He will probably start against Virginia.

The Carolina line is set, with Bill Shettle at center forward, flanked by little Bob Kepner and Peter Blake on the left and Frank Lankford, with 5 goals in the last 4 games, and Herman Prakke on the right. At the halfback slots, Allen will start John Kenrick, George Beim, and the "rock" of the Tar Heel defense, Captain Dick Bordogna.

HUSBANDS, ANYONE?

It has been alleged that coeds go to college for the sole purpose of finding husbands. This is, of course, an infamous canard, and I give fair warning that, small and spongy as I am, anybody who says such a dastardly thing when I am around had better be prepared for a sound thrashing!

Girls go to college for precisely the same reasons as men do: to broaden their horizons, to lengthen their vistas, to drink at the fount of wisdom. But, if, by pure chance, while a girl is engaged in these meritorious pursuits, a likely looking husband should pop into view, why, what's wrong with that? Eh? What's wrong with that?

The question now arises, what should a girl look for in a husband. A great deal has been written on this subject. Some say character is most important, some say background, some say appearance, some say education. All are wrong.

The most important thing—bar none—in a husband is health. Though he be handsome as Apollo and rich as Midas, what good is he if he just lays around all day accumulating bedsores?

The very first thing to do upon meeting a man is to make sure he is sound of wind and limb. Before he has a chance to sweet-talk you, slap a thermometer in his mouth, roll back his eyelids, yank out his tongue, rap his patella, palpate his thorax, ask him to straighten out a horseshoe with his teeth. If he fails these simple tests, phone for an ambulance and go on to the next prospect.

If, however, he turns out to be physically fit, proceed to the second most important requirement in a husband. I refer to a sense of humor.

A man who can't take a joke is a man to be avoided. There are several simple tests to find out whether your prospect can take a joke or not. You can, for example, slash his tires. Or burn his "Mad" comics. Or steal his switchblade. Or turn loose his pet raccoon. Or shave his head.

After each of these good-natured pranks, laugh gaily and shout "April Fool! If he replies, "But this is February nineteenth," or something equally churlish, cross him off your list and give thanks you found out in time.

But if he laughs silverly and calls you "Little Minx!" put him to the next test. Find out whether he is kindly.

What should a girl look for in a husband?

The quickest way to ascertain his kindliness is, of course, to look at the cigarette he smokes. Is it mild? Is it clement? Is it humane? Does it minister tenderly to the psyche? Does it coddle the synapses? Is it a good companion? Is it genial? Is it bright and friendly and filtered and full of dulcet pleasure from cockcrow till the heart of darkness?

Is it, in short, Marlboro?

If Marlboro it be, then clasp the man to your bosom with hoops of steel, for you may be sure that he is kindly as a summer breeze, kindly as a mother's kiss, kindly to his very marrow.

And now, having found a man who is kindly and healthy and blessed with a sense of humor, the only thing that remains is to make sure he will always earn a handsome living. That, fortunately, is easy. Just enroll him in engineering.

Valkyries Order Taps 7 Undergraduates, 3 Honoraries

Henrietta Brown

Harriet Cox

Kay Fletcher

Sylvia Mullins

Mary Sue Simpson

Mary Townsend

Tuck Walker

A tolling gong and black-hooded figures preceeded the pre-dawn tappings of seven undergraduate women and three honoraries into the Order of the Valkyries, the University's highest women's honorary, this morning.

Tapped were Seniors Henrietta Brown of Hillsboro; Harriet Elizabeth Cox of Galax, Va.; Mary Kay Fletcher of Durham; Sylvia Dees Mullins of Macon, Miss.; Mary Sue Simpson of Shaw, Miss.; Mary Roberta Townsend of Stuttgart, Ark.; Toler Tucker Walker of Bayside, Va.; and Honoraries Elizabeth Scott Carrington of Burlington; Margaret Dent of Chapel Hill; and Irene Smart Rains of Chapel Hill.

Limited to the top two percent of the coed student body, Valkyries corrresponds to the highest men's honorary, the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Founded in 1941, Valkyries replaced Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary society. The tapees are recognized for development of the Valkyries ideals of scholarship, leadership, character and service.

Present active members are Judy Buxton, Udine Caudle, NoNo Menco, Margaret Ann Rhymes and Prissy Wyrick.

Citations to the new members read as follows:

Miss Brown: One who has wisely channeled her energies and talents into those things most worthwhile. She has demonstrated a commendable alertness to the issues and needs of the university community and the nation through her work in legislature and the National Student Association. In these areas, as well as in her service to the Orientation Committee and the Attorney General's staff, her sense of responsibility and her initiative have far exceeded her duties. Miss Brown has directed her college life with maturity, balancing her service to the university with the highest excellence in scholarship.

Miss Cox: One whose high ideals and strength of character prevade every area of her college life and have proved exemplary to those about her. Not only in her service on the Honor Council but in her scholastic achievement, she has maintained a record of unfailing dependability and excellence. Her untiring and enthusiastic work with the YWCA and in her sorority have gained her the admiration and respect of her associates.

* * *

Miss Fletcher . . . one who has served the university and her fellow students in a charming manner with enthusiasm and sincere interest. Through her work in her dormitory and on Carolina Women's Council she has shown commendable leadership qualities. Her sensitivity and sincerity are reflected daily in her life by the deep understanding, consideration, and love with which she treats her fellow man. Miss Fletcher is recognized as an example of unselfish service and highest character.

* * *

Miss Mullins . . . one who has faithfully served her university and fellowship students with sincerity, keen interest, and outstanding leadership. Her warm personality and radiant smile bring understanding and cheerfulness to many. She has demonstrated genuine interest in the welfare and fate of her fellowman through her contributions to the foreign students and the National Education Association. Miss Mullins has exemplified her primary loyalty to the University by achieving a high scholastic standing. Her high Christian ideals prevade every endeavor and are reflected dynamically in her daily life. To know Miss Mullins is to be a better person.

Miss Simpson . . . one whose sensitivity and sincerity are reflected daily in her life by the deep understanding, consideration and love with which she treats her fellow students. As an inspiring leader in Y.W.C.A. and her sorority, she has tirelessly given of her outstanding faith and enthusiasm. She has participated in every aspect of life at Carolina, demonstrating an active concern for the welfare of her fellowstudents and the university. Because of her insight in religion and her sensitivity to the needs of others, Miss Simpson has been an influence and a source of strength to many. Because she least desires praise, she has shown herself most worthy of receiving it.

* * *

Miss Townsend . . . one who has given unceasing of her time and energy to her university and her sorority.

Herbert Matthews No Stranger To Hot Controversy

By DAVID WITHERSPOON

Herbert Matthews, who speaks in Howell Hall at 8 tonight, is no stranger to controversy. Much of his life has been spent in the middle of shooting controversy. But the controversy he is involved in now may be the biggest of his life.

Before Fidel Castro seized control of Cuba, Matthews visited him in his mountain stronghold. The New York Times editorial staffer was not the only journalist favorably impressed by the Cuban revolutionary. He is now, however, virtually the only major reporter who insists that Castro is not a Communist puppet.

In his book published this year, "The Cuban Story," Matthews takes the position that the Cuban revolution was forced into anti-Americanism and into a close relationship with the Communist world by United States mistakes and halfheartedness in dealing with the revolutionary movement.

He holds that Castro was not in the beginning and is not now a puppet of the USSR. In 1959, he says Castro was "instinctively and emotionally anti-Communist." Castro's revolution was based, he says, on a genuine concern for human need.

Background For Talk

It is against this background that Matthews will speak here on recent events in Cuba.

For his position Matthews has come under fire from several segments of the American press. He has been called "emotionally biased" by "Time" magazine. A cartoon in the "National Review" showed Castro sitting on a map of Cuba, saying "I got my job through the New York Times." The "National Review" has also said that Matthews either "has not the faintest understanding of how Communism functions" or has "developed a school boy crush on a powerful six-footer with a straggly beard."

Among Matthews' staunchest supporters is the "New Republic" magazine. This magazine agrees with Matthews that the issue is not the Communization of Cuba, but the goals which the revolution worked for. Matthews' supporters agree with his conclusion, "We are going to have to live with Fidel Castro and all he stands for while he is alive, and with his ghost when he is dead."

Matthews graduated from Columbia University in 1922, after he had served in the Tank Corps during World War I. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Matthews will speak earlier this week to the WCUNC Social Science Forum.

His speech here is sponsored by the International Relations Committee of the YM-YWCA and Pi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary.

Picketing Voted

The Chapel Hill Citizens Committee for Open Movies voted last night to resume picketing at the Varsity Theater on Sunday. The Carolina Theater will not be affected.

Meeting in St. Joseph Church, about 75 people voted without dissent for the new move. The picketing will last from 6 until 9:30 nightly, with pickets walking in half-hour shifts.

The picketing was approved after the committee was told by its negotiating team that the Varsity had shown no inclination to cooperate in working toward integration.

Pledges Selected For ROTC Honor

Company L, 8th Regiment, of Scabbard and Blade has announced pledge selections of NROTC Midshipmen and AFROTC Cadets.

Pledges selected from the NROTC are Midshipman Capt. Ronald E. McArthur, Midshipman Lt. Charles Lehmann, Midshipman CPO George R. Seastrom, Midshipman CPO Robert C. Crates, Midshipman 2-C PO Peter D. West, and Midshipman 2-C PO Robert Jones.

Scabbard and Blade is an honorary organization which requires "demonstration of outstanding ability" in either the NROTC or AFROTC programs for membership.

The group has sponsored such programs as the Military Ball each spring which is attended by both NROTC midshipmen and AFROTC cadets.

Brothers Four Slated Tonight

Singing Group, Joe Buskin Appear For Fall Germans

Tonight's the night for Fall Germans at 8.

German Club fraternity members and their dates will be entertained by the popular singing group, The Brothers Four, and Joe Bushkin, nationally reknown pianist and composer.

Bob Flick, Mike Kirkland, Dick Foley and John Paine (brothers in Phi Gamma Delta) had a Columbia contract, fame and a big record hit six months after their professional start in San Francisco, in October 1958. Greenfields set them on their way with records, and shortly after that, they made numerous network television appearances in New York.

The Brothers Four have played for many college audiences and have recently completed an engagement at the Carter Barron Theater with Johnny Mathis in Washington, D. C. They have also won popular and critical acclaim at the Newport Folk Festival.

Joe Bushkin has appeared with the Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, and Bunny Berigan bands, and composed the backgrounds and appeared in the Edmond O'Brien TV series, "Johnny Midnight."

'Tea & Sympathy' Tonight's Flick

Deborah Kerr, John Kerr and Lief Erickson star in tonight's free flick, the screen adaption of the stage success, "Tea and sympathy."

The film is a study of the sensitivity and torment of a prep-school boy who is accused of being a sissy. It tells the story of the teacher's wife who gives herself to the boy to reinstate his faith in his manliness.

Saturday night, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers will star in "Top Hat." Flicks will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall. ID cards are required.

Kennedy, Nehru Call For Nuclear Test Ban

Not Without Inspection, Kennedy Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy and Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru called Thursday for a nuclear test ban treaty "with necessary provision for inspection and control."

But Kennedy told Nehru, according to a communique, that the United States is unwilling to accept another uncontrolled moratorium on atomic tests.

The communique made plain that Kennedy had ruled out any acceptance of an uncontrolled test ban because of the Soviet resumption of tests "which broke the previous moratorium."

The joint communique winding up a four-day visit by the Indian leader said their talks had been "especially pleasant and rewarding."

Invited Kennedy to India

Kennedy and Nehru promised to "keep closely in touch with each other in the months and years ahead." The prime minister had said earlier that he had invited Kennedy to India and hoped the President could make it a year from this winter. But Kennedy told reporters he had no plans now to go there.

The communique said that both men exchanged views on the desirability of halting nuclear testing. It was issued a few hours after Nehru told a National Press Club audience that the Soviet tests were "very harmful—a disastrous thing."

SG Passes $250 Homecoming Bill

Homecoming activities got a boost from Student Legislature Wednesday night when the body appropriated $250 for the Homecoming queen and her court. It was one of eight bills passed in the special session.

One of the appropriations gave $142 to send six Carolina delegates to the National Collegiate Council for the United Nations this weekend in New York.

Two major items were passed to be included in next year's Student Government budget. They were:

Scholarship Provision

Provision for a $500 scholarship for the president of the student body. John Randall, sponsor of the proposal, argued that presidential duties prevent the president from carrying a full academic load. Therefore, Randall said, the expense incurred by the president in making up the deficiency "has placed the office financially beyond the reach of otherwise qualified candidates."

Provision to include the Goettingen Scholarship program in the budget at a cost of $2,966, was also passed. This year Legislature has appropriated $1.486. Order of the Grail, $100; Faculty Scholarship Committee $1,000; and Campus Chest $900.

The bill's sponsor, Henrietta Brown, said that the Campus Chest wants to branch out its activities now that the Goettingen program is established.

Rev. C. Parker Celebrates 50th

Rev. Clarence Parker will celebrate the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood this afternoon at 5:30 at a special Eucharist of Thanksgiving at the Chapel of the Cross.

Father Parker and his wife have lived in Chapel Hill since their retirement in 1952. He and his wife will also be honored at a reception Sunday afternoon at the Chapel of the Cross at 3. The Eucharist and the reception will be open to the public.

Bonds And Education

The world of North Carolina didn't come to an end because the people said so emphatically that they didn't want to issue $61,000,000 in bonds for a stew pot full of unrelated causes. Neither was the world of North Carolina saved for all time to come because the people didn't want that assorted set of bond issues put on their taxable backs.

What did happen could have been a blessing in disguise, though it will be a bitter blessing indeed for so many of us. This could be especially a blessing for the long-range cause of higher education. What happened in the defeat of the $31,000,000 in bonds for higher education was the first setback for any cause of education in North Carolina in generations. It was a setback, but it was not a defeat. It must come as a jolt to all in professional education, to all the supporters of education, and not just as a jolt to the very few dedicatde men at the top in higher education. Those very few men have worked day and night during this bond issue campaign. They took it upon themselves to speak for all the side issues which were tacked onto the coat tails of the education bonds in the election. And it must be reported in all honesty that they got little or no support from those in the lower echelons of education or from the public generally in the ranks of the supporters of education.

This must be a jolt to those who gave only lip-service or one-ballot service to the cause of education. This should convince them that pious head shaking and personal laziness won't do the job of carrying the cause of education.

The institutions of higher education badly needed this $31,000,000 to care for the thousands of young people who will be entering our colleges during the years immediately ahead. Now the men who direct those institutions must figure out a make-do way of caring for those young people, and those men will do just that.

This bond vote doubles the size of the challenge which already faced the new commission named to study the question of education after high school in North Carolina. This bond vote said very plainly to this commission: The importance of your job is now immeasurably greater, in that you must now put together a fine job of telling all the people of North Carolina the very best way in which they can provide higher education for the thousands who will be needing it in the years just ahead.

The people will do that job, if they are presented with a workable plan, with a plan which represents devotion and hard work and farsightedness and which isn't something built out of log-rolling or expediency.

There is little point now in assessing blame for what happened, but it is much in order to insist that this was not a defeat for education. It could be called a defeat for those who loaded so many other things onto the shoulders of education. It could be called a slap at the Sanford administration, and it undoubtedly was just that since the bitterness born of three hard campaigns in one year isn't something which will dissipate itself in less than a year. It could be called a vote of resentment against the sales tax on food, and undoubtedly it was just that. It could be called a reminder of the old political fact of life that it is best to ask all factions in a county for help at the polls, and not just one faction.

All those things will be hashed and rehashed in the days to come.

The important thing is not what was done yesterday.

The important thing is what must be done tomorrow, and the day after tomorrow, and all the tomorrows in the education of our young people.

Those necessary things will be done, let there be no mistake about that.

Gilding The Lily

The Student Legislature Thursday night appropriated $250 from student funds to defray costs of Homecoming Day this year.

While Homecoming festivities are well worth the total expense, two of the items—representing $140 of the total spent—seem a little ridiculous.

Sixty-five dollars will be spent for "charms" for the Queen's court. Another $75 will purchase the same item for the Sweetheart girls. The trinkets cost approximately $12 apiece.

One legislator proposed an amendment to another bill suggesting that the legislature appropriate funds to procure a concubine for the student body president. In light of the money appropriated for the "trinket fund," we're surprised it didn't pass.

Mental Health

The most recent dispatch from the Department of Health, Education and welfare reports that a plea has been made for the states to initiate a program to update the nation's mental health facilities.

A special assistant to Abraham Ribicoff, HEW Secretary, told a Governor's Conference that the Kennedy Administration intends to make the 1960's an era of "action for mental health."

A major overhauling of our mental health machinery is essential," Ribicoff's assistant said, adding that "much of the iniative must come from the states."

Considering the failure of the bond issue, including the mental hospitals item, that initiative might be a long time coming in this fair state.

There's An Uneasy New World In Cuba

(Editor's Note: Edwwin Tetlow, a foreign correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph, is the father of Tim Tetlow, a student at the University here.)

By EDWIN TETLOW

MIAMI—Men watching the Cuban drama at uncomfortably close range were not sure even during the past summer that the revolution of Dr. Castro had become a Communist one. Many were not then prepared to endorse the black and white view that the Americans had for so long.

Now events have caught up with that view. The turbulent and unnerving island is being turned at frightening speed into as close to a totalitarian State of the type rigged up behind the Iron Curtain as can be imposed upon inherently volatile individualistic and pleasure-loving Latin Americans.

ALL THE drab and dulling symptoms are to be seen and felt in Havana. The disastrous change has been developing sharply since Dr. Castro announced the birth of a single integrated political party in May.

Those who, probably using him as their front man, are determined to hitch a Soviet crab on to the North American big toe have taken charge. All but two of the 15 men running the party are old chiefs of the PSU (Communist party) of Cuba.

The Twenty-sixth of July movement, on which Fidel Castro founded his idealistic crusade for the emancipation of his country, has been nudged off the center of the stage. Its couple of actors have been given bit parts for old times' sake.

SINISTER GAZE

SO-CALLED "Committees for the Defense of the Revolution" have been installed in blocks of flats and other local bases so that the chosen and trusted Communist may keep a close eye on everybody else.

His sinister gaze is turned in particular on the Cuban who does not join the militia, does not now attend the great open-air rallies and does not always say the approving thing. A good estimate is that one in every 12 Cubans is a revolutionary spy.

About half a million militiamen and militiawomen, some of them dangerously inept with their rifles and machine pistols, are kept mobilized in relays of 50,000. They thus make a permanent defending force against all comers, including fellow-Cubans within the island.

Technicians and other visitors from behind the Iron Curtain are the new pampered elite. More than 70 Czechs were at the fraying Havana Libre (formerly Hilton hotel while I was there. So also for a weekend of free luxury were gangs of Juvenile Rebels attending a plenary session on Communist reform.

LEADERS OF THE PSP take a Cuban delegation to the Soviet Union. Russian and Chinese books and pamphlets dominate the bookstalls in Havana; one thoughtfully offered in this Roman Catholic country is called "Christ Was a Communist." Tins of fruit, Hungarian goulash and Chinese mutton line the shelves of the food department of the nationalized Woolworths in Lower Havana, and in these days of shortages have to be used by diplomats and their families.

Naturally Cubans rarely speak their feelings, but occasionally comes an outburst. One happened while I was in Varadero, a resort about 90 miles from Havana with one of the finest beaches in the world.

The man sitting alongside at a lunch counter in a People's Park in the center of Varadero was a young Cuban businessmen who had spent some years in Europe.

He suggested speaking in French, a language rarely used in Cuba. Freed from the fear of eavesdropping he poured out his feelings, with his young wife nodding approvingly as he spoke.

HAVANA HAD BEEN turned into a veritable cemetery, he said, and the whole country was being betrayed to the Russians. "Why should Fidel think he would get a better deal from them, with their record, than Cuba had from the United States?" he asked.

"Anyway," he added, "I'll bet that all those Russians now here look around and see what we have got in this lovely country and think we are idiots to have anything to do with Communism. I tell you I know now, like so many other Cubans, what it is to be afraid to lose all liberty."

The Communist business opportunists are following the flag. The void caused by the stoppage of American supplies, on which Cuba used to rely for her very life, is being filled at least partly. There are Czech electric light bulbs as well as Russian lorries.

The Czechs, indeed, are falling badly behind in their deliveries of such machinery as irrigation pumps and engines and it was good to see a British salesman moving in here and reporting satisfactory trading.

THE PRESSURE GROWS

But the signs and pressures are innumerable. The three or four newspapers, unworthy of the very name, take most of their identical news from Moscow. Outrageous lies about the Yankees and their spies and assassins contaminate the airwaves.

A most effective attempt has been made to eradicate American influence. It is now very shadowy indeed and English is becoming a forgotten language. There is no call for it now that the Americans have gone and the Cuban face is being so forcibly turned to the East.

As the Cubans' resentments against their material and psychological losses because of the revolution have swelled, so the heat of propaganda and control by the party and the hated security agents known as "G2" has been turned up.

The security men showed their skill at the time of that travesty of an invasion in the spring, and the whole apparatus of control has since become so persuasive and efficient that Cubans hardly dare open their mouths and, one notes sadly, are even forgetting how to laugh. Those who are against the revolution—and it is said that Dr. Castro now has the genuine support of only 30 per cent of the population—are cowed and dispirited and this explains their solemnity.

FOUR TRIBUNALS a day are still sitting in the grey rock fortress of La Cabana just across the entrance to Havana harbor. They are trying some of the 100,000 persons who were rounded up with astonishing speed at the time of the spring invasion.

Most of these suspects have since been released, but 60 have been shot and as many as 80 a day are being adjudged in single batches by the tribunals.

At another gaol in Havana are most of the 1,000 fighting men captured out of the invading force. Only four of these prisoners have been shot, because they were found to have been former criminal hirelings of Batista, and the rest are being kept, presumably for use as political pawns whenever another useful opportunity offers.

REAL BENEFITS

Still in the center of the limelight, still mesmeric in personality and still posturing like a Cuban Cromwell, is Fedil Castro the author of it all. Against the bleak story which must now be told of the straits into which his country has fallen must be recorded some of the benefits this revolution has wrought.

He has set her free of the economic and political bondage in which she was held for so long by the United States and her own clique of grasping millionaires. He has given real benefits in hopes as well as housing to the too poor. His early ideals were unexceptionable and for the first year of his reign he looked like realizing much of the social revolution he had in mind.

Where does he stand in this present Communist stronghold of Cuba? Many believe that while he is still technically in command he is in the grip of trained and determined Communists like Blas Roca and Anibal Escalante, the two giants of the PSP.

HE IS A visionary with no political affiliation save an urge to liberate Cuba from everything he feels is fettering her. He used the Communists in the first place because they were the most organized and efficient political organ in the country; now, because of those very assets, they are using him.

Nobody could pretend to know what might happen in Cuba, but one can recognize certain basic facts as one roams and observes in unhappy Havana. Fidel Castro, political puppet though he might have become within the revolution, is still physically its Atlas. If he falls, he will take the whole thing down with him, for nobody else in the island could wield anything like his sway.

The Americans must recognize that they have lost their unchallenged grip on Cuba probably forever. Fidel Castro has clearly given his country a permanent new status in Central America. He has taught Cubans that they have a right to their own country. At best the United States will have to share it more equitably with them than ever in the past, and might well have to share it also with some of the countries from afar who, thanks to Dr. Castro, have stepped into the United States' one-time private preserve.

Kemp To Reporter Coffee Or Vodka?

"Shall we have coffee or vodka," said Kemp Battle Nye the other day when we came for an interview.

Being on the Daily Tar Heel staff, we naturally chose coffee.

Kemp's was going strong. Ragtime music blared in the background; a gong sounded; people shouted; cars slowed down to look and wonder; and Kemp finally stopped his shouting to answer a few questions.

He poured coffee.

The questions we asked had been compiled by a board of experts carefully selected from the DTH staff. The questions were designed to cover the whole scope of human emotions, world problems, and other things.

* * *

Following is the text of the interview:

US: "What do you think of legalized prostitution?"

KEMP: "In the long run, it's better than free love. I lived for 11 years in Penping, where they have legalized prostitution."

* * *

US: "Would you care to make a few succinct comments on the Chapel Hill Merchant's Association?"

KEMP: "Yes, I think it's for the birds."

US: "Which birds?"

KEMP: "Actually, the Merchant's Association in my mind hasn't performed the function for which it was set up. It fights its own life blood—the 9,000 students here every year. If it weren't for these students we'd be another Carrboro.

"The Association gives the student ablotter, a ruler, and a bag and then begins to think the student is eternally indebted to it. The merchants should work for the student, not against him.

"Another thing — the merchants should back the campus chest 100%, now they refuse to even let students solicit the stores for contributions. That's one of the main reasons Milton, myself and Frank Ambrosio at the Dairy Bar have resigned from the Merchant's Association. We all contribute to the Campus Chest auction every year."

US: "Why did the police take you away Saturday before last?"

KEMP: "They were concerned about my violating the Blue Law, but I turned the cards on them: I asked them to escort me to the bank to make a night deposit. They didn't want to, but I demanded protection."

* * *

US: "What do you think of the world situation in general, in 25 words or less?"

KEMP: "Our greatest fear today is not Russia, but the Chinese. They are going to be our most important problem in the coming years, and I do not think we are paying enough attention to them."

US: "What would you do if you were president?"

KEMP: "I would probably follow the programs of Jack Kennedy. I think the line he is following is best for the country now."

We left Kemp surfeit with coffee and made our way through the howling mob in his store into the crisp Chapel Hill air.

"Don't Be Silly — That's Not My Kind Of Treaty"

'Let Yourself Go,' Says Otelia Connor

Today was the day. Football and band day at UNC. It rained intermittently in the morning and more of the same was expected for the afternoon, which could keep the crowd small at Kenan Stadium.

Someone offered be a ticket and a ride over to the stadium. I never go to the games, they last too long for me. But I accepted the ticket and walked over at the half to see and hear the many high-school bands perform with our UNC band. It was a colorful sight and many people remarked how well the music was synchronized by the many bands.

Instead of leaving after the half I thought I would sit awhile and watch the game. The first thing I know, the whole stadium was electrified by two passes which put Carolina ahead of Tennessee, in the last eight seconds of play.

FROM THE stadium I went to Open House at one of the fraternity houses where I sipped a cocktail and watched the young folks do the Twist for several hours. Boy, if you haven't seen the "Twist" you ain't seen nothing. The jitterbug and the Charleston were as water unto wine in comparison.

If some of my friends had gone with me they would have gotten up and walked out. One boy told his date if she ever danced the "Twist" he would leave the dance and not escort her home.

I couldn't agree with these sentiments less. While the dance looks like some wild voodoo giration from Africa, I onged to be able to get up and join in,—Just to get up and to lose yourself, relax all your tensions, and let yourself go. In this day of anxiety and tension, it is what everybody, young and old, needs, and the crazier and more senseless it looks, the better it is for you, much better for the participants than dancing cheek to cheek which was the vogue several decades ago.

BOTH THE DANCE and the jazz music were originated in the deep south by the Negroes, who have a natural sense of music and rhythm. And they never havemuch trouble letting themselves go. Alyl over the world the young people have taken to American jazz, from Princess Margaret of England to the working class behind the iron-curtain. The "Twist" may not look dignified, but there is nothing vlugar about it. You may not be able to get on the dance floor and let yourself go. But don't you wish you could!

Richard the Lion-Hearted says:

I would never have surrendered England ...if I'd had Jockey® brand support

C'mon, Dick! You're rationalizing. Jockey support[1] might never have secured you against the Emperor[2]. But it certainly would have provided snug protection against the physical stresses and strains of your active life. Your armorer never tailored a coat of mail more knowingly than Jockey tailors a brief—from 13 separate, body-conforming pieces.

1. Other "imitation" briefs (copies of the original Jockey brand) have no more Jockey support than a limp loin cloth.

2. Richard the Lion-Hearted, 1157-99, surrendered England and a huge ransom to secure his release from Henry VI.

Lemery's Freshmen Take On Fort Bragg In Road Battle

Coach Art Lemery's freshman soccer team will try for its third win of the season today when it travels to Fort Bragg to take on the tough G.I. team. The Braggmen defeated the UNC varsity by 3-2 in a pre-season practice game.

The Tar Babies, who defeated Virginia by 4-1 here Tuesday, now have a 3-2 record on the season. Coach Lemery expressed satisfaction over his team's ability to hold on to their 2-0 half time lead in the win, because they had lost two games in the late minutes.

Kepner Kicks Goal To Win For Heels

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The North Carolina soccer team, displaying a sharp defense while capitalizing on its only scoring opportunities, eked out its fourth straight victory yesterday by downing the University of Virginia in a 2-1 thriller at Charlottesville.

Kingman Brown, the Tar Heels swift outside right, opened the scoring for Carolina with 7 minutes left in the first half. Just 2 minutes later, Jamie Irvine, who was a thorn in the side of the Tar Heels all day with his tricky line play, countered with Virginia's only score of the game.

With one minute remaining in the third period and the score knotted at one apiece, Bob Kepner, climaxing his best effort of the season sewed it up for the Tar Heels with a drive from 12 yards out.

Coach Marvin Allen's booters, relying mainly on their fine backfield crew of Dick Bordogna, John Kenrick and Bill Snyder, played strictly defense in the final quarter to protect their slim lead.

Larry Steele, playing with a painfuly bruised thigh, was again outstanding in the Carolina nets, turning back 25 Cavalier shots. His counterpart from Virginia, Harry Benham, was credited with 20 saves.

League's Harriers Runt At University Of Va. Monday

By ED DUPREE

UNC, Duke, and Maryland—the ACC's "Big Three' in cross country— will dominate the field of runners in the conference championship meet next Monday at the University of Virginia.

The top ten finishers in the finals could all come from the powerful trio which has romped over the other five ACC members at will during the regular season. The Tar Heels, Blue Devils, and Terps each lost only one conference dual meet this fall and the outcome in the championship race could well be the closest the ACC has ever had.

The harriers who figure to place in or near the top ten are Carolina's Rett Everett, Gerry Stuver, and Carmine Lunetta; Duke's Jerry Nourse, Dave Blumfeldt, Lloyd Brinson, and Frank Campbell; and Maryland's John Garten, Guy Harper, and Marty Wells. Others to watch for are Carolina's sophomore Charlie Little, Ed Ledford of Wake Forest, and Jim Moorhead of Clemson, the number eight man in the 1960 meet.

UNC coach Dale Ranson rates Duke's Nourse the odds-on-favorite on the basis of his two first places in meets against Carolina plus a victory in Duke's easy win over Maryland early in the season. "However", Ranson adds, "teamwise and individually we plan to be at our peak and have our top performance of the season."

"I'm sure that our team is in real good shape and I'm confident that we're ready for our best performance yet. If we get the caliber of performance that the boys are capable of turning in, we should successfully defend our ACC title."

In addition to his top four, the baron of ACC cross-country coaches has seven men from which to determine his eight entrants in the race. These seven are Mike Folk, number four in the conference last year as a sophomore, Bob Bennett, Scott Brent, Jim Hodges, Lou Sullivan, Dave Brunson, and Charlie Tromba.

Only Frank Colavita and Dick Creditor of Maryland are missing from last year's top ten. The top six finishers—Everett, Stuver, Garten, Folk, Wells, and Lunetta along with Moorhead and Campbell are back for the 1961 race. In addition, Nourse, the co-champion in 1959 with teammate Cary Weisiger, is back to strengthen the field. Nourse missed the 1960 season because of military duty. The unbeaten Duke senior has rolled through the present season in superb fashion and seems ready to stake his claim for the top spot he shared two years ago.

The battle for team honors will steal the show at Charlottesville. Each of the "Big Three" will be seeking revenge for a loss to another member of the elite group. Carolina's lone loss was 35-34 to Maryland on a rainy day fit for only umbrellas and ducks. This soggy meet was a good example of the conference's improvement since last year's finals. Carmine Lunetta, the sixth man in the finals last year, finished only seventh in the dual meet with the always potent Terps. All six of the men who finished ahead of Lunetta at Maryland several weeks ago bettered his sixth place time in the 1960 finals on the same course—in the rain yet!

The Marylanders will be hoping to avenge their loss to Duke—in a meet that wasn't even close and the Blue Dukes would like nothing better than to take the measure of Carolina's blue-clad harriers.

Alexander Grabs Dorm Title

By John Montague

The Alexander Playboys wrapped up the 1961 Dormitory Tag Football Championship Wednesday afternoon by soundly whipping Joyner, 20-0.

Bobby Cornwell scored a touchdown in each half to pace the Playboys potent offense. Pete McKinnell went over for the other TD and Irvin Williamson and Cornwell made the extra points.

The Playboys thus completed successfully their march through the dorm playoffs, which included wins over Old East, Aycock and Grimes. The Alexander team chalked up a 3-0 record during the regular season play, giving the champions an overall 7-0 mark.

Wednesday was a big day for the Phi Delts. The White team won its division's championship, ripping the Delta Sig Rogue 18-8. Meanwhile, the Phi Delts' Blue team was scoring touchdowns right and left, in the process of a 50-6 shellacking of Sigma Nu in the Blue Division semi-finals.

The Phi Delt White team pulled out of an 8-6 deficit on Calvin Smith's TD to win the White championship. Dick Hendrickson scored the first touchdown with Dick Jones adding the insurance tally.

John Frye was responsible for all of the Rogues' eight points. He scored a touchdown and received credit for a safety, both coming in the first half.

Dusty Treasure from North Carolina Attics Is in the Spotlight at the Intimate this week

The Trademark Of A Compleat Carolina Gentleman

The sartorial reputation of the Carolina Gentleman extends far beyond the Chapel Hill classrooms. Milton's pioneer attempts in the early 1950's are largely responsible for this. Be it a new suit, sport coat, interesting shirts, new sweater hues,—you'll find them all in infinite assortments—to maintain that smart tradition.

So if you've been too busy hitting the books or waiting for cooler weather, now's the time to spruce up for the Germans and coming holiday season.

Those who will take the trip to study the role of the neutralist nations in the U.N. are Lynne Bartlett, Hassan Bahloul, Garry Blanchard, Pat Browder, Betti Brown, Page Bradham, Jan Bryant, Sarah Cullen, Ilze Daiga, Charla Duncan, David L. Edwards Jr., Judy Fisher;

Ann Flournoy, Jacques Ginesta, Mary Anne Johnson, Bob Kepner, Carol Krapf, Dolly Linker, Dieter Mahncke, Lann A. Malesky, Phill R. Matthews, Pat Harrison Miller, Sylvia Mullins, Julia Mullis, Antonio Munoz, Marie Overby;

Margaret Ann Rhymes, Channing Richards, Robert Richardson, Subir Roy, William Senkus, Robert Serrett, Ronald Southerland, Clare Stoddard, Yoshia Tashima, Catherine Thomas, June Todd, William Wells, Ralph Whisnant and Mary Woolman.

The first briefing seminar for the students will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the "Y," when the students will present their slips stating their intention to attend the seminar. At the second briefing session Wednesday evening, Tartt Bell of the American Friends' Service Committee will speak on the "Role of the Afro-Asian Nations in the U.N."

In New York briefing sessions have already been scheduled with the Cuban and U.S.S.R. delegations. The UNC seminar will join with a similar seminar group from Duke at the U.S. mission for a briefing on the American stand on nuclear testing.

In addition, other briefings are being scheduled with delegations from the various neutralist nations.

Politicos Cry For Dorm Group

The lower quad rang last night with politicians and their supporters crying "We want dormitory representation. We want Randy Gilliam."

The rally, beginning at 10:30, followed the Homecomng Pep Rally. About 40 boys milled around the speakers while more than 100 leaned out of the windows of Lewis, Graham, Aycock, Stacy and Everett to listen. Some of Gilliam's supporters carried torches of newspaper and kerosene.

The crowds gradually broke up just before 11 p.m. when the first shout for panties was heard. The politicians left.

Dormitory advisors were mingling through the crowd watching closely for further demonstrations. They were so prominent that a few got more cheers than the politicians.

Gilliam's speech emphasized the "crying need for social life in the dormitories." One of his supporters Joe Masi, said, "This is the year the dormitories can make a choice." He said the fraternity freshmen represented only one-ninth of the freshman class. "Let's march on the madras draped parthenons."

Mike Putzel also spoke, mentioning his recent fight with the University Party. He claimed that a vote for the independent, Gilliam, was a vote for the dorms.

CHEWS UP ADDRESS

BARNSLEY, England (UPI)—A dog was sent to the Humane Society shelter here Monday because he chewed up all of his address ticket except the part that reads "Ba" while on a train.

Officials now are checking towns whose names begin Ba.

Cadets Attending Game En Masse

The AFROTC Cadet Corps here will pay tribute to Veterans Day, today, by attending the LSU-UNC football game in unity. The 221 cadets will sit in a special section reserved for them and their dates in observance of this occasion.

Veterans Day was established by Congress in 1954 in honor of servicemen and women who have served their country in the military forces. Prior to 1954 Veterans Day was officially designated Armistice Day.

IN CLOSE VOTE

SMITHFIELD (UPI) — A two-part educational program costing $1.4 million was defeated by a close margin in Johnston County Tuesday. The vote was 2,264 for and 2,613 against a proposal to build classroom improvements, a county maintenance shop and establish a school district consolidation reserve fund.

Canadians On Carolina Exchange

A busload of Canadian students from the University of Toronto arrived here yesterday for the annual weekend exchange trip.

The students, who attended the Germans concert last night, are staying with student hosts in apartments, dormitories, fraternities and sororities. This year's hosts, headed by co-chairmen Linda Richert and Pat Morgan, are:

Walter Dellinger, Robin Fawsett, Wayne Foushee, Bobby Foxworth, James Gaulden, Wade Hargrove, David Moore, Joe Oppenheimer, Mickey Simmons, Pete Thompson, Ronny Tygart, Betti Brown, Judy Clark, Martha Doughton, Emily England, Jan McCloskey, Karen Nelson, Pam Parker, Fatma Ramazanoglu, Elizabeth Reed, Lila Smith and Margaret Ann Wilson.

The weekend schedule for the Canadian students includes a reception at Chancellor Aycock's home, a party at Lakewood Estates, lunch at sorority houses, the LSU-UNC homecoming game and afterwards a hay ride and picnic at Hogan's Lake.

Several discussions will also be held for the students about race relations in the South and the differences in student life at the two universities.

For Defeated Bond Issues

CU Will Renew Bids For Money

By DRENA EDWARDS

Next year the Consolidated University will present a budget request to the Advisory Commission that will include the capital improvements defeated in Tuesday's bond election.

CU President William Friday said Thursday "We believe that these programs are so vitally essential to the strength and development of the university that we shall have to ask for their approval again."

If the Advisory Budget Commission approves the requests they will be sent to the 1963 General Assembly for action. By 1963 the CU's long-range capital improvement program will be two years behind schedule.

Friday estimated that even if the legislature acts favorably, it would probably be 1965 before any of the capital improvements were completed.

The defeated bonds would have meant $13.5 million to the CU. Friday said that matching funds from the federal government and student fees would have brought the total to $18 million.

Meanwhile Friday added, the CU "will have to slow down some." Enrollment, research and extension services will feel this pinch he said.

CU Meets Friday

The CU officials who met with Friday in his office on Thursday were Chancellor William Aycock of UNC, Chancellor Fred Caldwell of State College, C.U. Secretary Fred Weaver, C.U. Treasurer A. H. Shepard and Claude Teague, a consultant to Friday.

Chancellor Aycock yesterday said that "At UNC we are going to do as many makeshift things as possible within our resources."

More specifically he said "We are planning to go ahead with renovating Cobb Dorm for women. We will explore the possibilities of additional reading room space at least on a temporary basis. Perhaps we can expand the eating facilities in the new Craige and Ehringhaus dorms."

Aycock said that while the University will try to make do with these temporary setups, "we will be looking for more permanent solutions."

LIVE AND LEARN

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — You don't have to tell oil deliveryman Richard Reith not to believe everything he reads.

Reith looked at the gauge on the storage tank in the basement of a variety store which showed a 1,000 gallon capacity.

He pumped 1,000 gallons into the 500-gallon tank and it took firemen an hour to clean up the mess.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Police Supt. Orlando W. Wilson was in trouble with the law today because of his Canine Corps training grounds. Mayor Richard Daley reminded the county board Monday that the area where the 40-acre dog farm is located is zoned for single family dwellings.

The World Cannot Continue Without Disarming—Nehru

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UPI) —Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, warning that the world "cannot continue for long without disarmament," appealed to the major powers today to resume negotiations toward ending the cold war immediately.

He also told the United Nations General Assembly he was optimistic the problems of Berlin, Germany and southeast Asia which he discussed with President Kennedy in Washington "are capable of solution if approached honorably and without attempts to bring discredit to any party." Nehru branded the resumption of nuclear testing "a great misfortune."

He dismissed as "basically were continuing to agitate the evil" the question of whether one nation has or can get an advantage in nuclear weapons over another country.

"I am convinced that the modern world cannot continue for long without disarmament," the 71-year-old neutralist leader declared. "It is important that we should approach the question with speed and deliberation and determination to solve it rather than merely show the other party to be wrong."

He said "those great countries which have the greatest responsibility because they possess the biggest weapons should address themselves again and again to negotiations." He also proposed that the General Assembly "appoint a committee" to show how international cooperation that already is taking place in trade, scientific and other areas "can be extended . . . to lessen distrust and conflict."

Nehru's 38-minute speech to the assembly also touched on colonialism—denouncing Portugal as a hold-out colonial power and warning that "external interventions" Congo crisis.

Nehru was known to have tried to persuade Kennedy to drop any possible plans to send American troops to fight Communist guerrillas in southeast Asia. He also sought, unsuccessfully, to get Kennedy to agree to another voluntary moratorium on U.S. nuclear testing without trying to match Russia's multi-megaton explosions in the atmosphere.

Kennedy stuck to his announced position that U.S. tests in the atmosphere would be resumed "if necessary" to national security.

Coeds Register For Dorm Rooms

Acting Dean of Women Mrs. Martha DeBerry yesterday asked all women students desiring dormitory space for the spring semester to sign up their dorms before Thursday, Nov. 16.

A $25 room deposit and a room reservation card are required to reserve a room, she said. "Failure to sign up for a room during this period means the student may not be able to live in the room of her choice," Mrs. DeBerry said.

She also said that women students who have been living in town who wish to move into a dorm for the spring, should come by her office, 202 South Building, before Thursday.

Beat Dook Queen Selected

Some lucky Carolina coed will be chosen Queen of the Dook parade Tuesday night.

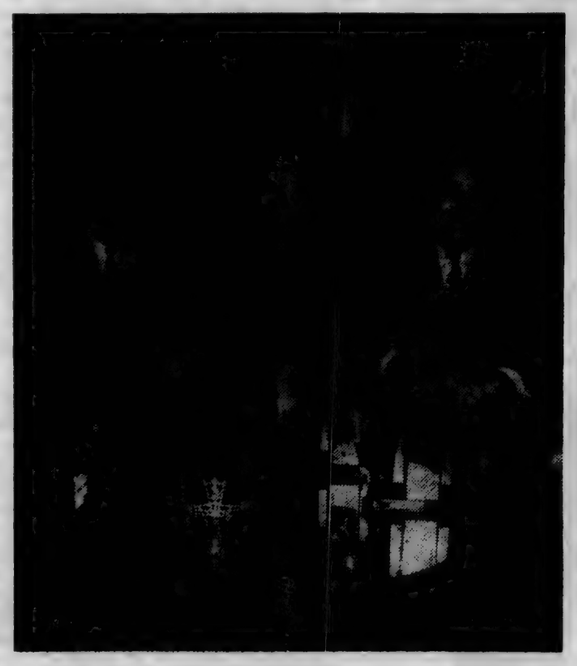
Final entries for the contest will be taken until Monday night by Fuller Honeycutt or Jackie Lahr of Phi Kappa Alpha fraternity. The PiKAs have traditionally sponsored the Beat Dook activities each year.

Winner of the contest will be announced Friday when the Beat Dook parade of at least 50 floats will swing onto Chapel Hill's main street. Groups interested in entering floats in the parade have been asked to also contact Lahr or Honeycutt before Monday.

Five trophies will be presented by the PiKA's for the floats: best all-around entry, best sorority entry, best fraternity, best women's dorm entry and best men's dorm entry.

This year's parade will include floats and cars filled with beauty queens, drill units from the Naval and Air Force ROTC, color guards, majorettes, the University band and a number of high school bands.

Formation of the parade will begin Friday at 2:15 p.m. on the intramural field of Woollen Gym. The parade will leave at 3:15 p.m., moving to lower quad to Spencer dorm, where it will turn left on E. Franklin St. to Sloan's Drug Store. From there the parade will turn left down fraternity row to left, it will continue past South Building and return to the Gym. the Carolina Inn. After another



BEAT DOOK PARADE—Phi Kappa Alpha will present these five trophies to the best floats in the Beat Dook Parade Friday afternoon. Float entries and entries for the Queen should be turned into Jackie Lahr (left) or Fuller Honeycutt (right) at the Pika house before Monday night. Janice Haley, center, was last year's Beat Dook chapter queen.

'Beggar's Opera' Sets Extra Shows

Two extra performances of "The Beggar's Opera" will be given because of the heavy demand for tickets, Carolina Playmakers Business Manager John W. Parker announced here yesterday. There will be a Sunday matinee Nov. 19 at 2:30 p.m. and another performance Tuesday, Nov. 21, at 8:30 p.m.

Originally scheduled to run Nov. 15-19, tickets for the Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening performances are already sold out. Parker urged those wanting tickets for the remaining and holdover performances come by early to insure good seating.

Tickets for "The Beggar's Opera" are available at the Playmakers Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall (next to the Scuttlebutt) and at Ledbetter-Pickard, both in Chapel Hill. All seats are reserved at $2.00 each.

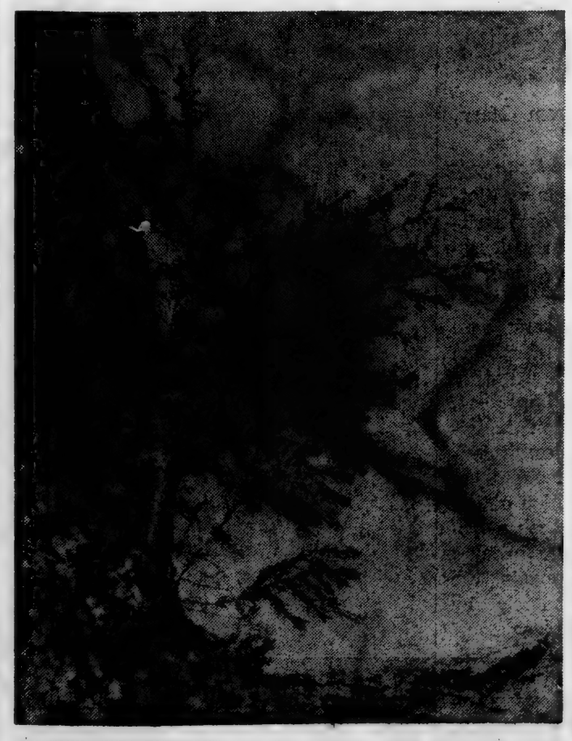
Maple's Offspring



Red Cedar's papa was a maple or so it seems. This little 11" red cedar has sprung up in the crook of a low limb on a maple tree beside Carr dorm. Dr. C. R. Bell of the botany department explained that leaves and other organic material must have gathered in the hollow allowing the red cedar seed to plant its roots. The tree may live until it has exhausted the minerals in the material, he said.

Warning From Finland

Events in the past few days have made it apparent to some that Russia intends to precipitate a crisis in Finland on the heels of the Berlin crisis. The freedom-loving Finns fear that their tiny country is about to be gobbled up by the Russian bear.

Russia demanded last week "consultations" with Finland under a 1948 mutual assistance treaty, "for ensuring defense of both countries from the threat of a military attack by Western Germany and allied states."

The State Department in Washington views the "absurd" pretext of a German threat as the opening move for stationing Soviet troops on Finnish soil and diverting world attention from Russian pressure on Berlin.

Neutral Finland fears she will be "kidnapped" by the Soviets and pulled behind the Iron Curtain. Her geography and history gives Finland a basis for concern.

The Russians' latest demands to Finland recall the overture to the Winter War of 1939-40, when a Soviet land-air-sea offensive against the Land of the Midnight Sun ended prolonged negotiations over Soviet demands for Finnish territory. Only the magnificent courage of the Finns (they called it sisu, or guts) against great odds kept Russia from closing the Iron Curtain around Finland after that brief, but hot war.

Had Finland been as easy to conquer as the Russians thought, she no doubt would have suffered the same fate as Poland and Hungary.

Today Finland, which shares her eastern border with Russia, sees the handwriting on the wall from the Hungarian revolution of 1956.

Let the Finns speak for themselves. Following are excerpts from a letter from Finland received by UNC junior Rebekah Royster of Lexington, who was an American Field Service exchange student to Finland in 1958:

"Now we are living in the middle of the most serious crisis after the Second World War. The Russians sent a note for Finland. They want to talk about West Germany and Berlin. W eare afraid of the worst, that means—something like the Hungarian crisis of 1956 might happen here. We are very much afraid that the communists will try to take our country. If it would happen—we hope not—it would be impossible to flee to other countries. . . . It is horrible to think (of it) and we are afraid of a new war here. Maybe this is too pessimistic, but the situation is very serious. If something awful happens, you know that we cannot help it . . .

"All we can now do is to pray. We Finns haven't done anything wrong to anyone, why should we be punished?"

Why indeed should the freedom-loving people of Finland fall prey to the Russians? If the United States plays "hands off" as it did during the Hungarian revolution, will the Finns be able to fight off the Soviets again? Of course not.

Will Finland be abducted while the remainder of the Free World sleeps?

—Tom Bolch

'Socialist Humanism'

You might not think it from recent news, but a celebrated Marxist theoretician, the Polish Comrade Schaff, concedes that Communism has been losing the ideological war—or, as he put it, "the struggle for the mind of man." The reason—or so we gather from passages excerpted and translated from an article by Comrade Schaff in a party magazine called the Przegad Kulturdiny, or Cultural Review—is that Marxism has never deigned to provide answers to the fundamental questions about which all other philosophers have been worrying for the last 2500 years or so, such as the meaning and purpose of human life, the nature of the universe and the relation to it of the human individual, and so on.

The truth is that during the era of its greatest fascination for Western intellectuals, which is to say the period between the two World Wars, communism had assumed the guise not of a science but of a sort of mystique, or sibyline revelation. The British editor, John Frederick Lehman, one of those who flirted fondly but not irrevocably with the cult, has described the effort of the infatuated young men to interpret such seemingly apocalyptical events as the Abdication, the depression, Mussolini, Hitler and the Spanish Civil War in terms of the fashionable oracle and how at the Bloomsbury teas and cocktail parties they earnestly buttonholed one another asking,

What's the word from Marx, boys?

What does he perpend?

And the whole obsession was later to be analyzed by a French writer, M. Raymond Aron, in a devastating essay called The Opium of the Intellectuals.

The orthodox—or at any rate Leninist-Communist—doctrine has been that thought the destiny of human society is all important, the aspirations of human individuals are of virtually no consequence. Comrade Schaff appears to believe that this subordination of the person to the mass has been a tactical mistake; but he also believes that communism can regain the ideological advantage merely by showing how the highest degree of personal development and fulfillment can be realized in working for the perfection of society, and to this proposed line of propaganda he gives the name of "Socialist humanism." Our own opinion, however, is that what has really destroyed the ideological appeal of communism has been its political triumph. . . . Washington Post.

Peace Corps Ready, Says UNC Grad

By SWAG GRIMSLEY

COLOMBIA—In a small agricultural experiment stat on located 25 miles from Bogota, the Colombia contingent of the U. S. Peace Corps is receiving its final training. Before arriving in Colombia, the 62 members of this select group spent two months at Rutgers University studying Latin American history, sociology, Spanish, and the fundamentals of community development.

For a month the young Americans have had extensive orientation about customs, problems, programs, and people of Colombia. President Lieras, Cardinal Concha, ministers of the government, and many local experts have taken an active part in their program.

Here in Colombia, the Peace Corps will work under the guidance of CARE, which has been accepted by most Colombians for its extensive and necessary programs for supplementing the diets of thousands of hungry school children. The Peace Corps is not here to serve CARE, but it will be responsible to their administration and leadership.

The Peace Corps' project in Colombia is community development. Already there are many Colombian agencies in this field, the most important one being "Accion Comunal." "Accion Comunal" is a government agency that encourages and lends financial support carried out by local communities.

ANOTHER GROUP with which the Peace Corpsmen will work is sponsored by the Coffee Growers' Association. These "cafeteros" are similiarly-trained and will be paired with one Peace Corpsman to form a team of two for community development in the coffee-growing regions.

Specifically, the members of the Peace Corps will be placed in small villages, or municipalities, and attempt to stimluate and help direct community projects for the village and surrounding countryside. The most important contacts will be the local priest and the local farmers, called "campesinos." Much of the training in Colombia has been concerned with utilizing the abundant manpower of the "campesinos" in carrying out needed programs in public health, education, and agriculture.

It must be pointed out that the Peace Corpsmen are not experts in any of these fields. They will likely be the most educated persons in their respective areas, and it is hoped that their prior awareness of conditions existing in particular villages will give them greater insight for advising and assisting in comunal action projects.

* * *

THE COLOMBIAN government has put many resources at the disposal of the Peace Corps. They will be able to call on doctors and dentists for local school children. Agricultural experts are available for advising about local farm problems. Machinery and construction advice will be made available to communities which plan building projects. In addition to government aid, private agencies such as CARE, Food for Peace, and the Heilfer Foundation have promised to respond to calls for food aid.

Still Recovering

Colombia is still recovering from ten years of rural violence. Today there is much killing in certain parts of the country. The President personally helped choose areas where physical danger is least likely to be a problem for the young Americans.

The Catholic Church has been cultivated for its support, from the Pope to the rural priests. No Peace Corpsman will be sent to a village where the residents are hostile or the local priest has not promised his support. Religion should not be a problem.

In the past six weeks I have met nearly all the sixty-two members of the Peace Corps here in Colombia. Several times I have joined them in their training program. From this short but close contact with them, I offer the following personal comments.

THE OVERWHELMING majority of the Peace Corpsmen feel that they are here to learn as well as teach. As one of them said, "I do not know if I will teach much here, but I am sure I will learn a lot." It is the emphasis on learning and helping that caused nearly all the young men to volunteer for the Peace Corps.

The boys do not feel that they must propagandize per se for the United States. In their presence and actions they hope the local "campesinos" will gain a greater insight and respect for all North Americans. One member of the group spoke for all when he said, "We do not come to recommend the capitalist system of the United tates, but to collaborate in the solution of the problems in accord with the environment."

The group is one of individuals. They joined because they were individuals, and the weeding-out process that was taking place while in training at Rutgers did not lend itself to friend-making. Many of the boys feel this has kept the Peace Corps from being a closely-knit unit. But since the men will be working alone here in Colombia, they need not worry about close acquaintances among themselves.

Excessive Pubicity

IT IS MY OPINION that the Peace Corps has been publicized excessively. Also, they have been hampered by the U. S. and Colombian governments. It has been a "dream come true" to many of these idealistic, and practical, young Americans. I was aware of an excessive amount of cockiness when the corpsmen first arrived, but the new environment and hard work have brought them back to a well-balanced psychological state of mind. The CARE authorities say that publicity is necessary to introduce the Peace Corps to the Colombians. The U. S. government publicizes the Peace Corps to stimulate more volunteers for the increasing number of programs now being planned. Our government was disappointed in the small amount of applications in the early months of the Peace Corps.

When the only woman minister of the Colombian government spoke to the Peace Corps, she began her talk with these words: "The single women of Colombia are very happy you are here." All of the young men are single. In this very Catholic country, the Spanish traditions of courtship still hold firm (as I know from personal experience.) Therefore, a lonely, eligible corpsman may succumb to an attractive senorita. As many Colombians have said, the greatest contribution a Peace Corpsman could make to their country is himself, through matrimony of course.

THE PEACE CORPS has had over four months of Spanish study. Some are nearly bilingual, others can scarcely communicate in the language. Although I have been in Colombia only five weeks longer than the Peace Corps, many times I have been asked to translate for several of them. But they will learn much quicker when the group is split up for their assignments in the small villages.

A good Peace Corpsman in Colombia must have great patience; he must have leadership ability; and he must be able to drink beer with the "campesinos" in the little village stores in the evening. Abstention from drinking indicates to simple farmers a miser. They feel that when drinking with friends, money is not wasted.

Overall, I am pleased with the Peace Corpsmen sent to Colombia. They are representative of our best, and they will do us justice.

World Affairs Are American Affairs: American Affairs Are Those Of World

To a greater degree than ever before, world affairs are merican affairs, and American affairs are those of the world.

The University and World Affairs, (Dec. 1960)

The American University serves the high needs of society as no other institution can, but it has often been said that the colleges and Universities in this country have been traditionally preoccupied with their self-perpetuation.

In their attitude towards internationalism this is a policy which they cannot afford to pursue. Lord Lindsay, a noted English educator, said once that Universities "can be their beautiful selves only if they are something else as well, and remember that just as they are served by, so must they serve the community. They have to serve the community in their own characteristic way. They are not to do everything the community may ask them to do if that would destroy their highest powers of giving the community what no other institution can give it; but supply its highest needs they must. . . . It would be expected therefore that as society changes, and as its needs change, the universities will change also."

THE CHAPEL HILL community has acknowledged and welcomed foreign students for many years; in fact there ar eno less than 160 overseas students enrolled this year. However after the beginning of the year when the orientation programs are concluded and the brief spasms of enthusiasm that one associates with the Chapel Hill atmosphere have died, we settle down to the regularities of University life.

It is in this atmosphere that the gap of communication widens between the foreign student and his American host.

The international student finds few directions to follow except his work; all-too often he is confronted with a blatantly naive attitude on the part of the American student.

THE BRIEF PROGRAMS to arouse International awareness, such as the U. N. Emphasis week are spasmodic and organized by a very hard-working group who manage to obtain little interest.

Yet in this country education is now catapulted to the position where it may be the major determinant in the dynamics of social change. Indeed in the present government there must be more individuals with the soundest educational background that is available than there have been in any other government.

In the Universities of today are the leaders of tomorrow; not only the political leaders but leaders in industry, commerce, law, diplomacy, education, and economics. It is the responsibility of each individual to become informed. In a world that is daily becoming smaller, he cannot afford not to. In a situation of unconcern, as Whitehead said "ignorance has the vice of guilt."

"If You Don't Want The Kid Harmed, Come To Cemetery Hill, And . . ."

Sunday... & Sanity

With its newest attempt to enforce its blue law, Virginia has unwittingly taken another step toward abandonment of the whole ramshackle structure of restricted Sunday sales. After 15 months of litigation, the courts have all agreed that the latest version of the law is constitutional. Whether it represents common sense is another matter. What actuary would predict a long and vigorous life for a piece of legislation that permits one to buy a real pumpkin on Sunday but prohibits one from buying a cardboard pumpkin and, again, permits one to buy that same cardboard pumpkin when it is filled with candy?

Last year a Philadelphia judge attacked the blue law there with the complaint that "there is no intelligible, logical principle by which one may determine what is excluded and what is included." In Virginia, we are more fortunate. The principle here is clear. The law permits one to trade in the necessities of life, like restaurant meals, toothpaste and football tickets. It outlaws the traffic in frivolities like food to be cooked.

IN AN ATTEMPT to protect the small merchant's day off, it prohibits sales of most goods in which he must compete with the big seven-days-a-week chains. But, on the other hand, the law does not interfere with the roadside stands that sell home-grown meat and produce to Sunday drivers.

This law is written to cut distinctions still finer. One may buy a "mobile home," but not a trailer. It is illegal to sell sporting goods, but perfectly legal to sell fishing tackle. In Suffolk, police ruled that no store could sell tobacco. As a result the automatic vending machine in the hallway at police headquarters did a booming trade.

BLUE LAWS were effective in the simple life of the small agricultural communities of the last century. Once the basic principle was diluted, the laws fell into a chaos of logic-chopping and protection for special interests. If the General Assembly stands by the absurdities it has created, the blue law will, in time, either be shot to pieces by the courts or starved by tacit neglect.

'We Must See War As It Is'

To The Daily Tar Heel:

Let us recognize war as an international crime and outlaw war for the individuals of the nations. This can be accomplished by electing representatives into the United Nations and granting them the authority to outlaw war on an individual basis. The individual may establish his basic international rights and achieve international recognition.

Individual responsibility for crime is a principle used within all nations of the world. As a principle, it is universal. It can undoubtedly succeed if it is applied under international law. It places the individual in a position to express his morality and virtually prevent war. The people of the nations can establish and uphold the laws outlawing war and bring war to a close-thereby expressing their mutual will for peace.

A POWERFUL international army capable of subduing the larger national states is neither desirable nor attainable. Individual responsibility for the crime of war is the only universally acceptable means capable of breaking up the extremely dangerous concentrations of power found within the national states. A modest international police force based on individual responsibility for war provides a solid basis for collective civilian security and disarmament including atomic weapons. A start for civilian peace has to be made. It cannot be achieved unless the individual is recognized internationally among at least a majority of the larger nations.

Communism and capitalism gain major expression through the power of the state. Anything which inhibits that power can curtail their future expansion and prevent the world from being divided into power camps based on fear.

The primary purpose of law is not to prevent or punish crime. It is to place the responsibility for crime upon the individual. This gives the individual free choice and frees the vast majority from crimes against their conscience. Where laws are not established, gang rule usually prevails. Under these circumstances, the individual must either go along with the gangs or tolerate crime. The principle of individual responsibility under law frees the individual from gang crimes such as robbery and murder. War must be legally recognized for what it actually is . . . etc., etc., etc.

String Quartet To Present Concert

The University String Quartet, assisted by Elisabeth Naur, clarinetist, will present the third concert of the Tuesday Evening Series in Hill Hall Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Quartet members Edgar and Dorothy Alden, Jean Heard and Mary Gray Clarke will perform Mozart's Quartet in G Major, K. 387; Ross Lee Finney's Sixth String Quartet in E; and Brahms Quinet in B Minor, Op. 115, for clarinet and string quartet. They will be joined by Mrs. Naur for the Brahms Quintet.

Dr. Alden, first violinist and assistant conductor of the UNC Symphony, teaches violin, theory, music appreciation and graduate courses in the Music Department. Former concert master of the North Carolina Symphony and of the Mozart Festival Orchestra in Asheville, he has appeared as soloist with both of these as well as other orchestras.

Mrs. Alden, violist and teacher of strings in Chapel Hill, has also held first chair position in the N.C. Symphony and the University Symphony.

NROTC Competition Open

Capt. John C. Spencer, Commanding NROTC Officer and professor of Naval Science, has announced the 1962 competition for the regular NROTC program is open and applications for entry can be accepted until Nov. 15.

The NROTC program offers eight semesters of college work at any level, all books and tuition plus $50 a month retainer pay. Upon acceptance the student attends one Naval Science course per semester and participates in three six-week summer cruises. After eight semesters the student is commissioned as ensign USN or second lieutenant USMC according to his choice and serves on active duty for four years.

The final date for mailing applications is November 17.

Interested male U.S. citizens, regardless of their year in school, may apply at the Naval Science office in the Naval Armory.

Tar Heels Take On Strong LSU Here Today

Once-Beaten Tigers At Homecoming

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Sports Editor

North Carolina faces one of its toughest tests of the season, if not the toughest in the past few years, as the Louisiana State footballers bring their powerful, colorful machine to Kenan Stadium today. The two teams will square off in a Homecoming battle at 2 o'clock.

Coach Paul Dietzel's Tigers from Baton Rouge are fresh from a 10-7 win over Mississippi. With this victory, the Bengals vaulted into the fourth place in the country. After losing their first game of the season to Rice by 16-3, LSU has put down six consecutive opponents, and has allowed only 28 points to the six losers.

North Carolina will be shooting for its fifth win of the year. The Tar Heels set down Tennessee in the final 15 seconds last week to pull their record up to 4-2.

A capacity house is expected in Kenan Stadium, and this means something like 43,000. The game will also be televised over ABC.

The LSU lineup is dotted with players who have been praised by other coaches. Left halfback Jerry Stovall, a 193-pound junior, and guard Roy Winston, a 224-pound senior, have been nominated for All-America on the basis of their play this season.

Stovall, one of the top backs in the south, leads the Tiger team in four categories. He has carried the ball 48 times for a rushing average of 6.6, has caught seven passes for 109 yards, and has returned two kickoffs for a 28.0 yard average. He does the team's punting, and has a 38.4 average in that department.

Also in the first team backfield for LSU are quarterback Jimmy Field, who wrested his position away from Lynn Amedee early in the season; fullback Earl Gros and halfback Wendell Harris.

The second team backfield includes Amedee and halfbacks Bo Campbell and Ray Wilkins and fullback Charles Cranford.

Carolina Coach Jim Hickey is expected to go with the same lineup that played against Tennessee. Quarterback Ray Farris, who does what is against Dietzel's religion and plays all the time on offense, will direct the attack. He commands a stable of halfbacks including Gib Carson, Ward Marslender, Jimmy Addison, Lenny Beck, Roger Smith and Joe McLamb. At fullback are the powerful Bob Elliott and Joe Davies. Junior Edge and John Flournoy are the "Chinese Bandits" of the UNC team when they replace Farris on defense.

Playing for Carolina in the line, where the story of the game will probably be worked out, are ends George Knox and Steve Yates, tackles Vic Esposito and Tony Hennessey, guards Jim LeCompte and Jack Tillery, and center Joe Craver.

The Tiger line includes ends Gene Sykes and Jack Gates, tackles Don Estes and Billy Booth, guards Winston and Monk Guillot, and center Dennis Baubatz.

Half-Price Passes For Duke, WF Tilts On Sale Now

A large supply of half-price tickets for the UNC games at Duke and Wake Forest still is offered to Carolina students. These tickets are on sale in the Woollen Gym ticket office. The deadline on these half-price sales has been extended from today until next Wednesday.

Students who wish to attend the Duke game in Durham next Saturday should pick up a special coupon at the ticket office. It is only with this ticket that they will be able to buy a ticket for $2.25, or half of the regular price. Date tickets for this game, and student wives' tickets will sell at the regular price.

For the Wake Forest game in Winston-Salem on Nov. 25, half-price tickets are being sold for $2. These are non-transferrable, and the holders must present their athletic passcards for admission. Students may buy additional tickets for their wives or dates for the regular price.

Prep Runners Hold Event Today

The North Carolina high school cross-country championship meet will be run at Finley golf course today at 11:30 a.m. Paul Snell of Northwest Forsyth is the individual favorite in a field of 118 runners from 18 schools around the state.

UNC cross-country Coach Dale Ranson is in charge of the meet and has been working on its organization in his free time during the past few weeks.

Fencing Club At Carolina Still Seeks Varsity Label

By CHUCK MOONEY

Cyrano de Bergerac used to fence for the UNC team.

Or at least his twentieth-century counterpart did.

Several years ago Bill Mudd, using a sabre against VMI, composed a poem during a match and recited it to his opponent, just as Cyrano did. He confounded his opponent and won the bout.

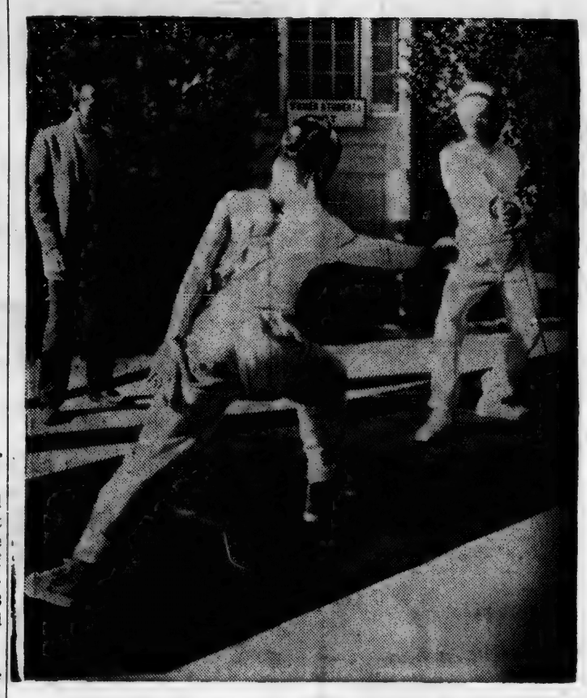
Strategy like this is the very essence of fencing. "Fencing is psychologically subtle," says Fencing Coach Pebley Barrow. "When the director says 'fence,' you may do anything to trick your opponent into dropping his guard.

"Bill Orr would deliberately assume weird or contorted poses instead of proper fencing form," he continued. "Bill's opponents were completely confused. He would hit them from the sides, front, back, top — everywhere except where they expected it."

Fencing started at Carolina in the 1930's when Dr. Robert Linker of the French department gave UNC its first set of foils. Dr. Linker coached the first team which fenced competitively until WW II. Coach Barrow revived the team in 1949.

Under his coaching, the team regularly defeated the State College team, which had varsity recognition, until it recently became inactive. The UNC team is seeking varsity status, but has not been recognized.

Carolina's top fencers have gone to the NCAA Championships, an annual event for collegiate fencers, for the past five years and, according to Coach Barrow, have placed high in the finals.



TOUCHE!—James W. Dale parries a sabre thrust by James Ness. This bout is similar to the one in which Bill Mudd composed and quoted poetry.

UNC Students Pre-Register

The Registration Office in Hanes Hall has announced that pre-registration advising for the spring semester will take place Nov. 28 to Dec. 16.

The following priority system will be observed: graduating seniors, Nov. 28, 29 and 30; other seniors, Dec. 1 and 2; graduate students, Nov. 29, 30, Dec. 1 and 2; juniors, Dec. 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8; sophomores, Dec. 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15; freshmen, Nov. 27-Dec. 2; and anyone else, Dec. 16.

Green forms will be accepted at Registration Office, 01 Hanes Hall, on the above indicated days only.

Students in the General College should follow the procedure below:

Freshmen: sign the appointment sheet in 308 South Building during the period Nov. 13-17.

Persons should bring their planned academic program for the first two years to appointments with advisers.

Students then obtain registrations form from advisers and turn it in to the Registration Office in Hanes Hall.

Sophomores will sign the appointment sheet in 308 South during the period Nov. 30-Dec. 11. Bring lists of courses for the Spring Semester to appointments with advisers. Obtain registration form from advisers and turn it in to the Registration Office in Hanes Hall immediately.

The College of Arts and Sciences will preregister by class as given above. Students who have a Major will see their Departmental Adviser, secure a Green Form, and take it to Hanes Hall for processing. Pre-Law, Pre-Med, Pre-Dental, International Studies and Industrial Relations majors and Special Students see their Adviser in the Dean's Office.

The School of Business Administration will preregister Nov. 28 in the basement of Carroll Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Students must sign appointment books in the main entrance to Carroll Hall during the period of Nov. 13-Nov. 20.

The School of Education will preregister by class as given above. Obtain Green Form in duplicate from adviser and take it to 101 Peabody for approval. Leave one copy there and take original to 01 Hanes Hall for further processing.

The Graduate School will preregister on days as given above. Regular students now enrolled in the Grad School should see Departmental Adviser, secure Green Form, take it to the Graduate School for approval and then to Hanes Hall for further processing. Undergraduate students who will graduate in January and plan to enroll in the Graduate School in the Spring Semester are not eligible to preregister and must register on February 2 or 3.

The deans of the schools of Nursing, Dental Hygiene, Public Health, Social Work, Law Library Science Medicine and Dentistry will issue special instructions concerning procedure to be followed in preregistration.

The Registration Office in 01 Hanes Hall is open from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m. Students will not be considered preregistered until they have delivered their green forms to Hanes Hall.

College Roundup

(Note: Following are news items from other university and college newspapers received at the Tar Heel office. The DTH will run a similar column once a week from now on.)

RELIGIOUS STUDENTS

ROCK HILL, S. C.—A religious survey at Winthrop College has indicated that over 99 per cent of the student body is church-affiliated. Of the 1,927 students, 1,921 are church members. Of these, 85.9 belong to three denominational groups claiming 1,650 students — Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian.

FRATERNITY 'HYPOCRISY'

MADISON, WISC. — The assistant to the Dean of Men at the University of Wisconsin said last week the fraternity system at UW would wither and die if it did not soon face reality. Jack Patrick was speaking before the Interfraternity Congress.

Patrick said that he felt the fraternities have not accepted full responsibility and fulfilled their obligation to their members and to the university. He urged them to "develop effective programs and an adult attitude" and to become firmly integrated with the academic life of the University.

3 Distinguished Students Named From Air Force

Three senior AFROTC cadets have been named Distinguished Military Students by Air Science Professor Lt. Col. Gordon D. Kage.

The are Cadet Lt. Col. William J. Ritchie, Greensboro; Cadet Captain Joe E. Davies, Alexandria, Va. ;and Cadet 1st. Lt. James C. Burrus of Englehard. Upon graduation the three will be given the opportunity to apply for an appointment in the regular Air Force. Their fellow senior cadets will have to serve in the Air Force Reserve before they can get an automatic regular Air Force appointment.

To become Distinguished Military Students, these cadets had to meet the following requirements: (1) be in the upper one third of their military class in AFROTC subjects. (2) have an accumulative or academic standing among the upper one half of all students in the institution pursuing the same academic major and scheduled to graduate the same school year. (3) possess high moral character and definite aptitude for service in the Air Force. (4) have distinguished himself by demonstrated leadership, particularly by participation in recognized extra curricular activities, and while in attendance in the AFROTC Summer Training Unit he must be ranked in the upper one third of all cadets at his Summer Training Unit.

Cadet Lt. Col. Ritchie is working toward an AB degree in physical education. Cadet Lt. Col. Ritchie is Cadet Group Commander of the AFROTC Cadet Corps this semester and is also active in Scabbard and Blade.

Cadet Captain Davies is working for a BS degree in Industrial Relations. Davies, on the football team, is president of the Monogram Club. He also participates in Arnold Air Society and Scabbard and Blade activities.

Cadet 1st Lt. Burris is working for a BS degree in Industrial Relations.

Louisiana State's "Go" team quarterback Lynn Amedee (11) is stopped at the Carolina 16 yard line in the first quarter of yesterday's game. Making the tackle are UNC center Joe Craver (52) and Tackle Jim Shumate (72). LSU won the game by 30-0, to hand the Tar Heels their third loss of the season after four wins. It was also the third time that the Carolina team has been shut out this season. The game story and sidelights are given on page4. (Photo by Minnesota Wallace).

Picketing Starts For Integration At Varsity Tonite

Picketing resumes at the Varsity theater tonight at 6 p.m. The picketers, sponsored by the Chapel Hill Citizens' Committee for Open Movies, will attempt to change Varsity's policy of not admitting Negroes.

The Carolina theater will not be picketed.

The decision to picket was made by an almost unanimous vote of the committee last Thursday night in St. Joseph Church. The group felt that the Carolina's policy of admitting Negro UNC students and "working with us" should exempt it from picketing.

Pickets at the Varsity will work in half-hour shifts from 6 to 9:30 p.m. every night until the Varsity "makes some offer." If an offer is made, the Committee will call another meeting to decide whether to accept the offer or continue picketing.

Admits Students

The Carolina theater agreed last August to admit Negro students with UNC ID cards. This decision followed months of picketing at both theaters last school year. John Brent, speaking for the Executive Board of the citizens' committee, said the Carolina would "take another step" by December 5 of this year.

Members of the citizens' committe speculated that this step might be to admit the immediate family and dates of the Negro students, but said that the Carolina had not committed itself to this policy.

Brent also stated that Andy Gutierrez, manager of the Varsity theater, had told the Executive Board he could take no action on the request to integrate until he had conferred with the theater's three owners. One of the owners is in Europe and cannot be reached, Gutierrez said.

Castro's 'Reform' Starts 'Troubles,' Says Matthews

By JIM CLOTFELTER

Fidel Castro "opened the Pandora's box of Latin American troubles which had been contained for so many years" when he began his social and economic "reform" program, said Herbert Matthews in a speech here Friday night.

Americans find themselves opposed to this type of "reform" in all parts of Latin America today, said the New York Times edtorial editor. But: "We jus tcan't send the Marines down' any more.

"What communism is to us," said Matthews," interventionism is to Latin America."

The veteran Times writer spoke in Howell Hall on a program sponsored jointly by the New Left Club, the International Relations Committee of the YM-YWCA and Pi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary.

Matthews covered the Cuban revolution for the Times through last year. His book on Castro and the revolution, tilte d"The Cuban Story" is presently the center of great controversy.

Invasion Price:

The "price" the United States would have to pay if the April refugee invasion of Cuba had been successful, said Matthews, would be these:

(1) "Ruin Cuban-American relation of several generations;"

(2) "Kill the Good Neighbor policy;"

(3) "Lose us most of our Latin American allies;"

(4) End the Organization of American States "in its present form."

In addition, claimed Matthews, the "United States—imposed government wouldn't have lasted." The invasionary force, he said, was composed of democrats opposed to former dictator Batista but who were "part of an era that had gone into history." Other of the refugee force "had been officers in Batista's army."

The attempted invasion "was so bad, so stupid, that we can only say 'Thank God it failed.' "

'No tCommunist'

Matthews put special emphasis on two other aspects of the Cuban-American situation: Communist influence on the revolutionary government and United State srelationshi with underdeveloped nations.

"There is no documentary proof that Castro is a Communist," he said. Many American officials are "looking for Communists everywhere and are disposed to finding them."

The Times writer claimed a combination of "Hollywood-style, anti-democratic, hysteric John Birch sort of anti-communism" and "general ignorance of Latin America" has brought on many of the U. S. "problems" in Latin America.

"We can't win the cold war in the under-developed nations but we can lose it there," said Matthews.

The United States has been generally unable to aid leftits elements in under-developed nations, he said. "We are usually in favor of the 'status quo.' "

And, Matthews said "we mustn't forge tthis: communism has great practical appeal to under-developed countries. The United States must offer something better."

Addition

The name of Susie Cordon was omitted from the list of active Valkyries in Friday's paper. The DTH regrets this error.

Kennedy Pledges Country To Fight In Free Frontier

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Standing bareheaded before the graves of unknown Americans who died in three great WARS, President Kennedy pledged Saturday that the United States would fight again if necessary to maintain "the frontiers of freedom."

In a brief speech following wreath-laying ceremonies in Arlington National Cemetery, Kennedy said this country can maintain peace only by being prepared to fight.

"This nation has little capaclty for deception," the President said. "Therefore we will convince the world that we are in earnest only if we are in earnest."

Bare-headed and coatless on a bright but chilly day, Kennedy noted that the resolution of Congress which created Armistice Day, as Veterans' Day formerly was called, expressed hope that World War I had been a war to end wars.

"It is tragic that this was not so," he said.

Kennedy was born in 1917, the year America went to battle in World War I.

Saturday, 43 years from the day the great war ground to a halt, he stood in Arlington National Cemetery and said:

"In a world tormented by tension and the possibilities of conflict, we meet in a quiet commemoration of an historic day of peace.

"In an age that threatens the survival of freedom, we join together to honor those who made our freedom possible."

Infirmary

Students in the infirmary yesterday were Dale Herrmann, William Neasamer, Jimmy Allen, Jerry Davis, Charlie Mattes, Jo McDonnell, Jim Crutchfield, Thomas Griffith, Farb McIntyre III, Phillip Poovey, Ruth Evans, Shawn Boles, Andrea Lundeberg, Bill Caperton, Clyde Grigg and Robert Deal.

Students Hear India's Nehru

Calls For 'Clear Thinking'; Six UNC Delegates Attend

By GARRY BLANCHARD

NEW YORK—(Special)—India's Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru yesterday told a conference of more than 1,300 student leaders from all over the U.S.—including a six-man delegation from UNC—that American College students can help insure "a world of law and peace" practicing "clear thinking."

Nehru warned that this is the only way to avoid "being ushed this way andn that by gusts of passion and anger . . . which may lead to disastrous consequences."

Nehru said he couldn't suggest "particular ways and methods" of learning how to think clearly. "Each student must do that for himself," he said.

In a far-ranging hour-long speech, Nehru also said he realized there is violence in the world and that violence sometimes has to be used by a country. "I accept that," he said. "I am not speaking as a pacifist."

'But Violence Wrong'

Nevertheless, he said, "no good can ever come out of an approach (to the world's problems) that is conditioned by hatred and violence."

Nehru also pointed out the need for the UN becomes even stronger as a world authority if lasting peace is to be obtained.

The prime minister spent more than one hour speaking to the students who overflowed the main ballroom of the mammoth Commodore Hotel only a few blocks from the UN building.

After the speech, he answered several questions submitted in advance by a number of the students.

His visit was the high point of the two-day conference whose theme was "1961: UN Year of Crisis," which ended late yesterday afternoon. It was sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the UN, which is the college affiliate of the American Association for the UN.

The UNC delegation consisted of Rick Powell and Dwight Wheeless, student legislators; Garry Blanchard, assistant editor of the Daily Tar Heel; and Larry Bowles, Phillip Matthews and Jeffrey Lawrence, honor students in UNC's political science department.

At Nehru's Request

The conference was a direct result of the request made by Mr. Nehru several weeks ago while contemplating his visit to the U.S. He let it be known then that he would like to meet with "a few of the best student leaders" while here.

More than 1,300 students from 43 states—ranging from Alaska to Florida—Maine to California—began arriving here early Friday to take him up on his offer.

Yesterday morning most of the student delegates toured the UN building prior to Nehru's talk.

The conference got underway Friday afternoon with a commendatory telegram from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and a review of the major problems facing the UN by the Nigerian and Philippine ambassadors to the UN and representatives from the Irish and Russian delegations.

U.S. Senator Joseph Clark (D.-Pa.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee on International Organizations Affairs, delivered the closing address o fthe conference following panel discussions yesterday afternoon.

Faculty News

Dr. Eugen Merzbavher, physics professor, will serve as a visiting lecturer at Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Texas, Monday through Wednesday.

He will visit under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program is now in its fifth year and is supported by the National Science Foundation.

Quarterly Talent Search Assisted With $100 Gift

The Carolina Quarterly's campaign to attract talented writers was accelerated yesterday with a $100 gift from Miss Cornelia S. Love, a 40-year Chapel Hillian.

Miss Love, a former UNC librarian, said the donation was to stimulate creative writing. She has been associated with the Quarterly for many years.

Miss Love's gift will be added to a fund that will be used to pay for the best writing published in the Quarterly.

Jerome Stern, Quarterly editor, said, "This contribution will help both Quarterly writers and readers. It begins to solve the problem of helping the writers who deserve more than the recognition of being printed and it gives us the freedom to negotiate with better writers. We think there will be more patronage like this. Right now we're extremely grateful to Miss Love."

Subscription Drive

Stern added that students and faculty are subscribing to the Quarterly at a "very high rate." A subscription drive will start this week. A table will be set up in Y-Court and the dorms will be canvassed.

The first issue of this year's Quarterly will appear in early December. The feature article will appraise North Carolina's new programs for raising education standards. Fiction will include a story by Guy Owen, whose novel, "Season of Fear," was published last year by Random House.

Deferred Rush: Crucial Decision For IFC

Monday night the IFC will come to its most crucial vote in years. The question has been proposed. Will deferred rush be sanctioned by the IFC or will it unwillingly be forced on them by the administration?

As a result of the faculty committee's proposals after studying the reasons for freshman academic difficulties, the committee has recommended that the fraternities form a deferred rushing system for all incoming freshmen. The IFC is now holding the answer to this in their hands—the amendment to their by-laws which was proposed at their previous meeting.

This amendment provides a fairly feasible method for instituting this deferred rushing scheduled for Spring 1964. The committee which constructed this amendment met every week since the opening of school and spent many long hours in trying to prepare a document which would be acceptable to all 24 fraternities on this campus. The amendment was written and changed many times until a workable one was submitted to the IFC.

This amendment is not a hurried effort to meet the demands of the faculty—it is an intelligent document which was entirely the idea of the IFC itself.

No fraternity man wants deferred rush. But they have a greater interest concerned here. The University if it wants to continue to uphold the high standards that have characterized it in the past, must use every manner possible to uphold their standards and improve them.

The University feels that freshmen need to settle down in their first semester before going through the rushing activity. They feel, and in some cases this is true, that early rushing and fraternity activities hamper the freshmen from making the grades that they are capable of making.

THE IFC, realizing the situation, passed a motion last Spring in favor of deferred rush and created a committee to draw up a workable method of installing the system. This committee has finished its work—the rest is up to the IFC itself.

To defeat this amendment on the pure basis of rejection of the administration would be nonsense. The administration did not draw up this amendment, nor did it tell the IFC to "get busy or else." The IFC was the creator of the amendment and it must be the enforcer if the amendment passes. A vote against the amendment just to spite the administration would be foolish and possibly fatal.

To vote against this amendment on the basis of parts that may affect a certain house in particular would be selfish. It was impossible for this committee to provide a document which would please all the 24 social fraternities. To have this amendment defeated on this basis would certainly be an inglorious way for it to die.

Those who vote against this amendment because they are against deferred rush in its essence have a point. There is no sense voting for something which you do not believe in. But let me add one word of caution to those who take this viewpoint. The possibility of this campus avoiding deferred rush is very slim. If the administration is to install deferred rush it will probably be very distasteful to the fraternities in general.

The administration wants a full year deferred rush. This means, in essence, that no boy may be rushed in this University until he is a sophomore. This would hurt the fraternities and would most likely force many of them off this campus.

The administration will install a deferred rush which meets their standards and ideals. Their deferred rush will not be a fraternity deferred rush but an administration deferred rush. It will not necessarily be designed to help the fraternities to get started nor will it be designed in the interest of the fraternities in general when it is instituted.

How certain may the IFC be that this rush will be installed by the faculty if they take no action Monday? There is no official statement from the administration or faculty member on this point but the certainty of the action is evident. You will hardly find an IFC officer or member who will disagree with the statement that the administration will take action if the IFC does not.

Now the question is posed to the IFC—which way will deferred rush be installed in the University? Through the incentive and thought of the IFC or thorugh the action taken by the administration as an afterthought.

The IFC must take initiative and of the IFC or through the action It must have deferred rush according to its own standards and it must show the administration and fraternities that it is an organization which is capable of acting and thinking like a mature body.

Justice For White Folks

The Justice Department is still being harrassed by requests for investigations in the South.

The most recent request for investigation has to do with the accommodations offered to civil rights agitators in McComb, Mississippi's local jail. Complaints lodged with the department charge that 12 men are crowded into the "drunk tank" without beds, blankets or decent toilet facilities.

Isn't it horrifying how these hardened criminals expect to be treated like human beings? Why do they need beds, blankets or toilet facilities? Everyone knows that these vicious agitators never sleep anyway: they spend all their time plotting against the white people.

And in Shreveport, La., the department has been asked to conduct an investigation of the recent bombing of a Negro church where 65 members of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) were holding a meeting. Obviously the CORE members don't realize that churches are only for white folks. Black folks don't have no souls.

In Jackson, Miss., the Justice Department has been asked to investigate the use of dogs by police. Reportedly, the police there are now patrolling regularly with dogs, and have turned them on an unidentified man. What's wrong with that, we'd like to know.

Hasn't justice been going to the dogs in Mississippi for years?

Take another case from McComb. A poor plumber named Carl Hayes was recently fined $100 simply because two vicious agitators, Paul Potter and Tom Hayden, attacked him by smashing him in the fists with their faces. Both Hayden and Potter have a history of attacking the poor people of the Southland. Hayden is a past editor of a damyankee college newspaper, the Michigan Daily.

Potter is a leader of the National Student Association, an organization long known to have tendencies toward meddling and attempting to upset the tradition of white supremacy. How could the court possibly have fined the poor man $100? Is this justice? Why, the Mississippi courts only fined four of those terrible marchers in McComb $500, and sentenced them to a short six months in jail. And they were guilty of blocking the sidewalk! Of course, Judge Robert W. Brumfield did point out that the four agitators were guilty of a "clear, cold, calculated" effort to violate the laws of the sovereign state of Mississippi. Only six months he gave them. These desperate criminals. For blocking the sidewalk — a breach of the peace. He should have hung them.

And in Atlanta, Ga., four Negroes seemed to think that just because the Interstate Commerce Commission passed a ruling against segregated bus facilities, they could be served. They, along with a fifth vicious agitator, a misinformed white man, tried to obtain service in a Trailways bus terminal restaurant. Naturally, they weren't allowed to perpetrate such a heinous act without the intervention of the good, the true, the just police of Georgia.

They were booked on a charge of violating the state's anti-trespassing law. But then justice failed. The five were released on $100 bail. How could the court have allowed these vicious monsters to roam free in the fair state of Georgia? There's no telling what they might do, Rob, Rape. Murder. Buy a cup of coffee. There's no predicting what vile acts these warped minds might spawn.

We certainly hope that such violations will carry stiffer penalties in the future, and that the Justice Department will ignore future pleas from Yankee agitators who don't know what the word "justice" means. Justice is for white folks and Southerners.

"Glad To Be Aboard—Uh—Chief"

No Verbal Swagger

Gen. David M. Shoup, commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps, is, if we recall, the man who frowns on swagger sticks. He is also, it turns out, a soldier who frowns on verbal swagger.

To a gathering of reporters the other day in Washington, General Shoup was asked to comment on the military "indoctrination programs." He refused. But he did say: "As far as the Marines are concerned, we try to teach them to be good citizens, to be good soldiers. We don't attempt to build up a big hate against anybody. We just train them to be ready to fight whatever enemy the President may designate. . . . I don't think that to be a good fighter you have to hate somebody. A professional boxer doesn't hate his opponent. If he does, he doesn't fight as well."

The services may count themselves fortunate in having a man like General Shoup around to remind us that some of the great fighters in American history were deeply gentle men, who did not believe it necessary to wear their eyeteeth on their sleeves. It was almost as if General Lee had returned for a press conference, to remind us that one of the few things that redeems the tragic violence of war is that adversaries occasionally remember their common humanity.

How entirely refreshing.

Physicist Disagrees With Article On Fallout Shelters

Dear Mr. King:

I find the Daily Tarheel an interesting and stimulating newspaper, and I personally am pleased that its editors take well-reasoned and uncompromising positions on civil rights and on the freedom of expression, even one's opponent's. I am less impressed by an article by Charles A. Wells, which you recently reprinted under the heading "Fallout Shelters — Safety or Illusion?"

Mr. Wells first attempts to discredit what he calls "the great civil defense drive" by associating this drive with Edward Teller, and he then tried to discredit Teller by saying that, except for his discovery of the principles underlying the hydrogen bomb, ". . . he does not rank with the world's leading nuclear physicists . . ." This assessment of Teller's role as a physicist could only have been made in complete ignorance of the facts.

For, whatever one may think of Teller's pronouncements on how we should conduct the cold war and prepare for a hot one, he is an outstanding nuclear physicist who has made important contributions to our understanding of the atomic nucleus during the last thirty years. Teller's reputation as a physicist was established long before the hydrogen bomb, and many scientists feel that his invention of the process which makes these bombs possible tarnished rather than enhanced his distinction. Chapel Hill audiences may remember his fine lecture to high school students in Memorial Hall a few years ago.

IT IS LUDICROUS, and unfair to both of them, to put C. P. Snow's name in juxtaposition to Teller's and to imply that the former does "rank with the world's leading nuclear physicists." C. P. Snow is a novelist who writes about science and scientists with knowledge and understanding, but he has never pretended to be a productive scientist.

Mr. Wells goes on to sketch the horrors of an atomic war. He is right in stressing these. I would add that fallout shelters are an essential part of our defense effort, no single portion of which can be completely effective and foolproof, and that our acquisition of a strong defense system must never be allowed to divert our attention and energy from working toward ultimate complete disarmament.

In his next paragraph, Mr. Wells plays out against one another the clergymen of different religious faiths. His argument here only seems to show that ministers do not contribute much to the discussion. If we cannot as a nation agree on a public shelter program planned by the community—which is by far the most preferable course — we shall indeed be faced with formidable moral and social problems.

BUT THESE cannot be resolved by using a gun on an unwelcome neighbor. They will be resolved, I am confident, by the proverbial generosity and moral fiber of the individual American.

Mr. Wells' suggestion (printed in boldface) that the fallout program is being promoted in order to condition us to accept war as inevitable and, therefore, to relax our efforts toward peace, seems absurd to me. It is exceeded only by his imputation that the government supports the shelter program to keep the economy going. No evidence is presented for these contentions in what Mr. Blanchard calls a "comprehensive and documented analysis."

Darky Ages Are Now Upon Us

A postman in Savannah, Georgia was suspended last September after being found guilty of public indecencies, of deserting his route before finishing the delivery of the mail, and several other infractions of the rules and regulations of the post office department.

..ow there would not be anything newsworthy about this story except for a few minor details left out in the opening paragraph. This postman was no ordinary postman. He just happened to be a Negro leader of the local NAACP. So quite naturally the news of his suspension (or maybe some would prefer persecution) was taken directly to the White House.

The President hearing of this dastardly deed of injustice in the South sent a message of "friendly political persuasion" to Postmaster General Day who immediately, though with some reluctance, reinstated the persecuted postman.

HERE IS an example of real justice! We go from day to day in our rather drab, petty lives under the illusion that there really is no such thing as justice. Then something like this happens, and the world is made bright black again. It takes a "great" man to bring about such an event, and our President has certainly proved his "greatness" by allowing himself to be influenced by a selfrighteous pressue group.

Maybe the South has learned a lesson from all this. It can't beat the NAACP, because this group has the might of a vote conscious federal government on its side. And everybody knows might makes right.

So the crusade for integration moves along its cheerful road of "Love thy neighbor be he black or white (but especially if he is black, because if you don't love him, Bobby will just naturally have to send some federal marshalls down to coerce you to love thy black neighbor.)

But what if you dono't have a black neighbor to love? Well, you should not ever admit to this heresy in this age,because it is a definite sign of discrimination. You could be accused of being ignorant, backward, and a segregationist all in one breath. Why you might even give some poor liberal gas pains!

Finally the South should learn these simple rules that are prerequisites for survival in the "Darky Ages":

1. Never refuse to hire a Negro.
2. Never ever fire a Negro.
3. Never ever arrest a Negro.
4. Intemarry as soon as possible. (Better black or caramel than white.)

An Open Letter To M. Wilson

Dear Mr. Wilson,

Yes Mr. Wilson, it is very true that the responsibility you mention should remain with the individual and not, ". . . be gradually or suddenly usurped by a Communist-Socialist-welfare state . . ." Nor should it be usurped by a state operating in the interest of freedom.

It is not unexpected when we hear of the supressions of the Cuban press, or the murder of anti-Communist Cubans, or bans of certain actions and assemblages in Russia. We are not overly-surprised at a wall being built in Berlin—it is rather expected of the Communist government.

Nor are we very surprised to hear of a man who was brought up before governmental agents and questioned concerning actions which he committed while acting in the dictates of his conscience. And when we are told that this man was imprisoned for not answering these questions because he thought he supposedly had some constitutional right for not doing so, we are not surprised at his imprisonment.

BUT WHAT IS your freedom-minded reaction, Mr. Wilson, when you are told that this last incident mentioned happened in the United States? What great documents, what great Books do you quote in the defense of the abridgement of the freedom of association by the state.

To what new religion will you turn to find defense for a state-supported curtailment of the freedom of speech. These are no more vague assertions than yours, Mr. Wilson. These are actual occurences right here inside the continental limits of the good ole USA. So we might say, not only will the truth make us free, but it might very well get us imprisoned.

It is all very well and good that you are able to quote facts and figures from "Communism on the Map" — but they are a little far away to me when the potentiality of the abridgement of my rights as an American citizen are subject to some degree of jeopardy. I fully agree that we must retain our freedom—but can we save our freedom by destroying it?

—Charles Cooper

Some Short Ones

Dear Sir:

Just because E. E. Cummings eschews the use of capital letters must all who write about him do the same? It was printed that way in the Chapel Hill Weekly and in the Daily Tar Heel. An ad in your paper even used lower case letters in reference to Mr. Cummings!

Sometimes this town is just too much.

To the Editor:

Graduate student Leonard Geddes has taken me to task for expressing, in verse form, a political-military theory that is gaining very wide credence in the Anglo-American press. Perhaps the view, as offered in the November 7 Tar Heel, is a little bit over his head. His jarringly unrhythmic parody reminds me of an old saying in Chapel Hill:

"There's no greater critic of your professional than your amateur."

—Wade Wellman

Dear Sir:

The individuals who recently defaced the University military installations with the insignia of the passive - aggressive Student Peace Union have equated themselves to painters of swastikas and writers of smut on the walls of public toilets.

They have announced to the public the infantile state of their emotional responses as well as their complete lack of judgment. Of the latter, both are inconsistent with the meaning and/or acquisition of true peace.

Paper's Attack On 'Sex Junk' Wins Approval

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—A local newspaper's campaign to rid movie advertisements of "sex junk" has evoked public approval from Wisconsin to Texas and might spread further.

Publisher Don Anderson of the Wisconsin State Journal said "in all my newspaper experience, I've never seen anything like it." His ban on "indecent" movie and theater ads has produced congratulatory mail from persons in 15 or 20 states, he said.

The idea was inspired last month when Anderson heard editor Jenkin Lloyd Jones of the Tulsa, Okla. Tribune challenge fellow newspapermen to "raise hell" over ads of dirty movies, which he said have reached the "stomach-turning point."

In a speech entitled "Who Is Tampering with the Soul of America?" Jones told the Inland Daily Press Association, American art is in "the beginnings of decay" and that he was fed up with it. He said his newspaper has successfully cleaned its ads.

Anderson did two things: He refused to publish "prurient and salacious" ads depicting sex and violence and he printed 5,000 copies of Jones' speech for sale at 10 cents a copy.

Response to his action was "tremendous," Anderson said. A Texas industrialist ordered 100 copies as did a Chicago banker. Praise came from former Indiana Gov. Harold Handley's wife, who said she would tell the story on street corners.

Sculptor-Professor Robert Howard Creates Art From Scrap Metal, Cars

By LEON ROOKE

The Boy Scouts collect old newspapers, the Salvation Army collects old clothes, innumerable social service clubs will take whatever you care to give them and bums look for discarded shoes, but UNC's Bob Howard collects metal—any kind, nearly all kinds, including entire obsolete automobiles.

The Salvation Army gives their collection to the needy, the Boy Scouts convert theirs into money for summer camp, but Bob Howard goes them all one better. He sets the finished product of all he has collected up before the bleeding scrutiny of the great god, Art.

For Bob Howard is an artist. He makes sculpture.

"Sometime in the future," he says, "I hope to be able to afford to buy new metal."

Until then Robert Howard, associate professor of art and a renowned sculpturer, will go on scavenging. Via the welding torch, the hammer, the keen eye and strong arm and lonely heart of a dedicated artist, works of art are produced from old steel lockers, abandoned filing cabinets, rusty nails, wrought-iron balustrades, or even automobiles,

To Use Automobile

There is one, now—a black, broken-down Buick—sitting on its axles in his front yard at 1201 Hillview Road, waiting to be stripped, beat-out, hammered and welded into a sculpture that will make of an automobile "what it ought to be."

But what happens to them when they are finished?

Some are salted away into the artist's conscience, a sort of dark private cellar where failure lurks, some are planted out in the Howards' front lawn as other people plant shrubbery and trees or flowers in theirs. A few of the lucky pieces find their way into homes and art museums across the country.

"Landscape II" and "Landscape VI" are on permanent exhibit in the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh.

"Landscape VIII" is on exhibit at the Ackland Art Center.

Another, "Landscape X," is owned by Professor Joseph C. Sloan, chairman of the Department of Art.

Art Tours

From time to time new and old pieces will be taken up by Art Centers of this or that city or state and exhibited or toured for a while before being purchased or returned to the artist.

"There is a certain excitement," Howard says, "in making use of this old junk and still expressing what I want to express. I don't suppose there would be the same excitement if I went to a supply house and bought new material."

—UNC News Bureau Photo

But what does he want to express? That might be the question of the man-in-the-street, bumping by accident into a Howard sculpture. "That's hard to explain," Howard says. "I don't verbalize so well as I sculpture."

"Each work has its own meaning, its own character, personality or feeling, and at the same time reflects the personality or presence of the artist.

"But about Art and the question of what is Art," he says, "Art is the realm of non-logic and can not be proved.

"Modern Art looks inward at itself for its emphasis rather than outward toward things," Howard says. He explains that this is partly due to the development of the camera. Artists no longer need to imitate life.

Looking Inward

"That the artists are looking inward," he says, "is perhaps the key to why one often hears people complaining that they do not understand Modern Art. Well, Art is not meant to be understood! It is meant to be felt. The public can not very well understand modern art until they understand themselves.

"We (artists)," he says, "are trying to push back the frontiers of the mind with the same energy that we (our predecessors) pushed the geographical frontiers of America into the ocean.

"Steel with a welded technique is a fairly recent innovation," he says. "But what is being done in sculpture has its parallel in what painters are doing with painting. Painting is no longer restricted to canvas and oils or water colors. Painters now are using anything from sand to newspapers to their grandmother's best hat."

Powerful LSU Blasts North Carolina By 30-0

Harris Leads Tigers To 7th Straight Win

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Spors Editor

Coach Paul Dietzel's Louisiana State Tigers set their goals higher than just beating North Carolina here yesterday. The vicious Bengals from Baton Rouge drew a bead on the top spot in the country, and fired their three-barrelled attack with an ambitious kind of fury.

It was only coincidental that the Tar Heels were standing in the way and got caught broadside with a 30-0 dose of buckshot.

The big, fast and fearsome Cats scored with apparent ease on two home run plays in the opening quarter, and then roared back in the final period for two more bombs against the tired Carolina team.

Senior halfback Wendell Harris was the man who pulled the trigger for the Tigers. Harris scored two touchdowns and kicked three extra points and a field goal to continue his flashy offensive display of this season.

Bo Campbell, a second-team halfback, was the top yardage man in the game with 101 yards on 10 carries.

The Tigers threw up the same kind of defense that made them famous when they won the national title in 1958. They almost stopped a fairly potent Carolina rushing attack, and held the Carolina backs to a net of 37 yards on the ground. The UNC passing game was only slightly better. Quarterback Ray Farris completed 9 of 20 for a total of 75 yards.

The hammering LSU attack tore into the Carolina defense for 264 yards on the ground and 108 through the air. The passing yrdage was 108 on 6 of 16 completions.

After the opening kickoff, the Tar Heels held on the first series and forced the visitors to punt on third down. Bob Elliott, the most dependable man in the Carolina backfield during the afternoon, carried twice for six yards, and Ray Farris just missed first down at the C47. Farris played it safo and kicked back to the Tigers.

LSU took over for the second time on their own 17. On the first play, dangerous Jerry Stovall dashed 27 yards down the right sideline and threatened to break away for the score.

On the play from the 44, quarterback Jimmy Field threw to Harris, who was in motion to the left. Harris took the ball on the move and hugged the left sideline behind a fine enforcing squad of blockers and went in untouched for the score. The pass play counted for 56 yards, and it had taken the Tigers 5 minutes, 13 seconds to draw first blood.

The ball changed hands twice without either team gaining ground before LSU took a short Farris punt on the Tiger 38-yard line. On the first play, Ray Wilkins smashed over the left side of his line for eight yards. Campbell then ran a similar play to the right, but broke cleanly through the Carolina secondary. He cut to his left and glided down the sidelines with three blockers alongside for the 54-yard score. Harris booted to the side and LSU's lead was 13-0 with 4:14 remaining in the first period.

Carolina's defense buckled down after this score, but the Tar Heels still couldn't move the ball. It was on the first play of the second quarter that the UNC team picked up its initial first down of the day—and that gain came on a 15-yard roughness penalty against the Rebels. The first legitimate gain came on a 10-yard pass from Farris to John Runco on he succeeding play. This series soon died ou, however, and the Heels were forced to punt.

LSU was held on their 21 and punted on third down, but safetyman Junior Edge bobbled the ball and end Gene Sykes recovered for the Tigers at the UNC 41.

From this point, quarterback Field twice threw incomplete passes. On a third pass, the LSU team drew a 15-yard penalty for an ineligible receiver, and it appeared that they would be stopped. But then, Lynn Amedee, the "Go" team signal caller, stepped in and fired a 24-yard pass to Stovall. Harris then picked up the first down on a three-yard burst, but the Tigers gave up the ball on downs at the 22 on four successive incomplete passes.

After Carolina kicked back, the visitors took over at their own 20. Mainly on the running of Campbell and Wilkins, they moved for five consecutive first downs before they were held on third down at the 19-yard line of UNC. Harris then came through with his sixth field goal of the season from the 25-yard line as there were 27 seconds remaining in the half.

The Tigers didn't threaten seriously in the third quarter. Early in the final period, they carried to the 21 and Harris tried another field goal. Safetyman Edge caught the short attempt in the end zone and tried to run it back, but was smothered on the five-yard line. Farris punted out, and LSU took over again on the UNC 41.

Fullback Earl Gros and quarterback Field did most of the offensive work that carried the ball to the Carolina four, from which Harris carried for the third LSU touchdown. The versatile Harris followed with a perfect kick, and the score was 23-0 with 6:11 left in the game.

Carolina punted on fourth down after it got the ball the next time, and Paul Dietzel's vicious crew took over 49 yards away from another score. They covered the distance in 12 plays, with Amedee going the final four yards as only 47 seconds remained on the clock and only a small part of the crowd of some 30,000 remained in the stands. It remained for Harris to add the point that made the final score 30-0.

Homecoming Not Happy One

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Louisiana State University's powerful football machine came to town yesterday, andn with ridiculous ease, proved their worth as the nation's fourth best team. To Carolina rooters, LSU might as well have been number one, for the Bengals from the Bayou pinned a humiliating 30-0 defeat on the Tar Heels, thus crushing any hopes of a post-season bowl bid.

Clad in purple jerseys for the first time in five years—to furnish contrast for a Southern regional television audience, the Tigers unleashed a bevy of flashy backs to go along with their vaunted defense and completely dominated play.

The disappointed homecoming crowd of 28,000 got a hint of things to come when in the first period, LSU struck from beyond midfield twice on long touchdown jaunts by Wendell Harris and Bo Campbell. Harris, brightest star in the Baton Rouge constellation, added another touchdown, a field goal, and three of four conversions to personally account for 18 of the Bengals' points.

Before it was all over, Paul Dietzel's charges, fresh from a 10-7 upset of Mississippi, which hiked their national ranking considerably, had amassed 372 total yards. The Tigers' defensive "Chinese Bandits" were equally outstanding. Led by All-American guard candidate Roy Winston and tenacious left end Gene Sykes, the "Bandits" held Carolina to a paltry 109 yards, while permitting them access, no further than the LSU 38. Since its opener with Rice, LSU has not been scored upon in the second half of any game.

Yesterday was Veterans' Day all over the country and it was ftiting that patriotic colors were prevalent for the occasion.

Prior to the game, the UNC Naval ROTC unit supplied the blue, as their drill team and drum and bugle corps put on a fine exhibition. LSU, whether consciously or unconsciously, contributed the second color of our flag. Their "White" team scored the first touchdown, which paved the way to the rout. And the red? Well, the throngs at Kenan Stadium couldn't help but notice the little red men, running along the sidelines, wheeling their big machines, which sorrowfully to Carolina supporters, happened to be television cameras.

Coaches Agree On Analysis But Differ In Sentiments

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Sports Editor

Jim Hickey and Paul Dietzel certainly held some different sympathies over the outcome of yesterday's one-sided football game. However, the losing North Carolina coach and the winning LSU coach analyzed the contest in much the same fashion.

"We waited too long to start playing football," said Hickey, whose team found itself 13 points behind before it could even make a first down. "It wasn't until the second half that we hit well."

Dietzel took the stand that his team's two early scores had really been a paradoxical handicap. "We got them too easy," he said. "We thought the game was over then, but North Carolina didn't agree with us. They played a very tough second half. We looked stupendous right at the start, but then we went to sleep."

The youthful Tiger coach had a lot of praise for the team he had beaten. "Carolina played fine football," he explained. "They were well prepared. They hit us hard. After we got our first two scores, they shut us off long, and wouldn't let us get by that last man. Believe me, we fought for every point we got.

"Yes, there was a difference in this game and the one in which we beat South Carolina by 42-0. UNC didn't give us the ball the way South Carolina did."

He referred to a first half interference penalty on one of his receivers on a fourth down pass in the end zone. "What an unearthly penalty that was!" he exclaimed. "It sure could have made a lot of difference in a close ball game. At first it looked like we might have a touchdown, and then the other team has the ball and they're in our territory."

Of the fourth down play in which the center pass sailed over an LSU punter's head, Dietzel said: "That was a beautiful snap, wasn't it? We were lucky as the devil to get out of that play without a safety.

"Our Bandits (the defensive specialists) played well. They ran that quarterback sneak twice—gained 5 yards one time and 6 the other. They have been working on that "play" all season, and get a big kick out of running it. Those boys have a lot of spirit.

"Farris impressed us a lot. He is really an outstanding young man. He's always a threat at quarterback because he can run the ball and pass too. Yes, we spent some time working to stop that fake punt play, and we did stop it."

The blond-haired coach reflected on his team's season up to now. "I knew that we had a good football team when we beat Georgia Tech by 10-0, and I learned that we could score when we beat South Carolina."

Someone asked if he wasn't waiting for a Rose Bowl bid, and Dietzel evaded the question neatly. "We have a bowl game next week at Mississippi State," he countered. "But seriously, I never think about bowl games this early. I can't afford to. I can say that I don't want to go where I went two years ago (the Sugar Bowl), and I certainly don't want to go back to the Blue-Gray game again.

"It scares me to think about a bowl. I guess Georgia Tech would be pretty embarrassed today if they got beat after being invited to the Orange Bowl last week."

Dietzel didn't know it, but the Yellow Jackets were well on the way to their red faces when he made this statement. They were beaten by Tennessee, 10-7.

"I don't have much to say about tha one," Hickey told reporters, but before the interviews were over, he had said quite a bit.

"LSU has a great football team," he said. "They really have the horses; that's the best overall team speed that I have seen in a long time. They are tough in every respect. I think the strongest part of their game is their defense. They are just so hard to run against. They have a good kicking game, too.

"Their defense is good because it can stop either a running or a passing game. That line can rush a passer pretty darn good. The team is strong—a real good one."

When asked if this LSU team was the best college team that he had ever seen, Hickey said: "I consider the 1956 Oklahoma team as the best I remember. But this LSU team is a lot like it."

He returned to the subject of the game, and the reasons for the defeat. "Our tackling wasn't good. The tacklers just slid off the ball carriers. But there's nothing we can do about it. I would like to have worked on it this week, but I had so many guys with banged-up shoulders that I couldn.t

"The second half was our best half. We came back and played well. But a bunch of foolish mistakes with the kicking game really hurt us. The tide of the game could have changed three times in the second half, but we made too many mistakes to take advantage of it.

"You can't win when you get a good team backed up and then let them get away. Let's face it—no team is going to score a lot of touchdowns on LSU."

UNC Folksingers Hold Concert Present Many Sides Of Songs

Show Features Kemp As M.C.

A group of UNC folksingers will assemble tonight at 8:30 in the Rendezvous Room of GM to present a varied program of ballads and folksongs.

The concert is the second activity of the newly organized group of Carolina folksong enthusiasts.

Designed to present the many sides of the folksong, the program will range from folk-coined ballads to bluegrass blues to gospel hymns. The master of ceremonies will be Kemp Battle Nye.

As a special feature the concert will include selections by Hoyt Axton, recently arrived from San Francisco en route to New York.

Other performers from all parts of the campus will present their specialities. Dick Mendel, a junior from the Carolina mountains will bring his banjo and sing mountain songs of that area. Ed Fleming, a grad student in Public Health, will sing the songs of the Florida migrants with whom he has worked.

Irish Lyrics

Stark Sutton, a tenor with a "flare for the music of the Emerald Isle," will sing lyric Irish folk songs. Guerry Matthews, who entertained the audience of last spring's Folk Festival, will sing "House of the Rising Sun" and others. One of UNC's leading exponent of the Dulcimer, Al Wright, plans to sing the classic English ballads.

Freshman Jeff Warner, a new face among the Chapel Hill folksingers, will sing the favorite songs of his music-loving family. Dan Brock will also perform.

Art student Mike Hall will conclude the concert with three of his favorites and will then lead some informal group singing.

Mike Hall, speaking about the group and the concert, said, "I know Carolina has some of the finest folksingers in the country and this program should be the kind of interesting and lively show any student should want to take in. I hope the idea of this kind of show catches on and that everybody with their dates and friends will drop in.

"After all how can you beat a free show plus Kemp?"

UNC To Pick Class Officers, Judiciary In Campus Election

Some 3,000 Votes May Be Cast Today

By DRENA EDWARDS

Closing a two-week campaign that began under one election law and is ending under an earlier one, UNC voters today will fill 15 judiciary seats and elect freshman, sophomore and junior class officers.

Election Board Chairman Dave Buxton yesterday estimated the number of voters that will turn out as 3000. "With the increase in the freshman class there may be around 3300," said Buxton.

The campaign was marked by a mid-campaign switch in the election law. On November 2 the Student Council ruled the existing law invalid. Therefore the previous election law went back into effect.

Election Postponed

Because of this action the election day was delayed a week from Nov. 7 to today.

The earlier law, which is now operating, also allows the chairman of the Elections Board to change some of the polling places.

Town Men's IV will vote only in Gerrard Hall instead of Gerrard, Victory Village and Glen Lennox. Town Men's IV is the area bounded on the west by Columbia St., on the north by Franklin St. and the Chapel Hill corporate limits on the east and south. All men living outside the limits of Chapel Hill vote with this district at Gerrard Hall.

Town Men's III will vote at GM instead of Gerrard Hall and Western Union. This district is the area bounded by Franklin Street on the south and on the east and west by Chapel Hill city limits.

Town Men's II will vote at the Scuttlebutt as before. This district is the area bounded by Cameron on the South, Columbia Street on the east, Franklin Street on the north and the Chapel Hill limits on the west.

Town Men's I will vote at the Naval Armory and at the Carolina Inn. This area is bounded by Columbia Street on the east, Cameron on the north and the limits of Chapel Hill on the west and south.

Anyone who does not know which district he lives in can check at the polls.

"Maps of the districts will be available at all polls," said Buxton yesterday.

The student government's invalidation of the existing election law was the result of senior Newt Smith's pointing out that the law had never been legally passed.

Earlier Smith noticed that the law omitted a provision for the election of junior class officers.

"I feel there is no need for junior class officers," said Smith "and I contest the existence of these offices under the standing laws."

Judicial Candidates

Candidates up for election today are as follows, Men's Council-Judicial District I: George Brandt (Ind), George Critz (Bi-Part) and Bryan Simpson (Bi-Part.)

Men's Council - Judicial District II: Bob McConnell (Bi-Part.), Bob Morphis (Ind.), Ashley Spearman (Ind.) and Pete Wales (Bi-Part.)

Men's Council - Judicial District III: George Bensch, Bill Bogache and Tommy Crudup, all Bi-Partisan candidates.

Men's Council - Judicial District IV: Charles Battle, Lanny Bridgers, Richard Lewis, Raine Remsburg, John Schlacter and Lyn Turner, all Bi-Partisan candidates.

Women's Council-Judicial District I: Judy Bryant, Emily Lloyd, Judy Johnson, Darst Murphy and Kay Taylor, all Bi-Partisan candidates.

Women's Council-Judicial District II: Ormonde Deane (Bi-part.), Joanne Eagles (Ind), Bev Haynes Bi-part.), Carol Martin (Bi-part.), Deal MacArthur (Bi-part.) and Faye Webster (Bi-part).

Women's Council-Judicial District III: Dottie Claiborne (Bi-Part.) and Cindy Tibbets (Ind.)

Four Candidates Close Campaigns As Independents

Jeff Bayer, independent candidate for sophomore class president, emphasized yesterday that his main purpose in seeking to abolish the office would be to "dramatize the uselessness of the present system of class officers."

Other independent candidates for class officers are Stewart Ellington and Randy Gilliam (both—president, freshman) and Larry Brown (vice-president, junior.)

Brown has said he would "make myself available to the administration of the University and the student government in order that my services might be utilized . . ."

Gilliam's campaign has emphasized his "eagerness" to improve dormitory social opportunities and other aspects of dorm life.

"No sophomore would miss this figurehead post because it has done nothing for them in the past," said Bayer, who was "quite pleased" with reaction to his campaign.

He claimed that in canvassing the dorms, he found that most of those interviewed could not remember what their class officers did for them last year. "They were also quite surprised to learn that the sophomore class is about $150 in debt for they knew of no function that the class held in which they could have lost money."

Bayer feels that an important function for class officers would be to provide "situations in which one could meet his classmates." He also stated that it "seems to be detrimental to a social when one must worry about breaking even in monetary terms than about the true aim of the function."

What UP They're Saying SP

The University Party yesterday expressed its confidence that campus voters would select "the best qualified candidates" in today's election.

The full party statement follows:

"Today, when the voters go to the polls, we hope they will vote for the persons they feel are best qualified, based on the candidate's individual record and platform. The University Party feels that its platform is keynoted by one theme —REALISM. Class officers will not be rendered useless, for the platform is one that they can accomplish. Already several planks have been completed successfully, the best example being the extended coed hours over Homecoming Weekend.

"The candidates themselves have been doing a superlative job of campaigning despite the limited time. Many candidates have expressed confidence in the objectivity of the campus voters, and are anticipating one of the largest turnout of voters ever. The University Party is proud of the way in which their candidates have worked during the campaign, and is sorry that it wasn't in its power to help them more than it did.

"An example of what else the party would have liked to do and wasn't able is the distribution of confetti at the L.S.U. Game. The confetti was bought at a cost which would have over spent the budget set forth for each party by the Elections Board. So the confetti will be given out at the Duke Game instead.

"In conclusion it is hoped that the voters of this campus will consider all the issues, and all the candidates before casting their ballots at the polls today. The U. P. sincerely thinks they have the best candidates."

"Who has done more for the dormitories than the Student Party?" asked SP campaign coordinator Dwight Wheless in his party's final bid for support in the fall election.

Wheless's full statement follows:

"The Student Party has not let itself become sidetracked by the popularity of certain "issues" . . . . such as confetti, etc.; rather, our objective, as evidenced in our class platforms, is to establish once and for all that Class Officers do serve an important function.

"As concrete evidence that our elected officers have well proven their importance I need only mention last fall's exceptionally active class officers, nine of whom were Student Party candidates.

"Now, concerning the Independent Candidates who are in the running. It would be trite for me to repeat the well-known fact that these candidates are not responsible to anyone if they execute their jobs poorly, while the Student Party has always accepted the responsibility for its elected officials.

"I have heard that one candidate has based his entire campaign on the dorms. I would like to ask, who has done more for the dormitories than the Student Party? As evidence of dorm representation in the SP, we need only point out the history of the SP, policies of the SP, and the fact that most of our candidates are dorm residents.

"Furthermore, the separate platforms of our candidates do not deal with trivials; the platforms are goals which can be attained, and after they are attained there should be no more talk of abolishing class officers. I encourage every student to examine closely the platforms of our candidates.

"Our candidates have stated concrete goals; we need votes to attain these goals."

Students Vote On Amendments To UNC Constitution

Amendments designed to eliminate various defunct organizations from the Sudent Constitution will be voted on by the student body today.

The organizations include the Independent Women's Council, the University Club and the Debate Council. Several other committees which were directly mentioned in the old Constitution have also been deleted by the proposed amendments.

Student Legislature Parliamentarian John Randall, who is co-author of the amendments, explained, "It is felt that these committees should be established by legislation rather than being mentioned directly in the Constitution.

"The proposed amendments also include a student 'Bill of Rights' which has never been incorporated directly into the body of the Constitution," he added.

"Proposition number one of the proposed amendments prevents the entire body of Robert's Rules of Order, Revised from being made a part of the Student Constitution," said Randall.

Student Body President Bill Harriss, in endorsing passage of the amendments, said, "It is most important to the functioning of Student Government that the amendments coming before the student body today for ratification be passed.

"These amendments were considered by the Student Legislature and were sent to the student body with its overwhelming approval. These are measures which are long overdue—and as such, should receive the support of the electorate."

Two Professors Named To Group

Two faculty members of the School of Public Health have been elected to office in the Water Pollution Control Federation, which is an international public health organization.

Dr. Daniel A. Okun, head of the school's Department of Sanitary Engineering, was elected chairman of the Federation's Research Committee. Dr. Charles Weiss, associate professor in the same department, was elected vice chairman of the committee.

Eight-College Poetry Circuit Sponsors Young N.C. Poets

The formation of a "Poetry Circuit" made up of eight colleges and universities stretching from one end of the state to the other with an offshoot into Virginia, was announced Sunday by Howard R. Webber, editor-in-chief of the UNC Press.

The circuit is sponsored by the University Press in conjunction with the Poetry Center of New York City.

It is planned that two young poets per year will be brought to the member universities and colleges in the state. The participatng schools are; UNC, N. C. State College, Woman's College, Davidson College, Wake Forest, Duke, East Carolina, and Hollins College in Hollins, Va.

"Each poet will make the 'circuit' of these schools, reading his works and meeting students and faculty," Webber said.

First In South

The North Carolina Circuit is the second of its kind in the nation and the first in the South. The only other such operation is in Michigan where the major universities are linked together in a program.

Webber said, "Poets of wide reputation can pretty much read where they choose but it is far more difficult for young poets to find an audience."

"The Circuit," he says, "will offer them a total audience of considerable size. It will be an educated, interested audience. And the fees contributed by each school will add up to a sum large enough to be a practical furtherance of their art."

Member schools have agreed to pay the visiting poets a sum of $120.

"Especially Responsive"

One of the purposes of the Circuit, Webber points out, is to subsidize young poets. He also regards it as a means of getting young poets and young audiences together. "The young audience is likely to be especially responsive," he said, "and the young poet is likely to be vigorous and enthusiastic. It's a perfect match but a rare one."

Plans are being made to bring the first poet to North Carolina in early December.

The UNC Press is among a small group of university presses in the United States publishing poetry regularly. Two titles have been issued in its Contemporary Poetry Series. They are "Abraham's Knife," by George Garrett, and "Skeleton of Light," by Thomas Vance. A third title is now in preparation.

Randall Jarrell

Recently the Press sponsored a Literary Recognition Convocation in honor of Randall Jarrell, noted North Carolina poet and winner of the 1961 National Book Award for poetry.

"The interest of the Press in poetry comes from a feeling that good poetry is being written now and that the proper encouragement and attention can help to bring new poets to light and to give them the chance to go on writing and to perfect their craft," Webber said. "The new Circuit will be vastly important to poetry and will give North Carolina a major role in achieving these ends."

Quarterly Drives For Subscription

The Carolina Quarterly's annual subscription drive, which begins today, has all the indications of being the most successful in the magazine's history, said Editor Jerome Stern.

"Student and faculty enthusiasm is running very high," Stern said. "Subscriptions are coming in unsolicited and the reception accorded to the writers workshop, from which we hope to get much good writing, has been extremely favorable."

The Quarterly subscription booth will be open today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Y Court.

PEACE CORPS

The Peace Corps entrance examination will be given Nov. 28 and 29 at the Durham post office at 8:30 a.m., Paul Cheek, Chapel Hill post office employee, announced yesterday.

Dabbs Speaks Here

James McBride Dabbs will talk on "Who Speaks for the South?" Thursday night at 8 at the First Baptist Church, W. Rosemary and Roberson streets.

The public is invited to the Fellowship for School Integration meeting.

Dabbs is past president of the Southern Regional Council and is author of "Southern Heritage" and "The Road Home". He is in Chapel Hill to do research on another book about the South.

Dabbs Background

His home is a farm in Sumter County, South Carolina, where his family has lived since Colonial days. After receiving his A.B. at the University of South Carolina, his M.A. at Clark University, and doing further graduate work at Columbia University, Dabbs taught English at USC then was head of the English Department at Coker College from 1925 to 1942.

Since retirement, he has been a farmer and a writer, chiefly for the Christian Century and the Presbyterian Outlook. He is a Ruling Elder of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and a past member of the Executive Committee of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen. He has been a recipient of the National Brotherhood Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Refreshments will be served during the social hour following the meeting.

Mozart, Brahms Compositions To Be Played Here

Compositions by Mozart, Finney, and Brahms will be heard tonight when the University String Quartet plays its fall concert in Hill Hall at 8.

This will be the third concert of the Tuesday Evening Series presented by the Music Department for the fall semester, and is open to the public free.

The first work of the program will be Mozart's Quartet in G Major, K. 38. Written when Mozart was only twenty-six years of age it reveals his "characteristic maturity" of composition at this young age.

Ross Lee Finney's Sixth String Quartet was composed in 1950. The composer has sought a means of lyric expression within the contemporary idiom.

Brahms Quintet

Brahms' Quintet in B Minor, Op. 115 for clarinet and string quartet is one of four chamber works of Brahms in which the clarinet figures as an important part. In this work the quartet will be assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth Naur, clarinettist, a visitor from Denmark.

Quartet members are: Dr. Edgar Alden, first violinist and assistant conductor of the UNC Symphony; Mrs. Dorothy Alden, violist and director of Chapel Hill Youth Orchestra; Miss Mary Gray Clarke, first 'cellist with the University Symphony and graduate assistant in the Music Department; and Mrs. Jean Heard, second violinist, who received her training at the University of Alabama and the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

Support & Controversy In Election

Fall-Out Shelters

The New York Times reported recently that nearly 200 professors of five universities in the Boston area have declared that money and effort spent on fall-out shelter programs could be better diverted toward "a positive program for peace."

The professors made public a letter in which they declared that "the prodigious energy of our people is being channeled into wrong directions for wrong reasons, and that continuation of this trend may be extremely dangerous to the nation and to civilization itself."

It's unfortunate that more people do not share the feelings of those 200. The fall-out shelter craze, aided and abetted by various shelter manufacturers, threaten to replace the hula-hoop fad of some time back.

The nation has been bombarded in past weeks with a veritable barrage of written and spoken pleas for the construction of fall-out shelters, ranging in price from $30 to thousands—an investment which reportedly will save varying percentages of the people in the event of nuclear attack.

None of these pleas, of course, point out that the detrimental psychological effect of a crash program of fall-out shelter construction might more than offset whatever good ends shelters might serve.

As the Boston area professors pointed out, to advocate the construction of fall-out shelters is tanamount to admitting that we accept nuclear war as an instrument of national policy.

Most of the signers of the letter are from the science faculties of their universities.

It is good to hear that there are some scientists who still retain some confidence that we can avoid nuclear conflict. And they aren't afraid to say that it's difficult to work for peace while girding for war.

Constitutional Changes

Today climaxes weeks of campaigning on the part of campus politicos seeking class offices. The campaigns this year have been unusually loud, and because of the fouled-up election laws, unusually long. Each candidate has had more than ample time to deliver his particular pitch. The "abolitionists" and indenpendents have provided an unusual sparkle to the campaigns and, although probably none of them will gain office, their service in prodding candidates to come up with some real programs has been the most fruitful aspect of the campaigns.

Considerably less discussed through the past weeks have been the constitutional revisions which will also come to a vote today. These revisions are, for the most part, long overdue. The student constitution has been a catch-all document rather than a broad, basic outline for student government to follow.

Many of the provisions included are long out of date. The revisions will serve to eliminate most of these and will make the constitution a more flexible document.

We hope that every student, whatever his political leanings, will vote for them.

Honors For Raiders

Every year at this time, multitudinous bands of students from Carolina and Duke visit each other and stage raids on their rival institution in commemoration of the upcoming football contest. These visitors, filled with spirit, of school or otherwise, do a great service in destroying unnecessary property and increasing the spirit of their fellow students.

All the while, these noble crusades, executed with love of the alma mater first, last, and always in mind, go quite unnoticed. Perhaps some of the students involved may be rudely thrown into jail. But by and large, the attacking forces seek to do their work anonymously, without cheerleaders at their side, without the support of their school urging them to greater accomplishments.

Some of the fortunate few who take part in these escapades are rewarded with such awards of recognition such as a shaved head, a black eye, a fine in court, or suspension from school. But these rewards, impressi..e though they be at the time, will last only in the memory of the honored person. After time has passed, he will have nothing to remind him of his great valor.

We propose that official raiding teams be immediately formed at both institutions. Undoubtedly, officials of both schools will be glad to sponsor these missions that will bring such great honor. At first, each school could ask for volunteers, and if there weren't enough, they could begin a draft. Before long, there could be a couple of real military organizations.

Veterans of these battles who were injured in action could receive the purple cross. Prisoners of war who survived brain washing tactics would receive the number of hours credit toward their degrees equal to the number of days they lasted.

No longer should these noble warriors go without reward. We urge everyone who wishes to make a raid on Duke this year to sign up immediately at South Building and ask for orders and credentials. Otherwise, he may do all his work with only the reward of a shaved head, a black eye, suspension from school, and a fine.

'Attempt To Know Your Candidates'

Residents of Judicial District III:

It has been my sincere pleasure to serve you and the campus as a representative to the Men's Honor Council for the past two years. Many of you have asked me to run again and others of you have told the present candidates for the council that you are reserving your vote for me. The purpose of this letter is to regretfully announce to all that being a senior, I am ineligible to run again for the council, as the vacant seats are for a full year. I wish to thank all of you for your concern and for the consideration and interest you gave in my previous campaigns.

There are three candidates campaigning for the two seats open in our district. I urge each of you to make CONCERTED effort to personally meet these candidates and spend enough time with each to thoroughly understand just what these candidates propose.

Don't let any candidate get away with a vote-getting line such as the Honor System would work more effectively if the Council were more lenient and gave everyone a second chance.

HOW DOES he evaluate the success of an honor system? Is the test merely the number of cases tried by the council; the number reported by the students; students attitudes toward the system; or a combination of these ideas and others.

Ask the candidate why he thinks the council has been too harsh in past cases. With no access to case records, why does he not conclude the council has been too lenient an dnot strict enough? By opinions? By his knowledge of only a case or two where the defendant has been suspended?

Does he believe in a set pattern of sentences for the various offenses?

These are merely a few of the proposals you'll hear in this campaign. Your vote for the Honor Council representatives from our district is the vote which will count the most in this election. Don't abuse it—know who—and most important of all—what you're voting for.

—MICKEY NELSON

Junior Impressed With Candidate

To the Editor:

I would like to share with the other members of the Junior Class some pertinent information concerning the election of the Junior Class President. I have been very favorably impressed by the spirit and eagnerness which Joe Craver has shown to serve the Junior Class as a whole. He is sincerely interested in representing every student in our class, regardless of party affiliation, and regardless of whether the student is an independent or a fraternity affiliate.

I am especially interested in a nominee of this nature, since I decided not to join a political party on campus and vote independently. Joe's enthusiasm about working for a more unified Junior Class is to me a very desirable qualification for the office.

HIS OTHER qualifications also merit the attention of each voter in the election of Junior Class President. Joe came to Carolina as a Morehead Scholar and participated in the Freshman-Sophomore Honors Program. Joe is a pre-medical student majoring in political science.

He is a Dean's List student who is ranked scholastically in the upper five per cent of the Junior Class. Joe has also served for two years on his Class Cabinet, has served on the State Affairs Committee, was appointed to the Chancellors Committee for Fraternity-Faculty Relations, and was elected Treasurer of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Joe has made time to participate in all these activities and achieved a record of scholastic excellence, despite the fact that varsity football has taken many hours of each day during the fall and spring. Joe Craver has made an outstanding record at Carolina, and I believe that if he is elected, he will sincerely do his best to be an outstanding President of the Junior Class.

UP Answers Putzel Charge

In Tuesday's Tarheel a very interesting "Full Statement" appeared. This was the "Full Statement" of Mike Putzel, vice-president of Cobb Dormitory, former member of the University Party. To those who know Mike and are following his campaign, this "Full Statement" came as no surprise. Perhaps for the benefit of those who do not know of Mike's campaign, I should explain.

Mike Putzel is backing Randy Gilliam of Cobb for Freshman Class office. Because Mike planned to back Randy, he found it necessary to do away with his University Party membership.

The UP candidate, Bob Spearman who is pledged to strong dorm action, was all of a sudden not good enough for Mike. This seems a contradiction for at the UP convention Putzel threw his entire dorm delegation behind Spearman. As was mentioned at the convention if it were not for the dormitory votes Bob may well have missed the run-off.

ALL OF A sudden now, we find Mike is backing another candidate. Whether Mike deserted Bob because he was against Bob, which seems very improbable in view of the convention, or because he found a man he could run (would control be a better word?) remains to be seen, but the fact is that Mike has been bleeding the Tarheel of a great amount of free publicity in his "Statements." (would advertisements be a better word?)

His statement concerning his resignation was certainly not front page news. His alleged party position was to add to his "importance" and to make more noise. His attacks against the University Party's ideas and ideals were completely unfounded. When questioned in Editor Wayne King's office about his resignation, Editor King (as was stated in Putzel's own letter) refused to print the follow-up story.

NOW IN HIS latest, "Full Statement" Mike again harped on his "reasons" for leaving the University Party, questioned UP Chairman Criswell's veracity, and launched a spiteful attack on me, for what reason any good ad man or anyone else can plainly see. But the final payoff came when Mike unsheathed the old, worn out Fraternity Hate Dagger. I do not think the men of the Dormitories are so gullible as to fall for the Fraternity Hate Campaign again.

Mr. Putzel must think he is dealing with a group of over-emotional children, rather than intelligent Dormitory Men. The men of the Dormitories vote for the man rather than against the Fraternity Pin. It seems to me that Mr. Putzel is using every trick in the book, and even then not very well.

When Putzel and his Fraternity Hate Dagger flies again, as I am sure it will, we of the UP will greet it with a laugh, Et tu Putzel, Again! We of the UP are sure that the thinking men of the Dorms would rather support the candidates and policies of the UP, than Mr. Putzel of the MPP (Mike Putzel party) with all his free publicity and questionable campaign tactics.

Opinions On Bond Defeat

Dear Sir:

The results of Tuesday's North Carolina bond election are sickening to those citizens of this state who had worked for the passage of these bonds with the hope that North Carolina might at last attain its "rightful place in the sun."

Since the bond's overwhelming defeat Tuesday, I have talked with people in an attempt to find out what possible reasons could exist for the catastrophe. It might be understandable if the funds were to be used for some new social-welfare program, or if they involved the use of federal funds. Or perhaps, opposition would be justified if the funds were to be used to strike out some new-fangled experimental program with a risky future. Antagonism could be expected if the funds were unnecessary or might be administered wastefully. And there are those who could understandably have protested a change in the present tax schedule. But the odd fact remains that none of the above arguments could be advanced as a reason for defeating Tuesday's bonds.

THE BONDS were to provide money for tried and proved programs already in existence with firm backing and strong leadership; federal funds were in no way involved; and those who were not convinced of the need for these funds simply had not taken time to study the issues at hand. And those who were not cognizant of the fact that the bonds would not have increased taxes must have had their eyes and ears closed for the past few months.

The strange concoction of reasons which have been advanced to account for the defeat of the issues should be scrutinized. First, "I don't like Sanford or anything he is doing"—This is the reasoning of a prejddiced individual. Any discontentment for Sanford or the policies of his administration should be recorded at the polls in 1962 and 1964, not directed against the continued welfare of the state in 1961. Second, "I just didn't vote Tuesday, because everyone seemed so optimistic about the bond's passage, that I didn't think the effort would be worth it"—Oh, the remorse of these individuals and the state in which they live.

GRANTED, the democratic process is a slow way to progress and we must not ignore its principles in an effort to speed up progress. But there are times when the complacency of a group in a certain situation can not only restrain progress, but also bring about undesired intervention from a third party. It is precisely this type of state irresponsibility which prods the federal government to tax us heavily for its programs of education, social welfare, conservation, and the like. North Carolina has taken a step toward this end when it defeated the state improvement bonds Tuesday.

Redemption is not possible for at least two more years. Let us hope that in 1963 the people of this state will have a better insight into the continued welfare of North Carolina than they did last Tuesday.

Presence Of Danger May Make Some Short-Sighted Thinkers

A constant presence of danger tends to make people short-sighted in their thinking. Having to be busily occupied in counteracting danger at every moment, people do not realize that they are forgetting to conduct their efforts on a long range basis.

The quick pace of the Soviet Union's tactics contributes to the short-sighted reactions of the free world. Apt recent examples of these are the discussions on the building of shelters, (especially an article appearing in LIFE on this subject), and controversy on the resumption of the atmospheric tests of the nuclear bombs in the United States. Another symptom of this short-sightedness can be seen in the reaction of the people who were driven into the "Better Red Than Dead" hysteria because of the recent multi-megaton bomb explosions by Soviet Russia.

"Technically we are living in an atomic age, emotionally we are still living in the stone age," said Erich Fromm in his recent book entitled MAY MAN PREVAIL? It is most urgently necessary at present to translate our emotions into the atomic age before we hastily look for a final decision on the fate of the world.

IN THE HISTORY of human beings, there were periods when people fought for mere personal interest, and periods when people dared to risk all because of their religious beliefs, and still in other periods, people seriously fought for righteousness. At the end of each period, however, people have had to learn that physical power cannot solve these matters. That is why to-day it is highly improbable that one would be able to mobilize the whole world for the purpose of waging a war over a religious belief, or simply for righteousness, or for personal greed. At present we are in the period when people are fighting for their ideologies. But are we not at the end of this period? Has it not already been proven that military power cannot solve the strife of ideologies?

At present it seems to be imperative for us to choose either freedom or communism, or even uncomfortable coexistence, if it is possible. But can we not hold back on making a hasty decision until most of us can bring our emotions up from the stone age to the atomic age; until we quietly recognize that another period has gone?

I personally feel that it would be simply too grievous to have the earth exploded and vapourized and then to realize that human emotion had not stepped out of the stone age after all. To die for an ideology has a sublime beauty to it as long as one can quietly die alone without involving the whole world.

Our present aim must be concentrated on a prudent postponement of the final decision until people in the world, including the people under communism, come to be fully aware of this entirely new situation of human history. Meanwhile, the free world should seek some effective ways to communicate directly to the people in the communistic world to show them the real meaning of the nuclear bombs and war with irrefutable evidences.

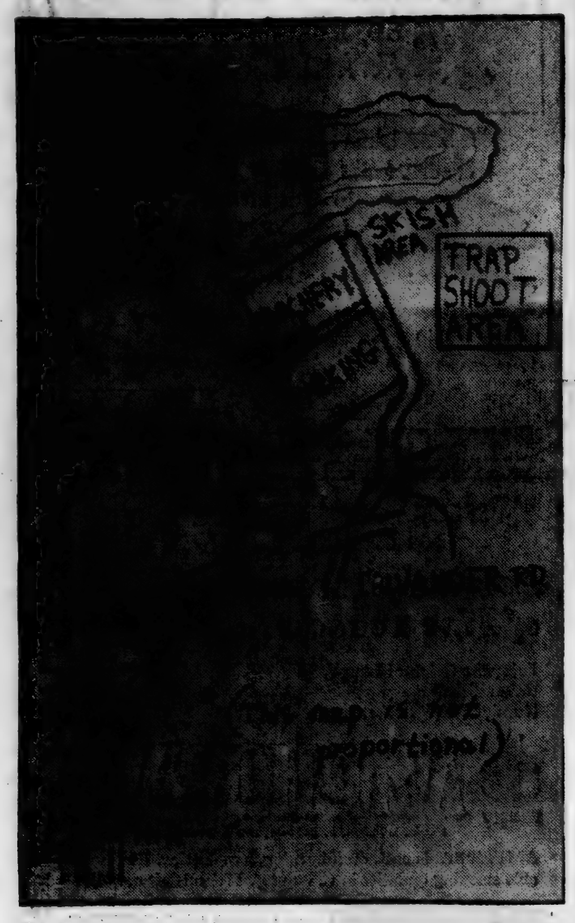
Field Meet Today For UNC Students



Directions To Location Of Rod And Gun Meet

By John Montague

A fun-filled menu of archery, bait casting, fishing, trap shooting and target rifle shooting will be offered this afternoon at the seventh UNC Rod and Gun Field Meet, to be held at the Athletic Association Staff Lake.

Instructors and equipment will be at the area by one o'clock with the actual competition in all five events getting started at two o'clock. Contestants will be allowed to practice from 1:00 until 2:00 p.m. All of the equipment will be provided by the Intramural Department and Naval ROTC. However, participants may use their own equipment.

The event is co-sponsored by the UNC Outing Club and the Department of Intramural Activities. All students except those on the ROTC rifle teams are eligible to participate. Students may enter as individuals or on a four-man team. Women may enter on an individual or team basis, the same as men.

Any four students may compose a team. They do not have to represent any particular organization such as a dormitory or a fraternity. However, each team must enter men in all four events, excluding fishing, to be eligible for the team plaque. Fishing is a special event and will be conducted only on an individual basis.

Any number of students may enter for a team, with only the highest score in each event counting toward the team total. Place points will be awarded to the top five places in each event on a 10-7-5-3-1 basis.

Contestants will be permitted to enter only one event, due to the limited time for the meet. If time

This Week Is Last For Tag Football

This is the week when the 1961 Intramural Tag Football Season becomes history. The All-Campus Playoffs begin on Wednesday with two semi-final games and end on Thursday with the big championship game.

Before the all-campus clashes can get under way, however, the championship of the Fraternity Blue Division must be settled. The Phi Delts and the SAE's will go about this task this afternoon, at four o'clock on Field No. 3.

Neither of these two teams, which will battle each other for the Blue Championship this afternoon, finished first in their respective leagues during the regular season. The Phi Delts were nosed out by Chi Psi in League IV, the crucial game being the Chi Psi's 18-16 victory over Phi Delta in late September. This is the only blotch on the Phi Delts' otherwise perfect record of 5-1, which includes three playoff victories.

Much of the same story holds true for the SAE's, whose 3-1 regular season mark was only good enough for second place behind the DeKE's (4-0) in League I. DKE knocked off SAE in the first week of October, but SAE has won everything since then, rolling up an overall 6-1 mark.

The Phi Delts have toppled three strong teams in the playoffs, the list including DKE, Chi Phi and Sigma Nu. SAE has marked right along the victory route, downing ZBT, Chi Psi and Zeta Psi.

The game is rated a toss-up, but somebody must win it, and the answer will come this afternoon. The winner will go against the Phi Delta White team, champions of their division, tomorrow afternoon, while the dorm champion Alexander Playboys square off with the Peacocks, winner of the grad loop.

Yes, this is the big week in tag football.

Jerry Nourse Of Duke Remains Unbeaten

Gerry Stuver Is Second, Everett Third

Coach Dale Ranson's North Carolina cross country team wrapped up its second consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference championship at the University of Virginia yesterday with a comfortable 11-point win over runnerup Duke.

The Tar Heels, led by Gerry Stuver, who finished second, and Rett Everett, third, took the meet with 37 points. Duke scored 48, and Maryland was third with 52. Clemson was way down the list with 141, N. C. State had 150, Wake Forest had 152, and Virginia was seventh with 179. South Carolina did not officially place.

Duke's magnificent Jerry Nourse, although he didn't have a lot of support from his teammates, continued his unbeaten streak of the entire season. Nourse won the meet in 19 minutes flat, and was 30 seconds ahead of Stuver, who was also the runnerup in the 1960 race. Everett, the defending champ, was 12 seconds behind his teammate.

Maryland's John Garten, who didn't finish in the top ten last year, was fourth. Jim Morehead, Clemson, was fifth in this race after being eighth in 1960.

Carmine Lunetta of Carolina repeated his sixth place finish of last season.

Team finals:

1. North Carolina	37
2. Duke	48
3. Maryland	52
4. Clemson	141
5. N. C. State	150
6. Wake Forest	152
7. Virginia	179
8. South Carolina	*

Lumumba's Death Laid To Belgians

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UPI) —A special United Nations investigating commission said Tuesday that "in all probability" former Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba was murdered by Belgian mercenaries in the presence of Katanga President Moise Tshombe.

The four-nation commission said the Central Congolese government headed by President Joseph Kasavubu should share responsibility for the deaths of Lumumba and two aides earlier this year because it handed them over to their enmies.

Of the actual murder the report said:

"A great deal of suspicion is cast on a certain Colonel Buyghe, a Belgian mercenary, as being the actual perpetrator of Mr. Lumumba's murder which was committed in accordance with a prearranged plan, and that a certain Captain Gat, also a Belgian mercenary, was at all times an accessory to the crime."

The report said the commission "accepts as substantially true the evidence that the prisoners were killed on Jan. 17 after their arrival in a villa not far from Elisabethville and in all probability in the presence of high officials of the government of Katanga Province" including Tshombe.

Began Last Summer

The commission made its declaration in a 63-page report to the General Assembly on its investigation of Lumumba's death. The commission began its inquiry last summer but has adjourned temporarily because the Congolese government has refused permission for an on-the-spot observation.

The commission said on evidence so far available it doubted the official Katanga version that Lumumba, his Youth Minister Maurice Mpolo and Senate Vice President Joseph Okita were killed by tribesmen in Katanga after escaping detention.

"On the contrary, the commission accepts as substantially true the evidence indicating that the prisoners were killed on 17 January 1961 after their arrival in a villa not far from Elisabethville and in all proability in the presence of high officials of the government of Katanga Province, namely Mr. Tshombe, Mr. Interior Minister Godefroyd Munongo and Mr. Economics Minister Jean-Baptiste Kibwe, and that the escape story was staged," the report said.

Took Up Crisis

The report was released as the Security Council again took up the Congo crisis. The report was likely to play an important part in the council's decision on future actions of the U.N. force in the Congo particularly in Katanga. The council holds its second meeting Wednesday.

Lumumba's slaying caused extensive reaction around the world and led to a General Assembly appointment of the investigating commission composed of Burma, Mexico, Ethiopia and Togo. The commission has held 66 meetings, starting in May, and has examined documents and interrogated witnesses in New York, London, Brussels and Geneva.

Singer Arrested On Dope Charges

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (NUI) — Blind jazz singer and pianist Ray Charles, 31, was arrested Tuesday on a charge of being a common drug addict.

Narcotics squad detectives raided his hotel room and said they found a cold cream jar filled with capsules with a residue of heroin, and a hypodermic syringe.

Detective Sgt. William Keithley said Charles admitted being "hooked" by narcotics since he was 16 years old and told police:

"A guy like me has to have something. The daily grind just gets to be too much."

Faculty News

Guy B. Johnson, professor of sociology and anthropology and for several years a leader in studies of Southern race relations, will leave Friday for a three-week study and tour of West African universities.

Dr. Johnson will visit universities in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Ghana, and Nigeria. Mrs. Johnson will accompany him.

The Phelps-Stokes Fund, of which Dr. Johnson is a trustee, is sponsoring this tour of its trustees. The annual meeting of the trustees of the fund is scheduled to be held this year in a West African country.

The Phelps-Stokes Fund was founded 50 years ago for the purpose of encouraging the education of Negroes in the United States and Africa, and for improving the housing of the poor in New York City.

The Fund, 30 years ago, sponsored a survey of education in Africa which has been credited with doing much to shape educational policy, especially in British Africa.

During the three-week tour, Dr. Johnson will talk to education and other government officials. Dr. Johnson and his wife also visited Africa in 1959-60. Plans are being made now for their return by way of Europe.

SP Takes 11 Of 15 Offices; Wins Two Class Presidencies

IFC Tables Vote On Proposal For Deferred Rush

After considerable discussion Monday night, the IFC tabled voting on its deferred rush amendment until the next meeting on November 27.

The amendment, which was presented to the IFC by Bob Sevier on behalf of the deferred rush committee, had some "flaws" which had to be changed before it could be voted upon, according to the IFC.

Some of the changes suggested were the inclusion of the "bull pledge" specifically in the definition of rushing agents, clarification of the rushing rules during the Thanksgiving holidays and giving the IFC court an option to interpret penalties in the case of extenuating circumstances.

Some question was brought up on the date which the amendment is to go into effect. The proposed date is Spring 1964. Some houses voiced the opinion that they would like this date moved up to Spring 1965. This was also tabled pending discussion by the IFC executive committee with administration representatives.

Heavy Dorm Votes Solidify SP Power

By BILL HOBBS

The Student Party solidified its campus power yesterday with a clean victory in the class officer elections.

Taking the presidencies of the Junior and Sophomore classes and an overwhelming majority of all other officers, the SP easily defeated the University Party.

UP candidate Bob Spearman's victory as Freshman Class President offered the SP its only major setback.

Richard Vinroot counteracted this SP defeat in taking the Junior Class Presidency with an almost 2-1 upset victory over UP candidate Joe Craver.

George Rosenthal defeated Brooks Emory for Sophomore President by a substantial margin. Independent Jeff Bayer ran a poor third in this race.

Student Party officials attributed the party's loss of the freshman presidency to a heavy independent vote.

Following are the unofficial totals in the class elections:

Freshman President: Spearman (UP) 368, Harkness (SP) 320, Gillian (Ind) 291, Ellington (Ind) 181.

Freshman Vice President: Degenhart (SP) 621, Thompson (UP) 514.

Freshman Secretary: Collins (SP) 570, Massenburg (UP) 560.

Freshman Treasurer: Merrill (SP) 622, Fleming (UP) 521.

Freshman Social Chairman: Isom (SP) 582, Hanson (UP) 563.

Sophomore Secretary: Sitton (SP) 419, Williard (UP) 267.

Sophomore Treasurer: Harrison (SP) 484, King (UP) 215.

Sophomore Social Chairman: Raiford (SP) 444, Winstead (UP) 262.

Junior President: Vinroot (SP) 519, Craver (UP) 272.

Junior Vice President: Brown (Ind) 339, Caperton (UP) 221, Holsenback (SP) 213.

Junior Secretary: Walker (SP) 513, McDonald (UP) 244.

Junior Treasurer: Reardon (UP) 417, Barber (SP) 354.

Junior Social Chairman: Marshall (SP) 507, Oatts (UP) 263.

NAACP Chapter Begins Drive To End Segregation

A newly formed chapter of the NAACP at the University launched a "campaign against racial discrimination at UNC" from its Monday night meeting in Gerrard Hall.

Floyd L. McKissick, Durham attorney, called the "segregation policies" at N.C. Memorial Hospital and at Morehead Planetarium "probably administrative in nature." McKissick, plaintiff in the 1951 McKissick vs. Carmichael case which led to admission of Negroes to UNC graduate schools, was called in to acquaint the new chapter with the structure of the NAACP.

"Social Action"

About 50 students and townspeople at Gerrard Hall listened to McKissick's plan for "social action," supplementing legal action, in eliminating segregation at UNC and in Chapel Hill. Besides the hospital and the planetarium, the NAACP plans investigations of hiring practices of the university and of Chapel Hill merchants.

NAACP spokesmen said a caste system" exists, whereby Negroes are hired at UNC as sweepers and groundskeepers only. The organization plans to open employment for Negroes as secretaries and cashiers.

The group unanimously endorsed picketing of the Varsity theater, begun Sunday night by students and Chapel Hill citizens.

WOMEN STUDENTS

Mrs. Arthur DeBerry, acting dean of women, has again asked all women students who would like dormitory space for the spring semester to sign up in their dorms before Thursday.

A $25 deposit and a room reservation card are required. Failure to sign up could mean the student may not be able to live in the room of her choice, said Mrs. DeBerry. Space remaining after Thursday will be reserved for incoming women students.

Women students who have been living in town and who would like to move into a dorm for the spring should contact Mrs. DeBerry in her office, 202 South Building before Thursday.

Russia Reported As Reorganizing Navy

LONDON, Wednesday (UPI) — Russia is urgently reorganizing its Navy in the face of growing American nuclear dominance on, above and under the seas, the authoritative Janes's Fighting Ships reported Tuesday.

The new edition of the reference book was published coincident with a belief in naval circles that Russia is trying to develop a torpedo with a nuclear warhead in an effort to counter the American armada of 58 aircraft carriers.

In the event of war the carriers could loose hundreds of planes carrying nuclear weapons against Russian targets. One of the top Soviet priorities is how to deal with this threat to its lifelines.

Russia, with more submarines than the rest of the world combined, is expected in any future war to try to saturate the oceans with its underseas craft. If it could perfect an atomic torpedo it would intensify the danger to Allied ships.

Janes's said the United States has two nuclear warhead torpedoes designed as submarine killers—"Subroc" and "Astor." But until now there have not been any reports of Russian progress in this field.

Russia Keeping Cruisers

Jane's said the major reorganization of the Russian navy is so thorough that Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev has had to reverse the opinion—freely offered the U.S. Navy during his San Francisco visit—that the cruiser is obsolete.

Russia is keeping all the cruisers it has built in recent years and some of them apparently are being converted into guided missile ships. In this category of warships, as in every important one except submarines, the United States outnumbers Russia — 47 cruisers to 25.

Burlington Artist Jane Dougherty Opens Exhibition

An exhibition of art works in oils, pastels, inks and other media by Jane Dougherty of Burlington opened in the North Art Gallery of the Morehead Planetarium this week. It will be on display through November.

Titled "Pilgrims Progress," the collection shows Mrs. Dougherty's gradual shift over the years from meticulous realism to a looser and more personal style of painting.

Until the past two years Mrs. Dougherty was best known for portraits in pastel, and several have been loaned by their present owners for exhibit at the Planetarium. Included is a study of Dr. Archibald Henderson and Dr. Floyd Scott of Union Ridge, N. C.

Her exhibit at the Planetarium here may be viewed by the public free from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7:30 to 10 p.m. daily; on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and on Sundays from 1 to 10 p.m.

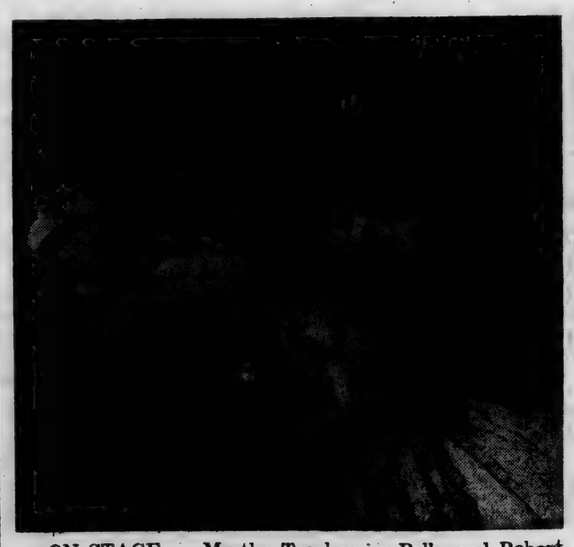
Playmakers 'Beggar's Opera' Opens Curtains Tonight For 6-Day Showing



ON STAGE — Martha Teachey as Polly and Robert Williamson as Macheath are shown in a scene from the Carolina Playmakers' production of "The Beggar's Opera," which will be given in the Playmakers Theatre at 8:30 p.m. daily from now through Sunday, Nov. 19, plus extra performances at 2:30 p.m. Sunday and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. Admission is $2, with reserved seating only. Tickets are on sale at Abernethy Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard's.

By GORDON CLARK

"The Beggar's Opera" opens at the Playmakers Theatre here tonight for a six-day run. John Gay's musical of London low-life will be presented nightly through Sunday, with additional performances being given Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and Tuesday at 8:30 p.m.

Set in London of the 1800's, "The Beggar's Opera" deals with the exploits of Macheath and his band of highwaymen. First presented in 1728, it is considered the forerunner of all modern musicals. A current descendant is the highly successful "Threepenny Opera" which has been running in New York for six years.

Directed by Russell Graves, The Carolina Playmakers' production is accompanied by a nine-piece orchestra. Musical director is Earl Gates of the UNC Department of Music.

Role Of Macheath

Appearing as Macheath in "The Beggar's Opera" is Robert Williamson of Cerro Gordo. Martha Teachey of Winston-Salem plays opposite him as Polly Peachum.

Randolph Umberger of Burlington and Susie Cordon of Chapel Hill appear as the villainous Mr. and Mrs. Peachum, who seek to have Macheath hanged. Jack Hargett of Goldsboro plays his cohort, Lockit, and Claudia Bray of Atlanta, Ga., a student at Duke University, portrays Lucy, the jailor's daughter who helps Macheath escape.

Others In Cast

Also in the cast are Lorenzo Durham, James Wagner, Doss Phillips, Jim Oldham, Allen Scruggs, Wallace Johnson, Isabel Zimmerman, Dorothy Silver, Janet Green, Cathy Orne, Judy Townend and Betty Ferguson.

Settings for "The Beggar's Opera" were designed by Tommy Rezzuto and costumes by Irene Smart Rains. Dances are staged by Dorothy Silver, and stage manager is Sandy Moffett. Assistant stage manager is Marcie McCarthy.

Playmakers Business Manager John W. Parker has announced that good seats still remain for the Sunday matinee and Tuesday evening holdover performances. Only a few seats are still available for the regular run.

Curtain time for the musical is 8:30 each evening. The performance will be over by 10:45, allowing coeds plenty of time to get back to their residences.

Tickets are available at the Playmakers Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall (next to the Scuttlebutt) and at Ledbetter-Pickard. All seats are reserved at $2 each.

Governor Names YWCA Director For Committee

Miss Anne Queen, a staff member of the YWCA here, was named by Gov. Terry Sanford to his newly created Committee for International Hospitality yesterday.

The purpose of the committee is to help promote good neighbor relations with other nations. The committee will arrange tours and visits for diplomats of other nations serving in the United Nations and in various embassies in Washington.

In addition to Miss Queen, Sanford appoined as co-chairmen of the committee Mrs. Mary Trent Semans of Durham and James M. Joyner of Raleigh. Other members are Mrs. Louis Sutton of Raleigh and Lew Harvin of Henderson.

Gov. Sanford said he felt the committee would aid U. S. relations with other nations through "person-to-person" friendships, as well as boosting North Carolina as a "variety vacationland." His sentiments were echoed by Miss Queen, who added, "I am very pleased at having the opportunity to help develop relations with other countries at the person-to-person level, and to serve in the state."

Nuclear Arms Condemned By UN Committee

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UPI) —The United Nations General Assembly's main Political Committee voted Tuesday that Africa should be declared a nuclear-free zone and approved a resolution calling the use of nuclear arms a crime against law and humanity.

Involved voting and explanation of votes by delegates delayed until Wednesday the scheduled start of the 103-nation committee's annual full-dress debate on the overall question of disarmament.

Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin was listed to lead off the debate Wednesday with a detailed exposition of Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's plan for "general and complete disarmament." U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson will follow Zorin.

The assembly itself, plodding through its debate on colonialism, booked a night meeting in addition to its afternoon session.

42 Countries Abstain

The Political Committee returned a 57-0 vote, with 42 abstentions ,in favor of a resolution sponsored by 14 African countries calling on all countries to:

—Refrain from carrying out or continuing to carry out in Africa nuclear tests in any form.

—Refrain from using the territory, territorial waters or air space of Africa in testing, storing or transporting nuclear weapons.

—Consider and respect the continent of Africa as a de-nuclearized zone.

Entertainment Committees:

Why Two?

Sometimes it is difficult to explain the success that GM director Howard Henry has enjoyed in booking entertainment for Carolina performances. Few enterprises are more unpredictable: today's crowd pleaser is often tomorrow's flop. The factors involved in picking an entertainer and a date make up a complex that would short-circuit an IBM machine.

Some entertainers, at the right time and place, can draw a huge and enthusiastic crowd. The next day, under a different set of circumstances, the same entertainers couldn't fill a phone booth. Weather, publicity arrangements, timing, price—these varying and often nebulous factors must be weighed with near-scientific precision. It's a difficult task, and even the professionals are not immune to an occasional "turkey."

The flops GM has booked in the past two years, however, could be counted on the fingers of a catcher's mitt. Last year GM presented Pete Seeger, Marcel Marceau and the Weavers. This year the series got off to a good start with Carlos Montoya and Ferrante and Teicher. Each concert was carefully planned and timed to play to the largest possible audience. Director Henry has completed arrangements to present folksinger Josh White on Dec. 1—at a cost $400 under the usual fee, it might be added.

Unfortunately, GM's successes have not been duplicated by the Campus Entertainment Committee. The committee's initial effort, the Four Aces concert, lost over $2,000. Although the flop could hardly be blamed on a lack of effort on the part of the committee, it seems unnecessary to continue the experiment when the same job is being handled competently by GM. To have two organizations performing the same function is bureaucracy at its worst.

Student government would do well to channel the energies of the entertainment committee into some other area, or abolish it completely, leaving the tough job of booking entertainers to smeone who can cope with it adequately.

Fact Or Fallacy?

Perhaps you have read those newspaper articles on "fallout" and "survival" by Professor Willard F. Libby. Professor Libby is an eminent scientist who knows a great deal about fallout, although many of his opinions are challenged by equally eminent scientists. Professor Libby has a right to hold opinions and express them in public print. But he does not have a moral right to proclaim his opinions as facts.

In an article listing "fallacies and facts" relating to the H-bomb, Professor Libby claims:

"Fallacy: Defense is hopeless. Shelters cannot really help.

"Fact: Ninety to 95 per cent of us survive, with proper protection."

Fact? Professor Libby's statement that "ninety to 95 per cent of us survive, with proper protection" is puse opinion, and one does not have to be a scientist to detect the fallacy of labeling it as "fact." No one knows how many of us would survive a nuclear war. Scientists cannot agree on what constitutes "proper protection." There is great uncertainty about survival because there is great uncertainty about how many nuclear bombs would be dropped in a war and where they would be dropped.

Professor Libby's association with the Atomic Energy Commission and the Pentagon identifies him with the growing U. S. "military-industrial complex" which President Eisenhower warned against in his farewell address. American militarists who hold that U. S. security lies in winning the arms race with the Russians are bidding for popular support. And they discover that their cause cannot be sustained unless they convince people that most of the population can survive a nuclear war and actually emerge from it as "victor." For the people sense that an arms race is likely to end in war.

Enough eminent scientists dis agree with Professor Libby about the destructiveness of nuclear weapons to make it imperaflce that we refrain from putting our faith in an arms race and do everything in our power to achieve international disarmament.

A fairly eminent scientist named Albert Einstein, the man who opened the door to the atomic age, warned as far back as 1931: "Without disarmament there can be no lasting peace. On the contrary, the continuation of military armaments in their present extent will with certainty lead to new catastrophies."

Dr. Einstein proved to be a prophet. What he said in 1931, eight years before the outbreak of World War II, has deeper significance today. And his words make much more sense than a military-minded scientist's opinions proclaimed as "facts."

Scholar To Study Thailand Jungle Tribe

U. S. Scholar Is Namesake Of One Of The University's First Graduates

Editor's Note: This article is particularly appropriate in view of the current interest in Southeast Asia and the "Ugly American."

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — An American scholar will soon set forth on an expedition starting in Scandinavia and leading into the remote mountain fastnesses of Northern Thailand, where he will commence work compiling the first dictionary in English on the language of the little-known Meo tribe.

Thomas Amis Lyman, scion of an old North Carolina family, will begin work on a dictionary, grammar, and ethnological description of the Meo, a mysterious hill-tribe which inhabits the jungle-clad mountain regions of Thailand, Laos, Burma, and Vietnam.

A Ph.D. candidate at the University of Copenhagen, Lyman has recently been awarded a fellowship by the Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research in New York City for the express purpose of studying the Meo people. Lyman's headquarters for this work will be in the remote provincial capital of Nan, an exotic city of Northern Thailand lying near the Laos border.

From Nan, Lyman will make periodic trips up rough jungle trails to the mountain-top villages of the Meo, a colorful tribe whose women wear indigo-blue kilts and leave their breasts bare.

T. A. Lyman with members of the Meo tribe of Northern Thailand with whom he lived for six months

Divided In Dialect

THE MEO ARE DIVIDED by differences in dialect and custom into a number of subgroups whose names derive from the color or pattern of their women's garments or hair style. One finds the White Meo, Black Meo, Striped Meo, and Horned Meo. The last named subgroup is so called because the women bind their hair into a long horn just over the forehead. No published work exists in English on any of the Meo languages. The particular subgroup which Lyman will study is known as the Green Meo. In ancient times, this people had a reputation for being cannibals.

Meo is a tone language, somewhat resembling Chinese in sound, and has 56 contractive consonants. The Green Meo dialect has never been reduced to writing, and it was necessary for Lyman to invent a special alphabet in order to write down Meo words. Some of the letters of this alphabet were not to be found on ordinary typewriters, so that a special keyboard had to be constructed and added to Lyman's machine.

Of all the many tribes in Thailand, the Meo eat the best. "Meo food is wonderful," says Lyman. At meal time, the Meo family sits on benches at a long table and uses wooden spoons. A huge concave frying-pan, called a ya, is lifted directly from the open fire and placed in the middle of the table. Each person has his own little rice-bowl and helps himself from the ya; this contains either pork or chicken mixed with vegetables.

Rice Staple Crop

HILL-RICE IS THE staple crop for mountain tribes all over Southeast Asia. It is planted on the sides of hills where the only water available is from the monsoon rain. This type of dry hill rice-field is called a ladang in contrast to the wet lowland paddy-field.

A ladang is made by burning off the timber on mountain slopes and allowing the earth to be feltilized by ashes. At planting time, the entire Meo village gathers, the men making rows of holes in the earth with "digging-sticks" into which the women throw the rice seed. Under this system, however, each year the soil becomes less fertile, and the rain washes a great deal of it into the valley. With each move, the ladang gets further and further from the village until the tribesmen are trudging miles to work each morning. Finally the day comes when they have to uproot their village and settle on a new mountain.

The Meo usually hit the opium pipe twice a day. This practice especially applies to old men and the heads of families. The young men have to go out and work the ladang and accordingly are not allowed to smoke very much. The reason for the presence of so many opium addicts is not so much a desire for purely sensual pleasure but the wish to deaden the pain of toothache, from which most Meo suffer.

Many Meo smoke opium but are not addicts. Their system is ten days on, five days off. Until the recent Thai government ban, the Meo had become comparatively wealthy by growing and selling opium.

Original Courting Customs

Courting customs among the Meo are original. It is always the woman who initiates advances. Usually she gives a present to a man—a piece of meat or a wad of tobacco—to indicate that she desires him. If he is interested, he will engage her in conversation. At this point, the Meo woman will suddenly turn on her heel and dash up into the jungle.

It is considered good form for the man to immediately follow her in headlong pursuit. The chase is not always so easy, however, for the woman may continue running up and down hills and through stream-beds before she finally "succumbs". Meo marriage is usually polygamous, with two, three, or even four wives living together in the same house.

Politically, the Meo are important in the Cold War. In the strategic province of Xieng Khouang, Laos, the Meo population is estimated by Lyman to exceed the Lao population. This area is now occupied by Pathet Lao forces. Up to now, the Meo have loyally fought on the side of Royal Lao Government troops against the pro-Communist Pathet Lao.

The establishment by the Communist government of North Vietnam in 1955 of a Thai-Meo autonomous region bordering the northeastern frontier of Laos adds further to the political potential of the Meo people. Dien Bien Phu is a major center in this region.

Although living today as illiterate primitives, the Meo were formerly according to legend, the inhabitants of a well-organized kingdom in Szechwan Province, Southwestern China, which was overthrown and ruthlessly destroyed by the Chinese centuries ago. Evidence that Meo culture was once on a higher plane is shown by the presence of the words book, read, and write in the language. The Meo also have words for king and prince although they have no social organization higher than their villages and chieftains. Racially, the Meo are somewhat caucasian in appearance, and tradition says that they came first from the "far north, a place of ice and snows".

IN 1949, LYMAN travelled extensively in the mountainous regions of Northern Thailand where he made his first contact with the Meo tribes. Having always been fascinated from childhood with the idea of living with a primitive folkgroup, he seized upon this opportunity and stayed in various Meo villages for a period of six months.

The scholar's family is an old one in North Carolina. Lyman's ancestor William Amis, born about 1750 in Northampton County, was one of the founders of the University of North Carolina. His son, Thomas Amis (for whom the scholar is named), was a member of the first graduating class of the University about 1799. The Amis family had at that time a plantation called "Moorefield" lying not far from the town of Weldon in Northampton County; the plantation house, a gem of old Southern architecture, still stands today.

Lyman's great-grandfather, the Rt. Rev. Theodore Benedict Lyman, was fifth bishop of North Carolina from 1881 until his death in 1893. Dynamic Bishop Lyman is still spoken of by people in Raleigh where his portrait now hangs. It is perhaps from his great-grandfather that young Lyman derives his love of adventure. Although not generally known, Bishop Lyman was one of the few Americans to travel to the headwaters of the Nile in the pre-Civil War period; he also made a journey to Moscow, an adventurous feat for that era.

They Are Exactly The Same As The White Person—Maupin

(Editor's Note: The name of Alan Goldsmith was inadvertently dropped from the article entitled "Darky Ages," which appeared in Sunday's paper.)

I was under the evidently mistaken impression that I was in college—The University of North Carolina. The "Darky Ages" letter in Sunday's DTH tends to read like an antiquated high school sociology book. Fortunately, I have never read such a blatantly bigoted, erroneous epistle of such absolute bunk in our newspaper before. (I had to refer to the letter as the "Darky Ages" letter, because, you will have noticed, it was conveniently left unsigned, or the name was not printed. If the latter, it is probably best, for some more "heretical" than I would have undoubtedly threatened the misguided soul.)

To begin with, I suggest that "Darky" read the facts about the incident in his (or her) letter, and try to interpret them in an objective light. How did the President hear of the postman's dismissal? What do you mean, ". . . with some reluctance, reinstated the postman"??

SECONDLY, "DARKY" must have a rather pessimistic outlook on life to say that everyone's life is ". . . drab" and "petty." Maybe his own is, but mine certainly isn't, even though I have my dubious moments, as everyone does. And who is laboring (besides Darky) under the illusion (red-inspired?) that there isn't any justice? The die-hard Deep South segregationists? Most of them are as bigoted as Darky seems to be. Yes, it DOES take a "great" man to run this country, and even though I voted Republican in the election, I think that Kennedy is doing one of the best jobs he can possibly do both internally and externally. I have nothing but admiration for the way he is handling things. "Selfrighteous"; (NAACP) yes, and rightly so, I think. I suppose another way of saying it would be to say that even a Negro (sic) has pride in himself and his work. "Pressure group"; yes, in a sense, but NOT without cause. The NAACP is too big and too well known to open itself to attack for something that it does not consider right.

I think your next paragraph should have read simply: "You can't beat what is morally, spiritually, intellectually, sociologically, and psychologically right."

The rest of the letter, with the exception of the four rules, is too silly to even deserve comment. The rules weren't exactly complete. I submit the following as revisions of them:

1. Never refuse to hire a Negro, unless you do not need his particular talents for your business, or unless he is in some way other than color, unsuitable.

2. Never ever fire a Negro, unless he has done something worth getting fired for.

3. Never ever arrest a Negro, unless he has done something equivalent to that for which a White would be arrested.

4. Intermarry as soon as possible, if you want to.

THIS LAST deserves a short comment: With few exceptions, which I am sure everyone sees the reasons for, interracial marriage is not generally desired by either race. When it does occur, facts show that over 75% of the marriages occur on very high intellectual planes.

Someone is by now calling me a "Dam Yankee Agitator." I'm not. I was born and raised here in North Carolina, and was thoroughly indoctrinated with all of the prepudices of the old-guard school. I have traveled over much of the United States and Canada, however, and have talked with, eaten with, written to, liked, admired been done favors by (and have done them in return), and lived with Negroes. THEY ARE EXACTLY THE SAME AS THE WHITE PERSON (Blasphemy!!) except for the color of their skin.

Since this is long, I will save facts and figures for the retaliation which I fully expect.

Reflections

MAD magazine's recent issue parodies READER'S DIGEST with articles such as these: "We are Losing Idaho and Montana to the Russians," "What Your Dog Should Know About Sex," "What to Do When the 20th Century Comes (by Barry Goldwater)", "Capital Punishment Can Be Fun," and "The DAR—A Communist Menace."

Letters generally cannot be printed sooner than three days after they are received because of the early editorial page deadline.

Arlington Leads, Will N.C. Follow?

Arlington County, Va., long a leader in the fight for teacher's salaries, has done it again. The Arlington Education Association has proposed a new basis for determining salary schedules in the county.

The scale is to be based upon the salaries currently paid other professional people of the area. In order to determine accurately just what average salaries for professionals are, the AEA has engaged representatives of the U. S. Census Bureau, who will survey county residents having at least 4 years of college training.

The results of this survey will be available by December 1 and will represent the basis which the AEA discusses salaries for next year with the school board.

Richard Neal, the Secretary of AEA, said that salary increases are generally set by "how great a tax increase the citizens of a community will tolerate." He feels, however, that teacher salaries should be increased to levels comparable with other "professional people."

THIS ACTION on the part of the AEA may well be the largest step forward the teaching profession has experienced in the history of the country.

For the elevation of salaries to professional levels will not only represent material advance, but will herald the dawning recognition of teachers as true members of the professional community, which includes doctors, lawyers, and engineers, etc. At long last the teacher will not be the subject of ill-concealed sneers on the part of other professionals, the butt of painful jibes. (Ie. Those who can do, those who can't teach.) Nor will teachers have to wear threadbare clothing, drive ancient cars, live in quite modest surroundings and take part time jobs in order to feed their families. This may sound melodramatic, but it represents a situation all too common even in "high paying" areas such as Arlington.

IN NORTH CAROLINA, the situation, though somewhat brighter than B.S. (before Sanford), can still stand much improvement. Salaries are higher than ever before, which is a real blessing to the threadbare intelligensia of the N. C. public schools. But the recent salary hike represents only the efforts of the state government to lift teachers from almost-poverty to the lower middle class level.

Now the teacher, brushing the mud and grime of the "submerged years" from his clothing, must push upward toward his rightful professional status. This will not be an easy climb. Opposition will arise on many quarters from those who do not appreciate the calibre of individuals who serve their schools, who do not know of the extra hours put in by teachers, the constant struggle to "keep abreast" of current developments in the field, the untoward impositions made upon the teachers by fellow townspeople. It is unfortunate that these things cannot be more easily revealed to the public in N. C. and elsewhere.

MUCH PROGRESS is being made in North Carolina, as well as in the rest of the South. UNC, whose School of Education represents one of the largest N. C. sources of potential teachers, must be aware of the current problems in Education. Long a center of progress and liberalism in the South, Carolina must back her teachers and aid them in their fight to attain their "place in the sun," a place so richly deserved—and so long withheld. Arlington leads—will North Carolina follow?

Documentary On N. African Cities To Appear Here

The "Jeweled Cities of North Africa" will be in Chapel Hill next Tuesday.

They will arrive on film at Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. accompanied by Robert Auburn, producer and photographer of the film.

The 90-minute color documentary will present the vast extremes of Africa: elegancy and ruin, modern medicine and the "evil eye," camels and jets, nomads and college students, La Corbusier's architecture and mud huts, vast spaces and narrow streets.

Opens Series

This is the opener of the GM Travel-Adventure Series. Season tickets for the four presentations are $2.50. Admission at the door Tuesday night will be one dollar.

Auburn will show the film and comment on it. He traveled for six months making it in Tunisia and Morocco.

Rockefeller Hits Test Treaty As Endangering US Security

ALBANY, N. Y. (UPI) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller declared Tuesday the United States should avoid at this time signing a nuclear test ban treaty with Russia in the interest of national security and world freedom.

The Kennedy administration on Monday joined Great Britain in calling on Russia to resume nuclear test ban talks late this month.

Rockefeller said the Russian record of cheating during the last nuclear test moratorium shows the Soviets cannot be trusted.

"To sign any test ban—at this time—could place in jeopardy both our national safety and the defense of freedom throughout the world," Rockefeller said.

He expanded his views in an hour and 20 minute off-the-record discussion with newsmen.

The New York governor, who called for resumption of full-scale nuclear testing in the atmosphere in Miami, Fla., Oct. 27, said the issue "continues to press for clear national decision."

Rockefeller, a potential GOP presidential candidate in 1964, was not alone in his demand for resumption of nuclear testing. Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon called for resumption of atmospheric testing when Russia recently set off its big bomb. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R.-Ariz., said early in 1960 that tests should be resumed.

Rockefeller feels that much valuable information would come from the tests. He has noted that Soviet leaders would not have jeopardized their position with neutral nations unless they expected the tests to be worth the risk.

The governor said the position of the national administration in rejecting another uninspected moratorium on testing was reassuring, but he added:

"I wish there were more assurance that serious attention is being given to the inadequacy of today's detection methods, which must be perfected to make any test ban consistent with national security," Rockefeller said.

Kennedy Promises US Aid If Needed For South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy promised South Korean leader Gen. Chung Hee Park Tuesday that U.S. military forces would be used again if necessary to preserve the republic's freedom.

The pledge was contained in a communique issued following an afternoon of meetings between Kennedy and the 44-year-old general who led a military coup in his country last May.

Kennedy "reaffirmed the determination of the United States to render forthwith and effectively all possible assistance to the republic of Korea," the communique said. This, Kennedy said, included "use of armed forces if there is a renewal of armed attack."

Discussed Mutual Defense

The communique said Park and the President discussed the problem of mutual defense against the threat of external armed aggression in the Pacific area.

"They recognized that the common interest of their two countries as bulwarks of the free world against Communist expansion is deepened and reinforced by the fact that the Korean and United States troops are brothers-in-arms, standing side by side in the United Nations command for the defense of Korean soil," the communique said.

The two men also rejected the use of force to unify Korea. They said they "reaffirmed their faith in the United Nations and their determination to seek the unification of Korea in freedom through peaceful means under the principles laid down and reaffirmed by the United Nations General Assembly."

The communique was issued after Kennedy and Park had conferred at the White House following a stag luncheon given by the President for his guest.

Told Kennedy Of Coup

During their talks, the general told Kennedy of the situation in Korea which led to the May coup.

THE AUTHENTIC STORY OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S WARTIME ADVENTURES

This week The Saturday Evening Post publishes the first authentic account of Lieutenant Kennedy at war. To get this story, writer Robert Donovan traveled halfway around the world. He got eyewitness reports from every survivor of the Kennedy crew. He even interviewed the Japanese commander whose destroyer sank Kennedy's PT boat. This is a story of heroism, humor and heartbreak. You will follow John Kennedy's adventures from the moment his ship went down — right up to his dramatic rescue from a desert island. Read "PT 109: The Adventure That Made a President."

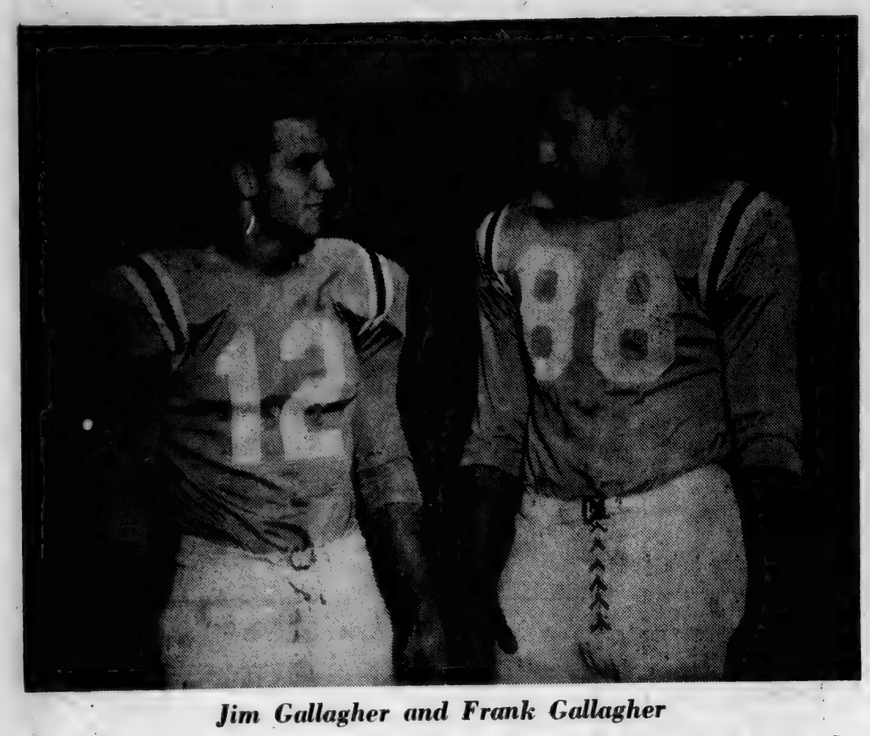
Twins Play Part On 2 UNC Football Teams



Jim Gallagher and Frank Gallagher

By ED DUPREE

When the public address announcer at UNC freshman football games announces a pass completed from Gallagher to Gallagher, he isn't just a'spoofing. Tar Baby twins Jim and Frank Gallagher have been two of many shining lights on Coach George Barclay's frosh football squad.

Jim, a 6-0, 180-pound quarterback, and Frank, a 6-3, 206-pound end, have figured in four of the eleven touchdowns scored by the little Tar Heels in their first four games. One of these was a Gallagher-to-Gallagher pass play in UNC's 20-0 victory over Virginia. In the same game Jim scored a TD from 6 yards out. The two tallies in the final quarter broke up a close 7-0 game against a surprisingly strong Virginia team.

In the 30-27 loss to Clemson, Jim hit speedy halfback Ronnie Jackson with a TD pass play which covered 74 yards and ignited a fourth quarter Tar Baby rally. Frank had hauled in a pass from Gary Black early in the game for UNC's first score.

The Gallagher twins, a pair that would have a hard time passing for brothers, hail from Chester, Pa. and played football at St. James Catholic High School—a school which also sent Dick Christie to N.C. State and John Hegarty and Mike Greenday to UNC.

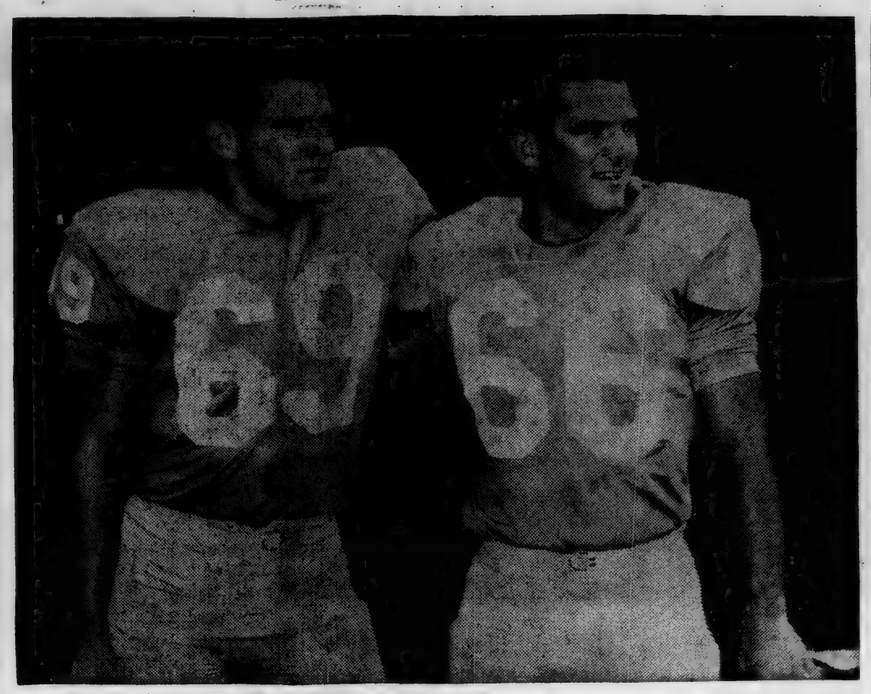
In their senior year at St. James, Frank made All-State and Jim All-County. In seven games, Jim completed 55 of 80 passes for 10 touchdowns—Frank caught 36 of his brother's aerial tosses and scored 5 touchdowns. Jim, who missed two games because of a knee injury, also scored 7 times himself.

The boys wanted to go to the same college after high school, but they almost didn't. Assistant Coach Fred Tullai recruited the sparkling quarterback-end combination, but two days before fall practice started, Frank still planned to go to Penn State. He finally decided to come to Carolina, since he had signed grant-in-aids with both schools, and the boys wanted to play together.

Both also played baseball in high school and plan to play frosh baseball at UNC this spring. Frank played first base and hit .390 in his senior year, while Jim patrolled the outfield and hit in the .340's.

Jim and Frank have twin sisters only 11 months younger than themselves and all four graduated from high school last year. A six-year-old brother, "bigger and tougher than the footballers" rounds out the family.

Frank plans to major in business at UNC, while Jim has changed his mind about Dental School and isn't sure what he will major in.



Bruce Greene and Duff Greene

By ED DUPREE

If UNC football opponents think they're seeing double at the guard positions this year, they're probably seeing green—Bruce and Duff Greene, that is. The 201-pound twins from Wynnewood, Pa., are an important part of the forward wall which has performed so well in the Tar Heels' first seven contests.

Duff, an inch shorter than his twin who stands 6-0, has seen more action at the left guard post than Bruce has at the right guard spot, but the outstanding play of All-American hopeful Jim LeCompte at Bruce's position has been a good reason for this.

Bruce is currently third team right guard behind LeCompte and sophomore Jerry Cabe—but since he was red-shirted in 1960, he has two more years of eligibility after this season. Duff lettered in 1960 and has started several games at the opposite guard slot where Jack Tillery and Jim Alderman have also seen a good deal of action.

The husky twins played their high school football at Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington, D. C. Both played guard there, but Duff played some at fullback, or as Duff puts it, "I played fullback, defensive guard and linebacker. Bruce played guard all the time—he never got to be a glory hound." Duff, though, is quick to admit that he likes playing the line better.

After graduation from high school, both boys considered going to West Point, but decided to attend prep school for a year to better prepare themselves for colleg. A back injury caused Bruce to shy away from football for a year, so he enrolled at Braden's, a special West Point preparatory school at Cornwall on the Hudson in New York. Duff wanted to play football and went to Fork Union prep school in Virginia. After a semester, Duff switched to Braden's, so this was the only time that their paths separated.

But, the Greene twins had still not decided where they wanted to go to college. Their older brother, Leroy, had graduated from West Point in 1959 after playing tackle on Army's undefeated 1958 team, and they had thought about playing football for Army since their high school days. During the summer of 1959 UNC entered the picture as Jim Tatum, then head coach, sent Jim Hickey to talk to the twins. They liked the idea of coming south to college and decided to come to Carolina. The unofficial story goes that they were the last two grant-in-aids signed under Tatum.

Duff played first team freshman guard the next fall and feels that he learned "an awful lot about football and the guard position" in his frosh year. Frosh Coaches Joe Mark and Buddy Payne helped him a great deal.

Bruce also got a lot of help from Joe Mark and the freshman staff: "Basically they've taught me all the football I know. Your first year, you work on fundamentals. They give you almost everything you need. After that, it's more or less a defining process."

Bruce, who was president of his sophomore class last year, seems to be the more studious of the duo, but both have grades well above a C average. Bruce's year as class president is the only major difference in their three years at UNC. Both are political science majors, Flight Sergeants in the Air Force ROTC program, and members of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

On the field or off, Duff and Bruce are a credit to their school and the best part of it, as far as Jim Hickey is concerned, is that they'll be wearing the Blue and White for one and two more seasons respectively—much to the double regret of opposing coaches.

Open Cage Scrimmage Tonight

Coach Dean Smith's 1961-'62 Carolina basketball team will hold its "Tip Off Night" tonight at 7:30 in Woollen Gymnasium for the benefit of all the fans of the area. There will be no admission charge.

Smith will introduce all of his players, and each player will demonstrate his favorite shot. The team will demonstrate its new offensive and defensive patterns, and will interpret the new game rules to the fans.

Special guests of the showing will be the Chapel Hill Athletic Club.

Following the demonstrations, there will be a scrimmage between the members of the varsity and freshman teams.

North Carolina's freshman soccer team racked up its third win of the year here Monday afternoon with a 6-0 thrashing of N. C. State. John Schlacter kicked two goals for Coach Art Lemery's booters in the second period, and Jim Talbot added two more in the final quarter.

Other UNC goals were scored by Martin Kruming and Mike Chanin, all in the last period of play.

North Carolina's frosh had lost to Fort Bragg 6-2 last Friday.

THE SPORTS

Tabloyd

This week's game is the big one—Carolina vs. Duke. By tradition, this classic is the most important contest of the season for both tems, and this year's battle will certainly be no exception. North Carolina enters the game with a 4-3 record. Duke is 5-3 overall, and leads the ACC by just a few percentage points over the Tar Heels.

Everywhere, people are trying to decide who will win the game. But nobody has come up with a sure-fire answer. By going carefully over the performances of these two teams and those of their like opponents, we have arrived at a conclusion. Here is the basis of our conclusion:

North Carolina beat Tennessee by 1
Tennessee beat Georgia Tech by 4
Rice beat Texas Tech by 36
Texas Tech beat TCU by 10
TCU beat Taxas A&M by 1
Texas A&M beat Baylor by 23
Baylor beat Pittsburgh by 3
Pittsburgh beat Miami (Fla.) by 7
Miami (Fla.) beat Kentucky by 7
Kentucky beat Auburn by 2
Auburn beat Clemson by 10
Clemson beat Tulane by 15
Tulane beat Virginia Tech by 13
Virginia Tech beat Florida State by 3
Florida State beat Georgia by 3
Georgia beat South Carolina by 3
South Carolina beat Maryland by 10
Maryland beat Syracuse by 1
Syracuse beat West Virginia by 15
West Virginia beat Army by 4
Army beat Detroit by 27
Detroit beat Villanova by 14
Villanova beat Miami (Ohio) by 33
Miami (Ohio) beat Bowling Green by 1
Bowling Green beat West Texas State by 22
West Texas State beat Arizona by 4
Arizona beat Wyoming by 5
Wyoming beat Utah by 7
Utah beat Colorado by 9
Colorado beat Kansas by 1
Kansas beat Oklahoma by 10
Oklahoma beat Missouri by 7
Missouri beat Minnesota by 6
Minnestota beat Michigan State by 13
Michigan State beat Michigan by 28
Michigan beat Duke by 14.

Therefore by scientific methods, it is determined that the University of North Carolina is 396 points better than Duke University. We urge all gamblers to place their bets immediately.

POVERTY CAN BE FUN

It is no disgrace to be poor. It is an error, but it is no disgrace.

So if your purse is empty, do not skulk and brood and hide your head in shame. Stand tall. Admit your poverty. Admit it freely and frankly and all kinds of good things will happen to you. Take, for instance, the case of Blossom Sigafoos.

Blossom, an impecunious freshman at an Eastern girls' college, was smart as a whip and round as a dumpling, and scarcely a day went by when she didn't get invited to a party weekend at one of the nearby men's schools. But Blossom never accepted. She did not have the rail fare; she did not have the clothes. Weekend after weekend, while her classmates went frolicking, Blossom sat alone, saved from utter despair only by her pack of Marlboros, for even an exchequer as slim as Blossom's can afford the joys of Marlboro—joys far beyond their paltry price: rich, mellow tobaccos, lovingly cured and carefully packed, and an exclusive selectrate filter. Croesus himself could not buy a better cigarette!

However, Marlboro's most passionate admirers—among whose number I am paid to count myself—would not claim that Marlboro can entirely replace love and romance, and Blossom grew steadily moroser.

"Accept these Gifts from Tom."

Then one day came a phone call from an intelligent sophomore named Tom O'Shanter at a nearby men's college. "Blossom," said Tom, "I want you to come down next week for the barley festival, and I won't take no for an answer."

"No," said Blossom.

"Foolish girl," said Tom gently. "I know why you refuse me. It is because you are poor, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Blossom.

"I will send you a railroad ticket," said Tom. "Also a hard-boiled egg in case you get hungry on the train."

"But I have nothing to wear," said Blossom.

Tom replied, "I will send you one suit of cashmere, two gowns of lace, three slacks of velvet, four shoes of calf, five socks of nylon, and a partridge in a pear tree."

"That is most kind," said Blossom, "but I fear I cannot dance and enjoy myself while back home my poor lame brother Tiny Tim lies abed."

"Send him to Mayo Brothers and put it on my tab," said Tom.

"You are terribly decent," said Blossom, "but I cannot come to your party because all the other girls at the party will be from rich, distinguished families, and my father is but a humble woodcutter."

"I will buy him Yosemite," said Tom.

"You have a great heart," said Blossom. "Hold the phone while I ask our wise and kindly old Dean of Women whether it is proper for me to accept all these gifts."

She went forthwith and asked the Dean of Women, and the Dean of Women laid her wise and kindly old hand on Blossom's cheek and said, "Child, let not false pride rob you of happiness. Accept these gifts from Tom."

"Oh, bless you, Wise and Kindly," breathed Blossom, dropping grateful tears into the Dean's reticule. "I must run and tell Tom."

"Yes, run, child," said the Dean, a smile wrinkling her wise and kindly old eyes. "And ask him has he got an older brother."

Gizenga Opens Revolt

Rebels Force UN Members To Flee

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo — (UPI)—Vice Premier Antoine Gizenga, political heir to the slain Patrice Lumumba, was reported today to have opened a rebel movement against the government of The Congo whose troops have mutinied in two cities.

Rebellious Congolese soldiers forced members of a United Nations delegation to flee for their lives from Kindu in Kivu Province shortly after Gizenga arrived there from his Stanleyville stronghold, diplomatic sources said. The diplomatic reports came the day after a United Nations investigating committee announced at U. N. headquarters that Lumumba was murdered early this year with Katanga Premier Moise Tshombe as a probable witness. Gizenga was a staunch supporter and lieutenant of Lumumba.

Troops of Rampage

In another outburst of violence mutinous Congo troops went on a rampage of robbery in the North Katanga city of Albertville. The reported threat from Gizenga apparently was one of the most serious faced by the central government in recent weeks. Informed sources said the government was preparing a communique announcing how it intended to deal with it.

One government source said Gizenga is "in open rebellion against the government."

Russia Proposes Disarmament Treaty

UNITED NATIONS—Russia proposed Wednesday that a treaty on general and complete disarmament be drafted and submitted to a special session of the General Assembly by next June.

But an exchange between Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin and U. S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson at the opening of the assembly's main political committee debate on disarmament made it clear that there was little prospect in agreement soon on the problem of control or even on the forum in which negotiations should be renewed.

Recount Changes Election Outcome

Johnsye Massenburg, UP candidate for Freshman Class Secretary, defeated Frieda Collins, SP candidate for the same post, by 12 votes, according to Elections Board Chairman Dave Buxton.

A recount of the votes was made yesterday and a mistake was discovered in the recording of the votes from Winston dormitory.

The 33 votes for Massenburg had been counted as 13. Dave Buxton said that it was regrettable that the error had not been discovered before the results were made public. Because of a lack of vote counters' a recount could not be made Tuesday night.

A recount was also made of the votes for Dolly Isom, SP candidate for Freshman Social Chairman, and Jane Hanson, UP candidate for the same office. The official totals are now 580 votes for Dolly Isom and 564 votes for Jane Hanson.

'Die Cast Last Spring'... UP

By Drena Edwards

"The die was cast last spring when the Student Party emphasized the University Party as the fraternity party," said UP Chairman Bill Criswell yesterday as he analysed his party's defeat in Tuesday's elections.

As an illustration of his point he said the closest split between the parties was among the freshman class.

"Those are the people who weren't here last spring," he said, "so they weren't under the influence of that campaign."

Criswell rejected the claim that the fraternities and sororities are organizd as a UP block.

Fallacy of Tag

"The fact that only 30 to 40 per cent of them voted, I think, shows a lack of interest and indicates the fallacy of the fraternity party tag," maintained Criswell.

Evidently, he said, the dorms felt "compelled" to vote against the fraternities; but the fraternities "didn't care enough to support or refute the idea."

Criswell said the reason all of the UP candidates were fraternity or sorority members was that 700 of the 750 people at the nominating convention were from those groups.

"Imagine what one dorm, say Joyner, could do if it turned out as a whole at the nominating convention," he added.

Big Four To Confer

WASHINGTON — The Western Big Four — The United States, Britain, France and West Germany—agreed Wednesday to hold a foreign ministers meeting on the Berlin situation, probably in Paris next month.

State Department announcement of the meeting came after Secretary of State Dean Rusk conferred here with French Ambassador Herve Alphand and British Embassy Minister Viscount Hood, on the Communist threat to Berlin, the Far East and other areas.

The department also announced that Gen. Lucius D. Clay, President Kennedy's special representative in Berlin, was returning here for consultations this weekend. He will be accompanied by Walter C. Dowling, U. S. Ambassador to West Berlin.

State Department press officer Lincoln White said they were called home to help prepare for the visit of West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who arrives Sunday night.

To Meet

Adenauer will meet with President Kennedy and other U. S. officials in a move to map Allied policy toward Communist-encircled Berlin—a problem that will be further explored at the forthcoming foreign ministers meeting.

At present, the Western Allies appear to have agreed to sit tight on the Berlin situation pending some indication that the Russians are intersted in East-West negotiations. There has been some disagreement in the past on procedural questions.

An exact date for the foreign ministers conference has not yet been set, but a State Department spokesman said it probably would be held about the time of the NATO ministerial meeting in Paris Dec. 13-15.

Has Been Agreed

"It has been agreed to take advantage of meetings at which the four foreign ministers will be present to enable them to get together on problems of common interest," the spokesman said.

The French ambassador indicated after Wednesday's conference with Rusk that the conference might be held just before Dec. 13.

Ministers of state, defense and finance for the 15 NATO countries will be in Paris for the NATO meeting. This is one of two NATO ministerial meetings held annually. The other is a regular foreign ministers meeting each spring .

130 Acres For New Arboretum Donated

A gift to the University of 130 acres of land along Morgan Creek in Orange County was announced yesterday by Chancellor William B. Aycock.

To be named the "William Lanier Hunt Arboretum," the property is a major portion of a large botanical garden encompassing 240 acres.

Plans for a horticulture showplace and laboratory of potential international stature for teaching and research in botany are envisioned.

It will be the first major botanical garden and arboretum connected with a state university in the southeast. Part of it will resemble the 5.5 acres Coker Arboretum—but will be from 75 to 100 times larger and more varied and extensive.

24.5 Acres

Two separate land gifts were announced: (1) William L. Hunt, specialist in southern gardening and civic beautification, gave UNC 24.5 acres along Morgan Creek just outside the town limits and adjacent to the Mason Farm owned by the University. He also contracted to give an additional 100 acres over a period of years.

(2) An additional eight acres of land in the same vicinity was given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gray. Gray is a local banker.

Both properties are along Morgan Creek and include the place known as Laurel Hill which was "discovered" in the last century by President Kemp Plummer Battle. The Hunt property is contiguous with approximately 80 acres of land which has been used by the University for the past nine years as an experimental botanical garden.

GM Bills Josh White On Dec. 1

Folk singer Josh White will perform on a Graham Memorial—sponsored program in Memorial Hall Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. Admission is $1.

He is known for his unique guitar style and interpretation of ballads, blues, work songs and spirituals.

In recent years he has performed in the United States and abroad in concert halls, night clubs, on radio and TV.

Some critics say Josh White is a man who sings with the strength of one who has lived the songs he sings.

From the time he was 7 years old and began leading singers like Blind Blake and Blind Lemon Jefferson through the South, he has known the songs of the chain gangs.

"We'd walk from city to city—we rarely could take a train and we'd hear the road gangs and swampers, the ones who had to clean out the swamps. Some times when we'd stop to play in a town, we heard stories from men who had been on the gangs. Some had escaped, some had made their time."

His records include "The Ballad of John Henry," "Every Time I Feel the Spirit," "Nine Foot Shovel" and "Going Home."

In 1955 he was elected secretary of the Polish Philosophy Society.

Film Society Showing

Phantom Here Mon.

"Phantom of the Opera," starring Lon Chaney, will be a special offering of the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society's fall-winter series Monday night at 8 in Carroll Hall.

Mary Philbin is starred as the Opera's brilliant young singer who befriends Erik, the grotesque "Phantom." Norman Kerry plays Miss Philbrin's lover. Rupert Julian directed the film, and Carl Laemmle produced it.

Chaney was considered by many to be the greatest makeup man of movie history. He was played by James Cagney in the production of "The Man With A Thousand Faces."

The film, produced in 1925 by Universal, is a melo-dramatic horror film, reaching a climax when the heroes are trapped in torture chambers, their fates in the hands of the heroine.

A short, "City of the Stars," featuring a tour of Universal Studios in 1925, will also be shown.

BSU Here Against Capital Punishment

The UNC Baptist Student Union is taking "a similar position" to that of the student delegation which Tuesday asked the Baptist State Convention to go on record supporting the abolition of capital punishment in North Carolina.

The convention, now meeting in Greensboro, has referred to committee the resolution proposed by Wake Forest College delegates and action is expected to be taken today.

Bill Price, director of the local BSU, stated that although his organization has only one representative at the convention, it is planning study groups to discuss the issue, and that the question will be resolved at the BSU convention next spring.

"Segregation Sinful"

Price also said that the union is in general agreement with the plea by the Rev. Wilburg Honeycutt at the State Convention that "Segregation at any level is exceedingly sinful." He pointed out that the BSU here has taken the position that eating, entertainment and educational facilities should be integrated, and he noted that the local Union is an integrated group.

Price emphasized that the union's position on integration has been taken in light of the present situation in Chapel Hill, and he referred to the segregation policy of a group of local business establishments.

Says U. Of Chicago Professsor

'Students Should Be Paid'

From Wire Reports

Students should be paid to go to college, suggested University of Chicago economist Prof. H. W. Schultz Tuesday.

He told the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities in Kansas City that this was one possible method for reducing the waste of college student's time and for accomplishing basic reforms in higher education.

Schultz feels that colleges and universities seriously under-estimate the value of the time students spend at college. The 'opportunity cost' to the students for the years they spend going to school, the loss of the money that they would otherwise be earning—is greater than many people think, said the professor.

Earnings Lost

The economist illustrated this with figures showing that in 1956 the total school cost of higher education in the United States was $3.5 billion. The total earnings foregone by college and university students last year was $5.8 billion.

"But colleges go merrily on," he said, "treating the time of the students as if it were a free resource. Instead of rationing admissions and economizing on the time of students, one way would be to recruit and pay each student the earnings he will forego while attending college."

"I venture," he added, "such a procedure, impractical as it may appear, would bring about basic reforms in the use of school facilities—libraries, laboratories and classrooms—in the use of faculty time, and above all a reform in curricula."

Buckley Says 'No'

Desegregation?

The most recent issue of the Saturday Review carried an article titled "Desegregation: Will It Work?" Taking the positive side was the Rev. William Sloane Coffin Jr., Chaplain of Yale University. The negative was by William F. Buckley, Jr. editor of the National Review and spokesman for a large group of Conservatives.

While it would be an extreme overgeneralization to say that all conservatives share Buckley's sentiments, the fact is that for too many people—certainly not all of them conservatives—do share the harness with him in his pull toward donothingness on the question of desegregation.

Buckley, in the article mentioned, includes in his argument the following: "There are those who approach all problems as though they merely involved getting an automobile from here to there: there is always a road. There are others who know that some problems are insoluble. These last are for the most part conservatives; and I am here to defend them."

Although we make no claims to great insight into the rise of the new conservative, we hope that he is not what Buckley implies. There is a difference between conservatism and defeatism, Buckley seems to be espousing the latter.

Whether he holds this to be true in regard to problems other than desegregation, we are not sure. If so, then the conservatism which he advocates—and he is highly regarded by "new" conservatives on this campus—is nothing more than the same old broken record of standing pat and doing nothing.

We have no arguments with the conservative label. What we object to is the way Buckley wears it. As one of the most articulate and influential spokesmen for the right. Buckley holds sway over a large conservative element, particularly among the "new" conservatives such as the Young Americans For Freedom, probably the most powerful of the new groups.

Buckley and the YAF represent that element of the right which is, unfortunately, very powerful.

We have heard that there is a move toward establishing a chapter of the YAF here at Carolina.

The YAF line, which is Buckley's all over again, is heard with increasing frequency of late. It has, as a matter of fact, been bandied around quite a bit here at Carolina and there has been at least a suggestion that campus conservatives establish a YAF chapter here.

While what the conservatives here decide to do with their allegiance is entirely up to them, allying with YAF, we feel, would be a restrictive and unwise move. Conservatives here are not confined to the rigidity imposed by conform to a definition of conservatism stemming from some outside source—William Buckley or anyone else.

Certainly, Buckley and the conservatives that he champions are powerful, and to ally with them would lend some weight to the local conservative movement. Yet it would also mean conforming, at least in some measure, to the standpat line—a line which, among other things, describes desegregation as an "insoluble" problem.

* * *

When that happens, a valid, forward-looking and constructive conservatism will be impossible here. It will also be impossible for the national conservative movement to progress so long as one of its chief spokesmen carries the banner of the status quo into every argument, including the vital one of desegregation.

Even More Faith?

Nobel Prize-winning Chemist Willard Libby's series of articles which has been running in some of the state papers recently has come under editorial fire from various quarters of late.

It seems that many people do not agree with Libby's expertise on the matter of fallout, Nobel Prize or no. One of his opinions—one that has been much contested—is that a fallout shelter can be built for $30 which will provide adequate protection. The roof of Libby's prototype, which he built in his own back-yard in Bel-Air, California, was recently "reduced to coals" during the fire there, according to a news report.

Said Libby: "I have more faith than ever in the shelter."

Maybe he does, but we don't And we never did have much.

West Is 'Duped' By Congolese

Tuesday' special United Nations report concerning Patrice Lumumba's death is a sweeping condemnation of the Central Congolese government, the rebellious Katanga government, and Belgium, and is a rebuke to the Western powers and U.N. leadership. The report is virtually a pat on the back for the pro-Lumumba Soviet Union.

Lumumba, the paradoxical leftist premier of The Congo, was reported dead in January, 1961 after weeks of mystery and rumor. President Joseph Kasavubu of the Central government and Katanga President Moise Tshombe—both Lumumba's political enemies—claimed that Katanganese tribesmen had killed the prime minister after he had escaped Katanga detention. Kasavubu had captured Lumumba and handed him over to Tshombe, then had claimed no knowledge of Lumumba's whereabouts.

The U.N. report (drawn up by four moderate nations, all either pro-West or "neutral"— Burma, Mexico, Ethiopia and Togo) claims that Lumumba was murdered by Belgian mercenaries in the presence of Tshombe.

This charge hits the West's Achilles heel in its own handling of the Congo. The United States and the other Western powers (and the U.N. to a lesser degree) supported the Kasavubu splinter group in the months when passive non-intervention was their espoused policy. At every step the U.N. rebuffed Lumumba's efforts to bring Katanga back into The Congo and to drive the Belgian mercenaries out. The West pressured the U.N. into seating Kasavubu rather than Lumumba.

Now the world can see Tshombe as a murderer; Kasavubu as a conniving deceiver and the West as "dupes" of Congolese political factions.

Reflections

Terry Sanford appeared at the Carolina Inn before a group of 300 student nurses the day immediately following the bond issue failure. The Governor prefaced his remarks with the usual "I'm glad to be here today." To which he added, "If there's anything I need today, it's a nurse."

..I Am A Pig...

Dear Reader:

I am a capitalist pig. (OINK). And furthermore, I enjoy the materialistic booty of my little endeavor; money. (OINK, OINK).

These two blasphemous statements stem from the fact I am selfish as hell. (OINK, OINK and OINK).

Now don't immediately jump to the ridiculous conclusion that I don't like other people, it's just that I have this overwhelming and undenying love for myself.

Perhaps, dear reader, you are wondering why I have chosen this piggish way to live. Well, sometimes I do too, especially when I'm in the process of getting my little tail clipped by some bigger pig. But I guess the real reason I've chosen this style is because the consumption of consumer durable and non-durable goods is really a hell of a lot of fun. I even enjoy this more than sitting and thinking about religious philosophy. Of course it helps to be a little on the stupid side.

Please, dear reader, don't deny me the right to be a pig. I will never try to tell you which game to play and I hope that you will return the favor by not forcing me to play the game that you think is best.

Do Coeds Need Charm To Be Charming?

To the Editor:

It's a shame that you were so uninformed when you wrote the editorial "Gilding the Lily" in last Friday's DTH. The seventy-five dollars that will be spent on charms for the Homecoming Court has been spent for the same purpose every year at Homecoming as far back as we could trace. Otherwise it is traditional at Carolina to give charms to the members of the court.

The reason it was included in our budget was that the Student Athletic Council is handling the Homecoming festivities instead of the nonexistant University Club. We had no former treasury of our own and could not touch that of the University Club.

On the cost: the charms will not cost $12.00 apiece since the queen's charm (the same as ordered last year) costs slightly more and the court's (the same as ordered last year) costs slightly less. Averaged they do cost about $12.00 per candidate, but only for the Homecoming Court.

ABOUT THE Sweethearts: the Carolina Sweethearts are a new organization whose purpose is greeting visiting teams upon their arrival and representing Carolina in that capacity. Many schools have such a group. Ask the football team about the coeds that met them at Miami.

We are trying to make it an honor to belong to the Sweethearts and to give them something for going to the trouble of getting dressed up and riding out to the airport. We therefore agreed to give each of the 16 members a charm as a token of her service. If you divide the appropriated sum of $75.00 by 16 you will find that these charms cost $4.69 apiece not "approximately $12 apiece."

Perhaps this could have been cleared up for you by your sports editor, who is a member of the Student Athletic Council, if he would have attended more meetings. Would you please print this so we can get the record straight and our budget passed next year?

—TOM LAWRENCE,
Pres., NC Cardboard
Member, Student Athletic Council

Syria revolts against Egypt. Don't worry. The evidence shows our Central Intelligence Agency agents had nothing to do with it. The thing went off accordng to plan.

John McCone, a Republican, has been named head of the CIA. It's the Democrats' good government creed: Always put a Republican in a key spot to blame things on.

When the Parent-Teacher Association in a small Arkansas town recently urged that a foreign language be included in the local curriculum, the school superintendent snorted: "If English was good enough for Jesus, it's good enough for you."

Jibes from opposite sides of the fence:

Republican Leader Halleck says his party preserves "sanity" in government. Republicans protect us against an excess of anything—including progress.

Democratic Chairman Baily says Republicans seek to "divide and confuse" the nation. It's bad for morale. Democrats don't mind the dividing, but everyone knows they're supposed to do the confusing.

The Varsity showing of "The Immoral Mr. Teas" is part of a nationwide sweep of "nudies" which have been freed from prosecution by the Supreme Court—it's art.

"Mr. Teas" is very mild compared to some. One of the more popular ones in the large cities is "This Is My Body." A well-endowed model goes on a hike in the woods, takes a nude swim and lies on a hot rock. That's all. She exults her frame in an inctuous narration with such lines as "What a crazy, sensuous life I lead!"

For the Varsity "Mr. Teas" was to test audience reaction. If you liked it tell Manager Andy Gutierrez. And if you didn't tell him that.

* * *

A local father, H. E. Clark, was listening to a conversation between his two sons. The younger one was telling why he was angry at a friend.

"All he does is chase girls," the boy said.

"Does he catch any of them?" his older brother asked.

"Lots of them," answered the younger son.

"What does he do when he catches them?"

"He kisses them," his brother answered with obvious disgust.

"How do they taste?" the elder son asked.

"Terrible," he grimaced.

"How do you know they taste terrible?"

"Tried it," the boy answered.

"Just once?"

"Naw, lots of times," he explained. "They all tasted terrible."

Editor's Note:

Simply because the money has been spent in past years is no reason it should continue to be spent. It seems to be compounding an error. As to the cost, the fact remains that $140 was spent on charms no matter how you slice it. Before writing the edit, we checked with Bill Criswell, who helped frame the bill, with John Randall, parliamentarian of Student Legislature and with Hank Patterson, Speaker of Student Legislature. None of these men indicated that there was a price difference.

We do not oppose the motives of presenting charms to members of the Court nor to the Sweethearts. The point is that $140 is a pretty large chunk of money—almost half the total listed on the entire bill. With all the other drains on student funds, this seems a trifle extravagant.

Personally, we don't think the girls themselves are so mercenary that they need to be rewarded with a charm to induce them to "get dressed up and ride out to the airport." As a matter of fact, we suspect they might be willing to do it anyway.

We would like to make it clear to the girls involved that we love them all, and apologize for any embarrassment we might have caused them. We simply think that beauty is its own reward and Carolna coeds dont' need a charm bracelet to be charming. Like we said, it's gilding the lily.

How Long

'Time,' UPI, Dally Tar Heel Are Unsnopesian?

To the Editor:

". . . if, for the sake of argument, we bar all legal and moral considerations, the laws of simple economy dictate . . ." Ah, the laws of simple economy. Money—the Great Yankee Standard.

Certainly we should bar all moral considerations, all ethical principles as well, if Money is involved—look at Southern California, where society was founded on gold and Mammon is the only god. Yes, look at Southern California, at that populous, prosperous country of two steaks on every grill and two cars in every garage, at that alodial lovely land of Snopeses and sunshine. But look closely. When the forest fires broke out near Los Angeles two days ago, no one appeared to fight them. Three million persons sat idle and watched their forests and their neighbors' homes turn into smoke. Six thousand men eventually fought the blazes—for three dollars an hour (in recent years it has been necessary to pay Californians to fight even local fires, money being their only standard). If the case was as usual, the fires were started by high school or college students. How else could they make three dollars an hour? The firebug, apparently, is the hero of the day.

How many men in Georgia or Carolina (or Mississippi) would sell their forests or their neighbors' homes and lives for three dollars an hour? Not many, I am ashamed to admit, for despite the very sincere efforts of "Time" and United Press International and the "Daily Tar Heel" to remove their old-fashioned preoccupation with moral and principle, they have remained depressingly unprogressive, to a discouraging degree unsnopesian. Truly then, these men and states are backward, hopelessly outside that cascading "main stream of America."

How long, O, Gentle Southland?

Re: Grads Grading Papers

The following is an open letter to the Departments of Political Science, History, and any of the other University Departments that have not been fulfilling their Academic Role.

With the exception of a few, professors in the above-mentioned departments cannot be bothered with grading their students' papers, enlisting instead the aid of the graduate student. I defend their right to do this with objective material but can find no justification for their turning over subjective analysis to someone else. Adding to this mal-practice is their refusal to deal with the student after the material in question has been returned. The attitude can be summed up in a quote familiar to all, "If any of you have a complaint see the graduate student."

FOR THE most part, these grad students do not attend the lectures, thus having no idea as to either the questions that have been raised by the class pertaining to the subject matter or what is expected by the professor in the way of test answers. Also, many of these graduate students have had but a little more training than some of the pupils in the class, this having been concentrated within a particular field. I grant that they are superior to the average undergraduate but object to their use of this superiority in a bias towards the student. For example, I cite the seeking of the minute error in the tendency to be overly critical.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the professor who is teaching is also influencing the student in many ways that an outsider (the grader) would not and could not understand. If we are to be burdened with a system of grading at all (and everyone knows that this is a hindrance to the purer task of reaping knowlege of its own sake) then we have a right to expect PROFESSIONAL judging and criticism of our progress.

—JOSEPH M. DEUTSCH

'Die Cast Last Spring'—UP

Lethargy and rainy weather were two reasons he offered for the poor vote turn-out among the fraternities.

More people would have voted, according to Criswell, if they could have done so without having to go out in the rain.

"I hope," he continued, "when the election laws come up in the next legislative session some provisions will be made to put polls in some of the fraternity houses at least."

Several times during the interview Criswell indicated that he would like to free UP from the exclusive fraternity association.

"Balanced Party"

"I want a balanced party," said Criswell. "I'm going to do everything I can to make sure of a fraternity-dorm distribution on the next UP slate."

Criswell suggested that perhaps the recent defeat will "awaken" the UP administration to a need for broadening the party's base.

Jimmy Weeks, chairman of the winning SP, also attributed his party's victory to a heavy vote by the dorm people.

SP Chairman

Weeks disagreed with Criswell about UP's fraternity tag. Weeks said that the UP would remain basically a fraternity party. "I don't think they can lose the fraternity tag. They were founded on that idea," Weeks said.

Weeks agreed with UP's Criswell that there was a lack of interest among fraternity voters. He added that "Many of them must have gone by the polls at Y Court."

Seen A Soccer Game Lately?

By Harry Tocce

"It's a shame for students to attend Carolina four years and never see what is considered by many as the world's greatest sport."

Dick Bordogna, fullback on UNC's soccer team, was expressing regret over the poor crowds at soccer matches here.

He wasn't making just another "come and support the team" plea.

The senior from Havertown, Pa., likes the game and thinks that others would too if they see a few matches.

"I don't see why students don't come out just for the curiosity," he said. "Soccer is the national sport for just about every other country in the world except Canada and the United States."

America's soccer "hotbed" is the Northeast according to Bordogna, but he is quick to point out that the ACC has its share of good players.

"Maryland has two very good boys in Oyton Tertimitz from Turkey and Juan Martin from Argentina," he said.

He points out that U. S. soccer has more long runs and heading (players hitting the ball with their heads), while in other countries dribbling and short passes are featured.

"Soccer is popular the world over because you don't need a lot of money or equipment to play, he said. "Most everybody has a pair of sneakers and shorts. All you need is a ball and an empty field.

"It can get rough at times in league play. You have to be in pretty good physical shape. It's a big sport in the Havertown area," he said. "But I guess my interest grew because I came from a soccer family.

The team will meet Duke on Fetzer Field (right behind Woollen Gym) at 3 p.m.

Army, State, Clemson, Alabama, Auburn Picked To Win

HARRY W. LLOYD

THE SPORTS

Tablloyd

The 1961 football season is almost over. Out of the some 200 major college teams that started their schedules early this fall, only a handful of them are still in the running for the national championship. Others are out of the picture as far as the nation is concerned, but still have a chance for regional or conference titles. Still other schools are trying for their first win.

The bowl situation is still unsettled, although there are only a half-dozen really top quality teams for contention. Because of the large number of bowls scouting for teams this year, a lot of teams that would not normally do so will be playing in bowls this year. The games Saturday will go a long way toward deciding who gets the bid.

All this brings us to our predictions for the week. Last week, we were right on 20 and missed 9. Our year's mark is 70 per cent, or 99 right and 41 wrong. Here' to our 100th correct prediction of the year—

Clemson 42, Furman 6. There isn't too much doubt about the outcome of this one. The Tigers were stung hard by South Carolina last week, but shouldn't have much trouble with the "cousin' 'of the Palmetto State triumvirate.

Navy 29, Virginia 7. The Middies had their fill of Atlantic Coast Conference football last week. But this is a new week, and Virginia will provide a rest after Duke.

N. C. State 22, South Carolina 15. This one could go either way. South Carolina has been up and down—last week they were up. It's State's turn to shine.

Maryland 26, Wake Forest 13. The Terrapins haven't played a really good game against an ACC team yet. Wake Forest is capable, but we think the Terps will be ready this week.

Baylor 17, Air Force 7. The Falcons find their wings Clipped.

Alabama 28, Georgia Tech 16. The Crimson Tide has been playing paddy cake for most of the year. Now they really have some thing to dig their paws into.

Arizona 35, Texas Western 18. Meanwhile, back at the . . .

Arkansas 29, SMU 8. A hog over a horse any day.

Army 12, Oklahoma 7. It would take another supreme effort for the Sooners to dig this one out.

Auburn 20, Georgia 8. This is the Plainsmen's year to turn an ordinary season into a very good one.

Boston College 22, Boston U. 12. This score is an exclusive computation of the staff of M.I.T. . . .

Harvard 20, Brown 6. There's joy in the White House.

Kansas 30, California 13. A basketball game might be more interesting.

Coast Guard 21, Tufts 14. Don't forget life jackets.

Rutgers 28, Colgate 20. Rutgers is in the winning rut.

Colorado 27, Nebraska 15. The Cornhuskers just can't stand up to those rugged mountain men, those goats.

Columbia 27, Pennsylvania 21. Well, the halftime entertainment should be interesting.

Cornell 14, Dartmouth 8. May I read your New Yorker during the timeout periods? My binoculars are broken.

Arizona State 33, Detroit 28. I said goal lines, not gold. Yes, I know they're yellow this year. Cantyahear?

Penn State 31, Holy Cross 28. Aw, Mr. Miller, I've seen better stuff than that in Reader's Digest.

Wisconsin 37, Illionis 13. You will notice, fans that each individual has a distinctive numeral on his jersey.

Indiana 22, West Virginia 6. Okay men, go out there and fight! And don't leave the bench without raising your hand and asking, "May I be excused?" Understand?

Michigan 36, Iowa 20. Hey! The 7up goes in last!

Missouri 26, Kansas State 7. Please do not raise your cards until I call the first number. Okay, ready!

Kentucky 38, Xavier 13.Where's the old school spirit! There's a minute left! We're only 40 behind!

LSU 24, Mississippi State 0. How about sitting down up front, buster. What's wrong, is your momma playing?

Michigan State 20, Northwestern 16. Could you run that play over? I was looking the wrong way.

Faculty Speaker Sees US-USSR Relations Better

The changes are "moderately hopeful" for improved relations between the United States and the Soviet Union in the near future, in the judgment of a University political scientist.

Speaking before the University Faculty Club luncheon this week on "War, Peace, and Nuclear Strategy," Andrew Scott, associate professor of political science, said that war between the two countries was not probable the next three to eight years.

The improved outlook is based on the U. S. present policy of "mutual deterrents," he said—a shaky stability reached when each side maintains arms at a point that keeps the other in fear of retaliation.

Security Perilous

When one side falls behind, under these circumstances, the security of the situation becomes more perilous, Prof. Scott said. "This is too fine a balance to be stable in the long run. We would need a significant improvement in Soviet-American relations for safety. And the Soviets would need to change some of their objectives.

"Among these it must renounce the idea of all-out war as a solution to problems and also the idea of indefinite expansion of Soviet influence." Despite this situation, Prof. Scott said the chances for improved relations seemed "moderately hopeful."

"Actually there are no good policies in this situation," he declared, "only some that are less dangerous than others. From this time on man is simply going to have to live in the shadow of something frightful happening . . . . It might be that our time has about run out, but we can still work and hope for the best."

Adolf Eichmann

Eichmann Verdict Reported In

JERUSALEM, Israel—The three judges who have been deliberating the fate of Adolf Eichmann since his trial adjourned last August have reached a verdict, reliable court sources said Wednesday night.

Their written judgment of the four-month trial of the former Nazi officer accused of the mass murder of six million European Jews is believed to run about 300 pages, these sources said.

No date has yet been announced for reconvening of the court to hear the judgment but there was speculation that it may be set for any time after Dec. 11. The reading of the judgment is expected to take three days, informants said.

Nike Test Successful

POINT MUGU, Calif.—A Nike Zeus anti missile rocket—glowing red hot because of its tremendous speed—flashed Thursday to the first successful long-range test in development of a defense against sneak missile attack.

Coming after two partial failures in an attempt to launch a "high altitude" test from this coastal base 60 miles northwest of Los Angeles, the success was hailed by the Army as a significant step forward for the controversial missile.

Only the two main stages were tested Thursday as the Nike Zeus—third in a family of anti aircraft weapons—was not shooting at another missile as it will be in trials at Kwajalein Island in the Pacific soon.

Moslem Strikes Spread

PARIS—Demonstrations and strikers spread through the Moslem world Thursday to protest France's detentio of Algerian rebel Vice Premier Mohammed Ben Bella, now in the 15th day of a hunger strike.

The green and white rebel flag was raised in Jordan, Lebanon, Iraq and Morocco in the series of protests demonstrators also attacked French policy in Algeria and called for new independence talks. African students stoned the French embassy in Moscow and French students march in Paris.

Interior Minister Reda Guedira of Morocco said the Arab League has called a day of solidarity for Ben Bella, who has subsisted on a water-only diet since Nov. 2 in an attempt to win a change to the status of political prisoners for himself and 5,000 other Algerians held in France.

Air Force Sights Raft

POINT BARROW, Alaska — An Air Force C-54 Thursday sighted a life raft with 11 men from a downed Navy transport aboard it.

The Air Force said the raft was sighted 30 miles southeast of an ice island research station in the Arctic Ocean.

The 11 men had taken off from the ice island, Arlis II Wednesday for a four-hour flight to Point Barrow. An air and sea search was started when the plane failed to arrive.

The Air Force plane which sighted the missing men said they had signaled that no one was injured when their transport craft went down and that no emergency rescue operations were needed.

The men in the raft told the search plane by radio that they were looking for an island in the ice pack in which they could chop out a short runway so a rescue plane could land and pick them up.

Congolese Murder 13 Italian Troops

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI)—Drunken Congolese soldiers murdered 13 Italian United Nations airmen before a jeering, white-hating crowd at Kindu Saturday night, hacked their bodies to pieces and dumped them in a river, U.N. spokesmen said Thursday.

The 13 Italians ranging in age from 22 to 43 had flown to Kindu on a mercy mission when the mutinous Congolese, inflamed by pro-communist Antoine Gizenga's revolt against the central government, clubbed them savagely, dragged them to a hilltop, and shot them while the crowd cheered.

It appeared that neither Gizenga, Premier Cyrille Adoula of the central government, nor President Moise Tshombe of Katanga Province could control their own forces. The Congolese soldiers were reported drunk most of the time and rebellious against all authority.

Rush Reinforcements In

The U.N. command, embittered against what it called barbaric bestiality, began rushing reinforcements to the town in Central Congo while demanding the central government punish the guilty. But it called off a jet strike against the troops as a "senseless reprisal."

In New York, Acting Secretary General Thant pledged that the U.N. would take all possible measures to punish the mutinous troops. Conor Cruise O'Brien, top U.N. official in Katanga Province, and Gen. Sean McKeown flew to New York Thursday to report in person on the growing crisis. McKeown told newsmen in London the situation in the Congo was "very grave" and that "it is likely the central government will invade and take action" in Katanga. He predicted clashes and more flare-ups in the future. O'Brien said Tshombe's advisers opposed any settlement and that if they win the day "there will be very serious consequences."

News of the killings caused an immediate and angry uproar in Italy. Italian newspapers carried the big black headline: "massacre." The senate and house stood in silence to honor the men "slaughtered in the Congo while carrying out duties of the highest humanitarianism."

Flew In Supplies

The Italian airmen were the crewmen of two C119 Flying Boxcars which had flown to Kindu Saturday with powdered milk and other Red Cross supplies for an Italian hospital. They were eating lunch in a mess room at the airport when the attack came.

U.N. reports said there are more than 700 Congolese troops stationed at Kindu and that their Congolese commander, Colonel Pakassa, has lost control. Gizenga was reported agitating among the mutinous soldiers, trying to win them over to insurrection against the central government at Leopoldville.

The soldiers were roaming the streets in drunken disorder when they heard reports that "Belgian paratroopers" had arrived at the Kindu airport, held by 200 Malayan U.N. troops. Apparently the Malayan troops did not intervene to prevent the slaughter.

The Italians were dragged from the mess and badly beaten, some into unconsciousness, and then thrown into a truck and taken into Kindu town. They were shot before a cheering crowd on a hilltop near the town prison. Then the troops hacked and mutilated their bodies and dumped them into the Lualaba River.

Details of the mass murder were supplied by civilian eyewitnesses.

Mass. Democrat Seen As Choice To Speakership

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A veteran Massachusetts Democrat with whom President Kennedy has feuded sporadically for more than a dozen years appeared slated today to take command of administration forces in the House of Representatives.

All signs indicated that House Democrats in January will elect their floor leader, 69-year-old Rep. John W. McCormack, as speaker to succeed 79-year-old Sam Rayburn who died of cancer today.

For a record-scattering 21 years McCormack has served behind Rayburn as the No. 2 Democrat in the House. Although he is not the most popular man in the House, many Democrats feel McCormack has earned a right to the top post.

Will Hurt Kennedy

Kennedy's program undoubtedly will suffer from the change in leadership. The House, far more conservative these days than the Senate, provides the limiting barrier to the administration's legislation. No new speaker would have the influence that Rayburn has weilded on behalf of the administration.

Opinion differs on whether Kennedy will get along as well with his new lieutenant as he did with Rayburn. McCormack's friends insist his past differences with Kennedy have been exaggerated.

Student Leaders Meet On Defeat Of Bond Issues

The Council of Presidents of State-Supported Colleges will meet here Monday to discuss problems arising from the recent defeat of a statewide bond proposal.

Council Chairman Lee Jenkins, president of East Carolina College, yesterday said the group will discuss a possible mutual help program.

Dr. Jenkins said the council also would consider implications of financing expansion through federal loans. He said this could "price many people out of a college education."

UNC President William Friday yesterday said that he personally knew of no specific proposals that would come up before the group. He said that the council meets twice a year, "usually to discuss routine business."

State-supported colleges would have received about $31 million for plant improvements if voters had approved the bond issues. Much of the funds would have been used to expand facilities to take care of rapidly increasing student rolls.

The council will meet at 10 a.m. at the President's office in South Building.

Garrett Is First Poetry Rider On 8-School Circuit

George Garrett, 32, noted author and poet and the first "rider" to participate in the newly-formed North Carolina Poetry Circuit, will read at seven member colleges and universities Tuesday, November 28 through Monday, December 4, it was announced here today by Howard R. Webber, Editor-in-chief of the UNC Press.

The University Press, in conjunction with the Poetry Center of New York City, is sponsoring the Poetry Circuit.

Garrett's schedule follows:

Tuesday, Nov. 28—Duke; Wednesday, November 29—Wake Forest; Thursday, November 30—Davidson; Friday, December 1—Woman's College; Tuesday, December 5—East Carolina College; Wednesday, December 6—UNC; Thursday, December 7—State College.

Hollins College in Virginia, also a member of the circuit, will not participate in the first round.

In addition to a nightly reading from his work on the various campuses, the poet will also appear before afternoon seminars or small classes, and meet with faculty members and students.

Ballot Choice

The circuit-riding poets are chosen schools.

Speaker Sam Rayburn Dead

BONHAM, Tex. (UPI) — House Speaker Sam Rayburn, who held the position longer than any man in history and was second only to the President in the power he wielded, died today of cancer. He was 79.

Rayburn slipped into death at 6:20 a.m. CST. He died in a ground floor room of the Risser Hospital in his hometown of Bonham near the sandy northeast Texas fields he loved.

He had come home Oct. 31 to die among his lifelong friends and neighbors. Dr. Joe A. Risser, his physician, sorrowfully announced that his old friend was dead.

It was learned that "Mr. Sam" knew he had cancer, even before diagnostic tests confirmed it. He was told on Sept. 27.

Fought But Lost

He fought an amazing battle against it, sinking time and again almost to the point of death, only to rally. But each rally was weaker. There never was any hope. Risser announced the speaker "just quit breathing."

"I immediately called Dr. Janet Travell in Washington, as I had promised to do," the 45-year-old pathologist said. Risser had only two hours sleep in the past 24, and was bleary with fatigue as he held a news conference in the waiting room of his clinic. The clinic is across the street from the hospital where the speaker died.

Risser said that "the apparent cause of death was a paralysis of the breathing muscles."

Record of Service

Rayburn had been a member of the U.S. House of Representatives 48 years, longer than any other man in history. He was speaker 16 years, more than twice as long as Henry Clay, the 19th century orator who previously held the record as speaker.

In his last illness, Rayburn showed the same stubborn tenacity that he had demonstrated during his 54 years in politics. Last Saturday, Risser said "Mr. Sam" had from hours to days to live.

He became so weak Tuesday that

He became so weak Tuesday that

The relatives were with him to the end.

Survivors include Rayburn's only living brother, Dick Rayburn, 70, of Ector, Tex.; two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Thomas of Dallas and Mrs. S. E. Bartley of Bonham; a nephew, Robert Bartley of Washington, who is a member of the Federal Communications Commission; and two nieces, Mrs. Joyce Lightfoot of Bonham and Mrs. Tom Bolton of Dallas.

While Rayburn was known as a bachelor, he had been married for about three months when he was in his early 20s. The marriage ended in divorce.

Death Among Friends

When Rayburn came home to Bonham for the last time Oct. 31, one of his sisters quoted him as saying he wanted to end his days among "those friends and neighbors who for so long have given me a love and loyalty unsurpassed in any annals."

Joe Denton Sr., owner of the Wise funeral home in Bonham and a life-long friend of Rayburn, took the body from the hospital shortly after the family left. Rayburn will be buried on the western outskirts of Bonham.

Rayburn's grave will be a family plot about a half-mile west of the town's white marble Sam Rayburn Library.

Rayburn wanted to die in the two-story, white colonial home he had built on the edge of Bonham, a town of 10,000 population 90 miles northeast of Dallas.

But elaborate respiratory equipment was necessary, and he was taken to the house converted into a 15-bed hospital.

The speaker's ailment was diagnosed as cancer Oct. 5. A biopsy performed at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas disclosed the malignancy. It apparently started in the pancreas and spread through his body.

Quit During Session

Rayburn had left Washington for Bonham late in August, about two weeks before the 87th session of Congress recessed. He had been

'Beat Dook' Celebration To Hold Parade Today

By NANCY BARR

Queen Jean Spears, a junior from Phi Beta Phi sorority, will reign over the traditional and colorful "Beat Dook" celebration which begins today with a parade through downtown Chapel Hill and central campus.

Jean, who was selected from 26 candidates, will be attended by a court including Beth Walker, Susan Johnson, Mary Ann Henderson and Mary Townsend.

Sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and under the direction of Fuller Honeycutt, the parade units entered by the various dorms, sororities and fraternities will form on the intramural field of Woollen Gymnasium.

At 3 p.m. the parade will move to lower quad, turning left onto Franklin Street at Spencer dorm. It will move up Franklin Street and turn left for fraternity row on Columbia Street and left again to South Building on Cameron Street.

50 Floats Entered

About 50 floats, all constructed on the "Beat Dook" theme will be entered in the award competition. Five trophies will be presented by PiKA for the best entry from the women's dorms, men's dorms, sororities, fraternities and the best overall campus entry.

Appearing on the game sidelines Saturday will be Rameses VIII, the symbolic spirit of Carolina gridiron determination. According to H. S. Morgan, who keeps Rameses on his farm, a few carloads of Duke students cruised around Rameses' pasture last Thursday and Friday nights, but nobody has yet accepted the traditional pre-game challenge of all Dookies to actually steal the ram.

The campus and Chapel Hill police are also on guard to thwart the weekend pranksters. According to Chief Beaumont, six to eight extra guards have been hired to protect the campus until "the air cools off and the jungle quiets down."

Dook Heads Shaved

"If the students catch the Duke's, they get their heads shaved," he said, "but if we catch them, they get arrested. We've caught them before and they got kicked out of school. They're not so brave the next morning after a night in jail with all the drunks when their friends have deserted."

It is vandalism that the police are concerned with, he explained, not just pranks. "Sometimes it costs thousands of dollars to repair the damage of one weekend," he said.

"And two wrongs don't make a right," he added, speaking of the UNC students escapades to the Duke campus.

As well as parties on the Carolina campus following the game, the Tar Heel fans are invited to an open house in the Duke Union Ballroom on West campus. All Carolina students, whether dating or stag are invited, according to Bill Nicholson of the Duke student union social committee.

Combo Party

The event starts after the game and lasts until 7 p.m. or until most of the students leave. A combo, "plus punch — non alcoholic, the best we can do since it is a campus function," will be provided.

The weekend climaxes Saturday afternoon in Durham with the annual clash of the two bitter rivals. Duke is expecting a crowd of "about 40,000," although tickets are still available.

Both teams had their final workouts in secrecy Wednesday. The Duke team practiced under lights in a late afternoon session, while the Tar Heels held a one and a half hour, no-tackling drill on Navy Field in Chapel Hill.

Beat Dook Rally Scheduled Here

The Beat Dook Pep Rally, complete with bonfire and effigies, will begin tonight at 8 on Emerson Field.

After the bonfire, it will move onto Raleigh Street, through the upper and lower quads, past Spencer dorm and onto Franklin Street ending in front of the Carolina heater when the Football team comes out of the show.

Coach Hickey urged all students to make torches, build signs and banners and turn out to "cheer the team on to victory Friday against one of the strongest teams they will face all year.

Head cheerleader Al Roper said yesterday that he "hoped that Friday will turn into one of the best displays of school spirit we have had in years. And all this depends on the individual student."

Thant Directs UN Police To 'Justice'

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Acting Secretary General Thant directed U. N. representatives in the Congo Thursday to bring to justice undisciplined Congolese troops involved in the murder of 13 Italian airmen on a mercy mission.

U. N. diplomats stirred by the slaying, held consultations on a broader direction for the Congo operation to be put before the Security Council.

The 11-nation council continued its Congo debate Thursday afternoon, but deteriorating developments, including the reported revolt against the Leopoldville government by Antoine Gizenga, political heir to slain leftist leader Patrice Lumumba, indicated delay before new action is taken.

The United Nations awaited a full report on the massacre of the Italians by drunken troops of the Congolese National army at Kindu. Dr. Sture C. Linner of Sweden, top U. N. official in the Congo, was to file the report Thursday.

Lt. Gen. Sean McKeown of Ireland, commander of the U. N. Force in the Congo, and Dr. Conor Cruise O'Brien of Ireland, top U.N. official in Katanga Province, were reporting to Thant Thursday on the Congolese chaos.

Thant disclosed his directive to U.N. representatives in the field in a message of condolence to Italian Foreign Minister Antonio Segni, here for the debate on the problem of the South Tyrol.

"These men, who had served the U. N. operation in the Congo with devotion and valor, were ambushed and brutally murdered by undisciplined Congolese toops in an act of outright savagery," Thant's message said.

"I wish you to know also that I have directed the UN representatives in the Congo to pursue with vigor all possible measures to insure that those responsible for this outrageous crime and all who participated in it will receive the punishment they deserve."

FROSH REGISTRATION

Dean J. Carlyle Sitterson of General College yesterday said that freshman may pre-register for spring semester courses in either of two ways:

(1) See general college adviser during his regular office hours any day before thanksgiving; or

(2) Sign up at once (308 South Building) for an appointment to see general college adviser during the week of Nov. 27.

He also announced that general college sophomores will sign up for appointments, beginning Nov. 30, to see their adviser during the week of Dec. 11.

Dalai Lama Says Red Planes Kill 1,000 Tibetans

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—The information bureau of the Dalai Lama, refugee God-king of Tibet Thursday said Chinese Communist warplanes killed 1,000 Tibetans in bombing raids on anti-Red strongholds in Tibet recently.

Numerous atrocities, including the forced extraction of blood from Tibetans for use as plasma for the Chinese, were cited by the bureau.

"In spite of such brutal retaliation, the Chinese have not succeeded in subduing Tibetan resistance," the statement said.

The Dalai Lama was forced to flee for his life to India when the Chinese Communists seized Tibet in March of 1959. Refugee Tibetans have reported many instances of Communist brutalities since.

The bureau said that a "large group" of men, women and children were machine-gunned by the Chinese Reds in April, 1960, while moving in search of food. On another occasion, it said Chinese planes and artillery bombed a group of 600 families who were "fighting their way out of Tibet."

"As a result . . . only about 20 families reached Ladhak in India after a trek of 1,500 miles," the statement said.

For Four Years

Merry-Go-Round

Comparison of the average grade received among the various schools and departments here indicates that there is a wide variation in grading systems. The department of music, which had the highest figure, 2.8, was a full point higher than the lowest, geology and geography, at 1.8.

The remaining 32 schools and departments listed fell between these two extremes. Some fell slightly below a "C"; others came near a "B".

Although there are other factors which contribute to the differences, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the variations are too wide—that some departments are tougher in their grading requirements than others.

Along with geology and geography, the departments of math, chemistry, English and speech fell at the low end of the scale. All these had an average of 2.0, or less. At the other end, dramatic art, classical languages, air science and religion, along with music, showed an average grade of better than 2.5.

While these figures do not tell the whole story, they certainly provide evidence upon which to base a request for a more consistent grading system throughout the University.

Grading variations are not confined to departmental differences. The same situation is reflected within the departments themselves. Some professors require little more than class attendance and an occasional cursory glance at a textbook. Others demand term papers, outside reading and class discussion.

Although a grade is, at best, only a pale reflection of what a particular student has learned and has nothing to do with education, per se, the emphasis placed on it as a measuring device makes it highly important. Because of this importance, it is patently unfair and inequitable to allow such extreme variations among and within departments to exist.

Possibly, the best step would be the complete abolition of any system of grading. Since this is so obviously impossible as to be ridiculous, the next best thing is to make such a system as efficient and equitable as possible.

The present system is a far cry from being so.

Many professors, because of too-large classes and a multitude of activities outside the classroom, use students to grade quizzes and papers. Although this practice is defensible in the case of objective examinations, there is little hope for fair grading of essay and subjective examinations.

In addition to the other ills, the 10 point spread from one letter grade to another under the system used by most instructors here is too great. A final numerical grade of 80, for instance, when translated into a letter grade, is the same as a grade of 89.

All in all, the grading system is a too-complex offspring of the bureaucratic merry - go - round that education has become. And we have to ride that merry-go-round for four years before we can get off.

America's Latest Pink Blanket

Fallout Shelters . . .

Charles Shultz, that eminent American sociologist and creator of the comic strip Peanuts, long ago produced the prototype of the timid American: Linus.

To satisfy his internal and external needs, Linus must forever carry a blanket in his hand. This first symbol of safety from the world has become an intimate part of his way of life—sometimes it seems to be his reason for existence.

America's reason for existence in this age of Miltown seems to have deterioriated into such a twitching, anxious clinging to that which promises security. The latest pink blanket is fallout shelters.

Throughout history those to whom man has turned and returned for a sense of direction have been those who point to a higher reason for existence than existence.

Juvenal said hundreds of years ago, "Pray for a brave heart, one which does not fear death, one which holds a long life last among the gifts of nature . . ."

Today, Gerald W. Johnson expresses it this way, "If a nation has nothing better to do than survive, it ought not to survive."

We need more brave hearts.

Worse Than Death

South Building's higher-ups have been putting some thought lately into a system of civil defense for Carolina students.

Part of the plan calls for holing-up about 1,000 students in the stacks of the library in the event of nuclear attack. The reason is that "two inches of books provides as much protection against radiation as an inch of concrete."

Will you be saved by "Uncle Tom's Cabin" or by "Being and Nothingness"? There must be some sort of status attached to the book which will eventually become your saviour. Think of the ignominy of admitting that you were saved by "Conscience of A Conservative."

Conservatives Dispute Hobbs Editorial

Liberal Hobbs 'Fuzzy-Minded'

To the Editor:

I was once told by a disillusioned liberal acquaintance that the problem with most of his fellow thinkers is that they often tend to be "fuzzy-minded" in the presentation of their arguments. I feel this to be quite applicable to the editorial by Mr. Hobbs in the November issue of the Daily Tar Heel.

The center point of Mr. Hobb's statement seems to be that segregationists are conservatives and conervatives are segregationists. With the exception of a brief mention of Communist organizations, Mr. Hobbs devotes himself to a bitter diatribe against the curtailment of the freedom of the Negroes by conservatives. "Every major segment of the conservative movement in the United States is either ignoring or actively restricting the freedom of our Colored citizens."

NO I DON'T presume to know what constitutes major segments of the conservative movement. If Mr. Hobbs is inferring that all conservatives fall under the aegis of ultra right-wing organizations, I must point out that the conservative might readily label any liberal by means of the most vehement left-wing organization—the Communist Party. This, of course, would be ridiculous. It is an excellent example of "fuzzy-mindedness."

The conservative quite frankly often views with reservation if not suspicion any "liberal" undertaking. He sees French liberals going out for the Rights of Man and returning with the head of the Queen. He sees Russian liberals wandering around in a daze of plots and bombs for a hundred years only to usher in finally that most glorious haven for all liberal thought and action — the Soviet Union. And to a lesser extent he sees good American liberals going off every summer to pick cotton on southern plantations . . . Having considered all of this, he asks himself—a quoi bon?

Conservatives are not against progress. They wish always to work as well as well and as practically as possible within the existing framework. They cannot countenence the liberal desire which seems, far too often, to be one of removing the flaw at the price of the entire structure. Even though we in the United States are protected from such radical action by our regard for law and order, we can prevent the solution of a problem by giving way to hasty action without adequate preparation and thought. This the conservative very much wishes to avoid.

No, Mr. Hobbs, the conservative is neither ignoring or restricting the freedom of our Colored citizen. He realizes that the Negro must be able to pass through the fabric of American life without notice and without the constant recognition of his difference from any other citizen. Only when he is able to do this will he really achieve freedom. The more that unscrupulous politicians, simpering clergymen and picketing liberals focus the spotlight upon him the more those who most certainly do discriminate will be able to point out his differences and his weaknesses.

By all means go down and picket the theaters. But expect no help from conservatives for we fear that you are hacking your way through a jungle which will only close more dense and more determined not to be penetrated again. And when you have finished your picketing in Chapel Hill, why not go up to Washington and take on the Metropolitan Club? Or are you accepting the principle of freedom of discrimination?

Good Propaganda, But Crude Fallacy

To the Editor:

To equate the conservative with the segregationist is effective propaganda, but a crude fallacy. There is no such alliance, and the conservative who believes in natural rights differs from the liberal only in means to the end, equal opportunity for all. The free enterprise system itself demands that every individual be able to work and live at his highest capability.

SEGREGATION AND ALL its implications are indeed repulsive, but they are no more so than the arbitrary imposition of law on any people. Political change cannot effect a social, economic, and ideological revolution; and neither can a picket line. Both are valuable only when they accompany more fundamental progress. What good is the right to vote if one can't read a newspaper? What is the value of integrated theaters to someone who can't save 75c?

Principles are only relevant when they regard the total welfare, and this requires an understanding of each situation. "Freedom" is lovely in the abstract, but is it freedom for me to impose my interpretation on others whose ways of thinking and living I have never shared? It is only right for me to persuade them. Your ethics and mine are neither universal nor always practical; we can only try to make them so through education, not unConstitutional coercion. In beginning such a difficult task, our good intentions are admirable, but, I regret to say, inadequate.

Sincerely,
SUSANN GROVE

How Could We Have Been So Stupid

Dear Conservatives,

How could we have been so stupid not to have seen much sooner the guiding light that Bill Hobbs placed before us in the Sunday, November 5 issue of the Daily Tar Heel?

Can't you see that such ideas as advocating balanced budgets and reducing the national debt, being against living on borrowed time and borrowed money, being against the federal and state governments providing services that can be offered more efficiently and less expensively by private enterprise, being against labor union coercion of labor, being for right to work laws, believing in and trying to preserve the Constitution as a basically sound document, believing that communism, socialism, and welfare-statism just might offer some danger to our country, and believing that it would be better to die in a raging nuclear inferno than to live in a cool Communist heaven, are of no avail if you do not believe that supporting the Citizens Committee for theater integration is the most important single issue that you will ever face? (And running a close second is the abolition of the horrendous loyalty oaths!)

Mr. Hobbs, get off my back. Your argument that I am basically hypocritical (which I probably am and somewhat sinful too) because I am a conservative (which I definitely am) that believes in segregation (which I may or may not) is as valid as saying that all liberals are aiding the communist movement (which they may or may not be doing) because they seem to believe that every one should be equal (which is ridiculous).

TRUE conservatives join with True liberals for soon they are going to build a great altar, ascend the same, glare toward the heavens, raise their pickets and voices in unison demanding that God Almighty Himself stop his senseless creation of varied individuals and from henceforth produce only undifferentiated, dyed-in-the-skin, muscle, bone, and brain equal units of humanity.

Will Country Move From Left To Right

In reply to Mr. Hobbs we would like to point out a deeper analysis of the Conservative movement in this country It is quite probable that as international tension increases this countries policies will move back from the left to the right.

It is this trend which is producing the new so-called Conservative movement in this country. This movement will not be led by Barry Goldwater or John Tower or William Buckley but by men such as President Kennedy, Dean Rusk, and Charles Dillon.

The great majority of people who will align themselves with the Conservative movement will not support extremists such as the Goldwaters and the Birchers but more moderate and progressive Conservatives who recognize our problems and are determined to deal with them realistically and effectively.

WHAT IS the best way to deal with the civil rights question? The new Conservative believes that what is needed is not more legislation by Congress but the gradual and proper enforcement of existing statutes. It is through the use of legal methods (established judicial processes and not extra-legal methods such as sit-ins, wade-ins, kneel-ins and crawl-ins) that integration will be accomplished with the LEAST HOSTILITY and thus represents the best means to the end.

The true Conservative is interested in attaining the best possible integration and NOT a haphazard, tyrannical, or bayonet-enforced integration. The Conservative remembers integration in Atlanta this autumn while the Liberal remembers Little Rock in 1958.

In the same manner a Conservative does not challenge the existence of the HUAC because of the imminent Communist danger to this country, but on the other hand he recognizes that tactics of intimidation and blacklisting have no place in a free society. To deny a Congressional committee its right of investigation is irresponsible. Do Liberals suggest that we deny the right of the Foreign Relations Committee to investigate because the Foreign Aid program has been mishandled or because the world situation is dangerous to free men and their governments? Let us distinguish "the significant from the illusory."

OF ALL THE issues that have become confused it is the issue of the Federal Government's domestic spending program which has been surrounded by a mass of inexplicable terminology such as socialistic, Welfare State, deficit spending, back-door spending and so forth. Because our problems are so extensive, so complex, and so expensive, only the National Government can deal with them successfully.

In dealing with these problems the attitude should not be to spend for spending's sake or not to spend for spending's sake, but to weigh the appropriated amount against the benefits to be derived. The worth of a program must be measured n terms of results against the cost. The new Conservative recognizes the degenerative influence of large scale programs which encourage individuals to be parasitic.

Is it unreasonable to put to work a man collecting unemployment compensation or to limit the number of times a mother may collect bonuses for illegitimate children?

The answers are clear, and it is indeed conceived that this administration will find themselves carrying through such policies. Therefore there is a danger in glibly applying Liberal and Conservative labels without thought.

One would hope that such changes would come in the name of a new and responsible Conservative movement in the United States.

An Exercise In Un-Journalism

Dear Mr. Hobbs:

Your article in the Nov. 5 Tar Heel is an exercise in un-journalism. The greatness of this country rests on the fact that Americans can differ in their political views, and still live and work together as friends. You do not call your political opponents "liars" without disqualifying yourself as an irresponsible ranter.

Now, the facts:

You confuse two things which have nothing to do with each other: political conservatism, and segregation. There are segregationists and integrationists in both political parties; there are liberal racists in the Klan, and Goldwater conservatives who favor complete integration. Conservativism has nothing to do with racism.

Item: It was liberal Southern Democrats who conceived the plan of moving negroes into a house next to Vice President Richard Nixon, and it was Nixon who said he would be delighted to have them for neighbors. Item: Under the Eisenhower administration, more negroes were appointed to public office than in all of Roosevelt's terms.

You also throw two other things together which have nothing to do with each other, and that, I am afraid, is deliberate. Journalistically speaking, it is called a "smear." John Birch, and Barry Goldwater.

The great majority of Americans today, Democrats and Republicans, agree on many things; the fundamental questions on which they differ are economic and sociological in nature, and subject to continuous debate. But both sides have a common patriotic purpose.

On the outside are nutty fringe groups, the ADA, the sociologists, the snake charmers, the John Birchers, and a legion of other crackpots. You don't call a liberal American a communist any more than you call a conservative American a John Bircher. To do so is a smear. Barry Goldwater is a patriotic, conservative American; the people who follow John Birchers are fools.

So, let's get together: I ask all TRUE liberals to join with the TRUE conservatives in the fight to end the disgrace of racism and to open the road to true equality for our colored American fellow citizens.

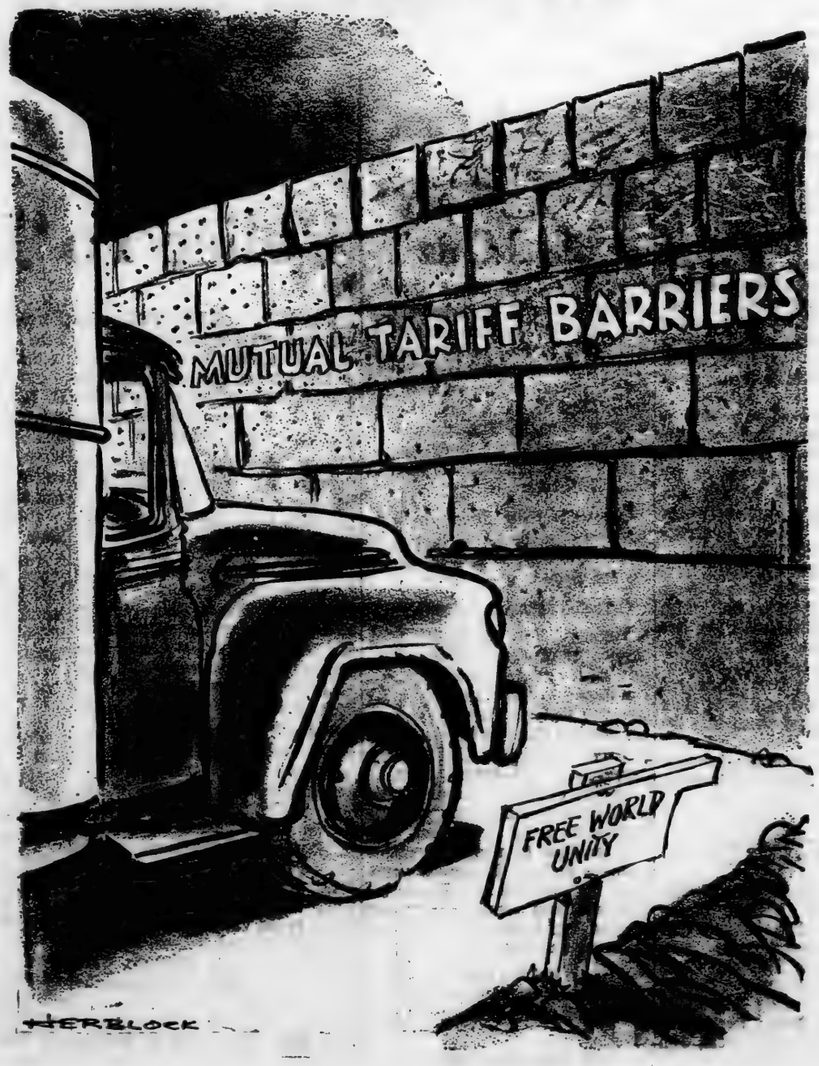
The Wall This Side Of Berlin



In 'Beggars Opera'

Girls Outdo Boys

The girls outdid the boys Wednesday night at the opening of the Playmakers' "The Beggar's Opera."

Three excellent actresses—Susie Cordon, Martha Teachey, and Claudia Bray—keep things moving with perfect lampoons of the domineering wife and mother, and two well-meaning lovers of the heavy, Macheath.

The time is the nineteenth century as Macheath, Big Man About London, charms Polly Peachum into marriage. Polly's parents spend the rest of the evening trying to get Macheath, a highwayman, hanged, or at least jailed so Polly can enjoy one of the fringe benefits of marriage: a moneyed widowhood.

As Macheath, Robert Williamson is good, but will have to do more talking and less posing in order to keep up with the girls. He plays a generally appealing rogue, does his musical numbers well, but both he and Filch, a pickpocket played by Lorenzo Durham, Jr., should concentrate more on the sincerity of their lines and less on the accompanying histrionics.

Portraying Polly's parents, Randolph Umberger and Susie Cordon are an excellent match: the overbearing wife and the cringing husband. The only criticism of the pair: Umberger might put a filter on some of his gestures. If parody is exaggeration, then over-doing the parody will re-wrong the right. Miss Cordon is near-perfect.

Perhaps the strongest male part on the stage is Wallace Johnson as the Jailer. In the scenes in which he appears with the other male leads, it is very apparent that he is the most concerned with giving the character meaning, instead of merely reciting the lines.

Martha Teachey as Polly and Claudia Bray as Lucy—another of Macheath's many loves—play perfectly contrasting parts: the innocent blonde wearing lace and the hardened brunette wearing a sneer. Dorothy Silver deserves special mention as Dolly Trull—the perfect "girl in the next pub"—who betrays highwayman Macheath to Polly's father and the Jailer.

Throughout, the attention of director Russell Graves is well evident. There is plenty of action, plenty of color, noise, humor. The impact of costuming by Irene Rains and sets by Tommy Rezzuto is noticeable from the start. The production opens with a brief prologue in which Rezzuto's simple, forceful sets and mood-inspiring backlighting win the audience's approval before a line is spoken.

Altogether, "The Beggar's Opera" boasts a very strong cast—a cast whose success is assured by powerful direction, lighting, sets, and costuming: a combination that should draw capacity crowds for the remainder of the play's five-day run.

Candidate Issues Statement On Race

Rather than risk being charged with demanding more "free publicity", I will be as brief as possible. In the first place I would like to thank all the men in the dorms, all those who voted for me or in any way identified my campaign for dorm representation as their own. As witnessed by the sizable vote cast for the combined candidates, Harkness and myself, I think the dorm man is just beginning to test his strength. To a lot of dorm voters the SP, having somewhat more dorm representation than the UP, was the lesser of two evils. (SP victories down the line seem also to indicate this.)

ALTHOUGH I think the University Party is not representative of the majority of men on the campus, either in its convention tactics or judging by vote returns; I would like to congratulate Bob Spearman on his fine victory. In addition I would like to pledge my complete support and continued effort on behalf of all Freshmen, especially those living in dorm conditions. May I take this opportunity to recommend to the Freshman President-elect that certain of my campaign ideas regarding dorm social life be adopted into his program.

I think an objective analysis of this election will show us one thing for sure—dorm men are looking for a place to cast their majority block of votes. If my campaign has in any way helped to stir up this issue and make the parties aware of it, then this campaign has been partially successful. Again, to all my supporters in the campaign for true dorm representation, THANKS; I will continue to work for you.

Phi Mu Might Have Refused Beethoven

Since it appears to be the proper time for discussing fraternities, one of the greatest ones should not be over-looked: Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia. This "professional" music fraternity, although composed of but a few music majors, is nevertheless singing the praises of music all over our broad campus.

It is indeed satisfying to know that a group of regular guys is furthering the knowledge and appreciation of good music at our fine university.

Verily, we may rejoice in the fact that this grand bunch of fine fellows has taken pains to eliminate undesirables from their midst, which of course is the prerogative of all professional fraternities, so that they have been able to maintain a pure, neat set; regardless of an individual's musical talents.

Yes, it's heart-warming to know that one as boorish as Beethoven would never have been allowed into the greatest of all fraternities: Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia!

Picketing At The Varsity

PICKETING AT THE VARSITY

It is morally wrong for this nation to preach the extension of freedom and social justice throughout the world but to deny social justice and equality to the Negro in this country. Nevertheless segregation would be morally wrong even if the international situation had not focused such great attention upon this problem in the United States. All men are not equal, but all men are entitled to certain basic rights and these rights include the right not to be discriminated against on the basis of race, color or creed by business establishments serving the public. To set up such an indiscriminate barrier as race is a social injustice and thus morally unacceptable.

The reason for picketing the Varsity Theater is that the practice of not accepting members of the Negro race is unacceptable. While the Carolina Theater is not admiting all the members of the Negro race who wish to attend, it does at least admit Negro students from U.N.C. Although this is not a permanently acceptable policy, it does at present mark a temporary beginning toward the desired end with the promise of complete integration.

Every member of this community whether he wishes us well or ill is urged to boycott the Varsity Theater. Your refusal to attend this theater will indicate your disapproval of the theater's admission policy. If you agree that this discrimination is a social injustice — BOYCOTT THE VARSITY THEATRE.

But Merchants Have Rights Too

Dear Sir:

The United States operates under what is generally known as the "Free Enterprize" system. Under this system, a man is able to own and operate a place of business as he sees fit. Am I wrong? Is it not my right to open a movie theatre in Chapel Hill and to run it in my own way? This, of course, is in reference to the picketing of the Varsity Theatre.

A great deal of pressure is being applied to the management of the Varsity Theatre to open up its doors to members of all races. I say, "Stop all this foolishness! If the management of the Varsity does not want Negro patrons, that's their privilege. They can run their business as they want to, not as the way other people want them to."

I am sure that some liberal elements on this campus are shuddering at my bold statement that a man can run his business as he sees fit. After all, "All Men Are Created Equal" and should be treated as such. A movie theatre should open its doors to all men who are created equal in mind and body.

And yet, it seems to me that all men are equal in their right to make their own decisions on how to run their lives and livelihood.

I'm sure that any Liberal will not disagree with me on this score, but undoubtedly would raise the point that although men have the right to make their own decisions, these decisions should not interfere with the rights of others. What rights are these? The right to enter into a theatre regardless of race or color? No! If the owners of the Varsity do not want to cater to Negroes, there is no law that says they have to.

Mr. King and other liberals, you can argue all you care to about morality and equal rights. But please don't forget that the management of the Varsity has its rights also. You can't change that, as much as you would like to.

—WILLIAM H. FREUND

Reader Attacks Matthew's View

Herbert L. Matthews, defender of Castro, blames the United States for Castro's romance with the Soviet Union. According to Matthews, "the animosity Castro has shown since he became dictator is all due to Washington's unfriendliness."

Matthews asserts that Fidel is really a fine guy, "an idealist dedicated to the principles of liberty and democracy." Fidel's democracy is enforced by executions of "war criminals," but this doesn't bother Mr. Matthews. He proudly reminds you that Batista executed thousands —thus, two wrongs make a right.

BEFORE CASTRO came to power, Matthews said, "He has strong ideas of liberty, democracy, social justice, the need to restore the Constitution, to hold elections." Matthews was right! Fidel does have these strong ideas. He has effected them by refusing to permit elections, by executing opposition parties, and by allying his nation with the Soviet Union, a country long known for its practice of Democracy via the firing squad. Matthews skips lightly over any mention of these facts, and, in the vernacular of the revolutionary, yells "Yankee Imperialism."

Matthews doubts "that historians will ever be able to agree on whether the Castro regime embraced Communism willingly or was forced into a shotgun wedding." Alice-Leone Moats, in National Review, said, "Historians, unlike Matthews, may perhaps, recognize that a shotgun wedding occurs after two people have been found in bed together —it isn't what puts them in bed together."

JFK Would Be Hard To Beat—Gallup

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J.—Owing to a combination of factors, the present signs are that President Kennedy may be a hard man for any Republican to beat in 1964.

In a Gallup Poll "rematch" Kennedy defeats former Vice-President Nixon by a 62 to 38 per cent margin.

IT IS, OF COURSE, impossible to predict the political tides between now and November 1964. But three major factors have combined to make Kennedy, as of now, a formidable political opponent for any of the leading GOP contenders:

- Since his inauguration eight months ago, Kennedy has been a highly popular Chief Executive. During a crisis-filled period on the international scene, the President's personal popularity with voters has averaged 75 per cent.

By way of comparison, former President Eisenhower's personal popularity during his first eight months in office averaged 71 per cent.

"SUPPOSE the presidential election were being held this November. If Richard Nixon were the Republican candidate and John Kennedy were the Democratic candidate, which would you like to see win?"

Prefer Kennedy	62%
Prefer Nixon	38%

(About one voter in twenty-five —4 per cent—did not express a preference.)

In the 1960 election, the major-party vote was as follows:

Kennedy	50.1%
Nixon	49.9%

Nixon's decision that he will not be a candidate for the presidency in 1964 would appear to give an initial advantage to Gov. Nelson Rockefeller over Sen. Barry Goldwater.

As reported in late August, Nixon was the No. 1 choice of Republican voters in the event the choice in 1964 narrowed to the GOP's current "Big Three" —Nixon, Rockefeller, and Goldwater.

In the event of a 'showdown' between just Rockefeller and Goldwater, however, 50 per cent of Republican voters said they would prefer the New York Governor, while 39 per cent supported Sen. Goldwater.

All True Satirists Are Teachers

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I note that Tyrone Guthrie's new production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance" will soon be touring the country. Apparently the British and American publics never grow tired of the Savoy operas, no matter how poorly or how often they are performed.

Whenever I listen again to Gilbert's lampooning of British customs and institutions, I am reminded of a sentence in one of Frank Moore Colby's discerning essays: "True satire is not the sneering attitude that we know, but satire that includes the satirist."

Gilbert poked fun—and sometimes not without malice—at all the sacred cows of British life—the Navy, the Peerage, the law courts, culture and the social order generally. Yet he always included himself in the laughter, which never had anything of contempt in it.

In our own country, Mark Twain indulged in a great deal of social satire, some of it fairly bitter. But, unlike Juvenal and Swift, he never hated or put himself above the objects of his attacks; he just felt sorry for the human animal, including himself. "I have been an author for 30 years," he once wrote, "and a jackass for 55."

Young writers who attempt satire (and almost all try it, for it seems the easiest task at first) usually fail to distinguish between being a sharp but compassionate observer of human nature and being a common scold. Scolding merely alienates people; the best teacher is he who is ruefully aware of his own defects and limitations.

For the fact remains that all true satirists are teachers and moralists at heart, not cynics, as so many sophomores try to be. I have on my desk a college journal that is filled with satirical writing; it is one long sneer.

Rayburn Dies After Fight With Cancer—Was Speaker Longer Than Any Other Man

suffering severe back pains. He said they had been diagnosed by doctors in Washington as lumbago.

A team of specialists did all they could for the man known to millions of Americans as "Mr. Democrat." But the cancer was inoperable, and the final result of the widespread malignancy was never in doubt.

To complicate matters, Rayburn caught pneumonia and lapsed into a coma. A near-miraculous recovery allowed physicians to treat him with experimental drugs. They also administered radiation treatments with a six-million volt X-ray machine.

During his stay in Dallas, Rayburn was visited by President Kennedy, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, several congressmen and former President Harry S. Truman.

In his hometown, Rayburn was addressed as "Sam" or "Mr. Sam." That was the way he wanted it. When he came home from Washington, he was just one of the homefolks.

Born In Tennessee

Rayburn was the eighth in a family of 11 children. He was born Jan. 6, 1882, on a farm near Kingston, Tenn. His father, William Marion Rayburn, was a veteran of the Confederate army.

When Rayburn was five his parents moved to Texas. They settled on 40 acres near Bonham and planted a cotton crop. The farm was not one of the most productive in the area, but Sam was determined to go to college, and his father sent him off to East Texas Normal with $25 and his blessing. Rayburn worked his way through school by sweeping floors for $3 a month.

Rayburn liked to say he served "with" presidents, not "under" them. The eighth, John F. Kennedy, showed the regard in which he held "Mr. Sam" by flying a 3,100-mile round trip to visit him for 15 minutes.

Rayburn worked his way from college to the Texas legislature, to speaker of the legislature, to Congress and to speaker of the U.S. House. He set his sights on Congress and the speakership when he was 10 years old and in his last years, having achieved it, said he wanted nothing more.

Speaker Nine Times

He became speaker Sept. 15, 1940, when Speaker William B. Bankhead of Alabama died. His Democratic colleagues re-elected him every time when they were in control of the House. That was nine times.

As speaker, he made $45,000 a year and rode in a $11,000 air-conditioned limousine driven by a chauffeur.

Despite his conservative background, he followed a liberal line at the sides of Presidents Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy. He helped Roosevelt with his "New Deal" legislation, Truman with his "Fair Deal" and Kennedy with his "New Frontier."

If Rayburn did not like a proposed piece of legislation, it had little or no chance of passing. He did not hesitate to tell presidents about his likes and dislikes and they called him "Mr. Speaker."

UNC String Quartet Uses Italian Violins

By CHUCK MOONEY

There's a touch of old Italy in Chapel Hill. It's the instruments of the Carolina String Quartet.

Three of the four Quartet members play instruments made by Italian craftsmen.

Dr. Edgar Alden's violin was made by Paolo Grancino in Milan, Italy, in 1690. Dr. Alden, associate professor of music, is the first violinist with the Quartet and an Associate Conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra.

Nicolo Amati, who taught Stradivari, Guarneri, and Grancino how to make violins, made Mrs. Jean Heard's violin in Cremona, Italy, in 1647. Mrs. Heard, the wife of Political Science Professor Alexander Heard, is the second violinist. She has studied music at the University of Alabama and the Juilliard School of Music.

The cellist, Mary Gray Clarke, plays a cello that was made by the Gagliano brothers in Milan in 1850. Miss Clarke, an instructor of cello, is also the first cellist in the University Symphony Orchestra. She holds masters degrees from UNC and the Manhattan School of Music.

Looks At Antiques

Mrs. Dorothy Alden, the wife of Dr. Alden, is still looking for an antique instrument. She plays the viola with the Quartet and teaches string classes here.

The Quartet has been playing together for the last ten years. "We've been working together so long that we know how each other will react to the different types of music," said Dr. Alden.

They started playing together informally for their own satisfaction. "Gosh! It's fun," said Miss Clarke. "It's a treat to get acquainted with the great music of the world."

First Appearance

Their first public appearance was in 1953 as a part of a Music Department program. From there they gradually moved into single concerts. "A concert at Davidson had the beautiful resounding sound of a broken string," said Miss Clark.

History Teacher To Publish Book On Rice Growing

People today think of rice as something thrown at newly-weds or cooked as a vegetable.

But Patience Pennington didn't. She thought of rice as a money crop and filled a journal with her experiences in growing it on her South Carolina plantation.

Professor of American History here, Cornelius O. Cathey harvested her journals and tied them into 446 sheaves of a book entitled "A Woman Rice Planter."

The book emerges as a staple product of American culture in the early twentieth century. Harvard University Press published the book in the John Harvard series—a series "intended to reflect the great range of cultural achievement in this country."

Editor Cathey notes in his introduction to the book the sensitivity of the author, Elizabeth Alston Pringle, sheltered daughter of a planter aristocrat. Her struggles to revive the family rice plantation end after four years but her lasting accounts of encounters during those years are lucidly detailed.

Mothers Slaves

She mothers the former family slaves freed since the war and frankly tells some are dismissed because they won't work.

Wading into the rice fields to help cultivate the crop, mending a hole in a Negro's head, living alone in the plantation house several miles from the nearest white people, Patience Pennington leads a life far afield from her sheltered upbringing.

The jacket blurb of the book says her "style has the twist of lemon . . . that the vagaries of rice cultivation sometimes drove her to bitterness and tears." Dr. Cathey says, "the story is told without complaint or bitterness but with an attractive simplicity of style."

President Leads Country In Mourning For Sam Rayburn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — His big house chair draped in black, Speaker Sam Rayburn was mourned Thursday by fellow Americans ranging from a Texas fishing companion to the U.S. presidents he served during a half century in public life.

President Kennedy was joined by the nation's living ex-Presidents —Eisenhower, Truman, Hoover— in paying tribute to "a loyal counselor," "a distinguished American," "one of America's great leaders," and "the greatest of the great speakers."

Said Kennedy:

"I had singular opportunity as a young congressman, and now more recently as President, to appreciate his temperament and his character. Both were bedded in rock and remained unchanged by circumstance."

In Bonham, Tex., postman Joe Kincaid said:

"I went fishing with him some. As a fisherman, I'd say he was pretty good. As a man, he was as good as they come."

In the U.S. House of Representatives, the men who worked daily with the granite-like Speaker draped his brown leather chair in black, placed a wreath of yellow chrysanthemums on his desk and laid his gavel, the symbol of his power, atop the flowers.

Flag Will Be Presented

The flag flying from the Capitol's newly extended east front when he died at 7:20 a.m. EST was taken down. It will be presented to his family.

Many of the hundreds who issued public statements of sorrow spoke of the Democratic Speaker's fairness while serving as presiding officer of the House more than twice as long as any other man.

Among these was Dwight W. Eisenhower.

"Because I was born in his congressional district, he often referred to me as a "vicarious constituent," the Republican ex-President said. "He was a forceful leader, fair-minded and deeply versed in public affairs, respected by both political parties, accustomed to distinction, yet in mind and heart identified with the ordinary citizen."

Harry S. Truman called Rayburn his "good friend" and added: "Sam Rayburn was a statesman. When history is written he will appear as one of the very great men of this period."

Former President Herbert Hoover said Rayburn "commanded both affection and respect irrespective of political affiliations." He said the entire nation "is better for his life among us."

E. Berlin Police Hold 2 Britons For Four Hours

BERLIN (UPI)—Communist officials detained four Britons for several hours Wednesday and tried to extract military secrets from two of them, British authorities announced Thursday.

Two tourists and two civilians attached to British forces in Berlin were held in East Berlin. The announcements said the tourists had been subjected to pressure by Communist authorities to disclose details of Allied troops and tanks in West Berlin.

Britain is "making a strong protest to the Soviet authorities in East Berlin against this misconduct," a spokesman said. "They are being warned that serious repercussions may well result."

Meanwhile, the U. S. Army said a convoy of combat troops sent through the Soviet Zone to West Germany ran into a "minor delay" at the final Russian checkpoint Thursday but was allowed to pass.

"The important thing is that it was cleared to enter West Germany," the spokesman said. "Such minor delays often take place. There probably was a hassle about the convoy's travel documents. Sometimes there is a dispute about a misplace comma."

The unit, Company E of the 3rd Battle Group, will undergo training in West Germany and return here Sunday.

The first unit of three jeeps and four trucks cleared the Soviet Babelsberg checkpoint outside Berlin without delay. But it apparently was held up about 30 minutes at the Marienborn checkpoint, 108 miles to the West and just across the border from West Germany.

Officials said the four Britons, who were not identified, were seized in two separate incidents is East Berlin. The two tourists were held by Communist customs officials for four and one-half hours as they attempted to return to West Berlin from a brief visit to the Soviet sector.

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI)—Bermuda probably has more golf courses per square acre than any other country. There are three 18-hole links, including the widely-known Mid-Ocean Club, and two nine-hole courses.

'Love Me Or Leave Me' Free Flick Tonight: Stars Doris Day, Cagney

A roaring-20's-gangster-torch-singer movie, "Love Me or Leave Me" is tonight's free flick.

Starring Doris Day, James Cagney and Cameron Mitchell, the flick portrays the career of Singer Ruth Etting, whose gangster husband created a headline scandle. A crippled Chicago racketeer discovers a talented dime-a-dance hostess, pushes her into the big time and after he marries her, turns savage when he is unable to complete his domination.

Saturday night, Barbara Stanwyck stars in "Titanic", the story of the ill-fate maiden voyage of the unsinkable ship.

The shows will be at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall and ID cards are required.

Baptist Union Clarifies Stand On Capital Punishment, Segregation

The UNC Baptist Student Union has taken "no stand whatsoever" on the question of abolition of capital punishment in North Carolina, Director Bill Price said yesterday.

The Daily Tar Heel had erroneously reported that the organization "is taking a similar position to that of the student delegation which Tuesday asked the Baptist State Convention to go on record supporting the abolition of capital punishment in North Carolina."

Bill Price stated that the BSU is planning study groups to discuss the issue, and that the question will be resolved at the BSU convention next spring, but "this implies only interest and not necessarily advocation of the issue."

The Baptist State Convention, now meeting in Greensboro, planned to take action yesterday on the resolution proposed by Wake Forest College delegates.

Price did say that the union is in general agreement with Rev. Wilburg Honeycutt's statement that "Segregation at any level is exceedingly sinful."

"This age of specialization opens special opportunities for the well-rounded man!"

Robert Saudek, President
Robert Saudek Associates, Inc.

"The more specialists society creates to cope with its complexities, the easier it can be for a non-specialist to achieve success.

If that seems paradoxical, look at it this way: the more men who go out for specific positions on the ball club, the more chance you have to wind up as manager!

Today's world—in government, business, the arts, even science—needs the well-rounded man. He's the man who can see the entire picture...the man who can draw on a broad background of knowledge, evaluate the problem, then assign the details to specialists.

The world of entertainment may seem somewhat special, but it's a case in point. These days, it demands more of its people than ever before. Today's musical comedy score is often as sophisticated as grand opera. Drama draws heavily on psychology and history. Television productions are concerned with nuclear science and political science. If you've ever watched 'Omnibus' you may have seen how our productions have run the gamut of a wide range of man's interests.

So I suggest to you that even though you may concentrate on one special field of interest, keep your viewpoint broad. Keep your college curriculum as diversified as possible. Attend lectures and concerts, the theatres and museums. Above all, read and read, and listen and listen! But pay scant heed to the oracle who says there's no route to the top but that of specialization. I don't believe it!"

Lyle Wilson Says:

'Illiterates' Blasts Education System

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—"Tomorrow's Illiterates" is the title of a just-published book that should shake and rattle the roof trees of all homes that shelter little children.

The book was published by Little, Brown and Co., for the Council on Basic Education. It tells what hit U.S. education and why. It names names, invites combat. Every Parent-Teachers Association in the United States should make "Tomorrow's Illiterates" required reading for all members.

It is likely, thereafter, that teachers would cease speaking to parents and that parents would cease speaking to teachers.

This book deals with the teaching of reading in the lower grades. It finds guilty the U.S. educational system in general and the early grade teachers individually on serious charges. The system and the teachers stand charged with converting the little kids who pass through first, second and third grades into dolts who cannot read. This book asserts that there has been:

"A national failure in reading instruction which we, the authors, see as the single major cause of the deterioration of our educational system."

Three authors hold responsible for this situation a variety of individuals and institutions. They include the U.S. Office of Education, teachers' colleges, James B. Conant, former president of Harvard University, textbook publishers whose interests are vested in no change, the system of progressivo education, John Dewey and his satellite saints of pedagogy, and others.

As for the early grade teachers, themselves, they simply are carrying on in the tradition imposed upon them. Some selected quotations from "Tomorrow's Illiterates" will convey some of its ideas:

"It is clear that we not only have a national reading problem of appalling seriousness but also that it is completely unnecessary.

"It is entirely due to the methods of reading instruction generally followed in our public schools.

Forty Years Behind

"The teaching system, the texts, the theory are, in official school-of-education circles, today about what they were in 1925.

"The system has spread over the country taking the hinterlands in the 1930s. It has produced a disastrous retardation not only in reading but also of education in general.

"Considerably more than half, probably 75 per cent, of our young people do not read as they could. At least 35 per cent of them are very seriously retarded."

The New York Times reported in the last week of October on a study made by Dr. Arthur S. Trace Jr. of John Carroll University, Cleveland, Ohio.

Dr. Trace said fourth grade Russian children use books with a vocabulary of about 10,000 words. Fourth grade Americans have readers with vocabularies of fewer than 1,800 words.

"Tomorrow's Illiterates" is a 50-megaton bomb blast at U.S. educational practices. It should arouse great controversy.

Debate Teams From South Set For TV

A series of college debates featuring teams from this region and the entire mid-south has been scheduled for production over WUNC-TV, it was announced here today by Robert Hilliard, Department of Radio, TV, and Motion Pictures faculty member and originator of the idea.

Two debates have already been produced. Wake Forest defeated UNC Monday night and two weeks earlier a UNC team won over a trio from Duke University.

Requests for participation in the series have come from schools as distant as the University of Richmond, Birmingham-Southern in Alabama, Washington and Lee, Randolph-Macon, Campbell, and Mars Hill College.

"Debates such as these," Hilliard says, "show one of the most important aspects of a college education. In debating, the creative aspects of thinking and reasoning are pushed to their highest level."

The hour-long programs begin at 9:30 p.m. on alternate Mondays, and have brought wide acclaim.

Research Agent To Talk On Urbanism

Harvey S. Perloff of the Washington research agency Resources for the Future will speak on urbanism and planning at the Morehead faculty lounge today at 11 a.m.

The subject of Perloff's address is "The Economic Foundations for Urbanism and Their Implications for Planning." Perloff is the director of the program of regional studies at the Resources for the Future agency.

The lecture, which is open to the public, is the fourth in a series of lectures sponsored by the Department of City and Regional Planning.

Parisian Pix On Exhibit At Ackland

An exhibition of 100 photographs of Paris made by Eugene Atget, from 1900 to 1925, is now being shown at the Ackland Art Center.

Entitled "Atget in Paris," it opened Nov. 7 and will be at the Center until Nov. 28.

Eugene Atget ranks among the great photographers. Admired by many painters, he has been called a forerunner of today's documentary cameramen. The photographs are of details of Paris. The photographs give a poetic impression of Paris at the beginning of this century.

From Originals

The pictures in the exhibition at the Ackland Art Center have been printed from the original plates by the photographer Berenice Abbott who selected them from the thousands she rescued at the time of Atget's death. The exhibition is circulated by the American Federation of Arts.

Ackland is open Tuesdays through Fridays 2:30 to 5 p.m. and 8 to 10 p.m. Saturdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Mondays.

Pharmacists Select Members

Ten new members were elected this week to the UNC Pharmacy Senate, a debating society in the field of pharmacy with its membership limited to 30 students.

Also at the Pharmacy School, the Lambda Chapter of Kappa Epsilon Sorority has announced the election of new officers for the current school year.

They are Becky H. Elliott, president; Ellen Pike, vice president; Margaret McCann, secretary; Beverly Thompson, treasurer; Margaret Patterson, pledge mistress; Emil Adams, chaplain, and Deane Hughes, historian.

Nudes' Rebuttal Plot Foiled

LONDON (UPI) — Three irate husbands turned thumbs down today on a plan by their wives to strip off their clothes to prevent housing officials from evicting them from their homes.

"This is fantastic," said Brinkley Howell, 40, in utter amazement. "I wouldn't dream of letting my wife, Anne, do this—especially in this weather."

Mrs. Howell, 25, and two other women, Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, 30, and Mrs. Mary Walsh, 26, had threatened to be in the nude in the event bailiffs try to enter their apartments.

Mrs. Walsh had said earlier: "We are desperate. We won't even wear a fig leaf. If the bailiffs dare to enter our homes while we are in the nude we hope they die of shame."

Girl, 11, Found Near Death In Atlantic

MIAMI (UPI)—A little blonde girl who survived the sinking of a luxury yacht in a Bahamas squall Sunday was found bobbing alone on a raft in the Atlantic Thursday. She was in a deep sleep and near death.

The child, 11-year-old Terry Jo Duperrault of Green Bay, Wis., was picked up by a passing merchant vessel—the Captain Theo—which chanced upon the small white raft in choppy waters.

Terry Jo was cast into the sea with six other persons, including her parents and a brother and sister, when the 60-foot ketch, Blue Bell, caught fire and went down after taking a severe battering from a tropic squall.

Only one other person is known to have survived—the captain of the vessel, 45-year-old —Julian Harvey.

He was picked up by a tanker last Monday and had in the life boat with him a body of a child previously believed to be that of Terry Jo Duperrault. It apparently was the body of Terry Jo's sister, Rene, seven.

Almost Given Up Search

Authorities had all but given up an extensive search started three days ago for survivors when the Captain Theo messaged it had found the child about 120 miles northeast of Miami.

Professor Will Work With AEC

Dr. Michael K. Berkut of the School of Medicine has been granted a year's leave of absence in order to work with the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission in Washington.

Dr. Berkut is assistant professor of biochemistry and has been on the faculty since 1947. His leave will begin Jan. 1.

The announcement of Dr. Berkut's leave was made by Chancellor William B. Aycock with the approval of President William C. Friday and the Board of Trustees.

Soccermen Seek 9th Win Today Against Duke

2nd Place In ACC At Stake; Griffith, Steele May Return

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Carolina's soccer team, sporting an 8-3 record, closes out the season here this afternoon when they play host to traditional rival Duke University.

The Tar Heels, who have won their last four contests, will be out to avenge last year's 4-2 overtime loss to the invaders from Durham. The outcome will determine second place in the ACC. The title has already been sewed up by Maryland's perennial champions.

Goalies Tom Griffith and Larry Steele, nursing minor injuries which have them limping, should both be ready. They are the only Tar Heels on the casualty list. Sophomore Frank Lankford and junior Bob Kepner, who have played aggressive ball for coach Marvin Allen of late, will lead the offensive attack. They will be joined on the forward line by Herman Prakke, Peter Blake, and Kingman Brown.

Bordogna Anchors Defense

The defense is anchored by captain Dick Bordogna. The Havertown, Pennsylvania native—a center halfback who actually plays fullback in Allen's defensive alignment—is rated as one of the finest defensivemen in the South. Alongside Bordogna will be John Kenrick and George Beim. Beim, a product of Palisades, New York can play any position and Allen has used the young sophomore extensively this season. Billy Snyder and Charley Battle will be at the fullback slots for the Tar Heels.

The Blue Devils, who have won six and lost three going into the finale, also boast a fine team, which coach Jim Bly says is his best in 9 years. All-South selection Hobey Hyde, a 5-8, 155-pound senior from Hartford, Conn., and Dean Ross a junior who learned his soccer in Madrid, Spain, are the offensive stars. Co-captain and goalie Terry Hough has been outstanding in the nets for Bly. The 5-foot-7 senior turned back 21 shots in the Dukes' 2-0 loss to Maryland and will be a tough nut to crack for Carolina's line.

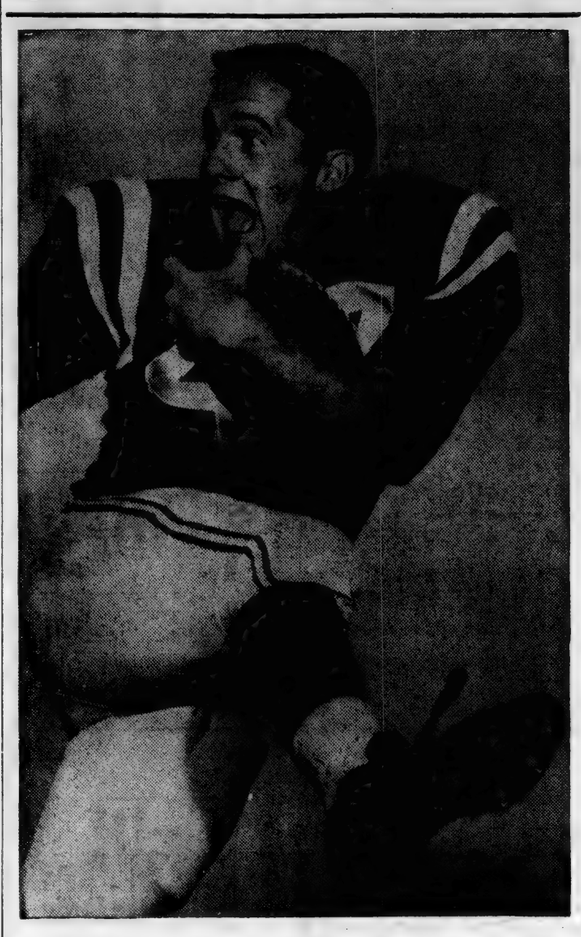
Five Play Final Game

Five seniors will be making their final appearance in a Carolina uniform this afternoon. They are: Dick Bordogna, Tom Griffith, John Kenrick, Kingman Brown, and Bill Sidbury.

Coach Allen who holds the distinction of kicking the first soccer goal ever scored at Carolina, is looking forward to a tough game.

"We should have beaten them last year over there," he said. "They are definitely an improved club and it should be interesting to see what we can do at home against them."

The game is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Fetzer Field.



MARK LEGGETT, speedy Duke halfback who has rushed for 261 yards in eight games, is one of the Blue Devils that UNC's Tar Heels will have to watch out for in Saturday's contest.

Kingman Brown Says Students Don't Watch Game Carefully

By HARRY TOCCE

What are Carolina students' reactions to the "strange" game of soccer?

"They laugh when we head the ball and cheer when we check hard."

These are some reactions says Kingman Brown, wingman on UNC's soccer team.

"They don't cheer in the wrong places," said the Washington D. C. senior. "They just fail generally to appreciate the finer points of the game.

"But don't be mistaken, the students cheers can be important. They can distract the attention of the opponent and spur us on."

How could a newcomer compare or contrast soccer with other sports?

"It's similar to basketball," he said, "in that you run plays and try to spot a man in the clear for a driving shot.

"In football, however, if you get mad you can hit the other fellow a little harder to blow off steam, but in soccer, you can't. So, it's difficult to remain cool and play well."

What about ACC soccer?

"It's just starting," said Brown. "But it's not a bad conference. The schools up North are the best but they have more players and have been playing longer."

Schools such as Maryland also give scholarships, according to Brown, but UNC soccer players receive no such aid.

"I might be a little better if I was on scholarship," he said with a smile.

He gave special credit to coach Marvin Allen for increasing the growth of interest in soccer at Carolina.

"We (Carolina) had to start out playing weak teams," he said. "But now we're beginning to compete with the big and better schools."

The final game of this season will be played against Duke this Friday at Fetzer Field.

"For some reason they (Duke) think they're going to the national playoff," said Brown. "I don't know where they get this idea. Their record is the same as ours. They probably base this assumption on the fact that they lost to West Chester (which beat Carolina 4-1) only 2-1."

Brown seemed to hint that UNC might just awaken the Dukes from their slumber this Friday.

Navy Riflemen Get Three Wins In Early Action

The Naval ROTC Unit rifle team has continued its winning ways from last year in victories over three of four opponents so far this season.

The riflemen have downed teams from Dartmouth, Miami (Fla.), and Stockbridge, Mass., while losing only to a strong Penn State team.

Gunnery Sergeant D. C. Parker, coach of the Tar Heel Navy team, expressed high hope for his shooters this year and termed the team "well-balanced and consistent."

Varsity Swimmers Meet Frosh Tonight In Season's Preview

By JOHN KOURI

The first practice swim meet of the year will take place today at 5 p.m. at Woollen Gym between the varsity and freshman swimming teams. Coach Pat Earey feels that four freshman high school All-Americans will offer some stiff competition for his varsity dolphins.

Coach Earey, who has directed the swimming team to three championships in his four years as head coach, spoke cautiously about this year's squad. Coach Earey said, "We have the material, but some boys will have to adjust to new positions."

All-American Harry Bloom, Vincent Simonton, and Harvey Hamrick graduated. Their departure will place a lot of weight on their replacements.

The man to watch this year will be sophomore Thompson Mann. Mann holds the National Collegiate Freshman record with 56:5 for the 100-yard backstroke. Coach Earey plans to use Mann in the freestyle, if junior Jim Huffman swims as expected in the backstroke.

This year's team will be led by senior captains Bob Briggs and Bob Bilbro. Briggs, senior Tom Cannon, and Pete Swift, a sophomore, will make a strong trio of breaststrokers.

Bilbro and junior Howard Cone, along with Don Murray will be Bloom's replacements in the free-style-sprints.

Earey feels that junior Barry King, along with Jim Bromwell, will be pressed to do a job as well as Bloom and Simonton did in the butterfly. He said that King is capable, but will have to work hard.

Two of Carolina's strongest positions are the free-style-distances and the divers. The freestylers are veterans Arthur Merrill and William Bloom along with Frank Lea and John Weber. The divers are juniors Sandy Patterson and Doug Fambrough along with sophomore Jerry Patterson.

Coach Earey also said that Joe and Henry Mummaw, twins, Bill Wells, and John Kirkman should see some action.

This year's freshman team will be led by Harrison Merrill, Hugh Kemper, Thad Adams, and Dick Woodrow. Merrill holds many prep school records. These four along with David Hall, Russell Reading, Scott Smiley, Jack Anker, Stanley Watt, David Roberts, Don Carver, and Ernest Oare have the potential to form the nucleus of a future powerhouse.

Grail-Mural Deadline Is Next Monday

The entry deadline for the Third Annual Grail-Mural Holiday Basketball Festival has been extended through Monday, November 20. Play in this single-elimination All-Campus tournament will begin on Monday, December 4.

There were approximately 100 teams entered in the first two festivals, the purpose of which is not only to foster better relations between dorm and fraternity organizations, but also to give the mangers a good opportunity to size-up their teams in game situations, before establishing team rosters for the regular point-system basketball season.

Philadelphia Coach Hopes Jurgensen's Toe Has Healed

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Coach Nick Skorich and the Philadelphia Eagles faced next Sunday's "must" game against the Cleveland Browns with the consoling thoughts that Sonny Jurgensen's injured big toe has healed and their luck was due to bounce back.

There were many who felt the Eagles were lucky in pulling through several "squeakers" during the first half of the season. Good fortune deserted them last week, however, in their 38-21 defeat by the New York Giants.

Luck All Bad

"We've had some luck and some had to go against us, I suppose," said Skorich. "But we sure got more than our share on the bad side last Sunday. I never expected that much at one time."

Jurgensen's toe was stepped on in the Washington game two weeks ago and was aggravated in the game with New York last week.

Phi Delts Win Frat Tag Title

The Phi Delts spotted the SAE's a touchdown on the opening kickoff, then came bounding back to capture the Fraternity Blue Championship, 26-13 Wednesday afternoon. The win sent the Phi Delts directly into the All-Campus finals, since the Phi Delta White team, champions of the White circuit, decided to forego the semi-final contest, giving the victory to its brother team.

The Alexander Playboys will provide stiff opposition for the Phi Delts in the All-Campus battle, scheduled for Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Playboys walloped the grad champion Peacocks, 32-0, in the semi-finals on Wednesday.

Jim Beaver scored two touchdowns for the Dorm Champs, while Bobby Cornwell scored one along with two point-afters. Quarterback Buddy Baldwin directed the Alexander attack, which also included TDs by Wellyn Dawson and Red Hamilton.

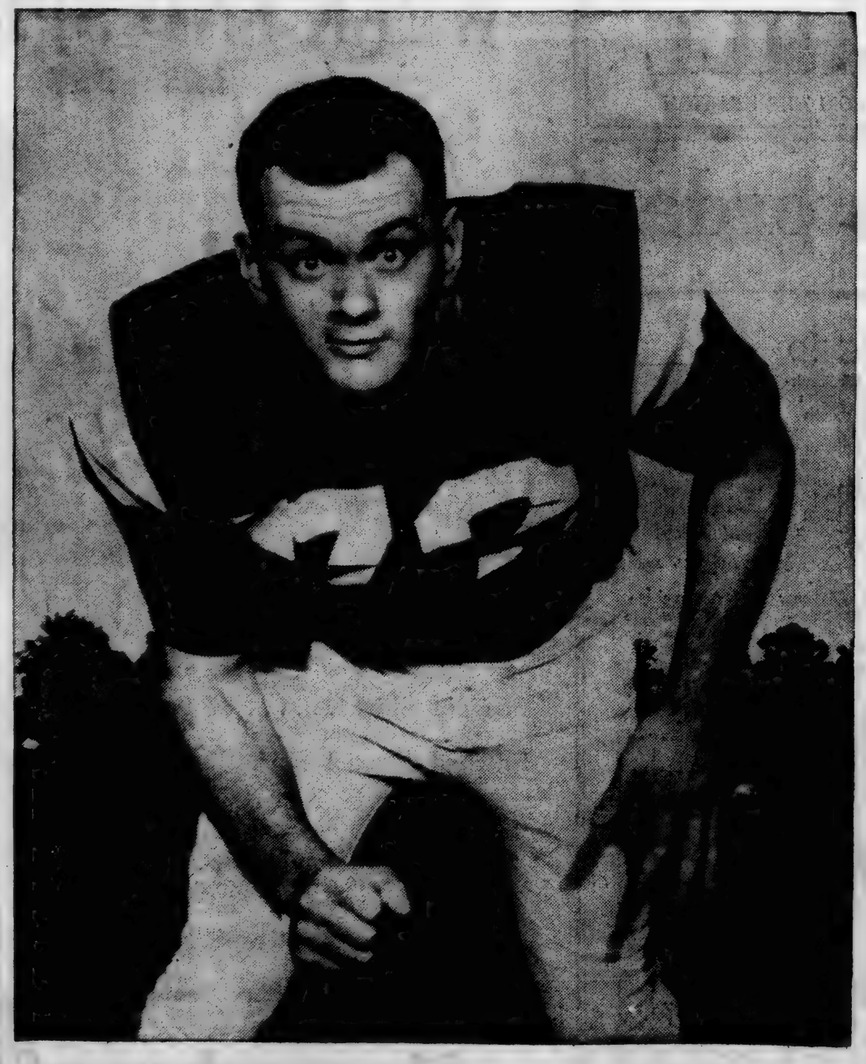
Saunders Midgette scored on the opening kickoff for the SAE's, and the Phi Delts quickly found themselves at a 6-0 disadvantage. However, Ed Pleasants tallied for the Phi Delts, Bob Reardon's safety play put Phi Delta out in front by 8-6, and Tommy Cummings chipped in with another six-pointer.

Before the half ended, SAE pulled within one point at 14-13, on John Brabson's touchdown and an extra point by Stuart Saunders. The Phi Delts came back to dominate the second half, as Jerry Adams and Semi Mintz went for TD's while the Phi Delta defense was holding the SAE's scoreless.

Winners Play Team From WGSTC Here

Phi Delta Theta's tag football team, champions of the Fraternity Blue Division and All-Campus finalists, will take on the All-Campus Champions from West Georgia State Teachers College this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Navy Field No. 3.

This game is believed to be the first athletic meeting between the two schools, or between representatives of the two schools. Another extramural game is scheduled between the All-Campus champions of the University of Virginia and UNC on Saturday morning, December 2.



THE BIG MOUNTAIN MAN — Jim Shumate, who has regained a starting tackle position in the UNC line, pulls something of a reverse on the expression, "Man Mountain." Jim comes from North Wilkesboro, high in the Carolina hills. This not to suggest that he is not a Man Moutain, either. He stands 6-2 and weighs 226, and can well qualify for such a name.

Legislature Censures Theater Segregation

Both Party Leaders Support Integration

Student Legislature condemned Chapel Hill theater segregation by a 23-10 vote Thursday night.

Bill supporters called for a positive vote as an individual stand by legislators and on the basis of recent campus polls which reputedly supported integration.

The resolution, which had been tabled last week, was taken off the table by an almost unanimous vote. Both University Party and Student Party chairmen and floor leaders favored reconsidering the bill.

"The non-integration of the theaters in Chapel Hill constitutes an injustice," according to the bill. It resolved that the theaters should "open their doors to all persons regardless of race, color or creed."

The resolution was supported by SP Floor Leader Dwight Wheless, legislators Norman Smith, Tim Tetlow, John Brent, John Randall, Speaker Hank Patterson and UP Chairman Bill Criswell.

Patterson agreed with bill supporters that legislators should vote on individual conviction, but also claimed that past campus polls proved that the majority of students favored theater desegregation.

Criswell, who voted to table the bill last week, said Legislature was "losing some face and taking strength away from its other bills" by passing judgment on theater segregation. But, Criswell said, he would vote for the bill.

Legislators Rufus Edminston, Larry McDevitt, Scott Summers and Richard Akers spoke against the passage of the bill.

McDevitt said many of his constituents felt that passage of the resolution would be "endorsing a body which is subject to much controversy today — the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

English Scientist Talks On Nerves

Dr. Richard D. Keynes of the Agricultural Research Council of Cambridge, England will be the guest speaker at the School of Medicine's Medical Science Lecture Series today at 11 a.m.

He will speak on "The Ionic Basis of Electrical Activity in Nerve, Muscle and Electric Organ." As usual, the lecture will be given in the Clinic Auditorium and all interested persons are invited to attend.

The series of lectures are sponsored by the School of Medicine and Medical Education for National Defense, a federal agency.

This is the third year of this lecture series, and it is attracting widespread attention in medical circles. For instance, this year speakers are coming in from England, Sweden and Denmark. Also, the series has attracted some of the major medical scientists from throughout the United States.

Student Draftees Subject To Same Rules As Others

Student draftees are subject to the same policies as others dropped from the University concerning refunds and scholastic credit, University Cashier M. E. Woodard said yesterday.

He said students who are drafted are granted a refund on tuition, room rent and fees on a pro-rata basis through the ninth week of the semester. After that time, no refunds will be made.

Woodard explained that draftees, as are all other students, are charged 10 per cent of their fees per week for each of the first nine weeks, and receive the appropriate refund if they withdraw during that time.

Dean of Student Affairs Charles Henderson said no scholastic credit will be granted unless the draftee has taken the final exam in the course. He pointed out that this is the same policy as applies to anyone withdrawing from the University.

German Military Seen As Source Of World Strife

The revived German militarism in the German Federal Republic has caused the main source of conflict between East and West.

This was the basis of a speech given Thursday night in Carroll Hall by Dr. Marian Dobrosielski, Polish Conselor to the Embassy of Poland in Washington.

Dr. Dobrosielski was a member of the Polish Army in France during World War II and received his Ph.D. in Philosophy from the University of Zurich in 1948.

He was a member of the Polish delegation to the United Nations General Assembly during 1952, 1953 and 1958. From 1953 to 1957 he was a member of the Philosophy Department of the University of Warsaw.

Dr. Dobrosielski said that Poland wants to show "the world the facts that might lead to a world war." He said that Polish foreign policy was not synonymous with anti-Germanism and there was no feeling of hatred or revenge toward Germany by the Polish government.

The speaker said that the Polish plan for de-atomization of Central Europe would have radically changed the situation there today. This plan, however, met with "strong resistance from the German Republic and, I am sorry to say, the United States."

Dr. Dobrosielski said that internal factors determine the Polish foreign policy of today. After the Polish state was reduced to rubble, Poland has chosen Socialism because "we felt that it was necessary."

The road of friendship and alliance with Soviet Russia was created, in the words of the speaker, "to protect us from the German ravages of World War II."

The main goal of the Polish foreign policy is to achieve peace for the world. "We know," Dr. Dobrosielski continued, "what war is and we want to protect the world

ADPi Sorority Takes Beat Dook Float Prize

Pi Kappa Phi Wins In Fraternity Group

By NEWT SMITH

The ADPi's huge red octopus "squeezing the hell out of Duke" won the prize for the best over all float in the 'Beat Dook' Parade yesterday.

The huge red and white float had a red and white octopus with 38 feet long tentacles squeezing girls dressed as Duke players.

The prize for the best fraternity float went to the Pi Kappa Phi's "Let's make a fifth out of Duke" float. The float had a large bottle of Kentucky Gentleman filled with Duke players who were hammered into the bottle by the giant UNC ram.

The Pi Beta Phi's won the sorority title with a big Carolina player devouring all but the feet of the Duke football team. The placard on the float read "We chews all but de-feat."

A large melting snowball won the best dormitory prize for Alexander dorm. The float suggested that Duke doesn't have a "snowball's chance in Hell".

The best women's dorm prize began Franklin Street was lined with students waiting on the wall on the campus side of Franklin St.

Kids, dogs and students alike rushed from their places on the wall into the street at the first sound of the band. As the floats came by the re-actions ranged from amazement at the themes to throaty laughs of delight. "I just don't believe it" someone said as a float with an outhouse pressed with business and a theme of "Let's eliminate Duke" passed by. Many of the entries chose this theme for their exhibits, and the crowd gradually grew tired of it. "Oh no, another toilet scene," someone said.

At South Building everyone was leaning out of windows from the painters and secretaries to the administration itself. The parade was somewhat weaker at this leg of the tour since some of floats had dropped out. Some of the floats were falling apart leaving debris on the street, but a handy Buildings and Grounds man was following the parade down the street with his little pick in hand.

The Lincoln High Band drew the biggest crowd following with their "Twist" routine. "They saved the best till last," said one boy. The crowd swarmed around the band whenever they stopped to play this number.

The DU float, too tall to pass under the wires at the Carolina Inn, was being dismantled when some kind spectator set fire to it. The blaze drew a large crowd and friendly police support until it burned itself out in something less than two minutes.

Buses To Outlying Dorms Suggested To Trustees By Student Commission

By BILL DOWELL

Busses from outlying dorms into the center of campus were suggested yesterday by a group of 9 UNC students headed by Bill Harris. The group which included Hank Patterson, Mary Townsend, Peter Thompson, Dwight Wheeles, Bull Willard, Tony Harrington, Inman Allen and Dennis Rash, delivered 11 resolutions concerning the University to a visiting committee of the Board of Trustees. The visiting committee met here yesterday, and will meet again today.

The recommendation concerning transportation to and from dormitories in far reaching areas was based on the fact that most students find it necessary to make at least four one-way trips from their dormitories to the center of campus.

The new dormitories now under construction will be at least a mile from the center of campus. Under the student plan busses would leave from the dormitories 15 to 20 minutes before the hour. Busses would leave the center of campus to return to the dormitories on the hour.

Harriss' committee also recommended higher standards in the admission requirements of the Freshman class. It said that drop-outs were resulting from the fact that un-qualified students are now allowed to enter the University. The drop-outs "both bog down instructors and make effective use of the physical plant impossible." The committee suggested that an educational "hierarchy" be established whereby a student, unqualified to attend the University could attend other state supported schools until he could meet UNC's requirements.

The committee asked that the University sponsor a College Day for Negro high schools so that qualified Negro students would at least be informed of the opportunities that UNC offers them. Under the present system any Negro high school student who wants to attend the University must take all of the initiative in finding requirements, etc.

Another suggestion was that foreign students not be charged out of state tuition. The committee said that the foreign students were an asset to the University. Moreover, most of them are on highly limited budgets and cannot afford any extra costs.

The committee suggested also that cafeteria facilities for the new dormitories now going up to be made big enough to accommodate the people who will live in the dormitories. Under the present plan a cafeteria is being built in the basement of one of the two new dorms now under construction. The two dorms combined will hold 700 students. Combined with Parker, Teague and Avery the cafeteria should serve 1400 people. The cafeteria now being planned will seat 200 people.

Students in the infirmary yesterday included Brenda Smith, Jessica Gore, Brenda Smith, John Eichberg, Lois Measamer, Robert Deal and Brenda Smith.

Ignoring A Problem

The New York Times reported recently that a British-made movie, "Victim," has been refused a seal of approval for showing in American theatres by the Production Code Administration. The film dealt with the subject of homosexuality.

The film, according to the report was denied approval on the ground that it was "thematically objectionable." The denial of the seal does shown. Other films, such as the Holnot mean that the movie cannot be lywood-made "The Moon Is Blue" and two English films "Room at the Top'' and "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning," have been shown in American theaters and have enjoyed good box-office response.

A spokesman for the Production Code Administration said that the film had been denied a seal on two counts—its "candid and clinical discussion of homosexuality" and its "overtly-expressed plea for social acceptance of the homosexual, to the extent that he be made socially acceptable."

In England, the film was granted approval, but asked that it carry the recommended "for adults only" label.

The M. P. A. A. decision was not unusual. The question of sexual deviation by the general American public has long been confined to behind-the-hand whispers, crude jokes and giggles. Operating under the supposition that "if you ignore it, it will go away," homosexuality and other forms of sexual abnormality are considered taboo as legitimate topics for mass media.

The film in question was not found to be obscene, but "candid and clinical." And certainly, the plea that a homosexual be made socially acceptable is not wholly foreign to reasonable consideration. Civilized man long ago gave up the practice of locking mentally ill persons in dark attics or basements.

Yet, when the mental illness takes the form of sexual abnormality, we closet the sufferer in a dark portion of our minds, refusing to deal with it is an illness.

Homosexuality is a grave social problem, one that must be met intelligently, not by smutty jokes, offhand references and hiding our heads.

Hard-core obscenity and pornography are one thing. "Candid and clinical discussion of homosexuality" is quite another. The sooner we realize this, the closer we are to solving one of our social problems.

Cuban Action Evaded

The Organization of American States has again postponed—which is to say, evaded—a decision to take any action against the Castro regime.

Many Americans will feel tempted to condemn the O. A. S. for this inactivity or be impatient with what seems a lack of courage or understanding. Such judgments oversimplify a complicated and delicate situation. The United States position is that Cuba has become the equivalent of a Communist satellite, that the intervention of international communism in the Western Hemisphere is intolerable, and that the combined activity of the Fidelistas and Communists throughout Latin America is dangerous to the area as well as to the United States.

This is not the way most of the Latin Americans view the problem, as Ambassador Adlai Stevenson pointed out after his trip to South America last June on behalf of President Kennedy. All the Latin-American Governments except Cuba's are anti-Communist and they do not want to see the Sino-Soviet bloc intervening in the hemisphere. However, many of the countries do not agree with our assessment of the Castro regime as Communist satellite. Many do not see the Communist menace in terms of the global cold war. Many Latin-American Governments are struggling with potentially revolutionary internal forces which they cannot risk stirring up. Throughout the whole area run the twin evils of xenophobic nationalism and anti-Yankeeism. These emotions paradoxically accompany friendship and respect among the governing classes for the United States.

Most important of all is the extremely sensitive problem of interventionism. What communism is to the United States intervention is to Latin America. It should finally be noted that many Latin Americans approve of the ideals of the Cuban revolution while disapproving of its methods and links to communism.

Reason

A news story in Thursday's Chapel Hill Weekly gave a rundown of the battle between the local theaters and the Citizens Committee for Open Movies:

"The Carolina Theater has integration limited to Negro UNC students who present identification cards at the box office. The Varsity does not admit American Negroes."

We've said it before and we'll say it again: Not only is the whole idea of segregation completely without reasonable basis, but the idiocy is compounded when Negroes are kept out because they are Americans.

We're surprised the American Legion doesn't protest. But we suppose they're too busy hunting Communists to worry about Americans who are being kicked in the teeth because they're black.

Ah, thank God for Chapel Hill, center of liberalism, intellectualism and reason.

Bobby Should Focus On Boston

If Attorney General Robert Kennedy can for a moment divert his attention from harassing businessmen, publicly lecturing private clubs, and threatening the South with more Federal marshalls, perhaps he can focus his errant gaze upon his birth place of Boston.

UPI story on October 13 informs us that "about 250 Negroes and whites fought a pitched battle for 25 minutes with knives, ice picks, broken bottles and clubs." The battle resulted in more than 20 persons being beaten or stabbed, and three policemen hurt. Twenty-five police cruisers and the riot squad were necessary to quell the riot; a half dozen ambulances carted away the injured.

Thus far, the crusading Attorney General has not threatened the citizens of Boston with an army of Federal marshalls, as he is frequently led to do when any racial disorder breaks out in the South. After his lavish expenditure of abuse upon the South, we hope that he will have a bit left for a kindly lecture to his kith and kin in Boston.

It is our hope that he will not forget to inform the natives there that they are rioting solely on the basis of race, and that they really must not do this, as they might hurt our "image abroad" and cause his clairvoyant brother a bit of inconvenient embarrassment.

BETTER STILL, perhaps Bobby could send his older brother on a triumphant tour of Boston, thereby inspiring the local gentry to forsake their rowdy pastimes as return payment for his visit. His saintly presence having prompted Southern merchants and airports to make racial "progress," we can only conject upon the "progress" that could be made in the enlightened surroundings of his old stomping grounds.

Actually, what our hero should deduct from this affair is that the civil rights missionaries have chosen the wrong fields upon which to disseminate their enlightening gospel. Should an ambition to survey the entire field of racial incidents ever seize upon the younger Kennedy, it will take more than his usual short-sightedness and hypocrisy to prevent him from learning that there exist no worse race relations in the nation than those abounding in the Northern metropolitan areas.

The little brother would likewise find that residential segregation in the North is more tightly protected than anything he will find in the South.

To make up for his shortcomings in the race field, however, Bobby could call upon two other distinguished racial experts, Soapy Williams and Adlai Stevenson, who have exhibited a profundity toward the Southern race problem. These gentlemen have led us to believe that they do, indeed, posses great abilities to expose and soothe ruffled race feelings.

IT WAS THESE abilities to deal with those of other races that prompted the Big Brother to place them in positions befitting their talents. Whereupon Soapy began lathering the beardless African natives with the sage doctrine of "Africa for Africans," thereby inciting the new nationals to enjoying hearty meals composed of their fellow nationals.

Meanwhile, back in the States, Adlai tiptoes around the debate societies of the U.N., assuring the darker colored intelligensia that they have nothing to fear from our foreign aid program; and that, if they will not embarrass him too often, he will see that they and their witch doctors are provided some nice new palaces to live in.

But, tragic though it be, it is entirely conceivable that Bobby will be unable to engage Soapy and Adlai at the present time. Soapy has just learned that there have erupted disturbances among two socio-economic groups (races) in Michigan, and he must hurry on home to ask Walter Reuther just how this is possible. The report may be a bit incomplete, however, as Walter is presently engaged in raising automobile prices, so that the American people may enjoy a higher standard of debt and inflation.

ADLAI, ON THE other hand, must hurry back to Chicago, deep in the heart of the "Land of Lincoln," to admonish the natives therein to please not have 201 more cases of "race-based violence," as this might cause the moralistic U.N. nationals to disrespect him. Adlai will probably pronounce the residents, whose governor he once was, as having "racist mentalities" for protesting these incidents. He still can not conceive of how Chicago could have 201 racial incidents in the last eight months. No doubt it was the result of Southern-oriented tension.

Alas, poor Bobby. A race riot in his own home town, and none of his eminent colleagues to advise him. O, what to do. Perhaps he could prepare another lecture exhorting the Metropolitan Club to place no restrictions upon its members, so that he can re-join.

Or, he could dispatch the 101st Airborne to South Carolina to search out information for the Civil Rights Commission.

Or, he might pass his leisure hours by filing another anti-trust suit.

The possibilities are unlimited.

Otelia And The Greeks

When I was a child and read Greek mythology and studied Greek literature in a cursory sort of way, I couldn't get excited over the Greek marathon runners. I failed to see how an entire country could get so thrilled and make such an ado over a person who ran himself to death just to be crowned by a wreath of wild olive leaves.

After auditing Dr. Charles Henderson's course in Greek literature I realized that winning the laurel wreath was a spiritual as well as a physical victory. The victor had put everything he had into winning the foot race and he was rewarded with the highest acclaim the people could confer.

It is beyond me, how anybody can call themselves educated, can graduate from college, and have never studied the Greek classics. It is like finishing high school and never having heard of Shakespeare. Mark Van Doren rates Shakespeare and the Greek tragedians in a class by themselves. They have never been equaled in any other literature.

It is sincerely to be hoped that this stepped-up interest in science—made necessary in this age of technology—will not prevent people from realizing the importance of a cultural education. In a dictatorship the people don't have to be informed, they are told what to do. In a democracy, says Mark Van Doren, it is necessary for everybody to know the same things, as the people rule in a democracy, and they have to make intelligent decisions. Therefore a classic education should be the foundation of any specialty which anyone should choose to pursue.

Saturday's game and victory over Tennessee was also a spiritual as well as a physical triumph, for Tennessee was no mean adversary, the game could have gone either way. So let's give all honor to the victorious marathon runners of the 20th century at UNC in Chapel Hill.

And let's not be guilty of ingratitude because the Tar Heels lost to a colossal LSU team the following Saturday. Their performance was commendable considering the odds that were against them.

We don't know what the score will be when the Tar Heels play Duke today, but let us remember the thrilling win over Tennessee. It is easy to exult in victory, but it takes character to stand up in defeat and keep a sense of perspective.

Down The Rabbit-Hole

Time Won't Make Tax Right

Governor Sanford has said that he doesn't think there will be any need for changes in North Carolina's tax structure for a generation.

He may well be right in that. And if he is right, it will mean that for this next generation all the people will have to pay a three per cent tax on the food they buy. That means the poor man will have to pay just as big a tax on his food as the rich man will have to pay. It will mean that the State of North Carolina will continue to cut three per cent off the food budgets of the very needy people who aren't able to buy enough food for their families.

If Governor Sanford is right, for a whole generation some luxuries will escape the duty of having to bear their fare share of the tax burden. Cigarettes and other tobacco products won't have any state luxury tax on them. Neither will soft drinks. Neither will candy and other such items.

If Governor Sanford is right in his belief that there won't be any need for tax changes for a whole generation, during that whole time, North Carolina will be on record as being a state which had rather tax the poor man's bread than the luxuries a man doesn't have to buy to live.

It wasn't right for the last legislature, on Governor Sanford's recommendation, to tax food before taxing luxuries. It won't be right to continue such a tax for a whole generation, either.

To the Editor:

I disagree with Peter Maupin. Alan Goldsmith's "Darky Ages" was not the "most blatantly bigoted, erroneous epistle of such absolute bunk" to appear in the DTH. Jim Clotfelter's "Attitudes" is without peers when it comes to blatantly bigoted, erroneous epistles of absolute bunk. Alan Goldsmith could write forever and never approach a half-hearted Clotfelter effort in this respect.

They're Disgusted With Game Apathy

To the Editor:

Frankly, we are disgusted with the general apathy that seemed to rule the student body at the L.S.U. game! Our team was down on the field, playing its guts out while the majority of the student body present at the game sat on its complacent, defeatist rear. There were some people who went to the game, cheered throughout the game, and stayed for the entire game.

However, the majority of the students went to the game with a defeatist attitude, thinking that it would be nice if we won. It is true that L.S.U. was fourth-ranked in the nation before the game (we don't know what their ranking is now), but still that is no reason why the football team did not receive the support it deserved from the students.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM played hard against a top-ranked team. The odds were against us from the start, but still the team deserved the support of the students. We see no reason whatever for the silence that seemed prevalent throughout most of the game. If we had started out by winning, we know that everyone would have yelled until they were hoarse. But we didn't start out winning. The team would have done much better IF the students had supported the team from the start.

Why must there be such apathy? There shouldn't be. We would like for anyone who can do so to give us a substantial reason to explain the silence that reigned during the game. Why do the students cheer madly only when the team is winning? Can't the students find the energy to cheer when the cheering is vital—when the team is behind?

A lot of people may think that we made asses of ourselves, both at the game and in this letter. Perhaps we did, but that's a matter of opinion. We are proud of the team and the effort they put forth against L.S.U. However, we are not so proud of the general apathy and lack of spirit—other than the bottled variety—of the students at the game. We feel that the absence of cheering isn't necessarily a sign of "coolness." At any rate, it is a biological fact that when an organism becomes too "cool," it ceases to function.

Poets, Poets, Poets

To the Editor:

The following untimely comment appeared in the Sunday Tar Heel, penned by that venerable self-appointed bard of UNC, Wade Wellman:

Graduate student Leonard Geddes has taken me to task for expressing, in verse form, a political-military theory that is gaining very wide credence in the Anglo-American press. Perhaps the view, as offered in the November 7 Tar Heel, is a little bit over his head. His jarringly unrhythmic parody reminds me of an old saying in Chapel Hill:

"There's no greater critic of your professional than your amateur."

I was both amused and displeased by this article—amused at Mr. Wellman's immature reaction to some well-timed constructive criticism, and displeased that he should direct his bold statements, however immaterial, at such an astute scholar as Leonard Geddes.

Mr. Geddes is attending the University on a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for graduate study in English, having excelled in undergraduate study at the University of British Columbia, and having taught at a prep school upon the completion of the work for his B.A. degree. His parody was an appropriate product of a mature critical mind, tempered by a sharp wit and a keen sense of humor.

Mr. Wellman's opening remarks are acceptable; his "old saying," however, is inexcusable. He has allowed his vanity to run away with him; the result is an ironical misquote in which the words "professional" and "amateur" are ineptly switched. I suggest that Mr. Wellman examine his own credentials before he takes it upon himself to so blandly belittle those of his peers.

—BOB ALLEN

Wellman Doesn't Claim To Be Bard

Dear Mr. Allen,

First off, I don't claim to be the bard of U.N.C.; second, I don't mind constructive criticism; and third, I don't feel that a scornful dismissal should be accepted as constructive merely because it is volunteered by a noteworthy scholar. However, if you want to aim your constructive shafts at something else, go to work on this. It's an early poem, dated March 21, 1958, and now sees the dark of ink (as Garry Blanchard puts it) for the first time.

FORGOTTEN LIBRARY

Shelves of books from decades past
Cling together in this room;
Dusty faded, as if cast
Deep into their ancient tomb.
Still the volumes hold a power
Which would make the boldest cower.

Once I looked into these pages,
Long disused for many years.
Words leaped at me from their cages,
Words which filled my eyes with tears—
Wisdom long forgotten, dust.
As ancient weapons, gone to rust.

from another conflict."

The best thing, according to Dobrosielski, for world peace is universal disarmament but he said, "the Polish are realists—they know that this cannot be achieved immediately."

"The armaments race is the biggest economic fallacy known to history." The speaker continued with the basis for this statement and promised that the Polish would use all of their efforts to help solve the problem.

Dr. Dobrosielski asked his audience to understand the problem of peaceful co-existence as a "means of elimination of war and a way of settling differences between nations." "Socialism and Capitalism should not affect interstate relations." "States with different political views can respect each other."

In conclusion, the speaker said that United States and Polish relations have improved greatly in the past years and trade with the United States has increased "and the Polish intend to increase it further."

"The main difference between Poland and the United States is the attitude toward Germany."

Dr. Dobrosielski then answered questions from the floor.

Y Bulletin Board Offers Many Sales

By JOHN MEDLIN

It's the campus flea market. Anything and everything for sale, and if what you want isn't on the Y-Court bulletin board, you put up your sign and ask for it.

People who have lost books, clothes, watches or jewelry can pin up their troubles at Y-Court too. Those who need money are selling anything from white German Shepherd puppies to flugelhorns—"kind of cheap. I need the money more than the horn."

They're even giving things away. "We need homes for three beautiful black kitty cats. Guaranteed to control mice. Very affectionate."

Well, what did you expect for free?

Spelunkers? Arise!

Extracurricular activities run wild at Y-Court. Not only is transportation needed for an amateur spelunking expedition to Virginia, a sky-diving fan is advertising for an airplane.

Rides are wanted and offered to anywhere from here to eternity. If you're in the mood, there is eager company ready to go with you on your trip to New York, Philadelphia, El Paso, Miami, Ocala, or Louisville, Ky. West Virginians and Georgians are dying to get away from Chapel Hill.

Somebody is "in desperate need of a ride to the Army-Navy game." Or, more convenient, you can give a boy a ride to the Durham Greek Orthodox church every Sunday.

Are you musically inclined?

"If you blow tenor, alto, baritone, flute, trombone, piano, guitar bass and/or vibes, and if you want to swing some, call . . ." There's an accordian for sale, piano and guitar lessons offered, or you can go check up on that flugelhorn.

It goes on and on. Every sign has some surprise. Gaily colored brushes and little cans of vivid red paint advertise the need for some house painters. A nice shady lot is just waiting for your trailer home. You are implored to buy a dictaphone, TV, deer rifle, or baby crib. If you really want to it up big, why don't you get the number off that sign with fishes and an octopus, who may or may not be included in the big 29-gallon aquarium for sale?

And if you're stuck for an original and out-of-this world date, why don't you check the "Grapes for Sale" sign? "You pick them, eat under vines."

Sounds bacchanalian.

REFUGEE'S DREAM

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (NUI) — The San Antonio symphony orchestra, ranked now as one of the 10 leading U.S. symphonies, started as the dream of a war refugee when he fled Europe in the 1930's.

Max Reiter toured unsuccessfully through the eastern United States, finding that area devoid of possibilities to build an orchestra. Too many well-known European musicians were already there.

Finally Reiter found reception in San Antonio, and began the task of building a successful symphony. He died in 1950.

LUCKY STRIKE presents: LUCKY PUFFERS "HOMECOMING WEEKEND"

WHAT DOES AN OLD GRAD LIKE BEST ABOUT HOMECOMING? Next to shaking hands, he likes reminiscing. About fraternity parties, girls, sorority parties, girls, off-campus parties, girls—and, of course, about how great cigarettes used to taste. Fortunately for you, Luckies still do taste great. (So great that college students smoke more of them than any other regular cigarette.) Which shows that the important things in college life stay the same. Parties. Girls. Luckies.

LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!

Ignoring A Problem

The New York Times reported recently that a British-made movie, "Victim," has been refused a seal of approval for showing in American theatres by the Production Code Administration. The film dealt with the subject of homosexuality.

The film, according to the report was denied approval on the ground that it was "thematically objectionable." The denial of the seal does shown. Other films, such as the Holnot mean that the movie cannot be lywood-made "The Moon Is Blue" and two English films "Room at the Top'' and "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning," have been shown in American theaters and have enjoyed good box-office response.

A spokesman for the Production Code Administration said that the film had been denied a seal on two counts—its "candid and clinical discussion of homosexuality" and its "overtly-expressed plea for social acceptance of the homosexual, to the extent that he be made socially acceptable."

In England, the film was granted approval, but asked that it carry the recommended "for adults only" label.

The M. P. A. A. decision was not unusual. The question of sexual deviation by the general American public has long been confined to behind-the-hand whispers, crude jokes and giggles. Operating under the supposition that "if you ignore it, it will go away," homosexuality and other forms of sexual abnormality are considered taboo as legitimate topics for mass media.

The film in question was not found to be obscene, but "candid and clinical." And certainly, the plea that a homosexual be made socially acceptable is not wholly foreign to reasonable consideration. Civilized man long ago gave up the practice of locking mentally ill persons in dark attics or basements.

Yet, when the mental illness takes the form of sexual abnormality, we closet the sufferer in a dark portion of our minds, refusing to deal with it is an illness.

Homosexuality is a grave social problem, one that must be met intelligently, not by smutty jokes, offhand references and hiding our heads.

Hard-core obscenity and pornography are one thing. "Candid and clinical discussion of homosexuality" is quite another. The sooner we realize this, the closer we are to solving one of our social problems.

Cuban Action Evaded

The Organization of American States has again postponed—which is to say, evaded—a decision to take any action against the Castro regime.

Many Americans will feel tempted to condemn the O. A. S. for this inactivity or be impatient with what seems a lack of courage or understanding. Such judgments oversimplify a complicated and delicate situation. The United States position is that Cuba has become the equivalent of a Communist satellite, that the intervention of international communism in the Western Hemisphere is intolerable, and that the combined activity of the Fidelistas and Communists throughout Latin America is dangerous to the area as well as to the United States.

This is not the way most of the Latin Americans view the problem, as Ambassador Adlai Stevenson pointed out after his trip to South America last June on behalf of President Kennedy. All the Latin-American Governments except Cuba's are anti-Communist and they do not want to see the Sino-Soviet bloc intervening in the hemisphere. However, many of the countries do not agree with our assessment of the Castro regime as Communist satellite. Many do not see the Communist menace in terms of the global cold war. Many Latin-American Governments are struggling with potentially revolutionary internal forces which they cannot risk stirring up. Throughout the whole area run the twin evils of xenophobic nationalism and anti-Yankeeism. These emotions paradoxically accompany friendship and respect among the governing classes for the United States.

Most important of all is the extremely sensitive problem of interventionism. What communism is to the United States intervention is to Latin America. It should finally be noted that many Latin Americans approve of the ideals of the Cuban revolution while disapproving of its methods and links to communism.

Reason

A news story in Thursday's Chapel Hill Weekly gave a rundown of the battle between the local theaters and the Citizens Committee for Open Movies:

"The Carolina Theater has integration limited to Negro UNC students who present identification cards at the box office. The Varsity does not admit American Negroes."

We've said it before and we'll say it again: Not only is the whole idea of segregation completely without reasonable basis, but the idiocy is compounded when Negroes are kept out because they are Americans.

We're surprised the American Legion doesn't protest. But we suppose they're too busy hunting Communists to worry about Americans who are being kicked in the teeth because they're black.

Ah, thank God for Chapel Hill, center of liberalism, intellectualism and reason.

Bobby Should Focus On Boston

If Attorney General Robert Kennedy can for a moment divert his attention from harassing businessmen, publicly lecturing private clubs, and threatening the South with more Federal marshalls, perhaps he can focus his errant gaze upon his birth place of Boston.

UPI story on October 13 informs us that "about 250 Negroes and whites fought a pitched battle for 25 minutes with knives, ice picks, broken bottles and clubs." The battle resulted in more than 20 persons being beaten or stabbed, and three policemen hurt. Twenty-five police cruisers and the riot squad were necessary to quell the riot; a half dozen ambulances carted away the injured.

Thus far, the crusading Attorney General has not threatened the citizens of Boston with an army of Federal marshalls, as he is frequently led to do when any racial disorder breaks out in the South. After his lavish expenditure of abuse upon the South, we hope that he will have a bit left for a kindly lecture to his kith and kin in Boston.

It is our hope that he will not forget to inform the natives there that they are rioting solely on the basis of race, and that they really must not do this, as they might hurt our "image abroad" and cause his clairvoyant brother a bit of inconvenient embarrassment.

BETTER STILL, perhaps Bobby could send his older brother on a triumphant tour of Boston, thereby inspiring the local gentry to forsake their rowdy pastimes as return payment for his visit. His saintly presence having prompted Southern merchants and airports to make racial "progress," we can only conject upon the "progress" that could be made in the enlightened surroundings of his old stomping grounds.

Actually, what our hero should deduct from this affair is that the civil rights missionaries have chosen the wrong fields upon which to disseminate their enlightening gospel. Should an ambition to survey the entire field of racial incidents ever seize upon the younger Kennedy, it will take more than his usual short-sightedness and hypocrisy to prevent him from learning that there exist no worse race relations in the nation than those abounding in the Northern metropolitan areas.

The little brother would likewise find that residential segregation in the North is more tightly protected than anything he will find in the South.

To make up for his shortcomings in the race field, however, Bobby could call upon two other distinguished racial experts, Soapy Williams and Adlai Stevenson, who have exhibited a profundity toward the Southern race problem. These gentlemen have led us to believe that they do, indeed, posses great abilities to expose and soothe ruffled race feelings.

IT WAS THESE abilities to deal with those of other races that prompted the Big Brother to place them in positions befitting their talents. Whereupon Soapy began lathering the beardless African natives with the sage doctrine of "Africa for Africans," thereby inciting the new nationals to enjoying hearty meals composed of their fellow nationals.

Meanwhile, back in the States, Adlai tiptoes around the debate societies of the U.N., assuring the darker colored intelligensia that they have nothing to fear from our foreign aid program; and that, if they will not embarrass him too often, he will see that they and their witch doctors are provided some nice new palaces to live in.

But, tragic though it be, it is entirely conceivable that Bobby will be unable to engage Soapy and Adlai at the present time. Soapy has just learned that there have erupted disturbances among two socio-economic groups (races) in Michigan, and he must hurry on home to ask Walter Reuther just how this is possible. The report may be a bit incomplete, however, as Walter is presently engaged in raising automobile prices, so that the American people may enjoy a higher standard of debt and inflation.

ADLAI, ON THE other hand, must hurry back to Chicago, deep in the heart of the "Land of Lincoln," to admonish the natives therein to please not have 201 more cases of "race-based violence," as this might cause the moralistic U.N. nationals to disrespect him. Adlai will probably pronounce the residents, whose governor he once was, as having "racist mentalities" for protesting these incidents. He still can not conceive of how Chicago could have 201 racial incidents in the last eight months. No doubt it was the result of Southern-oriented tension.

Alas, poor Bobby. A race riot in his own home town, and none of his eminent colleagues to advise him. O, what to do. Perhaps he could prepare another lecture exhorting the Metropolitan Club to place no restrictions upon its members, so that he can re-join.

Or, he could dispatch the 101st Airborne to South Carolina to search out information for the Civil Rights Commission.

Or, he might pass his leisure hours by filing another anti-trust suit.

The possibilities are unlimited.

Otelia And The Greeks

When I was a child and read Greek mythology and studied Greek literature in a cursory sort of way, I couldn't get excited over the Greek marathon runners. I failed to see how an entire country could get so thrilled and make such an ado over a person who ran himself to death just to be crowned by a wreath of wild olive leaves.

After auditing Dr. Charles Henderson's course in Greek literature I realized that winning the laurel wreath was a spiritual as well as a physical victory. The victor had put everything he had into winning the foot race and he was rewarded with the highest acclaim the people could confer.

It is beyond me, how anybody can call themselves educated, can graduate from college, and have never studied the Greek classics. It is like finishing high school and never having heard of Shakespeare. Mark Van Doren rates Shakespeare and the Greek tragedians in a class by themselves. They have never been equaled in any other literature.

It is sincerely to be hoped that this stepped-up interest in science—made necessary in this age of technology—will not prevent people from realizing the importance of a cultural education. In a dictatorship the people don't have to be informed, they are told what to do. In a democracy, says Mark Van Doren, it is necessary for everybody to know the same things, as the people rule in a democracy, and they have to make intelligent decisions. Therefore a classic education should be the foundation of any specialty which anyone should choose to pursue.

Saturday's game and victory over Tennessee was also a spiritual as well as a physical triumph, for Tennessee was no mean adversary, the game could have gone either way. So let's give all honor to the victorious marathon runners of the 20th century at UNC in Chapel Hill.

And let's not be guilty of ingratitude because the Tar Heels lost to a colossal LSU team the following Saturday. Their performance was commendable considering the odds that were against them.

We don't know what the score will be when the Tar Heels play Duke today, but let us remember the thrilling win over Tennessee. It is easy to exult in victory, but it takes character to stand up in defeat and keep a sense of perspective.

Down The Rabbit-Hole

Time Won't Make Tax Right

Governor Sanford has said that he doesn't think there will be any need for changes in North Carolina's tax structure for a generation.

He may well be right in that. And if he is right, it will mean that for this next generation all the people will have to pay a three per cent tax on the food they buy. That means the poor man will have to pay just as big a tax on his food as the rich man will have to pay. It will mean that the State of North Carolina will continue to cut three per cent off the food budgets of the very needy people who aren't able to buy enough food for their families.

If Governor Sanford is right, for a whole generation some luxuries will escape the duty of having to bear their fare share of the tax burden. Cigarettes and other tobacco products won't have any state luxury tax on them. Neither will soft drinks. Neither will candy and other such items.

If Governor Sanford is right in his belief that there won't be any need for tax changes for a whole generation, during that whole time, North Carolina will be on record as being a state which had rather tax the poor man's bread than the luxuries a man doesn't have to buy to live.

It wasn't right for the last legislature, on Governor Sanford's recommendation, to tax food before taxing luxuries. It won't be right to continue such a tax for a whole generation, either.

I disagree with Peter Maupin. Alan Goldsmith's "Darky Ages" was not the "most blatantly bigoted, erroneous epistle of such absolute bunk" to appear in the DTH. Jim Clotfelter's "Attitudes" is without peers when it comes to blatantly bigoted, erroneous epistles of absolute bunk. Alan Goldsmith could write forever and never approach a half-hearted Clotfelter effort in this respect.

They're Disgusted With Game Apathy

To the Editor:

Frankly, we are disgusted with the general apathy that seemed to rule the student body at the L.S.U. game! Our team was down on the field, playing its guts out while the majority of the student body present at the game sat on its complacent, defeatist rear. There were some people who went to the game, cheered throughout the game, and stayed for the entire game.

However, the majority of the students went to the game with a defeatist attitude, thinking that it would be nice if we won. It is true that L.S.U. was fourth-ranked in the nation before the game (we don't know what their ranking is now), but still that is no reason why the football team did not receive the support it deserved from the students.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM played hard against a top-ranked team. The odds were against us from the start, but still the team deserved the support of the students. We see no reason whatever for the silence that seemed prevalent throughout most of the game. If we had started out by winning, we know that everyone would have yelled until they were hoarse. But we didn't start out winning. The team would have done much better IF the students had supported the team from the start.

Why must there be such apathy? There shouldn't be. We would like for anyone who can do so to give us a substantial reason to explain the silence that reigned during the game. Why do the students cheer madly only when the team is winning? Can't the students find the energy to cheer when the cheering is vital—when the team is behind?

A lot of people may think that we made asses of ourselves, both at the game and in this letter. Perhaps we did, but that's a matter of opinion. We are proud of the team and the effort they put forth against L.S.U. However, we are not so proud of the general apathy and lack of spirit—other than the bottled variety—of the students at the game. We feel that the absence of cheering isn't necessarily a sign of "coolness." At any rate, it is a biological fact that when an organism becomes too "cool," it ceases to function.

Poets, Poets, Poets

To the Editor:

The following untimely comment appeared in the Sunday Tar Heel, penned by that venerable self-appointed bard of UNC, Wade Wellman:

Graduate student Leonard Geddes has taken me to task for expressing, in verse form, a political-military theory that is gaining very wide credence in the Anglo-American press. Perhaps the view, as offered in the November 7 Tar Heel, is a little bit over his head. His jarringly unrhythmic parody reminds me of an old saying in Chapel Hill:

"There's no greater critic of your professional than your amateur."

I was both amused and displeased by this article—amused at Mr. Wellman's immature reaction to some well-timed constructive criticism, and displeased that he should direct his bold statements, however immaterial, at such an astute scholar as Leonard Geddes.

Mr. Geddes is attending the University on a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for graduate study in English, having excelled in undergraduate study at the University of British Columbia, and having taught at a prep school upon the completion of the work for his B.A. degree. His parody was an appropriate product of a mature critical mind, tempered by a sharp wit and a keen sense of humor.

Mr. Wellman's opening remarks are acceptable; his "old saying," however, is inexcusable. He has allowed his vanity to run away with him; the result is an ironical misquote in which the words "professional" and "amateur" are ineptly switched. I suggest that Mr. Wellman examine his own credentials before he takes it upon himself to so blandly belittle those of his peers.

—BOB ALLEN

* * *

Wellman Doesn't Claim To Be Bard

Dear Mr. Allen,

First off, I don't claim to be the bard of U.N.C.; second, I don't mind constructive criticism; and third, I don't feel that a scornful dismissal should be accepted as constructive merely because it is volunteered by a noteworthy scholar. However, if you want to aim your constructive shafts at something else, go to work on this. It's an early poem, dated March 21, 1958, and now sees the dark of ink (as Garry Blanchard puts it) for the first time.

FORGOTTEN LIBRARY

Shelves of books from decades past
Cling together in this room;
Dusty faded, as if cast
Deep into their ancient tomb,
Still the volumes hold a power
Which would make the boldest cower.

Once I looked into these pages,
Long disused for many years.
Words leaped at me from their cages,
Words which filled my eyes with tears—
Wisdom long forgotten, dust,
As ancient weapons, gone to rust.

—WADE WELLMAN

The best thing, according to Dobrosielski, for world peace is universal disarmament but he said, "the Polish are realists—they know that this cannot be achieved immediately."

"The armaments race is the biggest economic fallacy known to history." The speaker continued with the basis for this statement and promised that the Polish would use all of their efforts to help solve the problem.

Dr. Dobrosielski asked his audience to understand the problem of peaceful co-existence as a "means of elimination of war and a way of settling differences between nations." "Socialism and Capitalism should not affect interstate relations." "States with different political views can respect each other."

In conclusion, the speaker said that United States and Polish relations have improved greatly in the past years and trade with the United States has increased "and the Polish intend to increase it further."

"The main difference between Poland and the United States is the attitude toward Germany."

Dr. Dobrosielski then answered questions from the floor.

Sophomore Class Cabinet Is Open

Sophomore Class President George Rosental yesterday said a meeting of the Sophomore Class Cabinet would be held from 4-5:30 Monday and Tuesday in Woodhouse Room, GM.

He invited all sophomores who were interested in interviews for the class cabinet to attend the meeting.

An open class meeting will also be held on Nov. 29, after Thanksgiving at 8 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

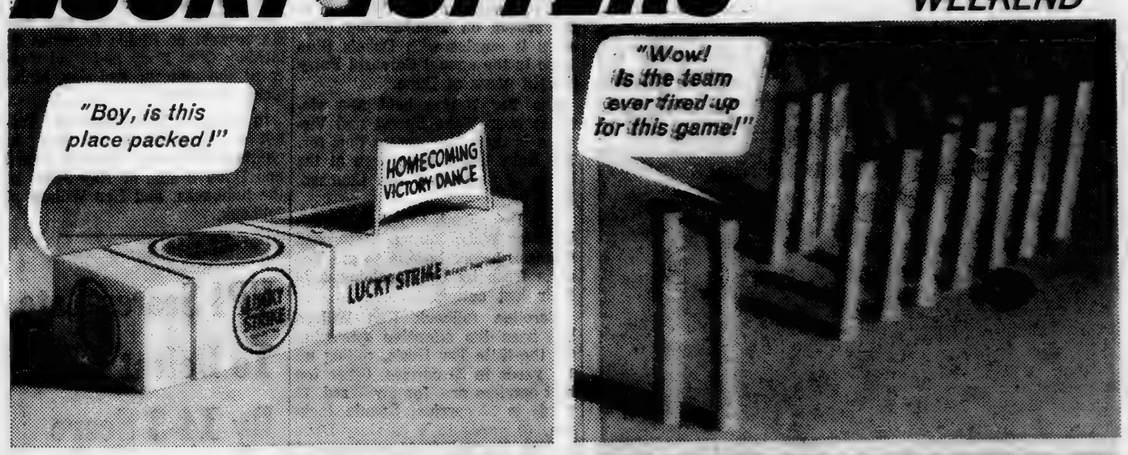
LUCKY STRIKE presents: LUCKY PUFFERS "HOMECOMING WEEKEND"



WHAT DOES AN OLD GRAD LIKE BEST ABOUT HOMECOMING? Next to shaking hands, he likes reminiscing. About fraternity parties, girls, sorority parties, girls, off-campus parties, girls—and, of course, about how great cigarettes used to taste. Fortunately for you, Luckies still do taste great. (So great that college students smoke more of them than any other regular cigarette.) Which shows that the important things in college life stay the same. Parties. Girls. Luckies.

After Two Years, Tar Heels Return To Duke

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Duke Blue Devils Trip Carolina Booters By 3-2

Win By Duke Would Clinch League Title

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Sports Editor

It has been two years since the North Carolina football team massed inside the giant horsehoe known as Duke Stadium. The last time was a Thanksgiving afternoon in 1959, when the Tar Heels were something like seven-point underdogs.

For two years, this Carolina team has lived in the glory of what happened that afternoon. On that day, the giant horseshoe groaned under a crushing Tar Heel attack which plowed under the Blue Devils by a 50-0 score. All over the nation television viewers watched a fired-up UNC team, with a new coach in Jim Hickey, blast the favored Dukes out of the range of even the telephoto cameras.

Today, another Carolina team plays at Duke Stadium. Again, the Duke team is a touchdown favorite. Again, the game will be shown across the country on television. However, a few things are different.

This Carolina team has some advantages over the 1959 team. It has more reason for incentive. The Atlantic Coast Conference championship could well depend on the outcome of this game.

Coach Bill Murray's Blue Devils stand to win the ACC title if they can trip up the Tar Heels. They have lost only one game in the conference while winning four.

The Tar Heels, too, have their eyes on a conference championship, which, if it came, would be the first one for UNC since the league was formed. The Chapel Hillians need to defeat Duke and one of their two remaining opponents, Wake Forest and Virginia, in order to qualify to wear the crown.

Duke will field a team today that is much like some of the fine Duke teams of the past. There is a stable full of fast and dangerous halfbacks, including such threats as Joel Arirngton, Mark Leggett, Dean Wright, Jack Wilson and Billy Futrell. There are a pair of talented quarterbacks in Walt Rappold and Gil Garner, and two hard running fullbacks in Dave Burch and John Tinnell.

The Duke line, which has been its strong point for many years, is not so easy to recognize. This year, Murray has depended on speed instead of size, and therefore the forward wall for the Blue Devils will average only 199 pounds, or some 10-15 pounds less than the UNC line.

The Duke offense, which utilized the swing end last year with All-American Tee Moorman, runs much the same patterns this year. The Devils rank second in the conference in passing with an average of 131.5 yards per game. Quarterback Rappold has connected on 35 of 64 throws, and Garner has an even better mark of 44 of 65, but on much shorter passes.

There has been no dearth of receivers for these bullets. End Pete Widener has the most catches, 12, but close on his heels are Stan Crisson and Wright with 11 and Leggett with 10.

The most successful receiver, however, has been a sophomore who was switched to the swing end position from the quarterback slot. He is Jay Wilkinson, who has caught seven aerials for 147 yards, and most of these catches have been in the last three games. Wilkinson is also a defensive safetyman, and a dangerous punt returner wit ha total of 270 yards on 16 runbacks.

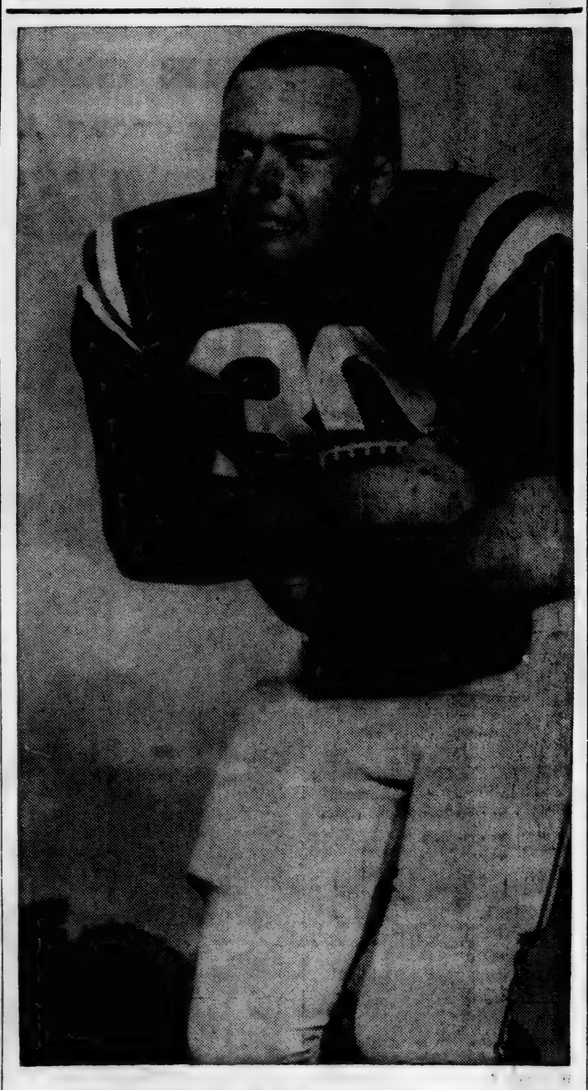
Leggett, who has carried the ball more than anyone else, has 261 yards, enough to rank him first on the Duke team and sixth in the ACC. Fullback Burch is second with 208 yards and a 4.95 average. Wright is the third leading rusher with 166 yards.

The leaders in the Duke line are center Paul Bengel, guards Jean Berry and Johnny Markas, tackles Art Gregory and Dick Havens, and ends Widener, Zo Potts, Dave Unser, and Wilkinson.

The Blue Devils have a 5-3 record thus far, with wins over South Carolina, Virginia, Wake Forest, N. C. State and Navy, and losses to Clemson, Georgia Tech and Michigan. Their only remaining game will be at Notre Dame next week.

North Carolina, which is still looking for its fifth win after a 30-0 loss to LSU last week, will be going with practically the same lineup that has started in recent games. In one major change, sophomore Bob Lacey, who has been Lquarterback Ray Farris' favorite pass receiver, has moved up to the number one spot on the right side of the line, replacing injured Steve Yates.

FRESHMAN SIGNAL CALLERS — Ron Tuthill, kneeling, and Gary Black have been the top two quarterbacks this season for Coach George Barclay's UNC freshman team.



BEST RUSHING MARK — Fullback Dave (Red) Burch has the best rushing mark of any Duke back. He has carried the ball 42 times for 208 total yards and an average of almost 5 yards per carry. Burch will be in the starting lineup for the Blue Devils today when they take on UNC in Duke Stadium.

Thanksgiving Tilt Ends Frosh Season

By ED DUPREE

UNC's freshman football team will be gunning for its third win of the season on Thanksgiving Day, when it tangles with Duke's Blue Imps in the annual Cerebral Palsy Benefit game at Duke.

The Tar Babies hold 20-0 victories over Wake Forest and Virginia in their four games thus far. Tar Baby losses have been at the hands of State, 7-6, and Clemson, 30-27.

The Duke frosh rolled up victories over Wake Forest, State, and Clemson before bowing to the Virginia frosh by two touchdowns in their last outing.

Carolina fullback Ken Willard has been the offensive sparkplug for the little Tar Heels, rolling up 155 yards in 33 carries. Other top ball carriers are Tommy Ward, 72 yards in 17 carries; Ronnie Jackson, 60 yards in 8 carries; Dave Braine, 50 yards in 15 carries; and Ron Tuthill, 50 yards in 29 carries.

Quarterback Gary Black leads the team's passers with 22 completions in 47 attempts for 298 yards and two touchdowns. Jim Gallagher has tossed for 125 yards on 5 passes and 12 attempts.

On the other end of the passes, Ron Jackson and Frank Gallagher have been the big men. Jackson has hauled in 5 passes for 67 yards, while Gallagher has caught 5 for 65 yards.

The Clemson game, in which UNC completed 11 of 29 passes is not included, as individual statistics were unavailable. However, in the 27-30 loss, Jim Gallagher connected with Jackson for a 74-yard touchdown pass. The Carolina rushing game was stopped cold, as the Tars found the big Tiger line hard to handle.

Jackson, the speedy halfback, leads the team in scoring with 18 points. Ron Tuthill and Frank Gallagher have scored 12 each and extra point kicker Dave Braine has 7. Jim Gallagher, Hank Barden, Ken Willard, and Johnny Payne close out the scoring with 6 points each.

Some of the big names for the Blue Imps are quarterback Mark Caldwell, halfbacks Biff Bracy, Sonny Odom and Doug Clifford, and fullbacks Will Siler and Alex Bell.

The Starting line for Coach George Barclay's Tar Babies should find Frank Gallagher and Christian Hanburger at the ends; John Hill or Fred Smith and Bob Starczewski or Richie Gonzales at tackles; Clint Eudy and Paul Fedor at the guards; and Jay Malobicky at center.

In the backfield either Ron Tuthill or Gary Black will start at quarterback, with Tommy Ward and Dave Braine or Ray Jones at the halfbacks, and Ken Willard at fullback.

VPI Scores Late To Defeat GW By 14-3 Score

BLACKSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Virginia Tech scored two fourth-period touchdowns Friday, one on a fake field goal attempt, to beat George Washington, 14-3.

The Gobblers, victorious on their home field over GW for the first time in 54 years, capitalized on the Colonials' mistakes and a 61-yard run by halfback Buddy Perry to overcome a three-point deficit that had stood since the early moments of the second quarter.

Perry set up the first touchdown when he intercepted a long pass from George Washington quarterback Frank Pazzaglia. One play later, Perry dashed 61 yards to the Colonials two. Fullback Gerald Bobbitte lugged it over.

The touchdown on the faked field goal try came with only 14 seconds showing on the clock.

Halfback Mike Cahill knelt to hold for the apparent kick by Aster Sizemore. He took the snap, jumped to his feet and fired to end Leon Tomblin alone in the end zone.

Sizemore kicked both extra points.

GW scored its field goal early in the second period when halfback Warren Corbin hit from 25 yards away. The three-pointer was set up by a 26-yard breakaway run by halfback Dick Drummond.

Carolina Ends Year With 8-4 Win Mark

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The Duke University soccer team, proving the spoilers for the second straight year, clinched second place in the ACC yesterday afternoon by edging Carolina in a 3-2 thriller.

The Blue Devils, never behind in the scoring column, drew first blood when left wing Ron Vigil took Hobey Hyde's lead pass and beat Carolina goalie Larry Steele with a drive from 10 yards out. The goal came at the eight-minute mark of the third period. The Tar Heels came right back to knot the score at 1-1, as big Bill Snyder, on a free kick from 25 yards out, drilled a sizzler that Duke goalie Terry Hough was unable to handle. The ball squirted out of Hough's arms and Carolina wingman Peter Blake was right there to tip it in.

The two teams had played a scoreless first half, with Duke dominating the play and keeping Carolina bottled up in its own territory. The Blue Devils' quick line, led by Dean Ross and sophomore speedster Alex Epanchin, continually kept the pressure on the Tar Heel defense, and Steele was called upon to make some brilliant saves prior to halftime.

At the outset of the fourth quarter, Duke struck quickly and effectively. Denied a score on numerous occasions by the tenacious Steele, the Devils broke the tie by scoring two goals within four minutes. Just two minutes after play resumed, Fred Beguin, a tower on defense all afternoon, made his presence felt offensively with a drive from 15 yards. The ball was fumbled by Steele and bounced crazily off halfback Dick Bordogna into the Carolina net. This made it 2-1 and set the stage for what proved to be the winning goal. With 5 minutes gone in the final period, Epanchin, who simply outruns the ball, drove in from his the Duke goal. This brought the Steele and completely taking him out of the play. The ball got by Steele and Virgil was again the opportunist as he flipped it into the open net.

This final marker seemed to have a demoralizing effect on Coach Marvin Allen's booters, but they came to life once again, with eight minutes left in the game. Frank Lankford, on a solo rush from his center forward position, drove a line shot from 10 yards out that completely befuddled Hough in the Duke goa l.This brought the crowd to life, and the Tar Heels, remembering last year's overtime contest, pressed in for the goal that would tie the game.

But it was not to be, as Hough was equal to the task, turning back more shots in the final five minutes as he had in the entire game previously.

Carolina finished with an 8-4 record. Duke was 7-3, but had the better conference margin—4-1 to the Tar Heels' 2-2.

Adenauer Visits JFK

BONN—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, beginning his fourth term at 85 years of age, rested Saturday before flying to Washington for critical Berlin talks with President Kennedy.

Adenauer's foreign minister, Gerhard Schroeder, spent the day in West Berlin in last minute consultation with city leaders and with Kennedy's personal representative, retired Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

Defense Minister Franz-Josef Strauss returned from Oslo, where he was the target of noisy anti-German demonstrations.

Congo Flight Missing

LEOPOLDVILLE—An Italian air force C119 Flying Boxcar with eight crewmen and two United Nations officials aboard was reported missing Saturday over The Congo on a flight from Pisa, Italy to Leopoldville.

A U.N. spokesman said the plane which left Entebbe, Uganda, Friday, had been scheduled to bypass Kiv Province where the rebellious troops who killed 13 Italian airmen a week ago Saturday threatened to shoot down any U.N. or Air Congo plane they saw.

Soviets Claim Rocket Lead

MOSCOW—The Soviets Saturday boasted of what they termed the "unquestionable" superiority of their arsenal of nuclear warheads and rockets. They said Russia had a far greater stockpile of nuclear bombs than the United States ever dreamed.

They claimed to have anti-missile missiles, nuclear warheads of up to 100 megatons, and the capability of delivering "any kind of charges" anywhere in the world.

U Of Toronto Visit Finds NC 'Liberal'

(Editor's Note: The following excerpts were taken from an article, "Tarheel Weekend—Fun and Conference," in the VARSITY, newspaper of the University of Toronto Canada. It relates the reactions of 24 U of T students who visited UNC last weekend on the third annual Exchange Program.)

"The first item on our agenda was a faculty reception at the Chancellor's beautifully pillared home . . . Following this we dined at the local Rathskeller and returned to prepare ourselves for the big Germans Concert . . .

Saturday, "A seminar on segregation-integration was held for the entire morning under the direction of History Prof. William Geer and junior Walter Dellinger."

"Avant Garde"

"Carolina is the avant garde of integration in the South and because of this we received an optimistic view of the situation. Of the 25 Carolina students only two expressed any misgivings about integration. It was indicative of the liberal atmosphere of the University that slightly segregationists' views were expressed not as convictions but almost as apologies.

"It was apparent that the main stumbling blocks in the way of southern personal acceptance of integration were twofold. The first of these is the sometime bestial mien of downtrodden negro (sic) communities, although in this regard the Tarheel students were quick to admit that the negroes' state had been and was the responsibility of the whites.

Double Image

"The second and perhaps more influential psychological barrier is the double image the Southern white has of the negro. There is in their subconscious mind the 'good negro' who has been his cheerful manservant for centuries, accepting his lot more or less gratefully and according to the segregationists, 'knows his place.'

"Conflicting with this is the 'pushy' negro who has been imbued with liberal thoughts and is wholly dissatisfied with his station. This negro is the agitator who misses no opportunity to assert his constitutional equality in the search for social equality and acceptance.

"Rabid Integrationists"

"With the exception of a more liberal few, who were incidentally more rabid integrationists than most of the Toronto students, the Tarheels resented the inflammed situation in the south and the speed with which this change is being forced on them.

"There was a mutual lamentation over the lack of concrete and worthwhile motivation in the students today."

Dook 'Cremated' By Students In Mock Ceremony

By CHUCK MOONEY

Carolina cheerleaders and 500 students "cremated" Dook Friday night after holding a wake, complete with sermon and funeral chant over the body.

They packed the stands at Emerson field at 8 p.m. and held a pep rally, while a bonfire blazed with the Alexander Dorm "Snowball" float decorations on top of it.

The crowd, composed mostly of boys with a sprinkling of coeds, left the field to shouts of "Let's march on the town" at 8:15.

Clad in black robes and hoods, four pallbearers carried the dark blue casket with a green and white wreath on top down the middle of Raleigh and Franklin Streets, accompanied by two torchbearers—one in front and one behind.

Cheerleaders

The band followed in a truck, playing Carolina "fight" songs and from their jeep the cheerleaders led the crowd's enthusiastic cheers.

The funeral procession wound up at the Carolina Theater as amazed townspeople watched. The football team joined the rally there.

The cheerleaders led the crowd, which was watching from the tops of trees, lamp-posts, cars and on the sidewalks and street in a funeral chant.

A black-robed pallbearer mounted the light blue football team bus and preached a comic sermon.

"100 Per Cent"

Football Co-Captains Jim LeCompte and Bob Elliott promised a "100 per cent team effort" on Saturday and the "ACC Championship."

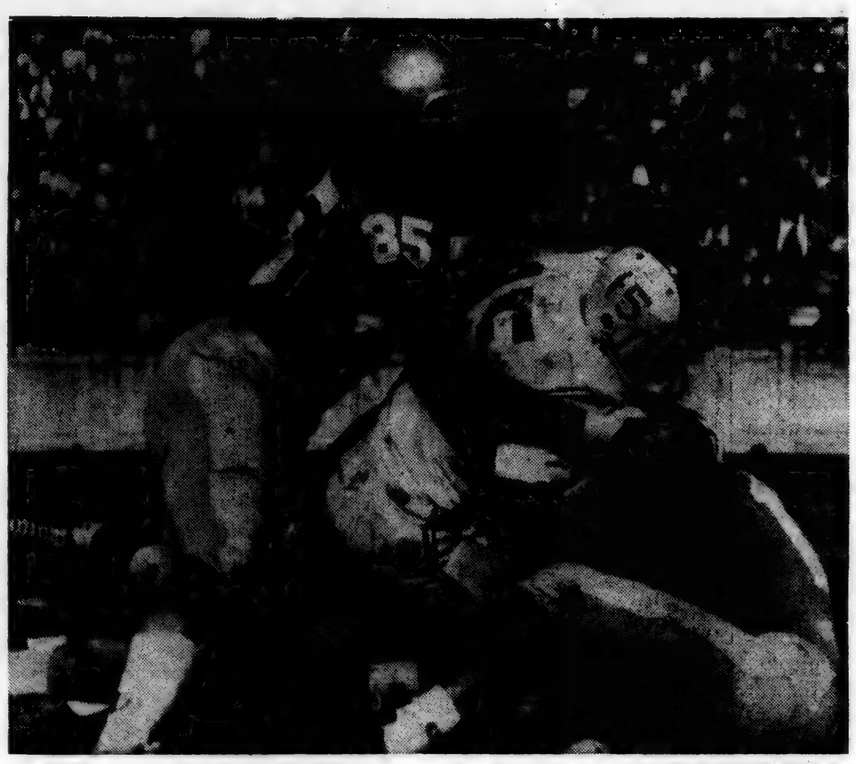
The wake broke up at 8:55 p.m. and filtered back to Emerson field where "Dook's body" was thrown on the bonfire. The crowd cheered as it burned. The team watched. The rally ended at about 9:15 p.m.

The Chapel Hill police did not interfere but stayed in the fringes of the crowd and watched during the entire rally.

There was no evidence of violence or vandalism.

Correction

Alpha Delta Pi sorority was mistakenly identified as Alpha Delta Phi in yesterday's DTH. In addition, the slogan on the ADPi Beat Dook float was not "Squeeze the hell out of Dook," but "Squeeze the Devil Out of Dook." The DTH regrets these errors.



WILKINSON STOPPED—Duke end Jay Wilkinson ,the nation's leader in punt returns, had a rough day in running them back against the Tar Heels yesterday. Here he is shown being tackled by Carolina end Bob Lacey and safetyman Junior Edge.

A Talk With Ray Farris

Ray Farris Jr. was a star quarterback at Myers Park High School in Charlotte, played on the freshman football team at the University, was UNC's number two quarterback in his sophomore year, became number one quarterback during his junior season, and is now number one quarterback again. He is 21, president of the University's senior class, and chaplain of his fraternity.

Saturday he will reach the climax of his football career in the UNC-Duke game.

By J. A. C. DUNN
In The Chapel Hill Weekly

Ray Simpson Farris is not a Football Player in the usual sense of the word. He is just Ray Farris. He does not go through life under a set of shoulder pads, looking out at the world from inside a helmet. He just lives, with a tremendous awareness and concern of and for himself and other people, and why they do what they do. Sometimes he happens to have a football in his hands.

There is a lot about living that he doesn't understand, including football living. But there is a lot that he does understand, too.

He sat in a booth in the Carolina Coffee Shop and carefully swirled a spoon through the coffee in his cup with a tough, broad, but immaculate hand. Even when he isn't wearing shoulder pads, he looks as if he is.

"I guess you could say football has been my life," he said. "But it isn't everything. It's a game. My father was a football player too, you know. He was a quarterback here at Carolina, and he made several All-America teams. Before I was born he bought a football and wore it out so that I couldn't use it when I was born. He started teaching me football before I was old enough to know what it was all about. He bought these football games, there was an electric football game, and we used to sit there and play all day long. He'd teach me to analyze plays, and when to pass, what zone to pass in, when not to pass, when to run the ball and everything, always as a quarterback. Sometimes I've wished I played another position.

"When I was in the sixth grade I knew the rudiments of punting as well as I know them now. When I was sixteen or seventeen my father and I couldn't just pass any more because he was always instructing me. It wasn't play. You couldn't really say it was work, but sort of. I was at the age when I didn't like to be told how to do things.

"I've been playing organized football since I was in the sixth grade. I broke my leg playing sandlot football and I couldn't play in the eighth grade, but I played in the ninth. My father isn't living now. Nor is my mother. He saw me play about four games in senior high school, that's as much as he ever saw me play. That was the first time I ever achieved anything, I guess. I think he would have been surprised to see me make it at Carolina—I mean make the football team, not make it to college. I was skinny, little . . .

"He taught me to play basketball and baseball too.

"I think football is a great game. It's been the most important thing in my life—aside from my God and my family. It teaches you to give and take, and you meet a great cross-section of people—good football players and bad football players, boys with high moral standards and boys who don't have high standards, extroverts and introverts. All kinds of people. I guess I'm like just about any coach: what counts is whether you do your part.

"My father cautioned me very well about having all the glory of being a football player in a college, and then coming out and facing reality. I doubt very seriously if I'll play pro ball. For one thing I don't have any desire to. I just don't want to. And I haven't had any opportunities to, either. Needless to say, I don't think I'm that good a football player.

"You're always learning lessons from football. Did you see the Tennessee game? Did you see the first half? That was a good first half. But I think we could have beaten Miami, and I think we could have beaten Clemson. I don't think it's inconceivable that we could have beaten LSU. I get very philosophical about it. I guess I'm in kind of a melancholy mood today. I'm not sick about losing the LSU game, or anything, I'm just disappointed. We came out there and we were flat. We just couldn't get together. Subconsciously we wanted to play, but we just couldn't get going. After we did get going we enjoyed it, but I think we were beaten back in the locker room without even knowing it. The gears just wouldn't mesh. I don't know why. Sure,

'Beggar's Opera' Performance Held Over Tonight & Tuesday

The first holdover performance of "The Beggar's Opera" will be given today at 2:30 p.m. in the Playmakers Theatre.

The final performance of the musical will be given Tuesday evening at 8:30. Tickets are still available for both holdover performances, according to John W. Parker, Playmakers business manager.

The Daily Tar Heel reviewer said The Carolina Playmakers' second production of the season "boasts a very strong cast—a cast whose success is assured by powerful direction, lighting, sets, and costuming: a combination that should draw capacity crowds for the remainder of the play's . . . run."

Tickets for "The Beggar's Opera" are available at the Playmakers Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall (next to the Scuttlebutt), and at Ledbetter-Pickard for $2.00 each. The Playmakers Theatre box office will open at 1:00 p.m. today and 7:00 p.m. Tuesday when any remaining tickets for the performances will go on sale.

Victory Gives Duke Bell, Championship

By Harry W. Lloyd
DTH Sports Editor

The Victory Bell is gone from Chapel Hill.

This sobering thought became a reality which struck deep into the hearts of Carolina football followers when only two seconds remained in the tense 60 minute struggle with hated archrival Duke yesterday in Duke Stadium.

The Blue Devils thwarted a Tar Heel attempt to avert a tie game and parried it into an eleventh-hour field goal that handed Jim Hickey's legion a 6-3 loss.

Forty-one thousand watched from the stands, and millions more were connected by the television cable to the classic struggle on the Duke campus, where Carolina was looking for its third consecutive victory over Duke and a possible Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

For the first time in 30 years in this ancient rivalry, not a touchdown was scored.

North Carolina, rated as a 7-point underdog all week, moved ahead in the contest with three minutes, 40 seconds remaining in the first half as fullback Bob Elliott kicked a field goal from the 19-yard line.

For a long time, it appeared that this tense defensive struggle might end in a 3-0 score.

In the third quarter, the Carolina second team came up with one of football's most dramatic displays, the goal line stand. The Duke team had driven swiftly to the five-yard line for a first down. If the field had been measured in millimeters, then the Blue Devils would have had a fourth down on the one millimeter line. A score seemed imminent, but the husky UNC defenders, led by Tony Hennessey and Vic Esposito in the middle of the line and Joe Davies backing them up, threw Duke ball carrier Dave Burch for a loss on his burst into the middle.

The Carolina defense almost stopped a grinding Duke attack later in the final period. Quarterback Walt Rappold directed the white-shirted Devils to five consecutive first downs on a drive from his own 19 to the Carolina 11-yard line.

In three plays, Duke backs totalled a minus-three yards. On the final down, Coach Bill Murray sent in Bill Reynolds, who is listed as a halfback but whose chores

Dr. Fred Ellis, authority on alcoholic research, will speak on "Pharmacological Findings," the first in a series on "Alcoholism: New Light on an Old Subject," today at 5:45 p.m. at the Binkley Memorial Baptist Church, 507 E. Franklin Street.

Campus Seens And Herds

Twas the day of the Dook game and all over the campus not a student was stirring . . . tire tracks leading from the DKE house across the sidewalk . . . the only remains of a float in front of the SPE house was a strip of toilet paper and a beer can . . . two students washing a car in the shelter of Joyner dorm . . . a yellow police ticket torn in half blowing down an almost deserted Franklin street . . . a 9-year-old boy with hood and sweater sitting on the KKG porch playing with a football . . . a student carrying a load of books and whistling "Gypsy Rover" . . . people wondering what the Chinese letters on the front of the University bank mean . . .

A strip of toilet paper in a tree beside the Carolina Theatre windblown into a huge "C" . . . Carr and Spencer dorms competing for the moldiest ivy on campus . . . and the ATO's with the greenest ivy left before winter . . . giggling groups of high school students, somehow looking a lot younger and sillier than we remember ourselves as being . . . and nary a pleated skirt or weejuns or blue jeans or beards or blazers or tennis shoes was to be seen . . .

Segregationists . . .

At last Thursday's session of Student Legislature, representative Larry McDevitt took a stand against the passage of the bill condemning theater segregation on the grounds that many of his constituents felt passing the resolution would be "endorsing a body which is subject to much controversy today—the National Asociation for the Advancement of Colored People."

While we do not take issue with McDevitt or his constituents on the point that the NAACP is controversial, we do feel that this is a poor reason for opposing the resolution. If McDevitt's constituents had said they were segregationists, and didn't want to see theaters integrated—which we imagine is the real reason—then the opposition would at least have made sense.

To oppose an action simply because it may have controversial overtones is, to begin with, a pitifully weak excuse for opposing action.

Also, the local picketing group is independent and has no formal affiliations with the NAACP, CORE, or any other national civil rights group. Most of the pressure to integrate has come from the local group. Supporting theater integration would hardly be a vote in support of the NAACP, or any group other than the Citizens's Committee for Open Movies. That committee, as a matter of fact, has been careful to keep its leadership local to avoid any allegations that the integration move is the work of "troublesome outsiders."

Even if the theater integration move actually were sponsored primarily by the NAACP, this is certainly no reason to oppose it. The question at issue was theater integration, not the groups which sponsored it.

Those who are fighting integration here are grasping at straws upon which to base an argument. With the exception of a few outspoken individuals, no segregationists in the student body here are willing to admit that their opposition is based on simple prejudice, nothing more nor less. Sincere moderates are few and far between. Too often of late, segregationists have cloaked their real motives under a label of "moderation." Honest moderation is desirable in a question as potentially explosive as integration. But it should not be used as an excuse behind which are conjured empty arguments such as "endorsing the NAACP is bad."

The Albanian Split

It is premature to say that the ice-cap of world communism is cracking apart, but at least a deep crevasse has appeared. In laying impious hands on the corpse of Stalin, Mr. Khrushchev may have enhanced his power at home. But the evidence accumulates that he has weakened his hold on the larger Communist world by spreading confusion and dismay among his orthodox comrades.

In Albania, ironically, one of the most impeccably orthodox of Communist leaders may be leading the way to a dispersion of power that the West will welcome. There is almost a note of pathos in the full-dress Nov. 7 speech by Enver Hoxha, Albania's Communist chieftain. After a tiresome liturgy in which Comrade Hoxha professes his blind loyalty to Stalinist dogma, this passage occurs:

> We cannot but state that in effect Mr. Khrushchev, in speaking of the "crimes" committed in the Stalin era, is doing a very grave disservice to the Soviet Union and gladdens only the imperialists and all enemies of communism . . .
> How can we qualify this frantic zeal to obscure a whole glorious epoch, the epoch of the building of socialism in the U. S. S. R., to discredit the glory of the Soviet Union in the eyes of the whole world by presenting it as a country where terror and murder held sway, just as the reactionary bourgeois press had described and still describes it

Comrade Hoxha's logic is unassailable. Yet this Albanian insurgent is also caught in the nets of dialectical contradictions. What enables Hoxha to dissent with relative impunity is, among other things, his country's lack of a common border with any Soviet satellite. Hoxha is "protected" by Yugoslavia, the country that surrounds Albania and which is also at odds with Communist orthodoxy. How galling it must be to the Albanians to find their safety enhanced by the "gang of renegades" in Belgrade!!

Far more important, however, are Albania's links with Red China. As Edward Crankshaw points out in the London Observer, the voice may be that of Hoxha but the words are those of Mao Tse-tung. In the Delphic sign-language of communism, it is understood that when Mr. Khrushchev upbraids Albanians he is attacking Red China and when Peking defends Comrade Hoxha the real target is Moscow.

All this is assuredly confusing and demoralizing to those who turn to communism precisely because of its appeal of monolithic unity. Significantly, in Italy, a member of the Communist Party directorate has candidly confessed that the "fictitious unanimity" of Communist documents "does not correspond to a real unity." Giorgio Amendola went on to urge a "polycentric system" which would be based on many centers of communism.

Liberals & Bob Jones Students:

'We Can't Possibly Lose A War'

Several self-professed Carolina liberals and Bob Jones College students have stated that they firmly believe that America CANNOT lose the next war. When I ask them why, the religious ones reply that God and History are on our side. The intellectuals argue that since violence never settles anything, no peaceful people can be conquered by violent means. We are peaceful people; therefore, we cannot be conquered by violence. And the radicals change the subject by declaring the equality of all men.

Let us take an objective look at their arguments. In a few million years, the geography of the earth will have changed enough so that America as we know it will no longer exist. England may become completely submerged or become but a peninsula of Europe. Although telepathy, levitation, precogcognition, telekinesis, and other such psychic phenomena are beginning to be studied, and may point the way to the discovery of life after death and therefore of a God, we at present have no proof of the existence of a God. A leading astronomer and science fiction writer, Fred Hoyle, has postulated that the universe has no beginning in either time or space. He has supported his theory with some remarkably powerful and logical and mathematical proofs. If he is correct, then the universe can have no creator. Biochemists and virologists have known for several years all of the steps involved in the changing of such simple inorganic compounds as methane, hydrogen sulphide, ammonia, hydrogen, water vapor, and phosphorous pent oxide, into amino acids and these in turn into viruses, D.N.A. (genes) and from here on to living organisms. Each stage of this work has already been carried out in small yields. Thus, no God is required to form life; it would be most likely to form spontaneously when given the right conditions and a few million years time. Admittedly in an infinite universe there are an infinite number of cultures whose members would appear to us to be Gods—except for the fact that they are but products of the universe rather than its creator. But we have no reason to assume that they know of our existence or would enter into earthly affairs unless they happen to be an expanding culture looking for planets to colonize. In that case, they would be enemies.

History is but a study of things gone by. History shows us that civilizations rise and fall, they overbreed, suffer climatic changes, lose their natural resources, or stagnate with their good life so that they are overrun by the hard, lean, hungry barbarians. History shows again and again that violence can be final. The Romans totally destroyed Carthage; the Vandals, Goths, and Huns overran Rome; the Turks eventually captured and absorbed the Byzantine Empire, AND recently the Russians expelled the Turks. Not only are old cultures susceptible, but young vigorous cultures as well. The British succeeded in subduing the Boors in South Africa, destroying their hardy culture for the gold on their lands. The Unionists in the U. S. A. in the 1860's succeeded in greatly altering the culture and customs of the South. It took violence to do it, but their success was final and nearly complete. Lastly, our history shows that we are far from a peaceful nation—we have had a war a generation since the 1600's.

I believe that cultures have not yet discovered that they are mortal, and therefore have not developed a morality or a fear of death. People make the error of confusing their society with God. They believe it to be immortal; other cultures died, of course, but that was because they were so inferior. This culture is based on the ultimate wisdom of God and so will live forever. Hitler's thousand Year Reich was unusual in one respect. He did suggest that there would be an end to it. Cultures are of course quite mortal as I hope to prove to all by this paper. Cultures don't want children; not being aware of their mortality, they see no value whatever in children but want only to extend themselves as themselves. They don't want to reproduce themselves; they want to extend themselves. The colonies are not daughter cells reproduced by fision, but are to be extensions of the original self. Six thousand years of history has not been enough to convince a culture that a colony must go its separate way. If a colony is planted in an area where there is already a native civilization, hybridization of cultures is possible. This will result in the colony taking on the best characteristics of both cultures and becoming superior to either. Thus it has a fighting chance to survive the parents attempts to absorb it.

Our culture should plant strong colonies on Mars, Venus, and the Astroids and leave them to develop as they can; they would be our children. Our culture has had a brief history and is, therefore, far from senile. To survive the threat now facing us, I recommend that we cut the size of our bureaucy to one half of its present level. Apply foreign aid in a different manner by sending doctors, anthropologists, technicians, mechanics, and a bare minimum of supplies and money to all countries requesting aid. There, we might proceed to set up a public health program similar to the one in the U. S., but with the emphasis on birth-control information, dissemination, and instruction. We get some of the operating expenses paid by the government of the country receiving aid, if possible. We should send agricultural missionaries over to improve food production. We should set up teachers' colleges to train native teachers, doctors, and nurses. We should abolish all talk of disarmament attempts to bargain with the Rusians, for we know that they never keep an agreement. We should plan to take the initiative in preventing the Russians from causing us troubles, while stirring up trouble behind their lines and making the best of all trouble that we succeed in causing them.

An Argument For Bigotry

Free Enterprise...

The latest apology being used by the racists and bigots to defend their views on theater de-segregation is the overworked theory of "free enterprise." Since university campuses have at last begun to regard outright racism with some derision, the "grits" have turned to the ambiguous phrases of the Goldwater set.

Theoretical free enterprise is not the "great, old American institution" which its financial proponents mistake it for. This nation was founded on the principles of democracy, and not on laizzez-faire business. Not even a socialistic economy would directly offend the United States Constitution. Although this writer is hardly advocating a socialist economy, it should be pointed out that governmental controls on public facilities and business are essential to a highly developed capitalistic society.

The citizens of Chapel Hill exercise their rights by prohibiting the theaters from operating as firetraps or in other ways offending their patrons through negligence. Why, then, should the Varsity theater be allowed to offend an entire race of citizens on the basis of the intellectually-blighted doctrine of racial segregation?

Individuals of Klan-mentality will plague society for many years to come, but the greater danger is those who cowardly disguise their selfish and unenlightened dogma in the vague and emotional locution of "Our precious and patriotic heritage."

HARRY DeLUNG

A Letter

Sir:

I am told on good authority, and I have no reason to doubt it, that Joseph Gregoire de Roulhac Hamilton was one of that group of brilliant young men who, inspired by the great William A. Dunning, of Columbia, laid the foundation of all modern Southern history-writing.

I am told, and I have no reason to doubt that, either, that he was the soul, the driving force, behind the assembling of the Southern Historical Collection, destined to be, if it is not already, the great treasure of the University of North Carolina Library.

And I am told that it is for these two accomplishments that he is best worth remembering; which I deny indignantly.

I beg leave, therefore, to put on record in your columns my reasons for believing that when this man died Chapel Hill and the State of North Carolina lost something that will never be replaced in entirety, and that will be hard to replace even partially.

What the State and the University have lost is a true friend, according to the fine definition of a true friend as one who knows all about you, and loves you anyhow. Nobody knew better than Hamilton all the weaknesses and idiocies that have punctuated Carolina history—and the history of the rest of the nation as well—and nobody could denounce them with more picturesque violence; but when his anathemas were exhausted, they were followed by Homeric laughter. The discrepancy between what men could be, and should be, and what they actually are, which drives many to crynicism, and some to despair, drove him to mirth; for in nearly all the rascalities there was a comic element that he could not ignore.

This made for a tremendously healthy outlook on life. When I was a very young man working on the Greensboro Daily News, he and the late Ed Knight were engaged in some kind of survey that took them all over the state. Frequently they had a lie-over in Greensboro of some hours waiting for the midnight train to Raleigh, and they developed a habit of spending the time in the newspaper office. Realists both, they missed nothing that came under their eyes, least of all the ridiculous; but they were thoroughly convinced of the value of what they were doing, and their disgust was entirely with the obstructions to its achievements.

What nights they were, of information and indignation all compact, hours of intermingled objurgation and guffaws, presenting a picture of North Carolina as vastly amusing, yet at the same time potentially very great indeed.

To a callow youth, inclined to take the world too seriously and forever going off half-cocked, these nights were a steadying influence, but they were more, much more. They were tonic to a faltering spirit, balm to bruised ideals. Were? They are, for after many years their laughter still echoes musically in the ears of an aging man. So when the news came that Hamilton had followed Knight, I was reminded of some lines I read long ago, and I hunted them up—Callimachus, in William Cory's superb translation—

> They told me, Heraclitus, they told me you were dead,
> They brought me bitter news to hear and bitter tears to shed.
> I wept as I remember'd how often you and I
> Had tired the sun with talking and sent him down the sky.

Heraclitus had written of nightingales who filled the dark with music, and that memory of music in the night remained with Callimachus.

I know how he felt. Great scholars, great soldiers, great artists are, no doubt, the glory of the world, but great human beings are the light of the world, and when one goes out the loss is a loss indeed. Hamilton was one, for he knew all about us, and loved us anyhow. Yet while anyone survives who came in contact with him, there is truth in Callimachus' closing lines:

> Still are thy pleasant voices, thy nightingales, awake:
> For Death, he taketh all away, but these he cannot take.

Modified Flairs & Ring Pocketbooks Lead Coed Fashion Styles For Autumn

By JOE DEBLASIO
DTH Fashion Editor

If you hear two coeds chatting about "A's" this fall you had better listen carefully—they may not be talking about grades.

The new fashion in women's sport clothes this season is the "A" skirt which is defined by Mrs. M. H. Jennings Jr., who owns the "Fireside" along with her husband, as a "modified flair."

To describe this "A" skirt we first have to define a flair. A flair is a skirt with a wide expansion at the bottom to make it stand apart from the coed's legs. In geometrical terms it can best be described as trapezoid in three dimensions.

Modified Flair

The "A" skirt, the modified flair, is a skirt which, when laid out flat on the display counter, resembles more of a rectangle than the flair. It is a tighter fitting skirt and Mrs. Jennings tells us that "even girls with hips can wear them."

What colors are these "A's" being purchased in? The answer was gold and shocking pink. These two seem to be catching on this year in addition to the standard olive which a saleslady, known only to us as "Dutch," says will never die.

While the coeds are talking about the "A" you may see them carrying ring pocketbooks in madras and batik. These pocketbooks resemble a small laundry bag attached to a wooden hoop with small, gold colored rings. These rings can be drawn together to close the bag but when it is open there is plenty of room for the coed to find her numerous belongings.

"Shrinking Trend"

With dresses getting shorter this year and flairs becoming more modified, the blouse is not to be held back from the "shrinking trend." Mrs. Jennings said the blouse with the small, round collar has been almost replaced with the collarless blouse. What will happen to all those circle pins that the girls bought for their collars last year?

The year-old "Fireside" is also featuring shetland sweaters which resemble a crew neck with buttons. This sweater seems to be leading the sales field for Fall.

Two types of skirts are selling as well this year as they did in previous years—the "kulak" and the "kilt." The kulak is really an oversized pair of bermudas that can be purchased in standard or bermuda length. They are in the form of two legs which join in the center and when worn resembles a flair skirt with a pleat in the front and back. Corduroy and wool flannel are the most popular materials this year.

Safety-Pin

The kilt is very well described by its name. From the man's viewpoint it can be described as the safety-pin skirt. This skirt is seemingly held together by only one large safety-pin—but there is more to it than that, the proprietor assured us.

The coats for fall are finger-tip length (the end of the body of the coat is where the coed's fingertips end) with fur collars and cuffs. They look like Santa Claus outfits but they are not selling in red this year.

Finally, when we asked Mrs. Jennings about what the coed would be wearing when lounging around her dorm or sorority house, we were told that wool and corduroy taper pants (slacks to the uneducated) were in style. These come in various colors in all the shades that the eye could see within the visible spectrum.

And for the ultimate in lounging, the latest of all is the stretch pants which look like ordinary slacks but have a "stirrup" on the bottom to hold them on the foot. These slacks are made of a semi-elastic material which stretches to fit the figure. Mrs. Jennings claims that it takes two to put a pair of these on a coed. All we can say is—let's make them legal to wear on campus!

CHAINED IN

BERKELEY, Calif. — Vandals sealed in an entire dormitory for several hours last Sunday morning at the University of California by chaining all entrances to the building. The main door to the hall was chained and locked from the inside and the keyholes filled with solder to prevent the use of a master key.

The gate to the fire escape was chained in five different places, making it impossible to reach the ground by the fire escape. All telephone wires to the dorm were cut and electric power was cut off.

A Talk With Ray Farris

we're just people, but all football players are people. Why doesn't that happen to LSU? I don't know. I'll tell you one thing, though. We're going to click on Saturday. We'll be ready.

"But I don't want to sound as if I'm shooting my mouth off. I think a football player is treated more as a student at this University than at any other, and I think that's good. Even if you play every day with your team, it's hard to go to school and get into the outside activities and have the gears mesh every time. College football is the most unpredictable thing I know. Football players are just people. When things are going for them they feel happier than they do when things are bad."

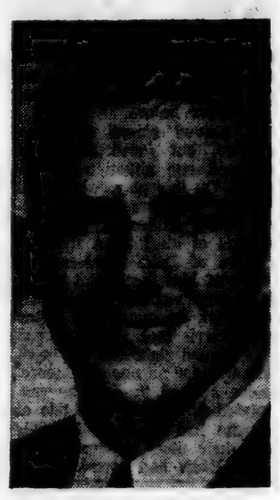
He gripped the cream jug, unscrewed the cap, and screwed it back on.

"My father was unbeaten against Duke," he said solemnly. "I am too, so far. That's very important. That's the most important thing in my life right now.

"I'll get the coffee and pour it over here."

He poured coffee, joking nervously about fumbling the cup (though he held it stone steady).

"Clearly," he said, agreeing, and his voice softened very slightly, "yes, there is a Ray Farris off the football field. I came here to broaden myself. I wanted to come to Carolina more than anything else. I could have gone to other schools, Notre



RAY FARRIS

Dame, or just about any school around here I wanted to, I guess. But I wanted to come here. I love this University more than anything else. I enjoy school work. I chose History as a major because I like to learn about people in the present and the future. And the past, needless to say. I got active in student government, and I joined a social fraternity, and I got active in my church club. I was made a member of the Golden Fleece and the Order of the Grail, I was president of the junior class last year. I see all these things as contributing to a picture I have of myself in the future. I don't really know what the picture is—law, business, taking a part in civic activities.

"Is that the kind of things you wanted to know?"

Delicately, he floated the bowl of his spoon on the surface of his coffee.

"I've never tried to describe myself before. I don't know if I can do it. I'll be frank with you. I've set goals for myself that I haven't reached.. I've been conscious of the duties of leadership, because I guess I'm supposed to. There have been a lot of times when I haven't handled it right. It's hard to know how to, in the context of the people you're leading. I don't think I've done what I wanted to for this University. I came here hoping to be a great football player, and I know I'm not. I'm just as selfish and self-centered as anybody else, but I think I'm just as fair as anybody else too.

"There was one other point I was going to make, too. It was very important, but I've forgotten what it was—Oh, yes, I feel my responsibility to God, on the football field too. I guess that's all I can say.

"I hate to be rude but I've got to get down to the gym and watch the films."

Duke Kicks 2 Field Goals To Whip Tar Heels By 6-3

consist only of place-kicking.

Twice before he had received the same assignment, to kick a field goal. Early in the first quarter, he had tried from the 25-yard line. That kick had veered slightly to the left of the goalpost for what looked from the sideline stands to be good, but the referees had a better view.

In the second period, just before the end of the half, he had tried from 42 yards away, but lacking in distance.

This time, however, everything clicked. The boot sailed through the crossbar on an arc that carried for 32 yards. He had tied the score with five-and-a-half minutes yet to be played in the game.

North Carolina then received the kickoff to try to duplicate to some extent the great finish that had given them a 7-6 win over the same Duke team with two minutes left the year before.

They moved across the fifty-yard line, but faced a crucial fourth and one situation on the Duke 48. On this play, which will be debated for years to come, fullback Elliott bulldozed into the right side of his line. A thundering wave of Duke tacklers rose up to meet him there. But before Elliott was stopped, he neatly tossed back to quarterback Ray Farris. Farris took the pitch and skirted around right end and went all the way for an apparent score.

Before he had time to be congratulated for the run, the tide of the game had changed. Officials waved their flags to signify that the Tar Heels had been detected holding on the play. This penalty would have nullified the touchdown.

Another official signaled that the play had been dead before Elliott had pitched back to Farris. Because of these two rulings, the Tar Heels had neither a score nor possession of the ball.

When Duke took over, 1:28 remained on the clock. After running four plays, which together took 47 seconds, they gave up the ball on downs at the Carolina 47.

Halfback Gib Carson took eight seconds to take a shovel pass from Farris and run it for three yards. On the next play, Farris tried to throw long to Ward Marslender. This play died the death that is a quarterback's most dreaded enemy —interception.

Defensive back Dean Wright made the nab on his own 20-yard line, and as his blocking formed, he weaved and bobbed for 43 yards before being brought down at the Carolina 37.

In the fallout after this big bomb, another flag lay on the stadium turf. Officials charged a Carolina tackler with holding, and moved the ball a precious 15 yards to the 22-yard line.

Only 10 seconds now remained. But the clock was stopped because of the penaltly. Suddenly the Tar Heels knew how Tennessee had felt two weeks before in Kenan Stadium.

Bill Reynolds was hustled onto the field again.

He came through with the thing he does best. There was no doubt about this one. The referee followed the flight of the ball until it hit the ground, and then threw his hands up to show that Duke had just scored three points.

Two seconds remained, and if the Tar Heels could win this one, then Jim Hickey could write a new book about crazy finishes. The kickoff, by Reynolds of course, was just a soft pat on the side of the football that carried it only as far as guard Jack Tillery. Tillery, who had no illusion of running 65 yards for a score, pitched back to end Bob Lacey, a man with more speed.

Lacey picked up some blocking and circled to the right sideline before he was hemmed in near the 50. He then spotted Ward Marslender in the open and pitched back.

Marslender, probably the Tar Heels' best broken field runner, took off in the other direction. By this time, the time was already gone and the only hope for a score remained with the success of this circus demonstration on the field.

Marslender saw his chances for a breakaway dim, and he pitched back to tackle Steve Serenko. There the skein ended. Serenko was unable to advance any further, and the game ended as the Duke players piled over him.

The Tar Heels, despite their loss, were not without heroes. Halfback Jimmy Addison was one of the most sparkling ball carriers on the field. He led both teams in rushing with 75 yards, 68 of which came in the first half. Bob Elliott and Gib Carson had 40 each, and Farris had a total of 22.

For Duke, Mark Leggett was the top rusher with 57 yards, and Gil Garner had 55, Wright 30, and Rappold 26.

Duke held a statistical lead in first downs, 18 to 10; in rushing yardage, 201 to 173; in passes completed, 13 to 2, and in passing yardage, 98 to 7.

UNC had the unglorious honor of leading in yards penalized, 198 to 85.

Joe Craver and Jim LeCompte were defensive terrors. Junior Edge alertly intercepted two Duke passes, and Carson came up with some amazing blocks to stop almost certain touchdown passes from reaching their receivers.

Score by quarters:

North Carolina	0	3	0	0—3
Duke	0	0	3	3—6

Clemson Jolts Furman Hopes With 35-6 Win

CLEMSON, S. C. (UPI)—Halfback Gary Barnes scored two touchdowns, returned a punt 72 yards to set up another and raced 51 yards with an intercepted pass Saturday as Clemson jolted Furman's bowl hopes in a 35-6 rout.

Furman entered the game with a 7-2 record and was high on the list of prospects for the Sun and Tangerine bowls. Clemson, however, was a two touchdown favorite despite a mediocre 3-5 record and ran up a 35-0 lead before Furman switched to the "shotgun" offense to move 68 yards in five fourth period plays for its only score.

Another Furman touchdown, a 75-yard pass play from quarterback Billy Canty to halfback Tony Carmignani, was nullified by a penalty but by that time, most of the 30,000 fans were either engaged in or watching the numerous fist fights in the stands between Furman and Clemson students.

Canty promptly threw a screen pass to fullback Tom Campbell who ran 90 yards to score, but that, too was nullified by a clipping penalty. Numerous penalties on both teams marred the game.

Barnes, switched to right halfback as a senior after two seasons as an end, raced 16 yards with a pitchout from quarterback Joe Anderson and took an 18-yard scoring pass from Anderson. His 72-yard punt return to the Furman 10 set up fullback Ron Scrudato's seven-yard run for Clemson's second touchdown.

Barnes raced 51 yards to the Furman nine with an interception as the first half ended.

Besides his touchdown pass to Barnes, Anderson rolled out 15 yards to score Clemson's first touchdown and Clemson's other quarterback, sophomore Jim Parker threw 18 yards to Harry Pavliack for another touchdown.

Spiders are near-sighted.

Terps Trip Wake, 10-7; Navy Wins

Wake Forest gambled on a fourth period touchdown Saturday but lost the gamble and the game to Maryland 10-7.

The Deacons, 12-point underdog, had a fourth down situation on the Maryland six within easy field goal range with four minutes left to play.

Wake Forest's Mickey Walker, who has four field goals this season, is co-holder of the Atlantic Coast Conference record. But the Deacons didn't use him and went for the touchdown with a pass. Maryland intercepted it in the end zone.

A razzle-dazzle 83-yard first period punt return and a third period field goal wrapped it up for the Terps. Maryland's John Hanigan kicked a 22-yard field goal for the clinching score.

It was the third time this year Hannigan's field goal kicking was Maryland's wining margin.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI)—Halfback John Sai from Oakdale Calif., scored a pair of touchdowns Saturday to lead Navy to a 13-3 victory over a stubborn Virginia team.

Sai, the shortest man on the Navy varsity at five-foot-eight but also one of the toughest, crashed across for scores in both the first and second periods to give the Middies their sixth win in nine games. The loss gave Virginia a 3-5 record.

Navy, playing without team Captain John Hewitt at guard because of a knee injury suffered in the Duke game, opened the scoring early in the first period on a six-yard run by Sai. End Greg Mather, the Middies' candidate for All-America honors, kicked his 21st consecutive conversion of the season to put the Tars ahead, 7-0, after less than five minutes of play.

Gabriel Directs 38-14 Rout Of SC

RALEIGH (UPI) — Relentless Roman Gabriel sent his All-America stock soaring Saturday with a record four touchdown performance in a 38-14 North Carolina State rout of South Carolina.

Gabriel ran for two touchdowns, passed for two and scored a two-point conversion with a brilliant show in the final home game of his college career before 16,000 fans.

He became the most prolific touchdown maker in Atlantic Coast Conference history, with career credit for 34 passing and running, and established an all-time conference passing mark of 279 completions in three years, out of a total of 489 attempts. He completed 17 of 22 Saturday for 215 yards and added 40 yards rushing.

Fullback Jim D'Antonio scored two State touchdowns on bursts of one and 13 yards, and amassed 114 yards rushing, and sophomore halfback Joe Scarpati caught both Gabriel touchdown passes, one for 18 and one for 19 yards.

The Gamecocks, pre-game favorites in the morning homecoming contest, posted both their touchdowns in the first half, and then had two deep threats turned back at the Etate 6 and 14 in the second half.

Gabriel brought the Wolfpack from behind twice in the second period. With the Gamecocks ahead 7-0, he directed a 72-yard march and climaxed it with a one-yard sneak.

South Carolina then turned a fumble recovery by tackle Joel Goodrich into a touchdown in seven plays from the 17, with fullback Carl Huggins crashing one yard on fourth down.

Gabriel came right back, moving the Walfpack 71 yards in nine plays with the kickoff, throwing 19 yards to Scarpati with three minutes left in the first half. Two plays after the kickoff, Tony Koszarski intercepted a Jim Costen pass and ran 23 yards to South Carolina's 29. Gabriel ran 11 on a keep, then lofted an 18-yard pass to Scarpati in the end zone with 66 seconds left to give State an 18-14 halftime lead.

D'Antonio ran for 31 of a 66-yard march with the second half kickoff, and Gabriel gave him the handoff for the score. Gabriel himself then accounted for 67 yards of an 86-yard fourth period march and did the scoring honors himself. D'Antonio ripped 13 yards for the final score.

In the first period, South Carolina halfback Henry Crosby threw a 12-yard pass to halfback Billy Gambrell and Gambrell went nine yards on a wide run for a score on the next play.

Gabriel came close to a single total offense record with his performance Saturday. The career records he broke both had been set by quarterback Norman Snead of Wake Forest in 1958-60.

Score by periods:

N. C. State	0	18	6	14	—38
South Carolina	7	7	0	0	—14

Scoring:

SC—Gambrell, 9 run, Findley kick.

NCS—Gabriel, 2 run, kick failed.

SC—Huggins, 1 run, Findley kick.

NCS—Scarpati 19, pass from Gabriel, pass failed.

NCS—Scarpati 18, pass from Gabriel, pass failed.

NCS—D'Antonio 1, run, kick failed.

NCS — Gabriel 1, run, pass failed.

NCS—D'Antonia 13, run, Gabriel run.

Top-Ranked Texas Stunned By TCU

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Texas Christian's spoiler Horned Frogs toppled No. 1 ranked Texas 6-0 Saturday on a 50-yard touchdown pass by towering quarterback Sonny Gibbs to end Buddy Iles.

The loss ended Texas' victory string at eight games and put a big kink in the Longhorns' cotton Bowl plans.

Gibbs connected for the touchdown in the second period after Texas had marched to the Horned Frog one-yard line before a rugged TCU defense headed by Tommy Crutcher, Gary Thomas, Bill Phillips and Iles held on downs.

Varsity To Permit Limited Integration

Policy Effective Today

The Varsity Theater will follow the Carolina Theater's lead and begin admitting Negro students attending the University. The limited integration will become effective immediately.

The board of directors of H. B. Meiselman Theaters Inc., which owns the Varsity, met in Charlotte Friday and approved the new policy.

As at the Carolina, Negro students will be required to show identification cards at the box office.

The Chapel Hill Committee for Open Movies has been picketing the Varsity nightly for about two weeks.

Mrs. Evangeline Darity, chairman of the Committee, said a special meeting of the executive committee would be called for tomorrow afternoon. She said picketing would continue, at least until the executive committee meets.

Andy Gutierrez, manager of the Varsity, said one of the Meiselman corporation's major stockholders had just returned from Europe, making it possible for the meeting to be called.

Officers of the corporation and Mr. Gutierrez had told the Committee for Open Movies on several occasions that a decision could not be made until the stockholder in Europe returned.

The corporation directors did not take any note of the picketing at their meeting. Mr. Gutierrez said their decision was based on what has been community acceptance of integration in other areas and the experience of limited integration at the Carolina. Mr. Gutierrez said business at the Varsity had not been affected by the picketing.

There was no indication as to what affect the new admissions policy would have on picketing. When the Committee for Open Movies voted to begin picketing the Varsity, no specific goal was announced. Some sentiment was expressed in favor of continuing picketing until the Varsity had taken a step beyond the Carolina in integrating. At the time, there was also strong sentiment for picketing both theaters. The Committee has called for complete integration at both theaters by the time students at the University return from Christmas

Friday At 8:00 P.M.

GM To Present Josh White

Josh White, acclaimed by many as one of the greatest folk singers of this generation, will appear in Memorial Hall Friday at 8 p.m. Admission to the performance will be $1.

Tickets will be sold only to the capacity of the Hall, so a ticket will assure a seat. White is a Graham Memorial presentation. Tickets may be purchased at the information desk of Graham Memorial or at Kemp's.

Josh White reputedly is known throughout the western world as a perceptive artist and a versatile craftsman who can "electrify a sophisticated audience while retaining the power and simplicity of traditional singing," according to GM. His voice has a quality that is "as intimate as a caress."

"His accompanying guitar is sensuous and brilliant," said GM officials. "His feeling for phrasing is flawless."

White was born to a young Negro preacher and his wife in Greenville, South Carolina, and christened Joshua Daniel White in honor of the biblical warrior.

Josh is now on a concert tour across the United States. "The gracious man with one foot on a chair, facing the microphone with eyes closed and a frown of deep concentration on his face, is beloved by millions of Americans."

His songs are still "the people's songs, given life with deeply felt sincerity, biting cynicism, or bland impudence," said the GM statement.

White will appear at the upcoming World's Fair at Seattle, Washington.

Passes By 19-3 Margin

By Joe DeBlasio

The IFC passed its controversial one-semester deferred rush amendment last night at their regularly scheduled meeting in Gardner Hall.

The resolution, scheduled to be enacted at the beginning of the year 1964-65 was passed by a vote of 19-3 with two houses absent. The required two-thirds majority of 16 houses was met and the amendment now replaces the present rushing articles of the IFC by-laws.

The motion was tabled at the last meeting because of indecision over the date of enactment. Those houses who asked that the amendment be put up from 1963-64 to 1964-65, claimed that it would allow more time for adjustment. The admendment to the motion was passed after discussion.

Most of the opposition to the amendment, proposed by a ten-man Deferred Rush Committee, was simple opposition to deferred rush itself. Sevier and his committee were given official congratulations by the IFC as a body for their work.

This vote culminates 12 weeks run of proposals and questions which led to the final vote. After deciding that the IFC court could use its descretion in cases involving extenuating circumstances, the section involving penalties was passed.

The inception of the idea for deferred rush was formulated at the Southern Pines IFC-Faculty Conference in May of last year. At this time the members of the IFC discovered the faculty was contemplating deferred rush action if the freshman academic standing did not rise.

Since the administration is largely governed by the suggestions of the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities, the IFC passed a motion favoring deferred rush last Spring and formed the committee to draw up a suitable amendment.

Exam Schedule

By action of the faculty, the time of an examination may not be changed after it has been fixed in the schedule. Quizzes are not to be given in this semester on or after Monday, January 15, 1961

The Official Class Roll and Grade Report will be prepared by the Data Processing Section and forwarded to the departments prior to the examination period. As in the past, the original copy will be returned to the Office of Records and Registration, the second copy (canary) is to be retained by the department, and the third copy (goldenrod) is to be kept by the instructor.

Grade reports are to be handed in to the department office within 72 hours after the scheduled time of the final examination. The department chairman shall be responsible for recording receipt of each grade report (the Form DR-1 may be used for this) and for forwarding it promptly to the Office of Records and Registration. In unusual cases, if it is clearly needed, an extension of the time limit, preferably not to exceed 48 hours, may be approved by the department chairman or the dean of the school concerned. The Office of Records and Registration must be given notice of the delay. (Faculty Council, May 6, 1960.) Machine processing of grades makes it urgent that all grades be turned in on time.

All permits to take examinations to remove grades of "Exc. Abs." or "Cond." must be secured from the Office of Records and Registration prior to the exam. No students may be excused from a scheduled examination except by the University Infirmary in case of illness or by his Dean in case of any other emergency compelling his absence.

Bluebelle Capt. Once At UNC

The captain of the ketch Bluebelle, which mysteriously sank in the Atlantic recently, was once a UNC student.

Officers said Julian Harvey killed himself in Miami November 17 after survivor Terry Jo Duperrault, 11, was found alive. Harvey attended the University here from 1938 to 1940, completing two years of study. He left after his sophomore year.

Terry Jo's parents, brother and sister went down with the Bluebelle. Harvey's wife also died.

The eleven-year-old girl saved herself by clinging to a life boat until rescued by a ship. She told the Coast Guard she saw Harvey abandon the ship, leaving her on the blood-stained deck and the bodies of her mother and brother in the cabin below.

IDC Court Puts Student On Probation

The IDC Court has issued four fines, three official reprimands and one probation in recent trials.

Two students were each given reprimands and fines of $3 for throwing a firecracker from their room in Everett dormitory.

A resident of Aycock dormitory was given a fine of $2 and a reprimand for firing a cap pistol during quiet hours.

The probation, which extends to the end of the 1961-62 school year, was given a student for setting fire to a calendar on a wall. He was also fined $2.

ALUMNI REPLACE CONFEDERATES

1st Carolina Inn In 1857

By CHUCK MOONEY

It's one of the four Duncan-Hines restaurants in Chapel Hill but it first established its reputation for good food just after the Civil War. It's the Carolina Inn.

The present building was built in 1924 by John Sprunt Hill; the first one was built in 1857 by Richard J. Ashe.

Carolina Alumni gather there now replacing the Confederate veterans who used to meet by the Ashe hearth — drinking, singing battle songs and reveling in tales from Chancellorsville to Appomatox.

Named for Alumni

The rooms in Civil War days were reserved and named after members of the Ashe family; now they're named after the UNC Alumni who stay there most often.

There are small plaques over the doors featuring names like:

"The Morehead-Morrison Suite," 203, the favorite of Uncle Mott and Fred Morrison, a member of the O. Max Gardner law firm in Washington, D. C.

"The McKnight Room," 237, is usually reserved for Dr. Roy McKnight, retired Charlotte surgeon and former University Trustee, who has taken the DTH regularly since 1910.

"The William Room," 220, named for Macon Williams of Lenoir, who hasn't missed a Carolina home football game in 25 years.

"The McGruder Suite," 158, where retired USN Commodore McGruder and his wife from Jamestown, R. I., spend their winters. The Commodore says he comes here for the atmosphere and service at the Inn.

Stage-coach travelers first praised the atmosphere and service of the Inn, built at the crossing of the stage-coach post-roads from Richmond to Pittsboro and New Bern to Salem in 1857.

Inn Donated

Hill and his family donated the Inn to UNC in 1935, long after it had started serving students and faculty members, on the condition that its income go to the library and the North Carolina Collection.

Under University management the Inn has been remodeled several times since and now contains 128 rooms, 12 two and one-half room apartments, lobby, parlors, dining room, cafeteria, ballroom and function rooms. It provides parking, one-day laundry and valet service and a catering service for small or large affairs.

TEACHING FOUNDATION

Friday On Carnegie Board

Consolidated UNC President William Friday has been elected to the board of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Mr. Friday's election was announced in New York yesterday.

Mrs. Millicent C. McIntosh, president of Barnard College, and Howard F. Lowry, president of the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio, were chosen chairman and vice chairman of the board for 1961-62.

The foundation, founded in 1905 by the late industrialist Andrew Carnegie, provides pensions for retired college teachers and their widows. It disbursed $1,202,608 in 1960-61 to 1,803 persons, the foundation said.

John W. Cardner is president of the foundation.

New Phone Directories Out

The 1962 Chapel Hill telephone directories are being mailed to townspeople, beginning last Saturday. Mailings to the campus will follow the complete mailing of approximately 9500 books to regular subscribers.

The new books are effective Monday, Dec. 4. Present directories should not be discarded until that day.

A major change for calling Memorial Hospital and ten medical departments using a prefix is listed as follows:

"MEMORIAL HOSPITAL — 966-4131.

"Switchboard to all departments—such calls can be transferred (if you know correct extension number, by dialing 9668 and then the three-digit extension number, you can call direct. Such calls, however, cannot be transferred)."

Inside covers will provide long-distance information including DDD (direct distance dialing) instructions plus a 1961-62 calendar.

'Star of Bethlehem'

"Star of Bethlehem," the most cherished of all Morehead Planetarium presentations, will open tomorrow night at 8:30. It will be given through January 8.

For the 13th consecutive Christmas season, the solemnity and beauty of the Biblical pageantry of the Birth of Jesus will be presented in what is probably the largest single production by any planetarium in all the world.

Noted author and newspaperman Burke Davis says "Star of Bethlehem" has become the state's most popular Christmas scene, aside from the family tree.

"In no other planetarium could such a magnificent show be given, for none other has such ample space for such sumptuous colorful sets which complement the planetarium and its images."

Mr. Davis calls it "half a dazzling lecture in astronomy, half a spectacular pageant. 'Star of Bethlehem' combines religion, science, history and philosophy as its contribution to the spirit of Christmas."

It has been seen by more people than any other Morehead Planetarium show. About 25,000 are expected this year to swell the total attendance in excess of 250,000 persons over the years.

The traditional program's first part will again be devoted to the appearance of the heavens almost 2,000 years ago, to "the Star," and to astronomical events known to have occurred about the time of the birth of Jesus. Only in the Planetarium is it

Not Worth It?

Gov. Terry Sanford last night made it obvious that he was not going to risk the remnants of his political grip on the people of North Carolina by calling a special session of legislature to request a new, still-needed bond election.

The Governor scotched the feeling that was running high in many quarters that he would lay his prestige on the line for education and mental institutions by requesting a new election for those items.

Gov. Sanford has apparently tested the political winds with more caution after the Nov. 7 defeat and decided that he could not risk another failure.

Although many were optimistic that the Governor would take the necessary risk, it is now obvious that Terrible Terry will not attempt to slay the dragon of public sentiment, quality education or no. Hopes of a new bond issue, at least for the moment, have gone the way of aspirations for a tobacco tax—and for the same reason: political expediency.

Gov. Sanford pledged himself to give the State educational institutions as much help as can be wrung out of funds from the present tax structure. This offers small consolation to those who fear that campus-bursting enrollments will push academic excellence down into the mire. North Carolina needs more money for higher education. The people didn't want to pay for it on Nov. 7, but it is disheartening to see the towel thrown in without a second try.

There can be no doubt that the political risk involved in requesting a new bond issue in the face of a smashing defeat loomed large and the Governor would have had to display courage to risk another assault on his already tattered prestige.

Apparently, to the Governor, it was not worth the risk.

Wronging A Right

Sooner or later, Sen. Barry Goldwater was bound to be shown up as the creeping moderate that he is. Well, in Arizona they've got the goods on Mr. Goldwater—he's just another dupe (and maybe a Commysymp) who is lending his support to leftism. It develops that the Arizona Republican is a regional vice-president of the National Municipal eague, a sinister organization which has been fostering the city manager system as part of its plot to further "the aims of international communism."

This is the charge made by W. Buckner Hanner, a member of the John Birch Society and losing candidate for Mayor of Phoenix. We always suspected that Mr. Goldwater might be guilty of association with moderates; now he stands convicted as being soft on city managers. Before he accuses other people of extremism, perhaps the Senator ought to investigate himself, or take a closer look at the gang of cranks that he asserts are just well-meaning anti-Communists.

But venturing further into the nutty world of the radical right, we learn that even the John Birch Society is tainted with pink. No less an authority than Fulton Lewis Jr. has repudiated the pusillanimous meekness of the John Birchites in merely urging the impeachment of Chief Justice Earl Warren. Said Mr. Lewis to a cheering right-wing meeting in Boston: "I would lynch Earl Warren."

Mr. Lewis is giving fresh meaning to the phrase "lunatic fringe."

Another Step

Timed to the slow, measured cadence characteristic of civil rights movement, the Varsity Theater Friday agreed to a policy of limited integration. It was a slow step, halting and cautious, keyed to a public acceptance of partial integration.

For the Negro and for civil rights supporters, it was an inch of progress toward a goal that is still miles away. Partial integration of two theatres is a small victory, but a significant one. After months of negotiation only a handful of Negroes have been granted the right to be called equal. But even such small progress casts a stream of light in a dark area. It is another door opened to the Negro, one of many that must be opened in theatres, in restaurants, in schools and in all places where black skin means locked doors.

The theatres in Chapel Hill are moving slowly toward total integration. The admission of UNC Negro students will be followed, we are confident, by further moves toward civil liberties.

The Citizens Committee for Open Movies has asked for complete integration by Jan. 3. Whether the goal will be attained within that time is uncertain. But it is certain almost beyond doubt that the doors will be completely opened to Negroes at some time in the near future.

Time is on the side of the Negro.

'New Conservatism' Beyond Grasp

Mr. King:

Article 10, sec. 2, of the By-Laws of Young Americans for Freedom (YAF), states the following:

> Chapters shall have full local autonomy except that no chapter may engage in activities which constitute communism, fascism, RACISM, and anti-Semitism, or other religious discrimination or anything clearly contrary to the Sharon Statement . . .

Your editorial implied that YAF is an organization devoted to maintaining segregation and that William F. Buckley, Jr., is a segregationist. Nothing could be further from the truth (of course your editorials consist of opinion and not necessarily truth.) Neither YAF nor Mr. Buckley advocates segregation; neither, however, refuses to face certain realities, especially when the only alternative is muttering ideological abstractions.

Your use of "'New' Conservatism" is beyond my comprehension. There is no new conservatism. Conservatism is still based on the same eternal truths; only the situation has changed. The multiplication tables are old—but they work. The same is true with conservatism.

Free Enterprise & Pressure Groups

Mr. Harry DeLung:

It's difficult to find a starting point for a reply to your letter of 11-19-61. I guess the best point would be to address it to you and your "bigoted neighbors who are in favor of the subjugation of the right of free enterprise to the whims and dictates of pressure groups. Are you perhaps asking "How dare I call you a bigot"? A reply: Bigotry, as a quarrel, isn't limited to one party only. You're just as bigoted in favor of the integration of private enterprise as I am in opposing the right of any group to "force" said policy on private enterprise. Note: bigots are also known for a special method of expression, viz. denouncing all those opposed as stupid and resorting to such terms as "Guinea," "Kike," "Nigger," etc. do you agree? If you do, I wonder how such terms as "grits" and "Klan mentality" found their way into your article. If you disagree, I guess I have no choice left but to call you bigoted over the issue.

As for the condemnation of the "notion" of free enterprise simply because it is a "overworked theory" and part of "our precious and patriotic heritage," what is more overworked and more a part of "our precious and patriotic heritage" than the reasons you must have for supporting integration? For me to say these are simply an "apology" For integration and dismiss your thoughts would be an extremely stupid act, would it not?—Then why do you do it?

I guess I'll close with the unfortunately not "over worked" theory that every man has the right to make up his own mind concerning the issue of segregation no matter how "intellectually blighted" his conclusions may be. And as long as I own the ground on which I stand, I have the right to tell YOU to stay off even if it's because I don't like the color of your socks; however, I need no justification.

P.S. Before you start throwing stones at me and my statements I must say that I am in favor of the integration of "public facilities (i.e. facilities paid for by the taxes of Negro and Caucasian.

Another Reader Defends YAF Body

Dear Sir:

An editorial entitled "Desegregation" appeared in the DTH on November 16. In it was cleverly woven the old liberal propaganda line of trying to discredit the conservative movement by associating it with segregation. A statement by William F. Buckley was quoted out of context from a recent Saturday Review article so as to lead the reader to believe that conservatives consider the segregation problem in a defeatest attitude. Another hasty generalization associated Buckley with the rapidly growing organization of conservative youth, Young Americans for Freedom; and consequently, the organization with avid segregationism. It is my purpose to defend this organization as a valid means of expression for the many heretofore-silent conservative youth of our nation.

* * *

Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) was founded at a conference in Sharon, Connecticut, in September, 1960. Over 100 delegates representing 44 colleges, universities, and communities from 24 states met to seek ways and means of mobilizing the growing Conservative sentiment among American youth through political education and action. The result of these deliberations was the formation of a non-partisan organization dedicated to the conservative philosophy. The purpose of YAF is expressed in the Sharon Statement (a copy of which is enclosed), which was adopted by the delegates at the conference. Thus YAF does not conform to a definition of conservatism stemming from some outside source —William Buckley or anyone else— as the DTH seems to believe. Conspicuously absent from the Sharon credo is any expression of determination upon the part of conservatives to protect segregation or to impede integration. This is a moral issue and one which must be left to the dictates of individual conscience.

* * *

The response to YAF has been tremendous. In just 14 months, it has grown to include 180 conservative clubs and some 25,000 members from coast to coast in every state in the union. Since its inception YAF has been active in many phases of political action. It is presently headed by outstanding student leadership backed by a National Advisory Board including many renowned and respected advocates of the conservative philosophy. For its efforts during the first 6 months of its existence, YAF received the Annual Freedom Foundation Award at Valley Forge for "Outstanding Achievement in Bringing About a Better Understanding of the American Way of Life"—a most coveted award.

I have been a member of YAF since March and I'm proud of it! I know that there are others on this campus who long for a constructive way to express their conservative convictions. Nothing would be more satisfying to me than to see an affiliated chapter of YAF established here at UNC! I will be more than happy to give any interested person or group more information about the encouraging outlook of YAF if they will call, write, or drop by to see me at 217 Aycock.

The conservative voice must be heard collectively and forcefully through an organization of its own. For we have no political party to speak for conservatism and no national platform on which it may stand except those historic principles which guided our forefathers so well. The stimuli and action must come from the grass-roots. The next move lies with the youth of America.

Duke-Carolina, Fair Judgement?

To the Editor:

Today, a football classic was played. The University of North Carolina vs. Duke University. Nothing personal is meant, I must impress this upon you. I am trying to write from an objective point of view, although the fact that I'm a student at UNC may seem to contradict this.

The game was an exciting one, probably one of the most exciting I have ever seen, but there was something amiss. This was the fact that the calls against UNC were probably the worst I have ever seen.

Referees and field judges are only human, but this year they have made more than human mistakes. I'm referring to one play in particular, which may have been the turning point of the game. UNC was in a fourth and inches situation in in the first half; the hand-off was to Elliot who crashed straight into the line.

He was not thrown back, and the gain was at least a yard, but the "ref.", on getting the ball, took one giant step backwards! This call not only gave the ball to Duke, but stopped a drive that was destined to be a touchdown.

WE WILL actually never know what affect this had on the outcome of the game, as the "Heels" lost 6 to 3, but my feelings are that this is really what cost Carolina a victory, and possibly a bowl. The other calls which I cannot reliably question, such as Farris's brilliant call and T.D. run being called back, and the fact that the whistle was blown awfully fast during the whole game are things that I am not qualified to mention, but the pass interference calls and the amazingly inaccurate call on fourth and inches are incidents that must be questioned. Carolina and Duke played brilliant ball, but Carolina, through ability and inspiration out-played the "Devils" from Duke. The game is over, and is just a memory, but shall football fans throughout the country stand by and watch consistently inaccurate calls and be happy, or will they question the validity of these calls?

I am probably wrong, and if so I would appreciate the truth from someone, but, unfortunately I will not accept the fact that Carolina was outplayed. Congratulations on a victory "Heels," as the Duke-Carolina game of '61 will always be to me.

A biased, but inquisitive admirer,

Wrong In Scientific Interpretation?

David Lobdell, in the Nov. 19 DTH has offered a highly interesting scientific approach to modern problems, and deserves to be commended for it. But I think he is drastically wrong in his interpretatio nof Fred Hoyle:

"Fred Hoyle has postulated that the universe has no beginning in either time or space . . . If he is correct, then the universe can have no creator."

Let's review the facts. Hoyle sees the comos as eternally sustained by a process of "continuous creation," the creation of new atoms from no previous substance at all. This results in a "steady-state universe," in which new galaxies are born and evolved as older ones die out or pass beyond the rim of the observable universe. Hence, the cosmos has always been, and always will be, in a state of regeneration, and its large-scale features will always be approximately the same.

To my mind, the process of creation, continuous or otherwise, implies a Creator, rationally directing the cosmos. And Hoyle, though skeptical of this viewpoint, is not entirely discounting it. In one passage in his FRONTIERS OF ASTRONOMY, p 304, he leaves the door wide open for an orthodox interpretation of modern cosmology.

Is SG Place To Talk On Desegregation?

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate four of our student legislators. They are Scott Summers, Dick Akers, Larry McDevitt, and Rufus Edminston. These men deserve commendation for recognizing the fact that Student Legislature was making a mistake and having the fortitude to speak in an effort to avoid a grave error. I am referring to Thursday night's passage of the resolution condemning theater segregation in Chapel Hill.

I DO not support I. Beverly Lake, rather I personally advocate a more liberal stand on integration in Chapel Hill. However, Student Legislature IS NOT THE PLACE TO ACHIEVE INTEGRATION OR EVEN DISCUSS THE PROBLEM. The Legislature is not the local chapter of NAACP (I hope), a Chapel Hill town meeting, or the Supreme Court. It is a relatively powerful group of students elected by students for the purpose of guiding and administering student government, and it is rapidly squandering its power. Student Legislature does not have the right to tell local businessmen how to operate their businesses no matter how "individually" the legislators vote or who is involved.

So for what it is worth (very little I'm sure), I condemn the Student Legislature for passing a very uncalled for, impotent, and dangerous piece of legislation. If our representatives must condemn someone, why not condemn the voters of North Carolina who through defeat of the bond issue set our state further back than could all the theater owners in the world.

Vinroot Thanks Supporting Voters

Fellow members of the Junior Class:

I want at this time to tell you how grateful and privileged I feel to have been elected resident of our Junior Class. I sincerely believe that this is an office of real responsibility, and want to reassert to each of you my intention of fulfilling its obligations to the best of my ability.

I honestly feel that I have been very fortunate and lucky in being elected—and to each of you who worked in my behalf, whether known to me or not, I thank you for your consideration and support.

I am honored to be able to serve with such a fine slate of Junior Class officers that you have selected, and only hope I can help them as much as I am certain they will help me. In closing, let me assure you of our desire and intention of "actively" serving both our class and university during the coming year.

Decry Apathy From Bell Tower Spire?

To the Editor

Sir, I must make comment on the frank disgust expressed by Rosenthal and Hobbs in regard to school spirit at football games. I for one selpt very peaceufily through the duration of the Duke game; when I emerged foggily from my dorm room, and when I voiced an amicable greeting to the game-returnees, I was met by malevolent curses and outright snarls. Naturally I was astounded and very hurt.

I love a good football game, don't misunderstand (I loathe the televised variety); but I must ask these vigorous gentlemen what more they expect from our student body than the post-game gloom I just described—Obviously football means a great deal to some of our people. Therefore let the Classics Department rejoice, for I perceive a measure of restoration of the old religious games of Greece and Rome, a truly pious dedication to the Colosseum and its heroes.

You see, I noticed no such dejection following the defeat of the State Bond Issue. I am prompted to ask, in passing, where our real, most vital, most active sympathies lie?

I would not detract at all, even if I could, from your wonderful enjoyment of a great game, of indisputably vast worth to N.C.U. (one way or another, mostly the other). Go to it, Sirs, enjoy it, scream at it, exert yourself fully (for the greatest team in the world I even maintain). Yes! function well and warmly . . . but—O Sirs, let this not be your hour of worship; and pray do not exclude me when I abstain from the popular cult. And if you would presume to be oracles, then decry this our repulsive apathy from the bell tower spire, please, not from the space of the Daily Tar Heel; for already it is cluttered with barren verbiage; Sirs, forbear?

Article By Allen And His Students

An Article on "Epic and Etiquette in Tacitus' Annals" in the new issue of the UNC scholarly journal, Studies in Philology, is the joint effort of Walter Allen Jr., UNC professor of Latin, and the graduate students in his Tacitus seminar: Robert J. Barnett Jr., Mary D. Beaty, Baerbel Becker, Frederick Behrends, W. F. Bofgress, Theodore Crane Jr., Kathleen Ann Dempsey, L. E. Garrido, R. R. Harris, Vivian L. Holliday, Richard C. Jensen, William C. Kurth, M. A. Robbins and H. W. Taylor Jr.

The Tacitus seminar and its director, Dr. Allen, investigated original questions in the style and subject matter of the famous Roman historian, and in this paper they present new solutions to some of the problems in Tacitus, the chief source of knowledge of the early Roman Empire.

Their studies range from the poetical tone of the historian's description of the deeds of Germanicus, "crown prince" of the emperor Tiberius, all the way to Seneca's giving up wine in favor of water and to the curious etiquette that led the arrogant imperial freedman Pallas to decline to speak to his own freedmen, in imitation of imperial manners.

15 FEMALE VISITORS

African Educators Impressed By U.S.

"We might copy some phases of the American educational system," said one of the fifteen female African educators who came to UNC recently to tour the campus and visit the Morehead Planetarium.

The teachers represented nine different African countries—Sierra Leone, Ghana, Nigeria, Northern Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, Nysaland, Kenya, Tanganyika and Zanzibar.

They said they liked the United States, but refused to discuss politics and showed a distaste for newspapers in general. The representative from Southern Rhodesia asked a reporter not to quote her on anything political since they "are not politicians and our political opinions are personal."

The Nigerian teacher said "I'll say nothing about the Peace Corps girl.

"Americans don't know much about Nigeria—but don't apologize."

The representative from Sierra Leone asked "Why do they insist on calling Africa the Dark Continent?"

The educator from Ghana claimed that the "Ghana you see tomorrow will not be the Ghana you see today." She showed a marked dislike of newspapers. "Newspapers are so untruthful and distorted. Did you see what they did with Rockefeller's divorce? . . . But they hide social evils such as holdups and murders on back pages."

The trip was sponsored by the U.S. Department of State and is the third part of a project begun by the present Agency for International Development for the purpose of acquainting African educators with each other and with women educators from the United States.

possible to turn back time 20 centuries and present and contemplate heavenly phenomena which, if seen by the Wise Men, would have seemed a very potent sign of some great event.

The pageant will tell the story of the Birth of Jesus in scenes of great depth, bathed in colorful lights and against a background of Scriptural readings and beautiful music.

The first program Tuesday evening will be given by Prof. Norman M. Mattis, a member of the UNC English Department and senior narrator on the Planetarium staff.

Commenting on the program, Prof. Mattis quoted the late UNC Controller W. D. Carmichael Jr. as saying that the Morehead Planetarium and "Star of Bethlehem" have "brought the stars down to our people; and it has helped lift our people toward the stars. Here we learn that no change in our astronomy will put out the stars and no advance in scientific knowledge will extinguish the Light of the Spirit by which man must ever live if there is to be Peace on Earth."

That message and program will be given 13 times weekly, every night at 8:30 and at matinees on Saturday at 11 a.m., 3 and 4 p.m. and on Sundays at 2, 3, and 4 p.m. On Saturday, December 2, the 3 p.m. matinee will be delayed till 5 p.m. because of a football game here, but that and December 25-26 when the Planetarium will be closed will be the only interruptions in the schedule.

Special shows for school children will be given every day at 11 a.m., 1 and 4 p.m. "Star of Bethlehem" is recommended for all grade and age levels.

After the children are seated, the public will be admitted. At other times special programs will be given for large religious, civic or industrial groups by arrangement. But no reservations are required for the public nightly and matinee shows.

European Seminar Is Like Interesting Conversation

By GARRY SUTHERLAND

"Most people picture 'seminar' as a group of high-brows crouched around a table discussing relativity," said one Carolina student, "and before you know it, they're pointing at you, saying, 'O. K., Talk!'"

European Seminar, a student tour sponsored by the YMCA, is, says Executive Committee member Ran Shaffner, "More like a conversation which gets so interesting that even the shy individual finds himself talking!"

Contact with European labor and political leaders, journalists and students enables them to see Europe "through European eyes." In Berlin, students are given the opportunity to talk with Communists, instead of "listening to a lecture by an 'expert' on Communism."

Living Conditions

The Italian political situation reportedly takes on new meaning after students have seen the living conditions in some of the big cities. UNC has an exchange program with Goettingen University in Germany, and Carolina students there meet the students on the Seminar program and show them around Goettingen.

European Seminar differs from the usual college tour in that there are discussion groups held every week during the Spring semester, familiarizing the students with what they will see in Europe.

There is a three-day seminar in Washington with the State Department and embassies of the countries to be visited.

Readers of Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage" will enjoy the day spent in Heidelburg, and Sir Walter Scott fans will have the chance to see the setting for many of his famous novels in the Trossachs of Scotland. The Jungfrau, in Switzerland, was the setting for Byron's "Child Harold" and "Manfred."

There is plenty of free time in which the student may follow his own particular interests.

Humboldt Visit

In Berlin, where the group spends seven days, they will have a chance to visit Humboldt University, and talk with Communist students there, as well as visiting the Free University of Berlin, the Congress Hall, and refugee camps at Brandenburg Gate.

One of the unique features of European Seminar is that the itinerary and the time spent in each place is decided by the students going on the trip. The Executive Committee, consisting of six Carolina students and two faculty advisors, has been chosen, and the 1961-62 itinerary has been approved.

On the Executive Committee are two members of last year's Seminar, Julia Dunning and Mark Perry; Ran Shaffner and Garry Sutherland, members of the 1961-62 Seminar, and Y presidents Jackie Day and Tam Leffler.

Dr. David Basile, of the Geography Dept. will act as faculty adviser, and C. C. Shotts, General Secretary of the YMCA who has worked with the Seminar program since its beginning five years ago will act as general coordinator.

Though this is a Carolina-sponsored program, students from other colleges are eligible to participate. Application blanks are now available in the office of the Y, and priority is on a first come, first served basis.

Folklore Society Meeting

The North Carolina Folklore Society will hold its 50th annual meeting Friday at the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh, it was announced by the society's secretary-treasurer A. P. Hudson, UNC Kenan Professor of English recently.

The meeting, open to the public, will feature a program of folklore including folksinging, tape recordings of the speech of Ocracoke Island, and a discussion of the influence of the folksong on the religious sect, the Shakers.

Two members of the UNC faculty will be on the program. Dr. Daniel W. Patterson, assistant professor of English, will discuss and illustrate the influence of the folksong on Shaker music. Dr. Patterson has spent a summer in New England among the surviving members of the Shaker sect. He is an authority on the sect.

Dr. Lucia Morgan, associate professor of speech, will give a scientific description and some field tape recordings of the speech of Ocracoke Island.

Permit Is Denied Dental Fraternity

Xi Psi Phi dental fraternity has been denied its request for a special use permit for construction of a laboratory and meeting hall on the Pittsboro Road.

The Board of Adjustment last Tuesday took the case into consideration and ruled against the fraternity for four reasons:

The lot the fraternity proposed to use was insufficient to provide adequate separation of the building's intended use and adjoining much traffic in the area; the location of the laboratory and meeting hall would tend to depreciate surrounding property values since the structure would not be in keeping with the character of the surrounding area; and a petition was presented by 32 surrounding property owners opposing the building.

The fraternity would have located its building on the Pittsboro Road near "Dead Man's Curve," about two miles from the town limits.

The Board voted unanimously to deny the request. No other action was taken.

Miss America Doesn't Twist

How would Carolina gentlemen take to Miss America of 1961, Maria Beale Fletcher of Asheville, North Carolina? She doesn't like the twist. This startling revelation was made at a Thanksgiving press conference in Thomasville, N. C. When asked her opinion of the twist, Miss Fletcher frowned and said, "Do I have to answer that? I'm supposed to be a symbol for the teenagers and I hate to make them all mad at me."

And since Miss Fletcher can't date during the whole year without a chaperone, there will probably be a new dance craze by the time she has the opportunity to date a Carolina gentleman.

RETURNING GRAPPLER—Junior Richard Blackman, above, a 147-pounder, is one of the returnees that coach Sam Barnes will be counting on in the upcoming campaign. Blackman was one of the top performers on last year's team, which finished second in the ACC.

Barnes Has Talent On Unbalanced Squad

By PETE ROSE

Although he has lost four of his top wrestlers and has added powerful West Virginia to the schedule, Coach Sam Barnes is optimistic about his Tar Heels' chances in the upcoming campaign. Barnes thinks his club has a good chance to improve on its 5-6 record of a year ago and thereby maintain its number two position in the Atlantic Coast Conference, behind Maryland.

"The varsity should have one good lineup and a reserve lineup of inexperienced, but talented men," is the way Barnes sums up his crew. Chances of the Tar Heels having a really outstanding year may have been dashed away when four seniors, including 167-pound mainstay Pope Shuford, were prevented from wrestling this year for various reasons. Reggis Brooker (123), Cary McSwain (137), and Tom Alexander (167) are the others who will be missed.

But the unexpected return of four men to the mats and the appearance of three underclassmen who had not been out before gives the Tar Heels depth they had not counted on. Louis Arthur (115), Pete Gilchrist (137), Tripp May (130), and heavyweight Neil Ruttenberg gave Barnes a pleasant surprise by returning to the varsity wars, and Alex Macfayden, Blake Thomas, and Roland Newhouse, getting a taste of Carolina wrestling for the first time, may prove to be helpful.

"We have most of last year's good freshman team back as sophomores, but they come to us in weights where we did not necessarily need strength. This could mean a strong alternate lineup, but no help in plugging holes at 167, 177, and 130," mused the Carolina mentor. Thus Tommy Grant and Gordon Appell, who were top-flight wrestlers on last year's frosh team, will have trouble moving into the 147-pound and heavyweight slots because of stiff competition.

According to Barnes, the weight class in which the fiercest competition will take place is heavyweight, where three lettermen return, Bill Shipp, who has lettered twice, and Cole Kortner, a first stringer last year, will try to stand off challenges from Ruttenberg, Appell, and football-playing Jerry Cabe.

Barnes had planned to have the wrestle-offs for the first matches before Thanksgiving, but because the team seems "slow to round into condition," the matches will be held sometime this week. However, Barnes expects that there could be some shuffling in the lineup as the season progresses. "Cabe, Becker, and Glaser are not ready yet, and they could break into the lineup," he said.

The Tar Heels' first four matches, beginning with Washington & Lee on Dec. 1 and Virginia on Dec. 2, are all away from home.

In all, the locals will have 12 tests, facing the same eleven opponents of last year plus West Virginia.

Tar Babies Win Over Duke, 7-6; End Year At 3-2

By ED DUPREE

UNC's Tar Babies finished the 1961 football season on a successful note with a 7-6 squeaker over Duke's Blue Imps on Thanksgiving Day. The freshman squads played before a record crowd of 12,000 in the annual Cerebral Palsy Football Classic in Duke Stadium.

Dave Braine's toe provided the winning point after the Carolina frosh had marched 91 yards in the second period for a touchdown in their only sustained drive of the game. Quarterback Gary Black scored from the one-yard line for the six-pointer.

A nine-yard pass from quarterback Mark Caldwell to halfback Sonny Odom with only 10 seconds remaining in the first half narrowed the UNC lead to 7-6 and set up what proved to be the most decisive play of the game. Carolina's speedy Ronnie Jackson zoomed straight through from his left end position to block Caldwell's extra point attempt and preserve the UNC lead which turned out to be the final score.

The Tar Babies stopped the Imps three times in UNC territory before they were able to push their offense into high gear and move 91 yards for their only touchdown. Early in the opening quarter, Duke had a first down at the UNC 2 when end Al Matuza intercepted a Black pass on the 21 and returned it 19 yards. Two consecutive offsides penalties against the Imps cost them ten yards and the first Duke threat ended on the Carolina 7.

Matuza's interception was one of five aerial thefts for the homestanders in the first half. Tar Baby signal-callers Ron Tuthill, Jim Gallagher, and Black connected on only 7 of 21 passes as numerous passes bounced off their receivers. Duke connected on 10 of 31 passes for 130 yards. The Carolina passes accounted for 91 yards.

After being halted at the UNC 7, the Blue Imps gained possession at the Tar Baby 24 and 37, but were held each time. Linebacker Jay Malobicky, a 195-pound offensive center, was one of the big men in the tough Tar Heel defense.

In the second half Duke crossed the midfield stripe only once and that penetration was only to the 40. Carolina threatened with marches to the Blue Devil 30 and to the 13 on the last series of the game.

Fullback Richard Zarro, a 185-pounder from Bloomfield, N. J., led the Carolina offense with 57 yards rushing in 10 carries. Jackson gained 24 yards in his first five carries, but lost 10 late in the game to give him a net of 14 in six tries.

Duke's Biff Bracy gained 34 yards in 9 carries to spark the Blue Imp ground game, which netted only 65 yards. Ends Chuck Drulis and Matuza looked good on both offense and defense.

The victory gives Coach George Barclay's squad a 3-2 season mark. Their two defeats to N.C. State and Clemson were by a total of 4 points. The Wolflets opened the season with a 7-6 victory over the little Tar Heels and Clemson's Cubs clawed their way to a 30-27 win over UNC, despite a tremendous offensive performance by halfback Ron Jackson. Identical 20-0 victories over Wake Forest and Virginia in their only home contests gave the Tar Babies a 2-2 record before the finale with the Duke frosh.

Duke also finished the season at 3-2. They hold victories over Wake Forest, State, and Clemson. Their only loss before the UNC encounter was to the Virginia frosh.

SURPRISE AT QUARTERBACK—Sophomore George Boutselis, above, made some fans take a second look when he opened at quarterback Saturday at Wake Forest. For George the Greek, it was his first performance of the season, although all of his action was in the first half.

HARRY W. LLOYD

THE SPORTS Tabloyd

Field goals and extra points have played some important roles for the North Carolina football team in the last two seasons. Saturday's loss to Wake Forest, by 17-14 on a field goal in the final 25 seconds, was just another in an erratic series of close defeats suffered by the Tar Heels.

In the last 19 games the UNC team has played, they have been beaten 12 times. No less than five of these losses has been by more than the margin of a field goal or one or more extra points. In this period, Carolina has taken two 1-point victories, both by extra points.

The first of these losses came in the opener of the 1960 season, when Jake Shaffer of N. C. State kicked a field goal to upset the Tar Heels by 3-0. Three games later, Wake Forest, who by now has learned to use the kicking game to good advantage, slipped through with a 13-12 win on an extra point kick by Norman Snead, which was the first conversion of his illustrious collegiate career.

Maryland came along later last year and stopped the Tar Heels with a 22-19 win. The victory margin of course came in their successful extra point tries.

The "little scores" had seemed to smile the Tar Heels' way for a while this year. When they lost, it wasn't because they missed the extra points, but because they couldn't score at all. In each of the first three losses, the team was completely shut out.

Then came Duke. In 1960, an extra point by Bob Elliott had meant the difference in a tough battle as the Tar Heels won by 7-6. But in this one, nobody ever had a chance to try an extra point, for nobody ever scored a touchdown. But Duke did put through two field goals, to Carolina's one, to eke out a win in the last 10 seconds.

Wake Forest had already learned how much difference a field goal can make. Twice they had lost by 10-7 scores, to South Carolina and Maryland. So the Deacons didn't pass up the opportunity, when it appeared that they might not have time to push for a touchdown, to let Mickey Walker boot the football through the crossbar.

The game was one that the Tar Heels think tey should have won. It took more than Walker's field goal to beat them. It took fumbles, it took penalties, and it took a crucial blocked kick that resulted in a Wake Forest touchdown. It was what the Carolina team couldn't do that made the difference.

What is true about the varsity gridders can also be said about the freshman team.

The Tar Babies closed out their season last Thanksgiving with a win, by 7-6, over Duke. Coach George Barclay's team was obviously the better unit on the field. At almost every position, they outclassed the Blue Imps. However, it remained for a little halfback to decide the outcome of the game by blocking a Duke extra point try.

Carolina had thrown away chances at several scores by letting Duke intercept six passes. The Tar Babies, again, could have scored just at te game's end if they had needed the points. But the scoring difference in the two teams was the fact that Dave Braine had made his kick good, and Ronnie Jackson had dashed into the Duke field to block the Imp try for point.

Ironic, isn't it, that both of the freshman losses this season also came on extra point margins. The first defeat, at N. C. State, occurred when fullback Ken Willard was going for a two-point conversion to pull the Tar Babies from behind. He missed. The score: 7-6. Clemson matched Carolina in touchdowns for the second straight year, but pulled out their second straight win over the UNC frosh. The score was 30-27.

Most teams play at their best when they are against conference opponents. The games with teams in your own league seem to count the most, so naturally you put more into them.

Whether or not this statement is true, it can't be proved by the play of Maryland. The Terrapins lost their third ACC game in six starts last week as lowly Virginia rose up to defeat them. While coach Tom Nugent's boys have been strong enough to whip such non-conference schools as Syracuse, Air Force, SMU, and Penn State, they can't handle their own backyard pals with much regularity.

The loss to Virginia seems to be an especially big one if you consider that the Terps could have gone to the Gator Bowl had they won. The loss cost them some money, and it also cost all the other conference teams the sum of $6,000 each. That's what each team's share of the booty would have been.

Three Teams Open Seasons In Transition Week At UNC

By HARRY W. LLOYD
DTH Spors Editor

This is the week of transition as far as Carolina athletics is concerned.

Come Saturday, football will make its last appearance in Chapel Hill. Coach Jim Hickey's gridders, who lost last week at Wake Forest by 17-14, will try to salvage their fifth victory of the season from a tough Virginia team.

But before King Football can bow out, the winter sports will already have stuck their noses in the door.

Tickets for the Saturday night basketball game here with Virginia are now available to students and employees on a first-come, first-served basis. There will be no priority period.

On Friday night, both the swimusher in the cold weather season with their opening contests. Coach Sam Barnes' wrestlers pop the cap off their 61-62 year at Washington & Lee on Friday night, and then go to Virginia Saturday. The swimmers of Coach Pat Earey dive into their schedule at home Friday against Virginia Military.

One night later, the biggest of the winter sports alights on the scene with the basketball opening. Both varsity and freshman take on Virginia here Saturday. All told, there will be five separate athletic contests between UNC and University of Virginia teams on Saturday alone.

The fall season has already ended for two teams, or four if the freshmen are included. These would be the soccer and crossming team and the wrestling team country aggregations.

One of these teams brought home a championship. Coach Dale Ranson won his 50th championship as a Carolina track and cross-country coach as the UNC runners swept through their schedule with just one defeat and then captured the state and ACC titles.

The soccer team of Coach Marvin Allen ended with a loss to Duke, but nevertheless wrapped up third place in the ACC for the second straight season. The freshman soccer team closed out with a 2-1 win over Duke to end their year with a 4-4 record.

Green Pleads Guilty In New York Trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joseph Green of New York, accused fixer in the college basketball scandals, pleaded guilty in General Sessions Court Monday to two counts of bribery involving former Columbia University star Fred Portnoy.

Green, who broke down in court after his attorney entered a plea of guilty faces up to 10 years imprisonment and fines totaling $10,000 on each count. No date was set for his sentencing.

A guilty plea was entered on only two counts of a five-count indictment. They covered the alleged bribery of Portnoy, 19-year-old forward on the 1960-61 Columbia team who was said to have received $1,140 to "dump" four games.

First 'Poetry Circuit' Rider Reads At Wake Forest Today

The first rider of the North Carolina "Poetry Circuit," George Garrett, continues his journey today at Wake Forest in Winston-Salem.

Garrett, who has been a bartender, football coach, prospector for Texaco, college professor, soldier and poet, will be at Carolina Dec. 6.

Seven Tar Heel schools will participate in the frst ride: UNC, State, WC, Duke, Davidson, Wake Forest and East Carolina. Member schools will contribute $120 for each poet's visit.

The readings, tentatively set as afternoon seminars or small classes, are open to the public at no admission charge, provided there is space.

Here's Garrett, the circuit-rider, talking now to his predecessor, in a poem entitled "Holy Roller":

I know 'your' prayers, brother. I know why they ran you out of Plant City on a rail . . .
It's your voice, dark and hoarse as a clarinet in lowest register that tickles the goodwives where they live . . .
the ways of God are crazy, daze a skeptic mind like summer lightning.

Religion found a home, but poetry didn't, and the poets—two each year—will ride the North Carolina Circuit now. The UNC Press in conjunction with the Poetry Center of New York City is sponsoring the Circuit.

The first poet's circuit schedule is as follows: Wednesday, Wake Forest; Thursday, Davidson; Friday, Woman's College; Tuesday, East Carolina College Wednesday, UNC; Thursday, State College.

a graduate of Princeton, is a present member of the faculty of Rice Institute in Texas. In 1959 he won the Grand Prix de Rome and the Sewanee Review Fellowship. In 1960 he had a Ford Foundation fellowship for study at the Alley Theater in Houston.

He is poetry editor for the Transatlantic Review, has published two novels, a book of short stories, and three collections of poetry, the latest of which is "Abraham's Knife," published by the University of North Carolina Press. All poems quoted above are from that book.

In a poem entitled "Revival" describing a tent revival meeting he wrote: They leave with 'nothing to prove they camped here and tried to raise a crop of hell except the scar of dead space (where the tent was)

Howard R. Webber, editor-in-chief of the UNC Press and director of the circuit, said that he hoped the poet's words will not turn out to be a prophetic description of his own and the Poetry Circuits's coming.

Political Internships Open To 5 Students

The Department of Political Science yesterday announced a campus-wide competition for five "Politics Interships" for the summer of 1962.

Students selected will be placed as staff members in the Washington offices of U.S. Senators and Representatives for ten weeks this summer. Each will receive a stipend of $500 from the Department's Political Studies Program.

The purpose of the internships is to provide an opportunity for unusually promising students to observe national politics at first hand.

Starting on or about June 1, the students selected will begin work for their Congressman or Senator and will be expected to perform whatever duties their member asks them to perform. Generally these duties include drafting answers to the Congressman's mail, conducting research on bills before the Congress, contributing to news releases and speeches, crrying out routine clerical tasks and the like.

UNC interns have, in previous summers worked for several members of the North Carolina delegation—Senator B. Everett Jordan, Congressmen Harold Cooley, L. H. Fountain and Horace Kornegay—as well as for Congressman Richard Bolling of Missouri and Hale Boggs of Louisiana (both considered "dark-horse" candidates for the House Speakership in January), Peter Frelingheuysen and Frank Thompson, both of New Jersey, Torbert Macdonald of Massachusetts, and others.

In addition to these responsibilities, the interns hold a number of group interviews and conferences with persons prominent in national politics.

Alcoholism Related To Recreation, According To Sociologist's Study

How much alcohol John Doe drinks has a good deal to do with the amount of leisure time he has and his education in the uses of that time, according to UNC sociologist Douglas H. Sessoms, in an article published in "Inventory" and "Lifelines," educational journals on alcohol.

"There may be something in one's use of leisure time which makes him more vulnerable to alcoholism and chronic drinking," Dr. Sessoms states. "For many, drinking is more than a social skill or a part of a leisure experience. It is a single use of time, a way of recreation in itself."

Dr. Sessoms, who has made lengthy studies in the role of recreation in public life and serves as assistant chairman of the Recreation Curriculum, states his belief that "many people have nothing else to do but drink."

"When a person has several recreation interests he is not likely to be concerned with how to spend his leisure," he writes. However, when he has only one or two leisure interests, free time becomes a problem, the individual seeks out an activity which requires little of him yet fills his time. "Excessive drinking is such activity."

Border Dispute Flares Up

NEW DELHI—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru said Tuesday the Chinese Communists had advanced a border post 12 miles deeper into the disputed Sino-Indian frontier territory. He warned that India will "conduct warfare" if necessary to recover border territory seized by the Communists.

Nehru, speaking in parliament, said Red China is showing an "aggressive and offensive attitude" in staging repeated incursions along India's northern frontiers.

In a note to China released Tuesday to parliament, Nehru accused Peiping of fresh aggression and said Communist "protestations to the contrary are only a cloak to cover up their renewed incursions and aggressive activity."

National Contest Open To Students

"We live in an era of constant peril—as if we didn't know," said Edward P. Morgan, ABC Radio newsman. "For generations, commencement speakers have piously beaten to death the line 'The future belongs to youth.'

"With the lethal mess into which their elders have got things, young men and women may be pardoned if they don't want the future.

"Yes, of course, they will claim it and they can claim an increasing voice in world affairs, not tomorrow but now. I hope some of these voices of leadership will be heard in this contest," he added.

Contest Opened

News analyst Morgan opened the 1961 Edward P. Morgan Essay Contest with these words. The topic is "Youth's Role in U.S. Foreign Policy" and the contest is open to all undergraduate students in the United States.

Two prize-winning 600-word essays will earn scholarships for post-graduate studies and three-day expense paid trips to New York and Washington—for one boy and one girl. The ten semi-finalists will receive sets of the 1962, 24-volume Encyclopedia Britannica.

The two winners will talk with policy-making leaders of government, labor and the broadcast industry. They will meet and dine with Cabinet members, Senators, Congressmen representing key committees and heads of various Federal agencies.

Bowles To Judge

Chester Bowles, special presidential advisor; Senator J. W. Fulbright, chairman, Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Senator Everett M. Dirksen, Senate minority leader; R. Sargent Shriver, director, U.S. Peace Corps; and Edward P. Morgan, will judge the contest.

Each contestant may submit any number of essays, with a maximum of 600 words each. Entry deadline is midnight, Dec. 31.

Morgan will interview the winning students, on his weekday news program, and will use their essays as a part of subsequent radio broadcasts.

NC Led Southern 'Progressivism'

North Carolina led the Southern movement in progressivism during the period of the twenties, George B. Tindall, associate history professor, said recently.

Professor Tindall was one of four speakers included on the universities series of lectures on 20th century American politics. Tindall's speech was entitled "The Metamorphosis of Progressivism: Southern Politics in the Twenties."

Certain events such as the Democratic Convention of 1924, the Scopes Trial, and the election of 1928, have given, "Ku Kluxury and Fundamentalism the appearance of dominating Southern politics to a degree that more permanently significant developments have been overshadowed," according to Professor Tindall.

"Any serious attempt to understand Southern politics in the twenties must begin with recognition that the progressive urge of previous decades did not disappear but was transformed through the emphasis upon certaain of its tendencies to the neglect of others, that in its new form progressivism pervaded Southern politics of the twenties," said Professor Tindall.

Picketers Meet Planned Thursday

There will be a mass meeting of the Chapel Hill Citizens Committee for Open Movies Thursday night at 8 p.m. in St. Joseph's Church. The Varsity Theater's proposals to admit UNC Negro students to its movies will be the subject of discussion.

The present picketing of the Varsity by the Committee cannot be stopped except by a decision of the whole committee in mass meeting. Picketing has been in progress nightly at the Varsity for the past two weeks.

12 UNC Delegates To Attend NSA Meeting

Positions Open On Frosh Committees

Freshman Class President Bob Spearman has announced interviews for six new freshman class committees. Spearman will interview prospective committee members from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in 102 Howell Hall today and tomorrow.

The committees, outlined by Spearman at the first freshman officer meeting, include Social Affairs, Scholarship, Dorm Problems, Publicity, Finance, and Public Affairs.

The Social Affairs Committee will be headed by Dolly Isom who, with her committee, will plan freshman dances with Spencer and the Nurses' Dorm as well as those with the girls from Woman's College.

Class Scholarship

The Scholarship Committee will have as its duties the establishment of a class scholarship, the opening of classrooms later at night for studying, and the honoring of a member of the faculty by an annual teaching award. Pat Dagenhart was appointed temporary chairman of this committee.

The Committee on Dorm Problems, in addition to aiding in current problems, will head the research on the possibility of constructing study rooms and social rooms in many of the freshman dorms.

The Publicity Committee will act as the source of advertising for class money-making projects, social events, and various other functions. The president recommended that a member of The Daily Tar Heel staff serve on this committee.

Students Warned Of Strictness In Drop-Add Period

J. Carlyle Sitterson, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, yesterday called on all advisers to caution students that "changes during the 'drop-add' period in the spring will be made only when they are clearly necessary."

In a memorandum addressed to departmental advisers in the College of Arts and Sciences, Sitterson said, "During the fall semester 'drop-add' period, the advisers in the college took considerable pains to avoid unnecessary changes in student registrations."

"We were moved partly by an awareness of the great waste of time and money involved in such changes but mostly by a wish to broadcast the idea that preregistration is a commitment not to be entered into without serious thought and consultation," the note said.

He continued, "The result of our efforts was not statistically sensational—a reduction from 47.57 to 42.22 per cent of changed registrations—but we think that we made some progress toward our principal aim of calling attention to the importance of preregistering wisely and correctly."

"Therefore, we would like to ask you to help us during the approaching preregistration period doing all that you can to see that your advisees choose their courses thoughtfully," he concluded.

Sophomore Meet Planned Tonight

An open meeing of the Sophomore Class will be held tonight in Gerrard Hall at 8 p.m. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss class project ideas and introduce the new officers and cabinet of the class.

George Rosenthal, newly elected sophomore president, said the meeting was "unique" in that it presented the class its first chance to meet as a whole since entering UNC. He urged all sophomores to attend.

Rosenthal also said the class officers had arranged for a combo, "The Daiquiris," to play in Y-Court after the meeting. He invited any interested persons to come and "twist."

STUDENT CARS

The Dean of Student Affairs office yesterday advised all students who brought back cars from the holidays or have not registered their cars to do so immediately. The regulation requires registration within 48 hours. Failure to register vehicles operated in and around Chapel Hill is punishable by dismissal from school.

Debate Team To Visit NYU Meet

The debate team will be one of forty-five Southern and Eastern teams participating in the Hall of Fame Debate Tournament at New York University this weekend.

Jeffrey Lawrence and Mack Armstrong will represent Carolina on the affirmative and Bill Imes and Haywood Clayton will argue the negative. Professor Donald Springen will accompany his team to the tournament, which will consist of five rounds of debate on the national topic.

WC Host For Fall Regional Conference

Twelve UNC students will represent the University at the Carolinas-Virginia fall regional assembly of the National Student Association this weekend at Woman's College in Greensboro.

"The Importance of the University in the Emerging Areas" will be the topic of the conference.

The assembly will begin Friday afternoon and continue through Saturday night.

Topics for discussion will be: "The Asian Student, Problems and Challenges," with a panel including Yoshio Teshima, UNC Japanese student on an NSA scholarship and Jayanta Chatterjee, UNC Indian graduate student; "The Latin American Student, the University Struggle," with a panel including UNC student Charlie Parrish and Jacques Ginesta, UNC grad student from Uruguay.

Student Responsibilities

"The African Student, Responsibility in an Explosive Society," with a panel including Jim McCorkel, UNC student who has studied in Ghana.

Other speakers include:

—James Kweder, Peace Corps representative.

—Paul Potter, NSA national affairs vice-president.

—John Thompson, asst. secretary general for World Confederation of Organizations of the Teaching Profession.

UNC Representatives

Official UNC representatives will be Dwight Wheless, Robin Britt, Scott Summers, Bill Hobbs, Bill Straughn, Allen Ashby.

UNC is allowed to send the maximum number of six delegates because its enrollment is over 8,000.

President of the Student Body Bill Harriss and John Brent will attend as NSA regional officers. Other unofficial delegates will be Hank Patterson, John Randall, Tim Tetlow and Norman Smith.

Expenses will be paid by the individual universities. Other schools to participate include Duke University, N. C. State College, East Carolina College, North Carolina College, and Sweetbriar College.

NSA Prexy

Other persons who will be on panels or speaking include: Ed Garvey, NSA president; Dr. Leon Helguera, N. C. State "expert" on Latin American affairs; Musa Shamuyarira, now a professor at Livingston College, from Southern Rhodesia; Dr. George T. Yu, "expert" on Asian affairs;

Luchita Burillo, WC student, and a former Miss Panama; Oscar Espinosa, N. C. State student, and past president of the National Union of Students of Peru;

Rachid Benouameur, president of the U.S. branch of the National Union of Students of Algeria (in exile); Charles Biyoyuowei, A. & T. student, from Liberia; and Joe Love, from NSA.

UNC Foreign Students Dispute U.S. Survey

By LEON ROOKE and W. D. WEEKES

Of the more than 50,000 foreign students now studying at American institutions of higher learning 165 are enrolled at Carolina.

Eleven ranking educators — after a study of five months—told the American Association of Land Grant Colleges recently that many of these 50,000 may become anti-American, "are being insulted" during their stay in this country, do not get to know either the American people or the American way of life, and still more do not know what is expected of them in their relationship with the opposite sex.

A representative body of the 165 foreign students studying here have disputed the truth of that report—at least insofar as UNC is concerned.

Lebanese, Japanese, Latin Americans, Europeans, and students from India alike all echoed a similar refrain: "I feel right at home," a girl from Lebanon said. "I feel I know the American people and as very much at home here," a Japanese student said. "Very friendly," an industrial-relations student from India said. "Anti-American? No danger of that," another said. Prof. A. C. Howell, Adviser to Foreign Students since 1958, summed up the general attitudes of foreign students who study here and then return to their native countries: "They are very favorably impressed with UNC and have no anti-American inclinations."

He had on his desk a letter just received from Volker Bergman, a former Goettingen Exchange student now back in Hamburg, Germany. "I have left the U.S. with a tear in my eye," he writes, "because the country and its people have meant so much to me. . . . I will never forget the experience and will always try to carry the message of the idea behind our exchange wherever I go . . .

Learn From Others

"How else will we be able to live in peace or even survive if we continue to live in the narrowness of our own opinions without willingness to respect and learn from others?" he asks.

Howell produced from an assorted stack another letter from an Indian now teaching in Bengalore. He expressed a similar view.

Speaking of dating and her social life here in the United States a statuesque Lebanese girl said that her "nationality had never been an obstacle in her relationship with men."

A Rumanian girl declared that she had more boy-friends now at UNC than she had ever had before or knows what to do with now.

But the picture is not all that rosy. The educator's report contains many facts applicable to foreign student life in Chapel Hill.

Yoshio Teshima, editor of an English-language newspaper in Tokyo (The Maseda Guardian), is here studying for a year under the "Foreign Student Leadership Program" of the National Education Association on Scholarships. He is picketing "every other Saturday" the Varsity Theater which has not yet completely yielded to integration demands.

Stanley Phillips, despite his Anglican name, is from India, studying on Industrial Relations. He was recently denied service at a bus station lunch counter in one of North Carolina's larger cities.

"Americans are more like friendly acquaintances than like buddies," states another graduate student from India.

"In my relationship with American students I feel I can't really get friendly with them, although they appear and act friendly," said a part-time instructor in the Statistics Department here. He is from India also.

"I still do not feel at home here," another (Japanese) statistics instructor said, "merely because of the difficulty in communication. Everything is all right, but for deep understanding with the people here, it just isn't there."

Anti-American

But whether from any of these criticisms anti-American feelings might later develop, all interviewed students were quick to dismiss the idea.

Yochio Teshima had this explanation for the statement made in the educator's report that many of the most hardened anti-American leaders in Japan, China, and Germany were educated in this country:

"The extreme anti-American leader in Japan is rare," he says. The term "anti-American" does not have the same connotations in Japan as it has here, he explains.

"A leader's first duty is to his own country. If in affecting policies which are for the good of his own people he offends or runs counter to American policy then he becomes known as anti-American. That is not the case at all. He is only doing what he feels is best for his country. But oftentimes he will be known over here as an anti-American. The term is inaccurate and quite often inappropriate.

"However, my biggest complaint with students and the American people is the lack of interest shown by them in the affairs of foreign nations. In Japan, for instance, the students are very interested in American students enrolled in the universities there because they are interested in America. Thre is little of that interest here."

Another foreign student, this time a European, expressed the same thought. Said he: "I think that even the most educated here are ignorant about affairs in foreign countries."

He found deplorable the fact that "nine out of ten foreign students on an American campus were leaders in their own countries, but here their services are not being used."

In more detail, the response to the findings of the report on foreign students in America, went like this: Margerite Bou Raad, an English and Religion major from Lebanon who holds down a four-hour job in the student dining hall, says:

"I have more American friends than foreign. It is natural, however, for foreign students to group together. They can communicate with each other about things which they do not find in the American culture. I feel very much at home. When I return to Lebanon I will miss America a great deal. It is too bad foreign students do not get to know the American people."

Miss Bou Raad, who has the advantage of good looks and an excellent command of English, is in her second year here but her third in the U.S. The Chapel Hill community is very good for foreign students, she said. The Orientation Committee for Foreign Students, on which she has worked, does such a good job that the new student here for the first time is not lost or discouraged, she believes.

Just Don't Get Caught

Norwood Brothers' Esso Station is currently advertising an electronic device designed to warn drivers when they approach radar speed traps.

Conveniently clipped to the sunvisor or lying on the dash, the delightful little device allows drivers to speed like demons until they approach a "whammy." Then the faithful electronic lookout omits a warning screech, allowing the driver ample time to slow down before entering the trap.

In other words, the idea is not to avoid excessive speeds and possible fatal accidents, but to avoid getting caught. The gadget markets for an economical $39.95—less than the fine any self - respecting judge would levy for speeding.

Obviously it's a bargain. For a mere $40, the average driver can assure himself almost complete freedom from speeding laws and can break the law with impunity, guard against offensive patrolmen and kill himself and others without so much as a glance to the side of the road in search of a "whammy."

Surprisingly, the electronic stool-pigeon doesn't have an attachment which thumbs its nose at the patrolman as the driver rides by him chuckling at his cleverness.

The sale of this device—which is advertised on a local radio station—is an open mockery of speeding laws. It not only encourages speeding, but invites drivers to scoff at attempts to enforce highway safety regulations.

Gerald Johnson, a contributing editor of the New Republic, suggested recently that the best way to combat highway fatalities is to hang all highway commissioners when highway deaths reach a certain figure.

Perhaps a better suggestion would be to hang manufacturers and retailers of devices designed to help drivers evade speeding laws.

Aid For Tito

President Kennedy must do something in his own right to convince the people of the wisdom of continuing aid to Communist Yugoslavia, if that course of action is to be followed.

The President ordered a complete investigation of the arrangement after the conference of "non-aligned" nations at Belgrade. He felt that Tito's statements on that occasion were too friendly to the cause of international communism.

The average American makes no distinction between a Communist in Yugoslavia and one in the Soviet Union. He knows little of the history of differences between the two nations which led to a break in 1948.

Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy, along with their secretaries of state, have decided the gamble of aid to Tito is worthwhile in an effort to keep Yugoslavia out of the Soviet bloc.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk recently stated:

"There is no doubt that our aid did serve to strengthen Yugoslavia's efforts to maintain its independence."

This is not enough for most Americans. They favor cutting off any form of aid and particularly military help if the recipient does not come to full agreement on foreign policy with the United States.

Brushed aside are the claims that Yugoslavia has voted against the Soviet Union several times in the United Nations and has been the object of heavy attacks by delegates to the Communist congresses.

The Administration's burden was increased recently by a charge from Sen. James Eastland's internal security sub-committee that Tito is using U. S. aid to finance an anti-Western campaign among neutral nations.

Eastland's group released a study by Dr. Charles Zalar, former Yugoslav diplomat now connected with the Library of Congress. Zalar rejected the theory that Yugoslavia can be drawn so far from the Soviet Union that it would refuse to fight on the side of international communism in event of war.

He charged additionally that Tito has been traveling through underdeveloped countries and distributing grants and credits in an attempt to direct these countries toward communism.

This report has complicated matters for the Administration. The President, charged by law with at least once a year reviewing Yugoslavian aid to decide if it is in the best interests of this country, must not only make a clear-cut judgment, but must set forth his reasons in considerable detail if aid is to be continued.

End Of An Era?

The Di-Phi, the oldest collegiate debating society in the country, is in danger of collapsing due to lack of interest. The organization's membership is dwindling as more and more members find other activities and studies too pressing.

The Di-Phi is this year 165 years old, making it by far the oldest student organization on campus.

Should it fold, it would mean the end of an old tradition at Carolina. The Di-Phi has long been a stimulating and important outlet for student expression.

We hope that the Di-Phi can continue to give students a podium

Should it not, it would be a blow not only to a tradition but, more important, to student expression.

Isn't South Going To Rise Again?

If the students petition of Avery Dorm concerning the segregation policy of the Varsity Theater is any indication of what the majority of University students think toward such a step, what then has happened to the "solid south?" The petition stated that: "We the undersigned of Avery Dorm will never go to the Varsity Theater under its present policy of segregation." The immediate reaction that I got from it was that the signers were a group of hard shelled Northerners. Upon investigating their hometowns, however, I found that 18 were from right here in the South and only 3 were from the North while 6 were unidentified.

Is the old and famous Solid South really losing all of its solidity? Or maybe a few students in a dorm wanted publicity and possible gave very little thought to the issue. Will the South ever really rise again or is everything simply a collection of standards that have been practiced for many years and will slowly become changed to the popular conscience of the American people?

An Opinion On 'Beggar's Opera'

(The review of The Beggar's Opera was written by Chris Farran.)

To the Editor:

Since there was no by-line to the review of "The Beggar's Opera" which appeared in the Friday issue of the DTH, I don't know to whom to address this letter except the editor.

There seems to have been some discrepancy in the reviewer's mind as to whose performance was considered to be "Perhaps the strongest male part on the stage . . ." The anonymous reviewer credits what must obviously have been Jack Hargett's performance of Lockit to Wallace Johnson who played The Jailer.

This is not to discredit Mr. Johnson's performance in any way; however I don't think his part would be considered among "the other male leads."

Joyner Boycotts Varsity

Attention Editor,
The Daily Tar Heel:

We, the undersigned residents of Joyner, condemn the segregation policy of the Varsity Theatre and all such establishments which practice and support racial discrimination. Therefore in accordance with a recent similar action of Avery Dormitory, we shall not patronize the Varsity Theatre under its present policy.

"You Think I'm Nuts? If I Told Off A Real Criminal, He Might Make Trouble For Me"

Readers Question Opinion Expression

Dear Sir:

In regard to the last NAACP meeting in Gerrard Hall, a resolution was adopted to continue picketing of the Varsity Theater. A resolution was also adopted to investigate the hiring practices of the Unversity and of Chapel Hill merchants. This organization plans to open employment for Negroes as secretaries and cashiers. We are not against this but we believe in the free enterprise of a democratic government. An employer has the right to hire whomsoever he wishes regardless of race or creed. A merchant also has the right to refuse service or admission to anyone he pleases. The actions of the NAACP in this regard are subversive. This organization or any other organization cannot force anything upon anyone. When it tries to do so it violates the very principles of democracy.

Recently a booth has been set up in Lenoir Hall to "sign up for picketing, accept contributions and enlist support for integration." We believe that a group has a right to express its opinions publicly; however, when it infringes upon the rights of others it no longer has this right.

Spiegel Thanks Freund

Mr. King:

I would like to express my gratitude to Mr. Freund and to the Daily Tar Heel (Fri. 17 Nov 1961) for making publicly available such a clear and eloquent statement concerning freedom of the individual. Surely no one can now deny the inalienable right of the businessman to discriminate among those who would patronize him and to cater only to those who satisfy whatever demands he might make. I anxiously await the companion statement which Mr. Freund must be preparing even now expressing in a comparably eloquent manner the rights of patrons to discriminate among businessmen on the basis of whatever criteria they deem appropriate. I have every confidence that Mr. Freund with his clear thinking and lucid exposition will make the patron's right of boycott as abundantly obvious to all reasonable people as he has made the businessman's right of discrimination.

SG Committees Functioning Full Steam

Student Government activities during October reached a new peak as each committee began to function in a "full steam ahead" capacity. One very favorable report comes from the Student Credit Commission. Chairman Manning reports that "it is with a great deal of pleasure to the Chapel Hill merchants, UNC Student Government, and to myself that this committee has not been called upon to perform its prescribed duties" in enforcing payment of bad checks.

The NSA has begun a bi-weekly column in the DTH in an effort to familiarize students with the structure and policies of USNSA. In order to increase an awareness of national issues the USNSA has begun the sale of a "non-biased, issue-oriented magazine," CURRENT. The NSA is selling subscriptions. Highlighting the month for NSA is the recent bid to have the 15th National Student Congress here at UNC. The bid entails quite an extensive investigation of UNC facilities and the committee is already making tentative arrangements for the Congress.

Having held weekly meetings in October, the International Students' Board has shown great progress and deserves special credit. The Board has plans for a special speaker sometime before the Christmas holidays in order to provide information as well as opinion on current international problems. Members of the Board are also presently writing several countries ". . . . to see just what exchange, scholarship, educative materials, etc. they could make available and/or are at least sympathetic to."

Further work of the ISB includes close work with the administration and Mr. Shotts of the YMCA on the proposed and "very tentative" plans for a branch of UNC abroad. Also, the Board helped to host a large number of foreign officers in a recent tour of the campus.

HIGH ATTENDANCE at the Campus Affairs Board's meeting has spirited work in several areas by the Board. One important area of investigation has been the Umstead Act and its relevance and pertinence to present and future plans of the Campus Affairs Board.

The Umstead Act, very familiar to administrative circles, in short provides that the University cannot compete with private enterprises. In other areas, the Campus Affairs Board arranged to have twelve study roooms opened for evening use; the cut policy was investigated with a majority of professors stating their preference for the present system; and the Counselor program was viewed by use of a random sample questionnaire.

The Student Athletic Council reports several new projects including a group of girls to be called "Carolina Sweethearts" who will welcome visiting athletic teams. The group is to be composed of a representative selected by each women's dormitory, sorority and Stray Greeks—a total of sixteen girls. The Carolina Women's Council is providing assistance in this endeavor. The Council also attempted to charter a bus for the Maryland game but response of the students was very poor, and plans were dropped.

THE CHAIRMEN of the Men's and Women's Councils, the Attorney General, the President of the Student Body and members of the Councils have begun a speaking tour which will reach every dorm and house in order to decrease the misunderstanding that now exists about the Honor System. This project is sponsored by the Honor System Commission which is also writing 250 secondary schools in North Carolina for the purpose of conveying Carolina's emphasis on honor.

In an effort to bring a closer relationship between the three branches of the Consolidated University, the CUSC sponsored the purchase of a flag to be presented to and retained by the winner of the football game on Consolidated University Day. Should the game ever result in a tie, the flag would remain in possession of WC until one of the two teams emerged victorious.

For a brief turn to finances, the Budget Committee plans to have all organizations receiving legislative appropriations make monthly reports to the Budget Committee. The Budget Committee initiated this practice in order to keep closer check on the spending of Student Government funds.

One group which deserves quite a bit of credit for its work is the Secretariat, headed by Student Body Secretary Mary Townsend. The Secretariat, composed of approximately fifteen girls, has done a commendable job of handling Student Government typing and office work. I extend a public "thank you" to them.

ONCE AGAIN Student Government has been proud to receive the Richard Welling Memorial Award from USNSA. The Welling Award is given annually by USNSA to that group or Student Government which has done the most outstanding work in some particular field. The Student Government won the award for its work last year in cooperation wth the Academic Affairs Committee and the Campus NSA Committee in the field of human relations. Special recognition and congratulations are extended to those two committees whose diligent efforts made this 1st Place Award possible. Student Government was further pleased to hear of the appointment of President Bill Harriss as Chairman of the Governor's Student Committee for a Better North Carolina. President Harriss has done an exceptional job as Chairman and representative of the UNC Student Body.

The greatest disappointment in October was the lack of student support given to the Entertainment Committee. This was the first effort at providing the entire student body with top entertainment. The Committee did a good job; however, a failure of student support has caused a review of the idea of campus-wide entertainment and organization. Possible improvements, reorganization and/or suggestions will be forthcoming. (This attempt at campus-wide entertainment recorded a net loss of $2800.)

An overwhelming success is reported by the Carolina Forum on the recent showing of "Operation Abolition" film concerning the San Francisco "riots." More than 500 people were turned away due to lack of seating as Fulton Lewis, III, and Mike Harrington debated after the film.

Due to the length of this October Report the Student Legislature will be included in the Report for November.

Respectfully submitted,
DWIGHT WHELESS,
Presidential Assistant

Against The Pickets

Dear Sirs:

It is astonishing and somewhat disgusting to see, as one goes down Franklin Street, a few individuals pacing the sidewalk in front of theaters, protesting the inequality of American citizens. And yet it is true that intelligent human beings resort to such foolishness. While College Joe walks back and forth with his placard, demonstrating his broad-mindedness, he is portraying to a gullible general public, a figure of defiance, distrust, and disdain.

He draws the attention of the curious who throng to see and to know. He gets the sympathies of those cowards who are too ashamed to take a definite stand, fearing they might tumble from the social ladder. He receives harsh criticism from many people who are firm believers in racial integration and who prefer not to see immature and elementary actions taken over this critical issue.

YES, JOE makes the headlines. He made them by demonstrating during the lunch-counter episodes and the popular "freedom rides." But instead of providing a solution to the problem—instead of uniting two races in harmony—he shows his stupidity and further divides the South with dissension.

I do not intend to condemn one race or the other, to deny one's civil rights, or to dispute the word of the United States Supreme Court, but I do want to state one simple opinion. If sidewalk demonstrations indicate anything, they give an example of what is happening in American colleges. No wonder the older generations raise their eyebrows and voice their doubts when one mentions the responsibilities which college students must bear as our nation's leaders. No wonder businessmen, ministers, educators, and other adults eye graduating college material with suspicion in the light of communist aggression. And no small wonder that the NAACP rejoices when it sees all of the College Joes, the "cream of the crop," take up their placards and nonchalantly march on their crusades.

The question remains to be one of great controversy. But it should seem clear to most people that the method of demonstrating disterts the underlying reasons for integration. Let me reiterate—There will continue to be a sectionalistic South as long as our nation's intellectuals maintain their derisive march.

JFK Tells Reds Berlin Threatens Peace In Century

MOSCOW (UPI)—President Kennedy told the Russian people Tuesday there can be "peace in this century" if the Berlin question is solved, and he proposed internationalization of the highway lifeline leading from the city to West Germany.

Kennedy said that if the Soviet Union would stick to its own national interests and stop trying to communize the world, one of the great threats to American-Soviet relations would be removed.

UNC Scientists Lead Varied Lives With Many Interests

Contrary to some popular notions about scientists and the way they live, faculty members who are scientists at Carolina demonstrate themselves to be practitioners of the arts, more than ordinary participants in community affairs, readers of a broad variety of non-technical books and avid followers of sports events.

Most of them are devotees of television and enjoy a wide range of non-academic interests in their off-class hours.

A survey of activities of scientists on the campus here, after they leave the laboratories and classrooms, reveal them to be devoted family men. Their wives and children receive as much or more of their leisure-hours attention as the wives and children of lawyers, merchants, or other business and professional men.

A poll conducted among scientists here show them to be men with hobbies, usually practiced in the home. A substantial number are casual musicians.

Eighty per cent of them mow their own lawns. One has acquired a "lady's-model" lawn mower for his wife.

A fair proportion have workshops in the home. Sixty per cent sometimes do the home cooking, usually when a favorite dish is preferred by the family.

Scientists at Chapel Hill are able to smile at the caricature often presented of the "mad scientists"—and prove that it isn't so. The survey conducted here contradicts the popular impressions that recently have been circulated.

Results of interviews conducted by Nancy von Lazar of the University News Bureau explode several myths related to scientists and their cultural and social interests and attitudes.

Special Report

"The Image of the Scientist" is the title of a special report of new interpretation just issued that will serve as one means of showing to high school and college students who may consider careers in sciences that the usual daily activities of science faculty members are normal, rewarding, stimulating, and conducive to a wholesome intellectual and social life.

The study refers to an unfortunate "Stereotyped Image" and then shows how scientists on the campus here don't fit the distorted picture often presented.

Ann Roe of the Harvard School of Education referred to the popular notion in a speech in 1960 to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. She said: "The general public image of the scientist has not been and indeed is not now a flattering one, and at best it certainly is not an endearing one." She reported conclusions of surveys reporting scientists to be ungregarious, untalkative and rather asocial.

A. E. Friedenberg referred in the August, 1961 "Commentary" to a pilot study conducted among high school students by anthropologist Margaret Mead, showing the "mad scientist" image to be widespread among high school students.

Stratified Sample

Members of the faculty here were interviewed personally and asked how they spent their spare time. They were questioned about their hobbies, cultural interests, home life and other facets of their out-of-class experience.

Of the 104 scientists of professorial rank (professor, associate and assistant professor) in eight academic departments of the physical and biological sciences, 25 faculty members were interviewed. The cross-section is considered a "stratified sample" and a fair appraisal of the interests of scientists here. Departments of mathematics, physics, chemistry, zoology, geology, statistics, botany and psychology are represented.

One other finding is the discovery that scientists here decided on science careers, not in early life or in high schools, but after they got to college. Only two attribute the influence of "an inspirational teacher" to their choice of a career.

Music, literature and drama—in that order of preference—are the most entertaining arts for the majority of those interviewed. Ten of the 25 like ballet.

Leisure time is taken up with household and yard chores, family, hobbies, reading and going out to dinner and to parties. Twenty-one of the 25 "enjoy" parties; like many other men they are sometimes reluctant to go, but once there have a good time. Four of the 25 say they don't like parties.

Eleven of the 25 have areas set aside in the home for workshops, and ten of these are for woodwork, the other for electronics. Three had no hobbies at all, although one makes a hobby out of "avoiding gardening." One is an amateur magician. Hi fi, stamp collecting, and antique collecting are among the hobbies. One man says he has abandoned a once-practiced threefold combination of hobbies—poker, horse races, and wine tasting.

Basketball is the favorite spectator sport, with baseball and football runners-up.

Sixteen of the 25 own television sets. They watch the silver screen frequently, but "selectively."

A large majority subscribe to one or more news periodicals in addition to scientific journals. Time magazine leads, followed by Life, National Geographic, Saturday Review, Harper's, Saturday Evening Post.

Although all the scientists read non-technical books, they don't like book-selection clubs. They prefer to make their own selections.

Check your opinions against L&M's Campus Opinion Poll #12

❶ Are there too few or too many intellectuals in high government posts?

☐ Too few ☐ Too many

❷ Is it wrong for a faculty member to date a coed?

☐ YES ☐ NO

❸ What gives you the most smoking pleasure in a filter cigarette?

☐ Quality tobacco
☐ Quality filter
☐ Both

Expect more, get more from L&M

There's actually more rich-flavor leaf in L&M than even in some unfiltered cigarettes. You get more body in the blend, more flavor in the smoke, more taste through the filter. So get Lots More from filter smoking with L&M . . . the cigarette that smokes heartier as it draws freely through the pure-white, modern filter.

Buckeyes Replace Alabama In Top Spot

HARRY W. LLOYD

THE SPORTS Tabloyd

A coach's job wouldn't be as hard if he had plenty of good football players—at the right positions. The usual headache comes when either there aren't enough good ones, or they all play at the same spot. There isn't a lot that a coach can do about the first condition. But when he is faced with the second problem, then you can really see what kind of coach he is.

Hardly any team is without this problem. Almost everybody has too many fullbacks, quarterbacks, ends, etc. Carolina's Jim Hickey knows what this situation means, and the way he has reacted to it has meant a big change in the Tar Heel lineup this year.

For instance, the UNC team has been loaded with fullbacks for several years. Most of these men could have done well at the fullback position if they had been given a chance to play there. However, it's just about impossible for five different men to play a lot at one position.

Two years ago, the team was heavily loaded with capable line busters. There was big Don Klochak, the 235-pounder, and Bob Shupin, who had been a starter as a sophomore. Then there were a couple of sophomores who gave promise of being great, Bob Elliott and Joe Davies.

What did Hickey do? He moved Shupin to guard, where he became one of the conference's fastest linemen and an excellent place kicker as well (kicking 6 straight extra points in the 50-0 win over Duke). Klochak played some at fullback, but mainly Hickey went along with his promising sophomores, who today are among the best fullbacks in the league.

The same problem at the same position came up again last year. George Knox, a good tackler and a hard runner, wouldn't have seen much action if he had remained behind Elliott and Davies in the UNC lineup. Hickey made a move and switched Knox to end, where for a while, he was still the number three man. But Knox learned the tricks of the new position quickly, and now is probably the best defensive end on the team.

John Hammett, who played a lot at end against Wake Forest, was too switched from fullback to end as a red shirt last fall, and kept the new position when he moved up to the varsity. Joe Robinson, a fullback as a freshman, is another who has made the change from the backfield to the end of the line.

There is another change, however, that has meant even more to the team today.

When Ward Marslender joined the UNC varsity in 1960, he showed promise of being a great running quarterback. Marslender was a good faker, and seemed to be well suited to the Carolina split-T offense. Hickey experimented with him, and started him in the first game of the year.

As a quarterback, however, Marslender just wasn't up to beating out Ray Farris for the top spot. Farris, with more experience and finesse and a better passing arm, soon moved Marslender off the field and onto the bench. After the first half of the season, Farris was playing all the time and it looked as if Marslender might have to wait until his senior year to see anything but defensive duty.

There had been rumblings that Hickey would move Marslender to halfback, but he stuck with him all through the campaign in case anything should happen to keep Farris from playing.

But when spring practice rolled around, the Washington junior was running at halfback, and Junior Edge, who was recruited as a halfback, was the second team quarterback.

It took Marslender almost a half season to catch on to the eccentricities of the new position. It took a different kind of running and a different kind of blocking to play there. But after a few games had gone by, he had learned his lessons well. Marslender became the team's best pass receiver, as is proven by his game-winning catch against Tennessee, an excellent broken field runner, and a capable defensive back as well.

He still wears a quarterback's number, 17. When Farris graduates, Marslender will have had more experience at quarterback than any man on the team with the possible exception of defensive specialist John Flournoy. There may be more rumblings among the crowd urging Hickey to move Marslender back to quarterback.

We don't think he will do it, and hope he doesn't.

Halfback Alan White of Wake Forest, who wasn't a good enough high school player to get a football scholarship to the University of North Carolina, has won the ACC ball-carrying championship. The kid from Oak City, who played six-man football before going to college, racked up 586 yards in 93 carries for a 6.3 average in 10 games.

Nobody has a faint chance of catching him. Fullback Dick Day of South Carolina, who has completed his season, finished with 400 yards in 100 carries. The closest man behind Day is Gib Carson of Carolina, and Carson would have to gain 200 yards Saturday against Virginia in order to overtake White. Such a performance is almost out of the realm of reality.

However, Carson, with 388 yards now in 107 carries, shouldn't have much trouble in taking the runnerup spot. He needs only 13 yards to overtake Day. Carson has already cinched one title—most times carried.

LAYUP TRY—Varsity basketball forward Bryan McSweeney, 44, drops in a layup shot in a pre-season scrimmage against the freshmen and the reserves earlier this year. Also shown is Bill Brown, left, of the freshmen; reserve Art Katz, 43, and captain Jim Hudock, 33. Both varsity and freshman teams open their seasons here Saturday night against Virginia.

Ernie Davis Of Syracuse Cops '61 Heisman Trophy

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ernie Davis, Syracuse University's All-America halfback who eclipsed the school's rushing records set by the great Jimmy Brown, Tuesday was named the winner of the 1961 Heisman Memorial Award as the outstanding college football player in the country.

Davis, who rolled for 2,386 yards in three varsity seasons to top the 2,091 Syracuse record set by Brown, narrowly defeated Ohio State fullback Bob Ferguson in close voting by 840 sports writers and broadcasters throughout the nation.

The Syracuse star was the 27th winner—and the first Negro—of the Heisman award, which is presented by the Downtown Athletic Club.

A total of 179 voters named Davis as the top player. He also received 103 second-place votes and 81 third-place votes for a total of 824 points. Three points were allotted for a first-place vote, two for second, and one for third.

In Syracuse, Davis received news of his selection by saying, "This is certainly one of the happiest days of my life."

"This is the kind of thing you always dream about, but you're sure it will never happen to you," he said.

Ferguson Places Second

Ferguson received 122 first-place votes and a total of 771 points. Jimmy Saxton, the University of Texas' free-wheeling halfback, had 81 first-place votes and 551 points for third place. Quarterback Sandy Stephens of Minnesota had 104 first-place votes but only 543 points to miss third place by a narrow margin. Quarterback Pat Trammell of Alabama was fifth with 362 points and guard Joe Romig of Colorado was the highest-placed lineman in sixth place with 279 points.

Others who finished high were: 7, Quarterback John Hadl, Kansas, 172 points; 8, end Gary Collins, Maryland, 167; 9, Quarterback Roman Gabriel, North Carolina State, 155; 10, Tackle Merlin Olsen, Utah State, 155; 11, Center Alex Kroll, Rutgers, 70; 12, End Greg Mather, Navy, 67; 13, Halfback Dave Hoppman, Iowa State, 61; 14, Halfback Lance Alworth, Arkansas, 50.

Davis, named to the UPI All-America team in 1960 and a leading candidate to repeat, stands 6-2 and weighs 212 pounds. During the past season he gained 823 yards in 150 carries, an average of 5.5 yards, and scored 15 touchdowns as part of a total of 94 points. He also was the Orange's leading pass catcher with 16 receptions for 157 yards.

In addition to breaking the total rushing record set by Brown, now a star with the professional Cleveland Browns, during his career at Syracuse, Davis also broke Brown's records for total yards gained all ways with 3,414, scoring with 220 points, and touchdowns with 35.

Track Coach Dale Ranson has issued a call for all persons interested in trying out for the track team to report to practice. Indoor workouts for the upcoming season started yesterday in the Tin Can.

There are three practice periods each day—at 2:15, 3:15, and 4:15 in the afternoon. Both freshmen and varsity trackmen have been invited to come out.

Coaches Rate Unbeaten OSU 1st In Nation

NEW YORK (UPI) — Big Ten champion Ohio State, unbeaten but tied once in nine games, was named the No. 1 major college football team today in the next-to-last weekly balloting by the United Press International coaches rating board.

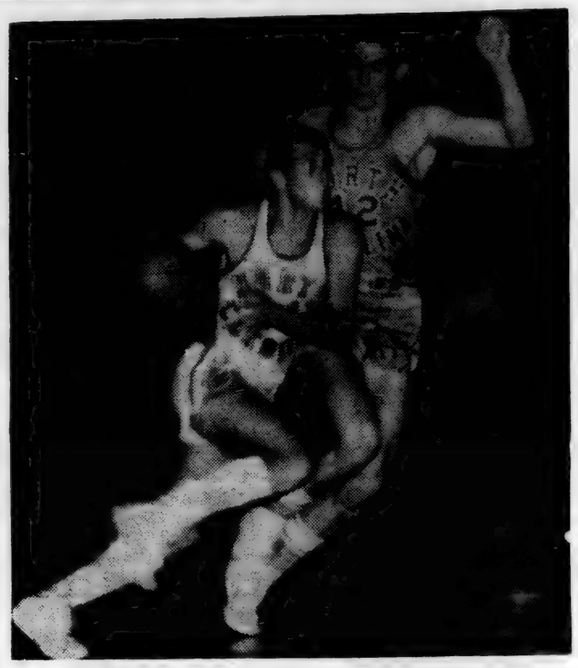
The Buckeyes, who completed their 1961 season last Saturday with a crushing 50-20 rout of Michigan, were picked for the top spot by 19 of the 35 coaches who make up the UPI rating board. Alabama, 9-0, which finishes up this Saturday against Auburn, was the No. 1 pick of 15 coaches. The Crimson Tide held first-place a week ago with 25 votes for the top spot.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The United Press International major college football ratings with first-place votes and won-lost records in parentheses:

1. Ohio State 19 (8-0-1)	329
2. Alabama 15 (9-0)	316
3. Louisiana State (9-1)	253
4. Texas (9-1)	237
5. Mississippi (8-1)	194
6. Colorado 1 (8-1)	124
7. Minnesota (7-2)	123
8. Michigan State (7-2)	108
9. Arkansas (8-2)	92
10. Purdue (6-3)	35

Second ten—11 tie, Utah State and Missouri 30 each; 13, Georgia Tech 8; 14, Wyoming 7; 15, Penn State 6; 16 tie, Duke, Miami (Fla.) and Syracuse 5 each; 19, tie, Kansas and UCLA 4 each.

Others—Arizona and Tennessee 3 each; Wisconsin 2; Michigan and Rutgers 1 each.



BROWN AROUND BROWN—Varsity guard Larry Brown, with the ball, drives around Bill Brown, freshman starting guard, in a pre-season scrimmage game. Larry is a starter from Long Island, N. J., and Bill is from Durham.

Tickets for the opening basketball game with Virginia here on Saturday night are now being distributed to students and employees on a first come first served basis. ID cards must be presented for these tickets.

Those who wish to attend the Carolina-Indiana basketball game at Greensboro on Monday, Dec. 11, may buy tickets at the Woollen Gym ticket office now.

Coin-Toss May Decide NFL Match

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Green Bay Packers and the Cleveland Browns get most of the advantages in coin-flipping ceremonies Tuesday to decide sites and pairings in the event of tie races in the National Football League.

The Packers, currently leading the Western Division race in the NFL and needing only one more victory to nail down the title, lost only one flip, while the Browns, third in the Eastern Division, didn't lose even once, although their chances of gaining a tie were considered remote.

Altogether, 11 possibilities exist for ties in both division races with seven clubs figuring in the running for title berths. NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle presided over the coin-flipping ceremonies, held on a rug in front of his desk at NFL headquarters.

Here are the tie possibilities and the sites:

Eastern Division:

If there is a triple tie between the New York Giants, Philadelphia Eagles and Browns, the Giants will play the Eagles in Philadelphia with Cleveland drawing a bye. The winner then plays the Browns for the division title in Cleveland.

If the Browns and Giants tie, they will meet in Cleveland. A New York-Philadelphia tie would be played off in New York, while a Browns-Eagle tie would be played off in Cleveland.

Western Division:

A triple tie between the Packers, Detroit Lions and San Francisco Forty Niners would result in the Packers getting a bye and the other two playing off in Detroit with the winner taking on the Packers for the division title in Green Bay.

Coeds interested in filling the two vacant positions on the women's honor council should call student government office for an appointment today. Interviews will be held in the president's office this afternoon.

Campus Affairs committee will meet this afternoon 4:15-5:30 in the Woodhouse room GM.

The 65 club will meet tonight at 5:30 in Lenoir Hall. Mrs. Herbert McKay will speak on the role of the woman in the 20th century. All freshman girls are urged to attend.

"Circulo Hispanico" will meet Friday night at 6:30 in Roland Parker GM. The joint Christmas meeting with the Women's College club in Greensboro will be discussed. The program will be "Cancionis de Nanidad."

A pep rally will be held Friday night at 6:15 at Emerson Field. The rally will be over in time for participants to attend the Josh White concert in Memorial Hall, according to Head Cheerleader Al Roper.

Applicants for Woodrow Wilson National Foundation Fellowships, who are required to take the Miller Analogies Test, may do so at the University Testing Service on any weekday between the hours of 8:30 and 4:30. The test requires about an hour for completion. The fee for testing is $3.00. Applicants should report to Room 022 Peabody Hall.

All freshmen who are interested in enrolling in the Air Force ROTC for the second semester should contact the AFROTC Detachment at Caldwell Annex prior to preregistration beginning on Thursday, November 30th. This announcement applies to those freshmen who did not enroll at the beginning of the fall semester and transfer students who have a desire to earn a commission in the Air Force.

All students who have not picked up their Yack proofs should do so immediately.

In yesterday's Campus Briefs column, "Peoples of the Far East", an anthropology course to be offered next semester, was described. The number for that course is Anthropology 138.

Picketing Cancelled Temporarily

Theater picketing has been called off temporarily, according to the executive committee of the Citizens Committee for "Open" Movies.

The Varsity was not picketed Tuesday or Wednesday night, nor will it be picketed tonight, said committee spokesmen.

Tonight's mass meeting of the organization at 8 at the St. Joseph's AME Church on W. Rosemary St., will decide whether picketing should resume.

Last week directors of the Varsity decided to admit UNC Negro students beginning Monday. Other Negroes are not admitted.

Professor Of Spanish Will Give Lecture

Nicholson B. Adams, professor of Spanish will deliver the annual Fall Humanities lecture on December 7, at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

Dr. Adams' address is entitled "Iberica," and will be a comment on Hispanic contributions to general civilization. The lecture will be an attempt to interpret the Spanish spirit to historic cultural achievements, according to Dr. Adams.

The lecture is open to the public. Kenan Professor of English C. Hugh Holman is chaiman of the Division of Humanities.

Libary Editor

Dr. Adams was recently appointed general editor of the Laurel Spanish Library of Dell Publishing Co. The library is a series of paperback Spanish texts and will be accompanied by introductions and notes in English.

Pre-Registration Well Underway

Dean Carlyle Sitterson of the College of Arts and Sciences yesterday reminded sophomores that they should sign up for adviser appointments beginning today, through Dec. 11.

Students should bring lists of the courses they wish to take spring semester to their appointments. Registration forms will be obtained from advisers and students should turn these in to the registration office in Hanes Hall immediately afterward.

Pre-registration will take place as follows, by classes: graduating seniors, last day today; other seniors, Dec. 1 and 2; graduate students, today through Saturday; juniors, Dec. 4-8; sophomores, Dec. 11-15; freshmen, today through Saturday; and anyone else, Dec. 16.

Hanes Hall

Green forms will be accepted at the registration office, 01 Hanes Hall only on the above indicated days.

The College of Arts and Sciences will preregister by class. Students who have a Major will see their Departmental Adviser, secure a Green Form, and take it to Hanes Hall for processing. Pre-Law, Pre-Med, Pre-Dental, International Studies and Industrial Relations majors and Special Students see their Adviser in the Dean's office.

The School of Education will preregister by class as given above. Obtain Green Form in duplicate from adviser and take it to 101 Peabody for approval. Leave one copy there and take original to 01 Hanes Hall for further processing.

Grad School

The Graduate School will preregister on days as given above. Regular students now enrolled in the Grad School should see Departmental Adviser, secure Green Form, take it to the Graduate School for approval and then to Hanes Hall for further processing. Undergraduate students who will graduate in January and plan to enroll in the Graduate School in the Spring Semester are not eligible to preregister and must register on February 2 or 3.

The Registration Office in 01 Hanes Hall is open from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m. Students will not be considered preregistered until they have delivered their green forms to Hanes Hall.

Salesmen Win 2 Scholarships

Two UNC students who work part-time selling wares that go into a girl's hope chest have been awarded Vita-Craft Company scholarships of $200 and $100.

Chancellor William B. Aycock presented a $200 award to Bill Bates of Charlotte and a $100 award to Gene Lanier of Chapel Hill.

The scholarships, awarded annually by the Vita-Craft Company, makers of cook-ware and other items designed for a young woman's hope chest, cited Bates and Lanier as the top salesmen of the summer. UNC leads the nation in the number of students who have won the Vita-Craft scholarships; fifty-six students won cash prizes in the past years.

Infirmary

Students in the Infirmary yesterday were Rosa Booth, John Fisher, Paris Fisher, Fredrick Symmes, John Jennings, Thomas Kelly, Catherine Johnson, Samuel Barfield, Dewey Sanders, Robert McConnell.

New Dorms Won't Be Finished Soon

Craige and Ehringhous, the two new men's dormitories being constructed, will not be completed in time for spring occupancy, said James Wadsworth, head of the UNC Housing department yesterday.

The construction of Craige dorm is progressing satisfactorily and Wadsworth hopes that the dorm will be ready in time for occupancy by students next summer. The other dorm, Ehringhous, will definitely not be completed or ready for students until next fall.

Wadsworth added that even if they had been finished by this spring, it would have been impractical to occupy them at that time.

There are now three people in almost all of the men's and women's dormitories and four in Battle-Vance-Pettigrew.

U.S. Orbits Ape In Warm-Up To Manned Flight In 30 Days

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—A Mercury space capsule manned by an ape and riding atop a powerful 93-foot Atlas rocket blasted off from this test center today on a three-times-around-the-earth orbital flight.

It was the final key test in a United States crash program to put a man into orbit by the end of this year.

The huge space machine rose from its launching pad at 10:08 a.m in a burst of smoke and orange flame and climbed smoothly into blue skies, flecked with a few scattered clouds. It was visible for about four minutes before it disappeared out over the Atlantic.

The "pilot" on today's flight was a 37½-pound chimpanzee named Enos. If all went well his space capsule was to be returned to earth 1,000 miles southwest of the cape at about 2:40 p.m.

His job while whirling around the globe was to bang on a series of levers. This was designed to test how effectively he could function during a prolonged period of weightlessness.

The 93-foot rocket, after weathering a series of delays throughout the morning, blasted smoothly from its launching pad and climbed steeply toward the east.

Less than two minutes after lift-off Mercury scientists said "all systems were go" aboard the space machine.

The rocket left a brilliant white contrail in the sky and disappeared from view after lifting into the blue sky.

A split second later, an escape tower riding atop the capsule was jettisoned. Mercury officials said the rocket was moving smoothly along its course.

BULLETIN

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) —The National Space and Aeronautics Administration Wednesday named Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. as the prime astronaut for the first U. S. orbital flight. Navy Cmdr. M. Scott Carpenter was designated as backup man.

Men May Not Serve 12 Months

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy said today that military reservists called to active duty in the Berlin crisis may not have to serve a full 12 months.

The President emphasized at a news conference that such citizen soldiers were called up to prevent, not fight, a war.

At his first meeting with reporters in three weeks, Kennedy strongly defended the callup of reservists and National Guardsmen although he conceded that some of them are living under unsatisfactory conditions and not training with the best possible equipment.

He said, however, that they were serving the cause of peace just as effectively as any Strategic Air Command bomber on a 15-minute alert.

The chief executive told newsmen that despite any published reports to the contrary, none of the reservists would serve more than 12 months. He then went on to say that every effort was being made to return them to civilian life in less time if possible.

Kennedy also:

Said he is considering a trip out of the country before the end of the year. He would not disclose his possible destination, saying the plans still were tentative. A quick trip to South America was the prime possibility.

Said he saw no prospect of greater harmony between the North Atlantic Treaty and Warsaw Pact blocs until there have been meaningful, fruitful negotiations with Russia over Berlin and West Germany.

TO EXCHANGE VIEWS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Six Russian medical experts have arrived here to exchange views with U.S. scientists on polio, the Public Health Service said Wednesday.

Among other things, the American and Soviet virologist will discuss the relative merits of the Salk vaccine and the oral vaccine developed by Dr. Albert Sabin.

PREDICTS MOON FLIGHT

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Soviet spaceman Yuri Gagarin predicted Wednesday the first manned flight to the moon will take place soon.

Russia's first astronaut arrived here to begin a nine-day visit in India and said he would like to "fly to Venus and see what's hidden behind its cloudy atmosphere."

SP Vacancies Will Be Filled

The Student Party will meet next Tuesday night at 7 in GM to elect party officers and to fill two legislative vacancies in Town Men's III.

Town Men's III includes the area north of Franklin St. to the city limits.

Jimmy Weeks is party chairman and Dave Williams is vice-chairman.

Aaron Wagman Pleads Guilty

NEW YORK (UPI)—Aaron Wagman, the gambler whose arrest touched off the college basketball scandals last spring, pleaded guilty to 37 counts of bribery and one of conspiracy Wednesday in General Sessions Court.

Judge Joseph A. Sarafite, who on Monday delayed sentencing of Joseph Green, accused fixer of games who also pleaded guilty, fixed Jan. 6 as the day of sentence for Wagman.

Wagman, convicted a year ago for trying to fix a college football game in Florida and fined $10,000 faces long imprisonment plus heavy fines. He has been in jail, where he was returned Wednesday, since last March in lieu of $65,000 bail.

Wagman was accused by prosecutors in his trial Wednesday of being the payoff man and fixer for gambling interest in college basketball games.

IDC Dance Set Friday At Legion Hut

An Interdormitory Council-sponsored dance will be held Friday night 8-12 at the American Legion Hut. Joe Hatchet and The Big Axe Combo from Danville, Va., will provide music, "with twisting guaranteed."

An IDC spokesman said that the Council has sponsored a dance before each home football game and that only one was a "real success." He said this may have been due to the quality of the music, but that a "really rocking show" is guaranteed Friday night.

A bus will leave from Y-Court at 8 p.m. Friday to take students to the dance.

Aycock Hears S. Education Report Today

Chancellor William B. Aycock is meeting today in Louisville, Ky. with representatives of 16 Southern states to hear the report of the Commission on Goals for Higher Education in the South.

The meeting has been called to release the commission report by Gov. Terry Sanford, chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board, and Governor Buford Ellington of Tennessee, chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference.

The Goals Commission report is a comprehensive study for action to guide the South in developing a system of higher education "second to none in the nation."

Seven members of the Commission prepared the report following nearly a year's study. Appointed by the Southern Regional Education Board in 1960, the commission members are: Commission Chairman Colgate W. Darden Jr., former governor of Virginia; A Boyd Campbell, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Leoy Collins, former governor of Florida and president of the National Association of Broadcasters; H. H. Dewar, Texas investment banker;

Dr. O. C. Carmichael, former president of the University of the University of Alabama and former chancellor of Vanderbilt University; Marion B. Folsom, former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and director of the Eastman Kodak Company; and Ralph McGill, Pulitzer prize-winning publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, and 1962 UNC Commencement speaker.

Delegates to the meeting were named by the governors of their respective states. The meeting is attracting governors, legislators, and educators from the South.

'Face Of Soviet' Tuesday

Dinsmore To Give Lecture

Certainly no area of the world is more pertinent to this campus, or any other, than the Soviet Union. Ray Dinsmore, foremost authority on Russia, bringn to life this area of the world at UNC next Tuesday night. Mr. Dinsmore will present "FACE of the SOVIET," a new film-lecture in color, in Memorial Hall on Dec. 5 at 8 p.m.

Ray Dinsmore is part of Graham Memorial's Travel Adventure Series, and the season ticket admission is $2.00 for the three lectures still remaining.

Season tickets may be purchased at the information desk of GM and tickets will be on sale at the door for $1.00 for each lecture.

In 1960 Ray Dinsmore completed an ambitious plan to re-visit Russia and make a 5,000 mile sweep behind the iron curtain through the sprawling Soviet.

He also included two of the world's tension ridden spots. He toured both Berlins and the tinder-box of the Middle East. He not only made color movies of the things and people he saw, but with his eyes and ears he captured the important details the camera could not get. These experiences he shares with his audience through the clear-cut commentary which accompanies the film.

Constitutional Test

After ten years of frustrated efforts to enforce the registration provisions of the Internal Security Act of 1950, the Justice Department now has a clear-cut test case.

Under the registration regulation, any "Communist - action organization" is required to register as such and furnish information to the Government about its membership and finances.

Last week the Communist Party of the United States refused to comply, as many expected it would. Under the Security Act, when an organization refuses to comply with a registration order, its officers have ten days in which to register. After twenty days, the order is extended to every member of the organization.

Today, Thursday, Nov. 30, is the deadline for the officers to register. The penalty for failure to comply is $10,000 and five years in jail for each day of non-compliance after the deadline. Constitutional considerations are at the heart of controversy which has arisen out of the order to register.

The issues which will be in question after the Communist Party leaders fail to comply—as they have announced they will—are based on the protection against cruel and unusual punishment as set forth in the Eighth Amendment and protection against self - incrimination under the Fifth.

The basis for protests against registering, based on the Fifth Amendment, is that registration as a member of the Communist Party is not simply a matter of going on record. It means admitting that the registrant is engaged in criminal activity as set forth by the Smith Act of 1940. This statute makes membership in a party advocating violent overthrow of the Government a crime. The law has teeth. Just last June, Junius Scales, one-time Communist leader in the Carolinas, had his conviction under the Smith Act upheld by the Supreme Court.

Any Communist who is forced to register under the Internal Security Act opens himself up to trial and conviction as provided by the Smith Act. Conviction is virtually assured if the courts follow the same legal reasoning process that led to Scales conviction: namely, that the Communist Party of the United States advocates violent overthrow and thus membership in it is a crime.

After the Justice Department begins to follow through on the criminal prosecutions because the members of the Communist Party refuse to comply, the cases will almost inevitably end up in the Supreme court where the questions of constitutionality—possible violation of the Fifth and Eighth Amendments—must be dealt with.

The Supreme Court has not yet dealt with either of these questions in a test case. The court has ruled that the bare registration law was constitutional. It has not dealt with the claim that the law violated the Fifth and possibly the Eighth Amendment.

When it does, one of the questions that will be answered is whether the court will uphold the amendments, or whether it will sacrifice them for the purpose of eliminating a "menace" which has already demonstrated its inability to work any effect upon the U. S. other than the creation of unreasonable fear.

Stop The Test Talks

Arthur Dean and Semyon Tsarapkin must be very patient men.

As the U. S. and Russian leaders at the Geneva nuclear test ban talks, both men have presented innumerable meaningless, unrealistic proposals to each other. Both must realize that their governments are not truly interested in a nuclear test ban or a system of world-wide disarmament.

If the Russians were interested in either of these, why did they sit through 340 sessions of talks between October 1958 and September 1961 mouthing platitudes about world peace and the dangers of fallout while their government prepared the most horrifying series of fallout-producing tests in history?

And if the United tates is truly interested in a test-ban or world disarmament why has President Kennedy made no firm announcement that this country will not resume atmospheric tests?

Why did the United States, knowing full well that the Russians would simply present another far-reaching, completely uninforceable proposal, once again call for test talks at Geneva?

True to form, the Russians Monday presented the absurd proposal that the Big Four have another ban on nuclear testing, without any form of international control.

And true to form, the U. S. said it would have to think about it, which means we have no intention of thinking about it.

The leaders of both delegations have virtually admitted that the talks are useless. Mr. Tsarapkin said Monday, "It is very difficult to be optomistic," and Mr. Dean said last week the U. S. policy would be to "test and talk."

The Russians went into the talks with the hope of regaining propaganda points lost when they started testing. The U. S. felt it would have a bad propaganda effect if we did not appear eager to stop testing.

Test - bans, disarmament and peace have become to the Big Four what God, Mother and Country are to the American politician—words to be repeated constantly and never acted upon.

Practical considerations make both a test ban and world disarmament impossible at present. Both the Russians and the U. S. know this. Therefore, it is hypocritical and deceitful and wasting time to engage in the present Geneva talks.

The talks should be called off.

Teshima Looks At Japanese Student Movement

'Zengakuren', 'lost', 'funky', 'beatnik' and 'quiet' are some of the stigmas lavelled on the young generation in Japan today. As far as Japanese student movement is concerned, UPI, AP or almost all the mass communication media of the U.S. seemed to report only a surface of the pnenomena from a stereotyped or sensational viewpoint.

Last week I received a letter from my friend of Tokyo in which he wrote vividly about his participation in steeet demonstration in protest against the Soviet Nuclear Tests under the Zengakuren, National Federation of Student Self-Government Association of Japan. More than 600 Zengakuren members protested the resumption of the tests in front of the Soviet Embasy in Tokyo. He told me the number of the participants all over the nation are increasing day after day. Have you heard of this news at quiet Chapel Hill? Can you imagine Zengakuren protest against Moscow?

Journalism is a key to promoting international understanding and bringing world peace only if it succeeds in report, analysis and interpretation of the happenings based on facts and even of the quiet voice of the people. Nevertheless, some of the correspondents in Japan teletyped 'brazenly' false news of the Japanese students last year.

FOR INSTANCE, they reported that participants in snake dancing demonstrations were financially supported by Communist China. But it was not true. One of my classmates at Waseda told me that he had to walk more than nine miles in the middle of the night from a demonstration at the Diet building to his boarding house because he had no money. He had participated in demonstrations for one month and he had spent all his pocket money. Every next morning of the street demonstrations, we used to see several white-bandaged students in our classes.

This is only one example.

Unexpectedly the film Operation Abolition reminded me of Japanese student movement in a sense that I found in it the common straight-forwardness and vitality of the students.

There may be many contradictions and misunderstandings between you and us. I would like to write about the student movement in Japan from my own viewpoint—that of a student—in an attempt to discuss with you about one aspect of the student life of Japan.

My campus life in the past three years has been devoted almost entirely to the campus newspaper. At first, I reported for a student-run newspaper printed for the School of Political Science and Economics of Waseda University.

DURING THIS period I came in contact with man leaders of the student movement. Zengakuren or otherwise, quite a few of them seemed to possess radical ideologies for the sake of ideology, but as far as their status as students was concerned, they proved to be very modest students. Most of them were excellent students in the class room.

If there was any difference from the ordinary student, it was that they seemed to entertain as extraordinarily ardent desire—somewhat too idealistic and perhaps too hasty—to realize their ideal of peace and democracy not only in campus life but also n society. In a way, they seemed to live campus life more fully and lively than average students in their own way as they snake-danced the streets to the National Diet.

Serving for that newspaper I started to feel uneasy and to doubt whether there was any journalistic freedom allowed for us reporters because the whole paper was in fact devoted to the highly ideological and biased news which were automatically provided from a minority of the leaders of the student government of our department. Editorials, for example, were not written by members of the press committee, but were totally monopolized by those leaders.

AFTER TRYING my best, I walked out in 1959 and applied for an 'entrance examination' of the Waseda Guardian, the English-language campus newspaper which has been printed some 25 years. By participating in this middle-of-the-road campus newspaper, I have, for the first time, been able to observe the student movement from an angle of my own.

Covering the most heated period of the student movement—December 1959 to August 1960—I have discovered the most frequent error that those student leaders commit; they resort to an utterly undemocratic method in order to realize their version of "democracy".

The typical fallacy in their mental structure was always that "the end justifies the means." This was the fallacy that I wanted to point out, most of all, when I became editor after serving as feature editor in my first year on the Guardian.

There is much dispute on the merit or demerit of the activities and existence of Zengakuren but I cannot respect those students who only highhandedly criticize that organization or non commitally stay outside as if they have nothing to do with the organization.

NOW 'NOTORIOUS' Zengakuren split into three groups and the factinal struggle does not seem to cease. The leaders of main stream who take the initiative of Japanese student movement at present still believe radical revolution based on Marr-Leninism. Most of them were expelled two years ago from Japan Communist Party—which has approximately 60,000 members—because of their extream radicalism. They emphasize the role of students in realizing revolution in accordance with the platform of Marxism Student Union and Revolutionary Communist League.

On the other hand, anti-main stream, Zenjiren, is excellent in leading a mass of the students. Almost all of the leaders of this faction are affiliated with Japan Communist Party. They follow the Moscow-Peking line in harmony with labor movement of Japan. They are criticizing the aloofness of the leadership of Zengakuren from majority of students. At the same time, their grass-roots policy has gradually gained popularity among students.

The third minority group is led by Japan Communist Youth League and Socialist Youth League. And now they are trying hard to reorganize many youth groups in Japan.

Under the chaotic circumstances, Japanese students are fooling around without decisive idea of which stream would lead them.

I think it is our affair and therefore our responsibilty to improve the current student movement, because we always claim academic independence and student autonomy. It has been my primary interest and concern in editing our paper to contribute to upgrade the student movement in Japan.

FOR THE FIRST time in its history, the Guardian featured a series of analyzations of the movement, one example being "STUDENT MOVEMENT on TRIAL" in April 1960. At the same time we tried to bring readers' attention to such inconspicuous but most noteworthy student activities as the relief work in the area damaged by typhoon Vera in 1959, and college students' visit to villages showing pupet play to the unprivileged children.

During the chaotic period in which the anti-US-Japan Security Treaty movement swept the country last year, I feared that overseas readers might have mistakenly concluded that Zengakuren activities were representative of student life in Japan because of the way mass communications treated the incidents only from a pure commercial and sensational viewpoint.

In mid 1960, more than ten thousand Waseda students participated in the demonstrations against the Treaty. It was the greatest number of participants in demonstrations in the history of Waseda. They protested strongly against the Pact because they believed that no matter how small the danger, the Pact involved the possibility of replacing pens in our hands with rifles and turning our land into batlle fields again.

Despite the daily nation-wide demonstrations, the Government finally ratified the Treaty on June 20, ignoring our sincere desire to advocate the spirit of our no-war Constitution as shown in the peaceful petitioning campaign. Our wish was trampled down by a mass of police squads who kicked and beat non-violent students' faces and heads in the same way as they did in an incident on the campus of Waseda nine years ago.

* * *

AMONG THE STUDENTS who demonstrated there were many who had never participated in any political movement. To call them indiscriminatingly "Cats paws of International Communism" does not solve the question at all. Admittedly there were a segment of radicalists who formented the disturbace. A question arises here, however, as to how many of these students acted according to their own judgment, free from mob-psychology.

But why was it that so many students participated in the demonstrations? Because they were indignant at and mistrustful of the way politics were run in Japan.

Participating a series of street demonstrations last year, a majority of Japanese students had a bitter experience. They failed in their efforts to stop ratification of the Pact, and had felt emptiness to some extent. But that experience, I think, will become possitive factor in each student's future life.

I STRONGLY believe the sentiment of your fellow students who were violently taken out of the congress building in San Francisco was fundamentally same as that of each Japanese students who were hurled out of the Diet compound by fierce forces last year. I mean by sentiment their sincere desire for peace and the straightforwardness in expressing their opinion in an attempt safeguard democracy and freedom.

We learned from two atomic bombs on our land that we should never arm again. And also, we know it was our brothers who lost young lives uselessly in the battle fields far away from their mother land.

You might call us Japanese students as too idealistic, unrealistic or Communist-inspired, but we shall strive for our freedom, democracy and peace of the world.

Author Here On FSLP Exchange

Yoshio Teshima is this year's FSIP student here. He was editor-in-chief of the Waseda Guardian last year in Tokyo. The Waseda Guardian is published monthly by students of Waseda University for international student friendship and is the oldest English language campus newspaper in Japan.

FSLP, the Foreign Student Leadership Project, is one of the most important activities of the USNSA. FSLP is a foreign student exchange program in which about fifteen student leaders from the emerging countries of Asia, South Americas, and Africa are invited every year to the United States. The students who participate in FSLP are leaders at their student government, editors at student newspapers, leaders in the national student movement, and in their national union of students.

The student leaders in FSLP come the United States for a year for study at the individual universities of the States. The FSLP students take a limited academic load so that he can spend a good deal of his time participating in the student government, the student newspaper, and other student activities. He also studies America and American ways of life. To accomplish this, the FSLP student is encouraged to expand his activities into the communty as much as possible.

THE SCHOOL which has an FSLP student is not only giving to the student, but in many cases receives more than it gives. A student leader from another country is able to give to the campus new ideas and view its problems from a different and fresh point of view. He can help educate the students and the community to the problems facing his countries and the students in his country.

The FSLP student is a leader whose leadership ability must be realized on the campus for the program to be at profit to the students and the campus.

UNC has been fortunate in having FSLP students since the founding at the program in 1956. It has been along with the Goetinghen Exchange, one of the most fruitful exchange programs in which UNC has ever engaged.

This Week In Student Legislature

Tonight's session of Legislature will open the 32nd assembly (each legislative year is split into two "assemblies", a carry-over from the past when there were two legislative elections each year.'

As of this writing, no old business is to be brought up, nor any new bill introduced.

* * *

The resolution urging integration of the Chapel Hill theaters was passed 23-10 at the last session of Legislature.

Both party chairmen and floor leaders supported the bill—including UP Chairman Bill Criswell who claimed that by voting on the resolution, Legislature was "losing some face and taking strength away from its other bills", but who still supported it.

We feel Legislature had good reason for taking a stand on this issue. At that time a Chapel Hill merchant—the Varsity—was discriminating against a sector of the UNC student body. Any form of anti-student discrimination should be of direct interest to Legislature, which supposedly represents the students.

A very interesting statement was made by a legislator who opposed passage of the resolution, "By passing this bill, Legislature is endorsing a body which is subject to much controversy today—the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People." The legislator said he was expressing the opinion of his constituents, not necessarily his own.

The interesting aspect of this statement is that it is so completely wrong while at the same time so widely accepted.

For persons who still equate an endorsement of theater integration with an endorsement of the hosts of groups which support integration, let us reiterate these points:

—Legislature resolved that "the non-integration of the theaters in Chapel Hill constitutes an injustice." The bill asked the theaters to "open their doors to all persons regardless of race, color or creed."

—Legislature did not make a general pronouncement on integration.

—Legislature did not endorse either directly, indirectly, or by any train of reasoning whatsoever, the NAACP, CORE, or any of the thousands of organizations which at one time or another have supported theater integration (including the American Communist Party.)

This "NAACP endorsement" reasoning is of the "guilt by association" variety: most people in the South have little love for the organization; so, if a person can tag local issues with the NAACP label (the Association has absolutely no control over the policies of the Citizens Committee), then he can undermine the local situation

We hope that legislators will explain to their less perceptive constituents the facts concerning the pro-integration resolution.

College Drop Outs & Dismissals

The problem of drop-outs is not confined to elementary and secondary schools. Though no concern has been expressed publicly about it, the colleges also have a problem of drop-outs. People connected with institutions of higher learning tend to shrug off the implications of college drop-outs with the comment that those who leave are not college material, anyhow, and convey the impression that the colleges ought not to be concerned about the elimination of these students from the campuses.

As an intensive effort to keep students in the high schools of North Carolina gets under way, a report from the State Board of Higher Education shows that 1,138 students were dismissed last year from the Consolidated University of North Carolina for academic failure and 213 others dropped out because of poor grades or difficulty of work.

To raise the point is not to suggest any lowerng of academic standards in the institutions of higher learning. For a degree to have significance, the standards have to be kept high. But the institutions of higher learning may well look to the guidance they provide their students, to the quality of instruction given, and to the attitude taken toward students.

Involved in the question of college dismissals for academic reasons and for drop-outs are such matters as the quality of preparation the students have received, the real efficiency of the admitting procedures, and the emotional and moral maturity of the students. Like the question of drop-outs in the high schools, the question of dismissals and drop-outs in the colleges call for more study than has apparently been given it.

Churchill To Spend Quiet 87th Birthday

LONDON (UPI) — Sir Winston Churchill will be 87 years old today and, whether he likes it or not, he is going to have a quiet birthday party. The boss has spoken.

Sir Winston never has been an easy man to handle. Unafraid of anybody, he has not hesitated to denounce his own doctors in flaming language—and to their faces—when he thinks they are imposing unreasonable restrictions on him. About the only person who can tell him what to do these days and get away with it is the boss—Lady Churchill.

The boss has made two basic decisions about Thursday:

—It will be a quiet day at the London residence in Hyde Park Gate, and it is likely that only members of the family will be dropping in for the party.

—Publicity will be held to the minimum. The boss has even discouraged persons who inquire about the fabulous birthday cake which has been a feature of Sir Winston's recent anniversary parties.

Reporters who have been around to the bake shop of Christopher Floris, who annually presents a cake to Sir Winston, have run into a stone wall of reticence for the first time. Floris explained that Lady Churchill had ordered the cake and also had ordered him to keep quiet about it. All Floris could do was to recall fondly the culinary masterpiece he produced last year.

It weighed 85 pounds. The bottom part was rectangular and on top of it was a cornucopia out of which were pouring little pieces of cake moulded into the shapes of things that would remind Sir Winston of events in his long and illustrious life. There was a two-inch square replica of his book, History of the English Speaking People, a parakeet three inches tall, a little model of his famous black hat, a replica of his Knight of the Garter star, a cigar, a bottle of brandy and a bottle of whiskey. All of these things were edible and colored with vegetable dyes.

A year ago Sir Winston still was recuperating from a fall that broke a small bone in his back. There was some doubt then whether he would ever be able to walk freely again, but he disposed of that fear three months later by showing up in the House of Commons, of which he still is a member.

That is the basis of the latest story about him, printed this week in Punch and said to be authentic. Sir Winston is hard of hearing and when he took his seat in Commons two members in the row behind him began discussing his health.

"Pity about the old boy," said one of them. "They say he tires very quickly now."

"Yes," the other one agreed. "They say he can't remain active for more than a few hours at a time."

Sir Winston turned halfway around in his seat and said slowly:

"They also say that he is deaf."

UNIVERSITY APOLOGIZES

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — The University of Minnesota apologized Wednesday for the burning of a Russian flag on the university campus.

The flag was burned Tuesday by an unidentified man. It had been flying in front of the university Student Union building, where a Russian medical exhibit is being shown.

University President O. Meredith Wilson wrote his apologies to Dr. Viktor Zhdanov, director of the exhibit.

—Don't Quote Me—

"Ahh Hah! So we finally caught you trying to bury the Honor System"

Governor Urges People Exert New Energy After Bond Defeat

RALEIGH (UPI) — Gov. Terry Sanford urged North Carolinians today to exert additional energy to "meet the pressures" caused by the recent defeat of the state's bond issues.

He told his weekly news conference something would have to be done to relieve these pressures but that a special session of the General Assembly was not the answer.

For an example of the pressures which will have to be relieved, the governor pointed to the state's training schools. He said the training schools were already having to double up because of the number of persons sent to them.

Sanford said he was highly pleased that a small reorganization of the State Democratic Party had been proposed. The revision would take the leadership from the grass roots of the organization, Secretary of State Thad Eure had explained Tuesday.

Sanford said this showed that the Democratic Party belongs to the people while "the Republican Party is run by a little group of party bosses."

On other subjects the governor said:

—He was looking into travel expenses of state employes once again to see if all the out-of-state travel is necessary. This is where "we may be able to tighten our belt a little," he said.

—The enlarged Highway Commission was doing an excellent job and he had no complaints about some of the commissioners drawing up to 28 days of pay per month. "We need more men dedicated to their work," he added.

—He had received hundreds of telegrams protesting the North Iredell American Legion now-canceled sticks-and-stones rabbit hunt. "In fact I received more than 100 telegrams from across the nation yesterday on that one subject," he said.

—He was pleased that the Air Force had decided to delay plans to build a bombing site in the duck and goose country of Hyde County. There are other sites available and the Air Force could use Navy and Marine bombing ranges in eastern North Carolina, he added.

Bids Opened For Training School

MORGANTON (UPI) — Bids for construction contracts for the new $4.5 million Western Carolina Training School were opened Tuesday by the North Carolina Hospitals Board of Control.

The apparent low bids, which will have to be analyzed by the Department of Administration before awards can be made, totaled $2,979,632.

The facility, approved in a bond issue by the 1959 General Assembly, will have 16 buildings at first and will have a capacity for caring for 600 mentally retarded children.

The apparent low bidders:

General construction, Robert H. Pinnix, Inc., Gastonia, $2,089,920. Plumbing — Superior Mechanical Contractors, Inc., Durham, $169-737. Heating, Ventilating and Air Conditioning — Albemarle Plumbing & Heating Co., Albemarle, $409,663.

The Original Declaration of Independence was safeguarded at Fort Knox, Ky., for a three-year period during World War Two.

Sanford Stresses Growth Potential Of North Carolina

ELON COLLEGE (UPI) — Gov. Terry Sanford, in an address scheduled for delivery here Wednesday to the North Central N. C. Industrial Development Conference said the area "represents about the best potential in the South for industrial development."

The counties represented are Alamance, Caswell, Chatham, Durham, Franklin, Rockingham, Wake, Guilford, Orange, Person, Randolph, Vance, and Warren.

He then quickly ticked off reasons why he felt the area has the "potential."

—A million of the finest people in the United States.

—Located within overnight travel to the great population centers of the East.

—Rapidly expanding markets at home.

—Adequate water from the Tar, Neuse and Haw rivers.

—Good soil and adequate rainfall.

"This area could almost literally feed half of the United States, if it had to, and if it devoted itself to the job," he said.

"At the same time that we acknowledge this potential we must examine the record to see how well it is being realized," the governor added.

On the basis of per capita income," he said, "we find that no one of the counties represented has an average per capita income as high as the average for the United States."

While in the 1950-60 period, 27-000 persons moved into the area, the area lost more than 48,000, he said.

S. African Diplomat Explains Racial Policies Of Republic

John J. Marrais, a representative of the Republic of South Africa, discussing South African racial policies at Carolina recently said, "We discriminate against blacks in white areas and against whites in black areas."

"With regard to races the policy of our government now is one of separate development of each racial group parallel to each other," the South African leader said.

Marrais, the Secretary for Community Development in the new republic is on the last lap of a seven-month study tour of the United States. As a member of the Leadership Exchange Program of the State Department, he has visited leading American cities such as Washington, New York, Chicago, Denver, and San Francisco.

Asked if this policy was not similar to the separate-but-equal policy practiced in the south until recently, the young diplomat did not elaborate. He was a guest in this country and did not wish to discuss segregation or the policies of this country, he said. He wanted to talk about his own country.

"People in the United States," he said, "have a great tendency to look upon South Africa as an entity. It is not. The people of South Africa are so vastly different that they must be developed separately. They are ethnically different. It is impossible for them to mix."

A glimpse at any encyclopdia would seem to bear this out.

The faces of South Africa are many.

Bushmen And Bantu

The Bushmen, the earliest inhabitants of the region, and the Bantu, each of these divided into many tribes and each tribe having their own language and customs, make up the majority of the population. There also live the descendants of the Huguenots, the Dutch, Englishmen and Scotch, German, Jew, Portuguese and Italian. The true Africans are referred to in the popular journals as the "Coloured" people, a word of jargon and flavor that is meant to convey an "Uncle Remus" image of that predominantly black population.

"Politically, we have tried to develop them along the lines of western democracy," Marrais said. We did not succeed. Democracy as practiced in the west is not exportable to Africa. We have not yet eradicated sorcery. But these people have their own type of democracy which is exceedingly effective.

"This is based on communal concepts that are traditional. Many (Americans) feel that we are reverting to tribalism. That is not the case. We are simply recognizing the roots of their society. We tried to break it down, but made no headway. Now we are trying to build on to it.

"If there are no interruptions from outside of our country, we can develop them socially, economically and politically. As for racial disturbances (in March 1960 police in Sharpeville armed with machine guns fired on a peaceful demonstration of thousands of Africans, killing 67 including more than 40 women and children. This was one of many outbursts of violence in the region). Marrais stated his belief that South Africa had had far less racial troubles than France, for instance. Or than the United States, he might have said.

"We believe we can lead them to a sound economic and political base. We believe we can lead them to independence without running the risk of the chaotic sort of condition which is the soil in which Communism grows."

"Of the 30 or so countries in Africa the Republic is the only one definitely and positively anti-Communist. Ours is the only non-Communist ally in Africa that the western powers have. It is strange that my nation's effort should be interpreted here the way they have been.

"The one point I want to make clear is that the ultimate objective of my government is to develop the (African) people to the point of independence."

The Ministry for Community Development is responsible for implimentation of the official policy. "The emphasis of my job," he says, "falls almost completely on non-whites. They do not have the experience and knowledge of the whites."

"Education is the key to development. Until 1953 the missionaries and churches, with enormous divergence of standards, were responsible for education. At that time there were 400,000 in school. The government took it over and now this figure has increased to over one million and a half.

"Three separate universities have been established for them. There is a medical school also. A larger number now may get an education than ever before. University graduates are returning to their villages and taking over positions of leadership.

"In politics they are beginning from the local level upwards.

"One element has not been established with sufficient certainty," Marrais said. "There is a smaller ratio of intellect among non-whites. This however is an empirical conclusion. No scientific research has been done on the subject.

"Along with educational development there has been an economic development. South Africa is now undergoing an industrial revolution. An area which has been set aside for Africans constitutes an area equivalent in size to Great Britain. It is the most fertile land in the republic. It is being developed in a manner to exclude white competition. We discriminate against the whites in this area. White traders are becoming fewer. Corporations are being set up with government funds with the controlling interest remaining in local hands.

As to the South African's impressions of America, he pronounced it "a great country in so many ways." He understands better now, he said, why America is the leader of the west. He was surprised, he said, at the similarity of the facets of industrial development of this country with those of South Africa. "Americans are very friendly," he said, "but it is time I went home."

Pres. Kennedy's war exploits

When Lt. Kennedy's PT boat was sunk in '43, he and his crew were given up for dead. But actually, they were fighting starvation on a desert island. Read the authentic account of their ordeal in this week's Saturday Evening Post.

Hospital Business Meeting Next Week

An Institute for Hospital Business Executives will be held at the School of Business Administration, Dec. 3-6.

Rex S. Winslow, professor of economics and director of the Bureau of Business Services and Research, and W. G. Slattery, lecturer in the School of Education, will lead the opening orientation discussion of the institute. Professor Winslow will speak on "Analysis of a Manager's Job."

Lecturer Slattery will also serve as an institute faculty member and will teach "Group Learning Under Lay Leadership." Other institute faculty members are William J. Daniel, professor of psychology, teaching "Basic Dimensions of Behavior"; and Donald K. Springen, instructor in English, teaching "Oral Communication."

Hospital executives from North and South Carolina will participate in the classes.

The purpose of the institute is to provide hospital executives with the more recent findings of the knowledges and skills which the administrator finds of use in developing good performance in his hospital. This is the second year this management institute has been held at the University.

UNC Orchestra Gives Program Tuesday At 8

The University Symphony Orchestra, Earl Slocum conducting, will give its first program of the season in Hill Hall next Tuesday at 8 p.m.

The program will feature Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Other works to be performed are Der Freischutz Overture by Carl Maria von Weber, Adagio for String Orchestra by Samuel Barber, Accelerations Waltz by Johann Strauss (the younger), and Franz Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

69 Performers

The 69 instrumentalists are music majors, members of the music department faculty, students and teachers from other University departments, and musicians residing in the tri-city area.

Professor Slocum, has been conductor of the symphony for the past 16 years. In addition to his duties with the orchestra he teaches composition, orchestration, and conducting.

The public is invited. Admission is free.

The sun rises in the east and sets in the west.

RECEIVES WELCOME

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (UPI)—Queen Elizabeh and Prince Philip received a thunderous welcome Tuesday when they flew to Kenema in Eastern Province to officially open the Sierra Leone Royal agricultural show.

Massed school children sang a welcoming song and Mamwai Kaikai, daughter of the former president of Kenema district council, gave the queen a bouquet.

Gabriel And Collins Named To All-America By Coaches

By GENE BLUDEAU

CHICAGO (UPI)—The American Football Coaches Association Wednesday announced its 1961 college football All-American team picking the following lineup as the best in the nation:

Ends: Bob Mitinger, Penn State, and Gary Collins, Maryland.

Tackles: Bill Neighbors, Alabama, and Bob Bell, Minnesota.

Guards: Joe Romig, Colorado, and Roy Winston, Louisiana State.

Center: Alex Kroll, Rutgers.

Quarterback: Roman Gabriel, North Carolina State.

Halfbacks: Ernie Davis, Syracuse, and Jim Saxton, Texas.

Fullback: Bob Ferguson, Ohio State.

The team was selected on the basis of balloting by more than 2,000 members of the coaches' association. The project is sponsored by the Eastman Kodak Company and the coaches' team is distributed exclusively by United Press International.

Ferguson, Davis, and Romig also were members of the coaches' All-America team last year.

Domination of the team swings from the East to the South this year, with the South landing four players on the squad—Collins, Neighbors, Winston, and Gabriel. The East placed three, the Midwest two, the Southwest and the Rockies one each.

Line Averages 218

Led by the 238-pound Kroll, the line averages 218 pounds, a shade under last year's average, but the backfield, thanks mainly to the 220 pounds of the 6-feet, 4-inch Gabriel, the backfield averages 202 pounds, a shade over last year's.

The coaches reported that the closest battle in the ballots was at the end positions, with Mitinger and Collins coming out on top in what amounted to a six-man race. Gabriel earned the quarterback slot in a tough fight with John Hadl of Kansas and Pat Trammell of Alabama.

Ferguson, however, was a runaway winner at fullback where he rolled up 89 per cent of the votes cast. Davis led the halfback voting and Romig was the top vote-getter among the linemen.

The coaches' 1961 All-America team in the 72nd in the tradition established by the late Walter Camp. Before the season, the coaches issued a nominations list of players; three times during the season the coaches added nominations; and the final voting was completed in the last few days. This year's team presents an all-senior lineup except for tackle Bell, who is a junior.

Alabama Places Three

Alabama indicated its overall power by placing men on the first, second, and third teams—Neighbors on the No. 1 squad, center Lee Roy Jordan on the second team, and quarterback Trammell on the third team. Ohio State placed Ferguson on the first team and guard Mike Ingram on the second team.

The second team picked by the coaches includes: ends, Pat Richter, Wiscinson, and Greg Mather, Navy; tackles, Jim Dunaway, Mississippi, and Merlin Olsen, Utah State; guards, Mike Ingram, Ohio State, and Nick Buoniconti, Notre Dame; center Lee Roy Jordan, Alabama; quarterback, John Hadl, Kansas; halfbacks, Dave Hoppman, Iowa State, and Lance Alworth, Arkansas; and fullback, George Saimes, Michigan State.

The third team includes: ends, Jerry Hillebrand, Colorado, and Hugh Campbell, Washington State; tackles, Al Hinton, Iowa, and Marshal Shirk, UCLA; guards, Larry Vignali, Pittsburgh, and Jim Skaags, Washington; center, Larry Onesti, Northwestern; quarterback, Pat Trammell, Alabama; halfbacks, Angelo Dabiero, Notre Dame, and Ron Bull, Baylor; and fullback, Al Rushatz, Army.

The team is scheduled to assemble in New York on Dec. 3 for a national television appearance.

All-Campus Grid Team Announced

By JOHN MONTAGUE

For intramural activities, this is a transition period, with fall sports coming to a close and winter sports getting under way. Just previous to the Thanksgiving break, tag football, wrestling, all-campus handball and the Rod and Gun Field Meet were all completed.

The switch-over has already begun, with volleyball now in its third week of scheduled matches. The deadline for first-round play in the All-Campus Squash Tournament is Saturday, and the Grail-Mural Holiday Basketball Festival kicks off the intramural cage season on Monday, December 4.

There are 36 entries in the squash tourney and a total of 110 teams signed up for the basketball festival. A schedule of the first-round games for this annual all-campus affair will be published later in the week.

Football All-Campus

The All-Campus Tag Football Championship for 1961 was decided on Monday afternoon, November 20, when the Phi Delts whipped the Alexander Playboys, 26-8. The champions also made up one-fourth of the All-Fraternity Team, placing Jerry Evans Semi Mintz and Ed Pleasants on the star-studded list.

DKE and Chi Phi each placed two players on the honor squad, with five other teams contributing one man each. John O'Bannon and Lucius Burch of DKE joined Pete Wilday and Bill Barnett of Chi Phi on the team. Also on the team were: Keith Stoneman of SAE, Bill Craig of PiKA, Pete Bondi of Chi Psi, Dick Bean of Sigma Nu and Baldy Williams of Zeta Psi.

The Town Towns took three spots on the All-Dorm dozen, Alexander two, and seven other teams placing one apiece. Dee Frady, Paul Swing and Bob Brown of the Touts, and Buddy Baldwin and Bobby Cox of the Playboys filled five of the positions. Others were captured by Jack Brothers of Joyner, Len Dellolio of Mangum, Bill Croom of AFROTC, Dick Blackman of Winston, Don Jefferies of Avery, Tom Grant of Ruffin and Oscar Simpson of Grimes.

All-Grad Team

The Grad Champion Peacocks dominated the ten-man honor list in its division, with four men making the squad. They were: Charlie Poindexter Eddie Burke, Jim Pfohl and Ken Koontz. The Dental and Law School teams each put three players on the team. Dean Hundley, Truett Fineberger and Ken Phillips of the Dental School were joined by Sam Poole, Jim Patrick and Steve Cowper of the Law School.

Winston Leads

Fraternity Blue: 1. SAE (342.24); 2. DKE (320.54); 3. Phi Delt (318.56); 4. ATO (285.61); 5. Zeta Psi (251.38).

WITHDRAWS THREAT

ACCRA, Ghana (UPI) — Ghana expelled two British newsmen Tuesday but withdrew an expulsion threat against American newsman Henry Tanner of the New York Times.

Interior Minister Kwaku Boateng ordered Neil Bruce of the British Broadcasting Corp., and Arthur Chesworth of the London Daily Express out of the country. Bruce said afterwards that he, Chessworth and Tanner were informed they would be expelled for straining relations between Ghana and Britain and Ghana and the United States by filing "false, tendentious and obnoxious" reports.
